YIELDS TO PLEAS OF BOARD MEMBERS

MAR 15 1941

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla., Mar. 13.—Yielding to the urgent pleas of members of the board of trustees that she continue to serve for another year, Dr. Mary McLeod Bethune, president and founder of Bethune-Cookman College, has withdrawn her request to retire. The action was taken last Wednesday.

The 65-year-old educator and leader based her retirement request on the fact she felt she could not give the proper amount of attention to the affairs of the school because of her pressing duties in Washington as director of the Division of Negro Affairs of the National Youth Administration.

TRIBUTE PAID TO NOTED

LIFE AND WORK REVIEWED OF LATE N. W. COLLIER, WHO WAS CALLED FLORIDA'S BOOKER T. WASHINGTON, AND CREATED FINE SCHOOL FOR COLORED YOUTH NEAR HERE

ACCLAIMED AS LEADER OF HIS RACE

Details Given In Response To Request Offered By White And Colored Friends

The late Nathan W. Collier has been called "The Booker T. Washington of Florida." Because working practically alone he was able to create in this vicinity a fine school with a campus of several hundred acres, and buildings valued at around half a million dollars, where hundreds of colored youth are being trained, the Record in reponse to the request of many white as well as colored friends of the late educator is carrying the following review of his life and work, and an account of his funeral formerly covered briefly in a news story.

BORN IN AUGUSTA

The late President Nathan W. Collier of the Florida Normal and Industrial Institute, whose funeral service was held Tuesday on the school campus, was born in Augusta, Ga., May 14, 1872. He received his early training in the public schools of Augusta, graduating from the Ware High School, whose principal at that time was the illustrious Major R. R. Wright, who later won distinction in the Spanish-American War. Major Wright was later president of the Georgia State College, Savannah, Ga., and now president of the Citizens and Southern Bank, Philadelphia, Pa. Dr. Collier pursued his college education at Atlanta University, graduating with honors, and receiving an A. B. degree. While in college he distinguished himself in many ways. Especially was he outstanding in the realm of oratory. He later received the honorary degree of Doctor of Letters from Selma University.

Following his graduation May, 1894, he was called to the assistant principalship of the Florida Baptist Academy, then located at Jacksonville, Florida. This had been organized in 1892 by the late Rev. Matthew Gilbert. He served for two years as vice president, at the end of which time he was elected president, serving in that capacity continuously until the time of his death. Meantime the name and location of the school were changed.

RECALLS HARD TIMES

When Collier took over as president of the school back in 1896, the present vice president, Sarah A. Blocker, formerly of Augusta, Ga., was one of the assistants. She recalls there were plenty of debts. The land was not paid for, the buildings not finished, and the school owed everybody. In 1918 the school had outgrown its quarters, and was on a good business basis. In response to an invitation from the St. Augustine Chamber of Commerce, President Collier decided to bring the school here, and chose for the site what had been the old Hanson Plantation, a famous place in slave days. This is 2½ miles west of the city.

With the removal of the school to St. Augustine 23 years ago, the name was changed from the Florida Baptist Academy to the Florida Normal and Industrial School.

HALF MILLION

Now the plant consists of six large coquina stucco buildings, of Spanish type architecture, and more than a dozen modern frame buildings, housing faculty homes, and some of the minor activities. The school plant is now valued at over half a million dollars.

The late Dr. Nathan W. Collier had been president of the institution for which he worked and died since 1896. First this was known as the Florida Baptist Academy and was located in Jacksonville. In 1918 it was brought to St. Augustine, the name was changed to the Florida Normal and Industrial Institute, and the great era of growth and expansion began.

Dr. Collier died Thursday morning, Feb. 20, at 2:30 o'clock at the home of his brother, Dr. J. C. Collier, in Augusta.

A brief service was held in Augusta Saturday afternoon February 22 at 4 o'clock, and the body was escorted here Sunday by a motorcade of relatives and friends.

HONOR PAID

Friends of Jacksonville and Augustine joined in escorting the body, led by police and city officials and citizens, and representatives of the Chamber of Commerce, to the campus of the Florida Normal and Industrial Institute where the late Dr. Collier has left as a monument a plant valued at more than $500,000. His body was placed at 5:30 p. m. Sunday in Anderson Hall, the first permanent building, and gift of the late Dr.

NEGRO EDUCATOR

Andrew Anderson. The funeral services began at 2 o'clock, Tuesday, February 25th, with Dr. John E. Ford presiding.

Throngs attended, the crowd being estimated at anywhere from 1,500 to 2,000 persons. The colored ministers assisting with the service included the Rev. S. H. Hunter, Rev. K. D. Britt, Rev. J. R. Evans, Rev. R. L. Jones, Rev. J. W. Drake. Dr. Mary McLeod Bethune, well known Negro educator, spoke, as did Prof. George A. Towns.

APPROPRIATE MUSIC

Musical selections included the selection "We Shall Walk Through the Valley" by the male quartette, "When I Come to the End of My Journey" and "Swing Low Sweet Chariot" by the choir, and the solo "I've Done My Work" by Josephine Britton.

The active pallbearers were H. R. Barksdale, R. Frasier, N. W. Griffin, T. L. Lowrie, D. W. Perkins, B. G. Sayles.

Honorary pallbearers were Isaiah Blocker, T. G. Freeland, A. L. Lewis, J. S. McLane, D. D. Powell, George A. Towns, J. H. Thompson, I. Sloan Blocker, J. A. Webster, and G. W. Powell.

WHITE FRIENDS

Among the white friends who paid tribute was Dr. Henry M. Stock, winter visitor here for more than 20 years, and an old friend of Dr. Collier. Dr. Stock is founder and ex-president of the Teachers Association of Greater New York. He referred to Dr. Collier as "a truly great man, a real benefactor and educator, a leader among men, a Moses who for half a century has been leading his beloved people out of a wilderness of doubt, gloom, poverty and ignorance to a brighter land of promise and sunshine, knowledge and thrift."

Vice President Frank Harrold of the St. Augustine National Bank offered a fitting tribute, as did several other business men from different parts of the state.

HELPED MANY

Supervisor of Negro Education D. E. Williams from Tallahassee said that not only had President Collier been a teacher for members of his race, but the white race as well. He stated that he had learned from President Collier patience, perseverance, and courage. He said he admired the stand Dr. Colher took for high ideals as to standards of the accrediting agencies, without ever complaining, even though the task to meet these standards seemed hard at times.

WORKED INCESSANTLY

Dr. Collier worked incessantly to build, develop, extend, and improve the school. He inspired friends in Florida, and at many places in the North to make generous gifts. Many of the buildings on the campus were erected as gifts or as memorials in answer to pleas from Dr. Collier. He secured aid from Foundations established to help Negro educational work, and personally solicited maintenance funds running around $20,000 annually. The famous school quartette travelled

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (SNS)—On the occasion of his birthday, twenty members of the executive committee of the Florida A. and M. college, together with six invited guests gathered around a table in the Paige Management House, Sunday, January 26, 1941, for a dinner "Honoring President J. R. E. Lee, as an expression of our high esteem, regard and admiration.

But the occasion developed in to something of greater importance than a dinner—excellent as this one was. After the courses had been served. Vice President and Dean of Men Jubie B. Bragg, acting as master of ceremonies, gave a brief talk in which he paid his respects to President Lee, the man and administrator. Stating that all talks to be made [illegible] voluntary, Dean Bragg turned the meeting over the company. Immediately [illegible] heed- [illegible] them speak their words [illegible] appreciation.

Twenty deans of the [illegible] the guests began paynig their tri- [illegible] of simply the conventional wishes for more birthdays. The tributes very soon developed into personal analyses of the qualities which have made President Lee successful as an educator, and so well-beloved as a man. These deans, men and women who compose "Famcee's" governing body, and have worked with President Lee for a long time drew lines out of which the pattern of President Lee's life and work have been drafted. These witnesses testified:

That Dr. Lee has a broad educational vision; that he is a conscientious worker for the colored people of Florida, and a willing worker of all causes for the good of all the people of this state.. that Negro education at large has no more devoted friend than he proves himself to be; that he is.... and this was stressed....a constructive builder, building not only a vast physical school plant but also an nider in the building of good will between the white and colored people: that his tact and wisdom give him open admission to officials of government, state and national, and to educational boards and foundations, and that his abounding vigor, energy and good humor give him a driving power which knows no fatigue.

Turning from these phases of his character, men and women present at the table insisted on emphasizing his "bigness and kindness of heart," his "deep sympathy for is worker," his "fatherly interest in the alumni," and his never-failing "friendship" to those who win his confidence.

President Lee modestly acknowledged these tributes and estimates with the simple statement that he had not merited all of them; but he made it clear that whenever he was succeeded here, he was indebted to his loyal workers for much of any success obtained.

This was not President Lee's day however, it was the day of those who paid tribute to the work that he had done. A large birthday cake was presented to him, together with other gifts.

The dinner was prepared by Miss Schelley Wiggins, and was almost faultlessly served by young women in the Home Economics department

In Appreciation of A Noble Woman

AN appeal has gone out over the signatures of sixty-two of the nation's leading citizens for aid to Bethune-Cookman College in Daytona Beach, Fla. The committee is seeking to raise $50,000 to help in the maintenance of the school.

This school, like so many other institutions of its kind, was begun at a time when education for Negroes was not the accepted thing. It was started by pioneers, men and women with vision, who sacrificed comfort and ease and braved social ostracism.

The school is today a monument to a representative of the finest type of American womanhood. Mrs. Bethune has gained for herself the respect of a nation. At Bethune-Cookman, she has stressed the training of boys and girls through standard courses in liberal arts and sciences, through social and community activity and religious life. In Washington, she has championed the cause of Negro youth all over the country, has sought better job opportunities and more recreational and educational facilities.

In Florida, she has made a school the center of community life and inspiration, and a potent factor in interracial cooperation in the deep south. In Washington, she has commanded the respect of the White House and all governmental agencies, and has demanded more and larger opportunities for the participation of Negroes in all the affairs of the nation.

The boys and girls in the south who desire higher education need her school; the nation needs the services of Mrs. Bethune. To that end, this nationwide committee of leading citizens has sought to remove the burdens of the school's financial problems from her shoulders.

The appeal for funds goes to every man and woman in the country who appreciates the noble work of Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune.

Bethune To Hold To Position As Head Of College

According to President Forrester B. Washington of the Atlanta University School of Social Work in a statement to the press late Sunday night, Dr. Mary McLeod Bethune has reconsidered her recent resignation and will continue indefinitely to fill the important role of president of Bethune-Cookman College at Daytona Beach, Florida.

Mr. Washington, who is a member of the trustee board of Bethune-Cookman, arrived in the Gate City Saturday after attending an important meet of that executive body last Thursday, March 6, at the college. Bishop Charles W. Flint, board chairman, presided.

DRAMATIC SPEECH

At the meeting, Dr. Bethune gave a poignant and touching statement of why she had resigned as president of the institution. Her eyes were tear-filled as she told dramatically of her pioneer struggled to advance the standards, plane of service, and general welfare of the institution.

But no sooner had the energetic National Director of Negro Affairs for the National Youth Administration resumed her seat than influential manners of the board took the floor and advanced significant and convincing reasons why Mrs Bethune's resignation should not be accepted. Among these were Bishop Flint, U. S. Senator Woolcott of Connecticut, Dr. M. S. Davage and others.

RESIGNATION, UNFORTUNATE

The entire group took the position that to lose Mrs. Bethune at so critical a period in the affairs of the institution would be detrimental to the future welfare of Bethune-Cookman college Her resignation, coming at such a time, was most unfortunate, it was unanimously agreed.

Finally, Dr. Frederick D. Patterson of Tuskegee Institute, acting for the committee weighing and considering Dr. Bethune's resignation as head of the college, made a detailed report in the form of resolutions, in which the said committee strongly recommended against approval of her resignation.

Deeply moved and swayed to great emotion by the tremendous vote of confidence, Dr. Bethune, in a ringing decision that filled the assembly with an atmosphere of approval, declared it the most difficult thing she was ever called upon to decide but that she was withdrawing her resignation and letting the will of the powerful majority prevail.

DR. BETHUNE URGES UNSELFISH SERVICE

ATLANTA, Ga., Mar. 6—"Young men of Morehouse, give of your best and the best will come back to you," were the stirring words of Dr. Mary McLeod Bethune, director of the Negro Division of the NYA, at the morning chapel hour in Sale Hall last Friday.

Dr. Bethune, regal in black velvet, was impressive as she emphasized the need for seeking an education not for selfish purposes, but rather to enrich and broaden the lives of others. The opportunities for contacts with teachers and leaders at Morehouse, she told the students, should be a challenge through which their blessings night flow out to others.

The youth of today, the speaker declared, have the greatest opportunity that has ever been theirs in the history of the world. She maintained that she believes more in the youth of today and in his development and leadership than at any other time in her life, stating to the students: "I am willing to sit at your feet to get the trend of your minds for you are thinking in a more courageous strain than the youth of yesterday...you are getting your feet more solidly placed on the ground, and you are now wanting to be counted among the youth of America."

Mrs. Bethune

BETHUNE-COOKMAN College was deprived of the services of a great soul when its founder and president, Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune recently submitted her resignation to devote her full time to the program of the National Youth Administration. But the loss of Bethune-Cookman college will be the gain for the nation's youths as Mrs. Bethune throws direct all her energies to the promotion of her work as Director of Negro Affairs for the National Youth Administration. She has devoted her life's work to aiding youth and developing in it character and ability consistent with the highest ideals of citizenship. She founded the Bethune-Cookman college under financial conditions that seemed preposterous. It was born out of nothing save her strong will and fortified courage to make it a living institution. In its establishment and operation she has accomplished her aim and can feel happy in leaving the great institution to devote her full time to the work that will concern itself with building character in millions of youths throughout the country.

It is encouraging to see such a noble person who knows the object of her ambition and upon its realization leaves the details to be done by others while she goes out to conquer new and greater laurels.

Her efforts in the field of religion and education are an inspiration to boys and girls whose ideals are pointing toward the direction of a fuller and more useful life. Mrs. Bethune's resignation from the school will permit her to greatly influence the lives and thus mould the characters of youths the country over. The nation, therefore, is the beneficiary of her new move.

A course entitled Community Nutrition, carrying graduate credit, will be offered by Miss Nazen Kazian, a graduate of Santa Barbara State College and Columbia University.

WEST VIRGINIA STATE

INSTITUTE, W. Va.—Since the opening of the 1941-42 school year on September 15, 800 students have been enrolled in the West Virginia State College. A comparison with the same period of last year shows a shortage of approximately 75 men students, which is due to the call to military training for national defense. Indications are that the present year's enrollment will equal or surpass that of last year.

MOREHOUSE COLLEGE

ATLANTA, Ga. — Two Morehouse College professors, who wer eaway from their positions last year to engage in advanced study at leading northern universities, have returned to their positions. Enrollment In Negro Colleges On Increase

ATLANTA—(AP)—The nation's enrollment in Negro colleges has increased 180 per cent in 15 years, says the Commission on Interracial Cooperation.

It reported that 45,876 Negroes are attending 109 colleges this year, compared with 17,506 at 79 institutions in 1926. The survey, announced Wednesday, showed 5,064 Negroes will be graduated with degrees this year. Advanced degrees include 69 in medicine, 20 in dentistry, 14 in law, 47 in theology and 23 in social work.

GENERAL

Negro Colleges Pauperized

When one considers the three Negro colleges of the University System in comparison with what they were a few years ago he is inclined to comment on the remarkable progress and growth achieved. For example, the Georgia State College at Thunderbolt had only about sixteen or twenty students in the entire college department when the present president took over whereas today there are hundreds of young men and women in this college which is accredited by the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools. Something similar has taken place at Albany and the new State College at Fort Valley is most certainly an improvement in every way over the former so-called college at Forsyth which it replaced in the system about two years ago. But compared with the progress and development achieved in other states of the South, not to mention the North, the state colleges for Negroes in Georgia are retrogressing: that is, they are progressing at a slower rate than the others and they started behind most of them. Also compared with the progress made by white units of the system in financial support and improvement the Negro units are relatively falling behind.

THE NEGRO UNITS OF THE UNIVERSITY SYSTEM OF GEORGIA ARE ALL INADEQUATELY HOUSED, INADEQUATELY E Q U I P P E D, INADEQUATELY HOUSED, INADEQUATELY QUIPPED, INADEQUATE-SUPPLIED WITH MATERIALS AND EQUIPMENT AND THEIR STAFFS ARE OVERWORKED AND UNDERPAID. In brief, the Negro Colleges are rapidly being pauperized with the result that Georgia is failing to produce the Negro leadership essential for normal progress.

NEGRO SCHOOLS OF STATE WILL GRADUATE 911

North Carolina Has Large Enrollment In College Plants.

ATLANTA, Ga., May 29.—(Special)—Within the next few days the eleven negro colleges of North Carolina will graduate 911 men and women with degrees won by four years or more of college work, according to a survey just completed by the Commission on Interracial Cooperation. The degrees to be conferred will be Bachelor of Arts, 224,; Bachelor of Science, 676; Bachelor of Divinity, 8; and Master of Arts 3.

During the year, these eleven colleges enrolled 2,035 men and 3,631 women, a total of 5,666. This exceeds the negro college enrollment of any other state by more than 1,000, though Georgia, Mississippi and Alabama each has a larger negro population. Contrasted with a negro college enrollment in the state of only 1,351 reported by a government survey in 1926, the current figure represents a gain of nearly 300 per cent in the intervening fifteen years. By colleges, the statistics for the current year are as follows, the enrollment figures first followed by the number of graduates:

Agriculture and Technical college, Greensboro—957 and 74;

Barber-Scotia college, Concord—146;

Bennett college, Greensboro—380 and 47;

Livingstone college, Salisbury—276 and 36;

St. Augustine's college, Raleigh—235 and 33;

Shaw university, Raleigh — 643 and 51;

State Teachers college, Elizabeth City—465 and 106;

State Teachers college, Fayetteville, 690 and 178;

In the 109 negro colleges in the entire country, the survey revealed an enrollment of 45,876, of whom 5,064 will receive degrees this commencement. In 1926, according to the government survey, there were only 79 negro colleges with an enrollment of 17,506.

NEGRO COLLEGE GRADUATES

Latest available figures indicate that during the school year just closing there were 200 percent more Negro men and women in college in Georgia than in 1926. This is another proof of the progress that is being made by the Negro residents of Georgia in the matter of education.

In 1926 the Negro college enrollment in Georgia was only 1,224. During the past year there were 3,063 such students.

Within the next few days eleven Negro colleges in the state will graduate 449 Negro men and women. The degrees to be conferred include Bachelor of Arts, Bachelor of Science, Bachelor of Divinity, Master of Arts, Master of Science and Master of Social Work. In addition there will be a number who will receive diplomas for special work in agriculture, home economics and education.

This increase in Negro college enrollment is an encouraging sign. It means that the colored people of the state are giving more time and attention to higher education and this is certain to work for a better and more enlightened citizenship.

NEGRO COLLEGES

An impressive advance in the cause of higher education for Negroes is reported by the Commission on Interracial Co-Operation which states that the eight Negro colleges operating in Tennessee will graduate 503 men and women this Spring with degrees earned by four years or more of college work. Included in the list of degrees to be granted of science 188, bachelor of music 1, are: Bachelor of arts 212, bachelor doctor of medicine 48, doctor of dental surgery 9, graduate nurse 10, and technician 2. The colleges in the State and the number of graduates in each are: Fisk University 108, Tennessee State College 160, Meharry Medical 69, LeMoyne College 58, Lane College 58, Knoxville College 50, and Morristown Normal and Swift Memorial with no degree awards.

More than the actual number of diplomas given is the increase made since 1926. In that year, the entire Negro college enrollment was 1,512. This year it is 3,481, a gain of 130 per cent. In 109 Negro colleges in the entire country, the enrollment this year is 45,876, of whom 5,064 will be granted degrees this commencement. In 1926, the Commission survey shows, there were seventy-nine Negro colleges in the United States with a total enrollment of 17,506.

The advance made in higher education for Negroes means that more Negroes will enter the learned and expert services and professions. More of their fellows will have the benefit of their service, and the level of health, comfort, culture and opportunity usefulness will rise. The spread of education among all people is a force for co-operation and good will. The Negro people who have supported their colleges, the white people who have helped them on and the people of both races who will benefit by the good will which education helps to develop are to be congratulated.

Dr. Brown Message to Howard U. Alumni

Alumni, Alumnae, and Friends of Howard:

In these days of rapid change, accumulated events impel me to send you this message:

On the 29th of April, 1941, Senator Barbour of New Jersey introduced a Bill in the Senate known as S. 1407 which, when passed, will change the method of electing Trustees of the University.

This Bill provides that the United States Commissioner of Education shall appoint Six; the Alumni Association shall elect Six; these Twelve shall elect Three others, making a total of Fifteen in all in lieu of the Twenty-four, which now constitutes the Board.

This Bill carries with it profound implications; First of all, it assumes and acknowledges the fact that the Graduates of Howard, after a period of more than Sixty-five years, have reached mental maturity; and can now assume half of the responsibilities inherent in the running of the University.

As to fact, this assumption is either true or untrue. The more than Ten thousand Graduates of Howard can, or cannot, assume half of the responsibilities inherent in the running of the School. If they CAN assume it, it should be assumed by them. If they CANNOT assume it, it is a profound reflection, both on Howard University and the Negro people; for it would be convincing proof that the Negro is not adaptable to a Caucasian civilization, and Howard could no longer justify its existence as a training medium and, hence, would show a waste of the people's money, which it has been receiving in the form of appropriations from Congress over the past several years.

The Alumni Association is strongly supporting this Bill and it appeals to the Graduates and Friends of Howard, in every State of the Union, to arouse themselves to the point of asking their Senators and Representatives to vote for this Bill when it comes to the Floor. DO IT NOW, because this Bill is a challenge to your intelligence, manhood and womanhood; and will reflect great discredit on you, if you do not show a dynamic interest in its passage.

As President of the General Alumni Association, I have appealed to the Trustee Board to support this Legislation and I hope the Board will have the good sense to so do.

The Chairman of the Board of Trustees told the President of the General Alumni Association that the affairs of Howard could be, and should be, conducted by a Trustee Board of Nine members. He spoke of the difficulty in managing a large Trustee Board and if we add to that the expense of meeting, we have another factor which should not be ignored, especially when Congress appropriates money for the education of youth, and not for the giving of sight-seeing trips to the Nation's Capital.

It should be of interest to us all to know that the University of Wisconsin, a larger institution than Howard, is run by a Board of Regents of Fifteen members, and Yale University is run by a Board of Nineteen members. In my opinion, Howard does not, and cannot compare with these Two Universities. Why, then, should Howard have Twenty-four Trustees when larger institutions can be run by a board of a smaller number? Columbia University, probably the largest institution of learning in this Country, requires only Twenty-four Trustees.

In the face of these facts, it seems to me that we are ten years late in our request for this change. I am therefore appealing to every graduate and friend of Howard to use all of his influence in having this Legislation passed, and thus give the graduates of Howard the prestige and dignity becoming an "Institution of Higher Learning".

Negro Colleges Report 2000 Per Cent Gain

ATLANTA—(ANP) — During the past year the 109 Negro colleges in the United States enrolled 45,876 men and women, and graduated 5,064 with degrees won by four years or more of college work. Among the advanced degrees conferred were 69 in medicine, 20 in dentistry, 14 in law, 47 in theology, and 23 in social work.

To realize the progress represented by the above figures one must look backward 25 years to a government survey of Negro higher education made in 1916. At that time there were but 31 Negro colleges in the nation and their total enrollment was only 2,132. Thus in 25 years the number of collegiate institutions has increased by 250 per cent, and the number of students by more than 2000 per cent.

An encouraging aspect of this phenomenal growth has been the great increase measure made it possible. This is evidenced by the fact that every state in the South now maintains one or more excellent Negro colleges, supported consistently with legislative appropriations.

Ninety-five of the 109 colleges now operating are located in 14 southern states, with the heaviest enrollments found in North Carolina, with 11 colleges enrolling 5,666; Texas with 12 colleges enrolling 4,869, Alabama, 8 colleges, 4,156; Georgia, 11 colleges, 3,609; Tennessee, 8 colleges, 3,481; South Carolina, 12 colleges, 3,315; Louisiana, 5 colleges, 3,082.

The largest institution in point of enrollment was Howard university, Washington, with 2,695 students; the second largest was Tuskegee institute, Alabama, with 1,422 and the third was Tennessee A. & I. College, Nashville, with 1,358.

Dr. Reddick Finds Library Facilities for Research in Negro Colleges in Sad States

Curator of Schomburg Collection Blames Lack of Productivity of Negro Scholar On Poor Laboratory Facilities

NEW YORK.—(ANP)—In an article appearing in the current Quarterly Review of Higher Education Among Negroes, Dr. L. D. Reddick, curator of the Schomberg collection of Negro literature deplores the 'sad state" of creative scholarship in the Negro colleges and universities of this country."

Dr. Reddick blames the lack of productivity on the part of the Negro scholar on unavailability of laboratory and library facilities. He says, "The manuscript deposits in the leading southern colleges is only fair . . . The other research resources in the South are seldom and only partially available to the Negro scholar.

"Of the 365 public libraries in the 13 southern states which have been surveyed only 83 were reported as giving service to Negroes. In some of the state, county, and municipal archives of the region the Negro is sometimes permitted to use the documents 'somewhere in the building.' More often—especially in the deep South—he is not.

"In summary, it may be said that with the present inadequate research facilities — meaning books, buildings, library personnel—to expect important work in any quantity is to indulge in the illusion of an idle dream."

To correct the situation that now exists Dr. Reddick advocates that a thorough test be made in the courts of the procedures of certain tax-supported libraries of excluding Negroes. He is also in favor of trying to induce the federal government and any such foundations which plan to establish regional library centers in the South to have any grants-in-aid which may come from them should carry the proviso that Negro scholars shall have access to the materials. To build up directly the libraries in Negro colleges, and to build up a few great collections of Negro literature are other steps which the author advises should be taken.

The Crisis magazine's annual tabulation of college graduates shows that 4,964 young Negroes received degrees during the 1940-41 school year. There must now be around 100,000 Aframerican college graduates. The number of high school graduates probably exceeds one million. Grammar school graduates perhaps number five million, and there must be millions more who have had five, six or seven years' schooling.

SUPER UNIVERSITY SUGGESTED TO MEET SOUTHERN PROBLEM

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Oct. 16—Plans are being considered in Tennessee and other Southern States for the organization of a huge Negro university, probably at Chattanooga, to furnish higher education facilities in the South. Commissioner of Education B. O Duggan said here today.

Dr. Duggan revealed that he had been in conference with educational leaders in the 11 Southern States and that nine of them had decided the idea worthy of further study.

The university would be organized to meet a ruling of the United States Supreme Court that equal educational facilities must be granted both whites and Negroes, Dr. Duggan said.

SEEKS SOLUTION OF SCHOOL PROBLEM

Ever since the Supreme Court ruling of the University of Missouri Case of three years ago, he continued, Southern educators have been seeking a solution to the problem, he continued.

This has been stimulated by the filing of several suits in the past year, to compel state universities to admit Negro students for courses not available to them in schcols for members of their race.

Dr. Duggan said that states would be required to pay board and expenses of all students on a prorata basis if the school was organized.

Dr. Duggan said that the problem was one that was going to need immediate solution in that various Negro organizations had taken up the fight.

"The problem is not one of the state's being unwilling, but of seeking the best solution and the best results for the welfare of the students," he added.

"The problem has been neglected for so long. But I believe that it will be worked out to the best advantage of all concerned within a short time."

MAR 1 5 1941

Educators and librarians from twenty-eight southern colleges, library officials in several of the leading universities in the United States, representatives from major foundations, state agents of Negro schools, and state library supervisors gathered at Atlanta University Friday to take part in the two-day Library Conference sponsored jointly by the Carnegie Corporation of New York and the General Education Board.

More than one hundred persons are in attendance at the proceedings which are open by invitation to persons interested in the betterment of library facilities for Negroes in the southern states. The general theme of the conference is "Library Needs of the Community—Equipment and Service on the Librarian—with Particular Reference to the South and the Negro".

The Conference has been planned by President Rufus E. Clement of Atlanta University with the assistance of President Florence M. Read of Spelman College and President Benjamin E. Mays of Morehouse College. All sessions are held in the Atlanta University Library and are being presided over by President Clement.

At the opening session on Friday morning, Miss Anita M. Hostetter, secretary of the board of education for librarianship of the American Liberary Association, spoke on "Questions for a New Library School"; and Dean Louis R. Wilson of the Graduate School of Library Science at the University of Chicago addressed the Conference on "Factors Conditioning Library Facilities in the Southern States". General discussion on these subjects was opened by Dr. W. W. Bishop, distinguished librarian of the University of Michigan.

At the afternoon session, five speakers were scheduled to appear on the second half of the program. Dr. Frederick P. Keppel, president of the Carnegie Corporation, spoke briefly. Other speakers were Miss Tommie Dora Barker, dean of the Emory University Library School, whose subject was "The Education of Librarians for Service in the South", Mrs. Eliza Atkins Gleason, librarian of Talladega College, who discussed "Public Library Service for Negroes in the South," Mrs. Ruth Theobald Young, visiting lecturer of the Emory University Library School, who spoke on "A State Program for Library Extension," and Miss Ernestine Rose, librarian of the 135th Street Branch, New York Library, whose subject was "The Library— An Intelligence Center for the Community".

This morning at nine o'clock there will be a University Convention in Sisters Chapel, Spelman College, at which all conference members are to be special guests of the affiliated institutions. Immediately after these exercises, there will be an inspection tour of the campuses, at the close of which the conference sessions are to be resumed in the Library.

Principal speaker on the morning program will be Miss Florence R. Curtis, formerly director of the Hampton Library School, who will speak on "Problems and Conditions which the Librarian Faced and the Progress which has been made." Seven speakers are scheduled to participate on a panel concerned with "The Problems Which the Librarian Faces—with Particular Reference to the Work of the Negro College and High School".

Fred McCuistion, field agent of the General Education Board, will serve as chairman of this discussion which will be participated in by Mrs. Hallie Beacham Brooks, librarian of the Atlanta University Laboratory School; Walter G. Daniel, librarian of Howard University; Wallace Van Jackson, librarian at Virginia Union University; Miss Virginia M. Lacy, catalogue librarian at Atlanta University; Dr. Louis Shores, director of the library school at George Peabody College for Teachers; and Miss Charlotte Templeton, librarian of Atlanta University.

The conference will be brought to a close with a general summary of the happenings during the two-day session by Carl H. Milam, executive secretary of the American Library Association.

The Library Conference has been arranged in connection with the Library School which will open at Atlanta University in September, 1941. This newest link in the Atlanta University chain has been made possible by a grant of $150,000 from the Carnegie Corporation of New York. Dr. Horace M. Bond Honored By N. E. A. For Research Work

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The reward of national recognition has come to Dr. H. M. Bond, the distinguished scholar and educator, because of his unusual ability chosen in the production of his recent work NEGRO EDUCATION IN ALABAMA (Associated Publishers Inc., Washington, D. C., price $3.00). This book, crowned with the stamp of excellence by the American Educational Research Association, a department of the National Education Association of the United States has been selected by the committee of awards as one of the six best pieces of research in the field of education for the three years from 1936-1939

The other scholars of the country honored along with Dr. Bond are Dr. H. M. Bell of the American Youth Commission, Professor Guy T. Bushwell of the University of Chicago, Professor Leslie L. Chisholm of Columbia University, Professor Fletcher Harper Swift of the University of California and Professor L. L. Thurstone of the University of Chicago.

This is not the first honor which Dr. Bond has received for his excellent research. NEGRO EDUCATION IN ALABAMA was awarded the Susan Colver Rosenberger Prize of the University of Chicago in 1937 when it was produced and presented there as a dissertation to meet the requirements for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy. Words of praise for this piece of research have come not only from professors of that particular institution but from all leading scholars engaged in educational and historical research in this country and abroad. The concensus of opinion is that it is of such a high order that it marks an epoch in educational research in the United States. This author has lifted the task of the study of education above the level of merely compiling the enrollment, attendance, the number of graduates, and the cost of maintaining schools. Through this book we see education as a force in the life of the people and the various factors which have determined what that education should be.

Dr. Bond is now serving as president of Fort Valley College in Georgia, as the successor of the late H. A. Hunt. Because of the high estimate of Dr. Bond's ability foundations are now giving considerable sums for the larger development of that institution.

The reward of national recognition has come to Dr. H. M. Bond, the distinguished scholar and educator, because of his unusual scholarship in the production of his recent work, "Negro Education in Alabama," (Associated Publishers, Inc., Washington, D. C., price $3.00). This book has been crowned with the stamp of excellence by the American Educational Research Association, a department of the National Education Association of the United States. This work has been selected by the committee of awards as one of the six best pieces of research in the field of education for the three years from 1936-1939. Chisholm of Columbia university, Professor Fletcher Harper Swift of the University of California, and Professor L. L. Thurstone of the University of Chicago. MAR 1 5 194

The procedure in making these awards was like this: Nominations of researchers to be considered were solicited from the members of the American Educational Research Association and from major graduate departments of education in colleges and universities. The persons addressed were asked to make nominations from studies published during the calendar years of 1936 through 1939, but the statement was made that studies of an earlier date would also be considered. The list of nominations resulting from this procedure was submitted to a large number of persons who were asked to evaluate the studies within whether there should be any education in Alabama for Negroes or even for whites. These determining factors, as he has so ably shown, were cotton and steel, in the development of which participated the overthrown ex-confederates in cooperating with Clews, Morgan, and Jay Cooke who used these ex-confederates as corruptionists in developing industry and building railroads at the expense of the state and of impoverished people. Here we have a new story of not only Alabama but of the entire South—a new chapter in the history of the Negro upon whose shoulders has been unjustly laid the blame for all of the corruption in the South after the Civil War.

This is not the first honor which Dr. Bond has received for his excellent research. "Negro Education in Alabama" was awarded the Susan Colver Rosenberger Prize of the University of Chicago in 1937 when it was produced and presented there as a dissertation to meet the requirements for the degree of Doctor of Philpsophy. Words of praise for this piece of research have come not only from professors of that particular institution but from all leading scholars engaged in educational and historical research in the United States. Dr. Bond is now serving as president of Fort Valley College in Georgia, as the successor of the late H. A. Hunt. Because of the high estimate of Dr. Bond's abilities y foundations are now giving considerable sums for the larger development of that institution. Yet, when one thinks of the many persons who may function successfully in educational administration and of the few who are qualified for independent research, one must express his regret that Dr. Bond is no longer available for such serious investigation as he has shown himself capable of doing. Sometimes we have the wrong way of showing our appreciation for scholarship. Dean Charles Homer Haskins of Harvard university, once expressed this regret by saying: "In America as soon as a man learn enough to write a book, some university will make him a bookkeeper." He meant, of course, that he is made an administrative officer who will have to spend most of his time with the details that almost anybody can easily take care of.—C. G. Woodson.

New Land Deeded To College

Dr. Stewart Is Founder's Day Speaker

The founding fathers of Morris Brown College were extolled as men "who saw into the future who back in 1881 spoke for unborn generations," by Dr. Charles E. Stewart, of Portsmouth, Va. in delivering the principal address during the 60th annual Founder's Day address at the AME institution Wednesday morning.

Dr. Stewart's address sounded the keynote for the day-long observance, during which record-breaking financial reports were made by the school's faculty, alumni and students and by the thirty-nine presiding elders of Georgia's eight conferences.

President Fountain started the large audience which filled every available space in the chapel to cheering when he made an official announcement that Morris Brown had acquired a $100,000 cash endowment and that fourteen acres of land on the north side of Hunter street across from the main campus had been deeded to the school by the Atlanta University board of trustees.

The $1000,000 endowment resulted in the grant of $50,000 from the General Education Board and $50,000 netted from the sale of fourteen acres of land to an Atlanta Negro land development concern.

Students, faculty, alumni and friends reported a record-breaking $1,000 in cash when President Fountain started the financial rally at the close of the address. Presiding elders began filing their reports in during a special conference called by Bishop Fountain after the chapel services had ended.

Morris Brown founders under the sterling leadership of Bishop W. F. Dickerson, did three things, Dr. Stewart, who is the former president of Kittrell College, N. C., told his hearers.

THE THREE THINGS

This group first reached into the bosom of Christian religion as sacrificially taught by the lowly Nazarene and gathered enough faith for human use on earth and each indidivdual became a flaming evangel of religious inspiration," the dramatic speaker declared.

"The second thing that group did was to go back nearly one hundred years and dig into the volatile dust of Richard Allen and gather enough racial hope and inspiration and self-sacrifice to promise the spirit of Allen a new day for colored people in Georgia.

"The third thing they did was to meet and put those virtures in concrete form by saying in a memorable resolution: "We will erect an institution of learning for the Christian education of Negro boys and girls in Atlanta, Georgia."

No man will ever finish building Morris Brown College, Dr. Stewart told his hearers. "Men," he asserted, "try to write their names, but if we so write that no one else can take up where we leave off and carry the work on, we have written in vain. Other cornerstones on these grounds are not yet laid, new names are yet to be enscribed on the records of the vaults here Today does not finish anything, it only begins something more."

"Today," Dr. Stewart admonished, "does not finish anything, it only begins something more. As I stand here today, the future of Morris Brown College looks exceedingly bright.

"The founders of this institution whose names are bleaching in forgotten graveyards while their souls are wandering spiritually clad along the highways of a land not built by human hands, are doubtless today rejoicing with us in this celebration of the achievements of the past and the hopes of tomorrow.

"As I stand here, I see tomorrow, by faith, which is the substance, a million dollar endowment fund feeding your coffers; I see new buildings creeping out of the tired stones of these hillsides; I see graduates of this place in great centers of learning, manufacture, industry, arts, and government; I see tomorrow's children with souls afire knocking at these doors and asking for a chance to make it in life; I see a new athletic field flaunting its Roman architecture across these grounds; I see a more than doubled student body with alert minds preparing to catch step with a new world and a new civilization; I see graduates of this institution, who have been battling along life's highway and have won the fight returning to these grounds of inspiration and bringing to these altars of sacrifices their gifts and offerings for a greater college; I see the curriculum of this plant extended until you can breathe here any air at any temperature you seek.

"I do ask you, however," the speaker said in conclusion, "to not put your entire trust or your home in increasing buildings or enlarged student body.

"The day comes when buildings crumble to dust, this hill may yet be a barren waste as time lashes it with its ceasless tongue. The teeth of time may yet eat these boulevards and gnaw the vitals out of this great city.

"There is one thing, however, which will last. When all material substance has been gathered and times wind licks up the dust that is left, character, a good heart, a loving soul and fellowship with God, all of which are eternal will till be alive for thy last forever."

Music at the morning service was supplied by the Men's and Women's choruses and the college choir under the direction of Prof. E. W. Hathcock.

LIBRARY SCHOOL TO BE OPENED AT A.U.

JAN 31 1941

Atlanta Georgia

Atlanta University will open September, 1941 a School of Library Science, it was announced Thursday by the office of the president.

This is being made possible by a grant of $150,000 for endowment of the School by the Carnegie Corporation of New York. To the income from this grant the University is adding money from other sources. This will place the new professional school on a high calibre.

The School will be of the class designated as Type II, that is, one requiring graduation from an accredited four-year college for admission, and offering a one-year professional course for the training of librarians The annual enrollment will be limited to approximately twenty-five carefully selected students whose academic records and personal qualities seem to indicate that they will succeed as professional librarians.

PLAN FULL COURSE

The Atlanta University school will prepare persons for full-time positions in college and high school libraries and for places in the important and growing field of public library service. Courses in the basic library fields of administration, book selection, classification, cataloging, reference, bibliography, children's literature will be offered by the faculty, which President Clement is now organizing. The faculty, including part-time teachers, will be made up of the best-trained and most successful Negro librarians available, persons of unquestioned ability and experience.

Atlanta University and the City of Atlanta offer an unparalleled opportunity for the training of Negro librarians. Students may observe and will be called upon to work in the various types of libraries serving the schools and the public. In the University System the main library containing more than 65,000 volumes and serving more than 1,500 students in six institutions, will be used as a training area for students and the School of Library Sience.

EMORY TO COOPERATE

The System also offers opportunities in elementary school libraries, the high school library, and in the specialized reading rooms. It is expected that the city of Atlanta will offer opportunities in the public school libraries and in the Negro branches of the public library system. Cooperation in certain phases of the program will be worked out with the Library School of Emory Universtiy.

Applications for admission to the Atlanta University School of Library Science are now being received; both men and women will be enrolled in the courses.

NEGROES BEGIN SERIES

Georgia College Planning to Improve Farming

Industrial College, Ga., Feb. 22.—(AP): Seeking methods to cooperate with the national defense program, the Georgia State college for negroes has begun a series of courses to improve negro farming in the state.

More than fifty county and home demonstration agents and several well-known negro farmers attended a one-week short course in agriculture here recently.

Pure-bred strains of beef and dairy cattle, hogs and poultry on the college farm particularly impressed the farmers, professors in charge of the course said, and as a result many agents are replacing the pine rooter hogs, scrub bulls and lazy hens with stock that will "pay for their keep".

The section on "Negroes in Social Work" in the 1941 Social Work Year Book just published by the Russell Sage Foundation and generally looked upon as the official encyclopedia of social work was written by Forrester B.Washington, director of the Atlanta University School of Social Work.

The Social Work Year Book was designated recently by the New York Times as a book which 'will be of great value not only to those specially interested in its field but also to those who are engaged in many other professions and occupations that, in our closely knit modern life, come into touch with it in one or more of its many-sided activities, is widely used not only by social workers, both experienced and in training, but also by librarians, students of sociology and in classes in social work, as well as by clergymen, editors and all others who desire information about social work in all its phases. It is the most valuable single source of information about contemporary social problems and machinery for dealing with them."

Embracing the various fields of social work in which Negroes are engaged, Mr. Washington's article should serve as an authoritative source of information for those interested in securing factual material concerning the group as it operates in this field.

The section on "Negroes in Social Work" in the 1941 Social Work Year Book just published by the Russell Sage Foundation and generally looked upon as the official encyclopedia of social work was written by Forrester B.Washington, director of the Atlanta University School of Social Work.

The Social Work Year Book was designated recently by the New York Times as a book which 'will be of great value not only to those specially interested in its field but also to those who are engaged in many other professions and occupations that, in our closely knit modern life, come into touch with it in one or more of its many-sided activities, is widely used not only by social workers, both experienced and in training, but also by librarians, students of sociology and in classes in social work, as well as by clergymen, editors and all others who desire information about social work in all its phases. It is the most valuable single source of information about contemporary social problems and machinery for dealing with them."

Embracing the various fields of social work in which Negroes are engaged, Mr. Washington's article should serve as an authoritative source of information for those interested in securing factual material concerning the group as it operates in this field.

Georgia Normal College Has Enrollment of 501

With a present enrollment of 501 the Georgia Normal College is continuing its fine service to the Negroes of this section, affording them a modern educational institution.

Headed by Dr. J. W. Holley, who came to this city in 1903, the school staff is composed of finely trained instructors who hold doctorates and masters' degrees from outstanding institutions of higher learning.

The college has eight modern brick buildings which include the home economics and science building; McIntosh dining hall; Caroline Hall, the administration building; Hazard Training School; Peace Hall, boys' dormitory; Joseph S. Davis Hall, girls' dormitory; Margaret Rood Hazard Library, and president's home.

The story of the college is really the story of Doctor Holley's work to bring to the Negroes of this section a modernly equipped college.

The first building, erected with the aid of friends, was located on the sand hills just east of the present school. In 1904, it was chartered as the Albany Bible and Manual Training Institute.

Four years later, in 1908, with the aid of the Hazard family, a new building was erected on property adjacent to the old Blue Springs road.

In 1917, the Georgia Legislature by statuatory act, provided for the establishment of an agricultural, industrial and normal school for the training of colored teachers, the school to be a branch of the University system. The Albany Bible and Manual Training Institute offered 100 acres and the buildings to the trustees of the university for the school. The state accepted the offer and the institute became the Georgia Normal and Agricultural College.

This year the college took steps toward becoming a four-year, accredited institute and it is hoped that in 1942 it will offer bachelor degrees to its graduates.

From this college have gone young Negro men and women to schools throughout the state, carrying with them the fine ideals and good training received here. They have become leaders in education in the state and have exerted tremendous influence in their communities.

Doctor Holley has faced with courage the tremendous tasks which have confronted him and has been undismayed and un-

Marks Progress At Morris Brown

Morris Brown College, through the action of the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools meeting last week at Louisville, has been moved to the exclusive ranks of "A" rated institutions, it was announced Monday by President W. A. Fountain, Jr.

The action which advanced the popular African Methodist institution from its class "B" standing to the highest rating possible, came as the result of continued improvements that have been made at the school.

During the past year a total of $8,000 has given with which to improve the library facilities. Much of this money has been expended to purchase modern golden oak book stacks and the latest in library chairs and tables. The library is in charge of Miss Mary McAfee, a graduate of library science from Hampton Institute.

A total of $100,000 has been set aside for the school's endowment fund. Half of this amount was obtained by President Fountain from the General Education Board, the largest single amount ever given Morris Brown, which has earned a world-wide reputation for its principal of self-help.

Continued further graduate study of faculty members also contributed toward the decision of the association to raise Morris Brown's ranking, it is believed. Many faculty members during the past two years have been granted leaves of absences to pursue graduate study in northern institutions.

Two German Aliens Seized by FBI Here

The Federal Bureau of Investigation Tuesday disclosed the arrests of two German aliens living in Atlanta, one of whom was listed as Dr. Kurt Bolz, an instructor in German at Morehouse and Spelman Colleges. The name of the other alien was not learned immediately.

Francis R. Hammack, agent in charge of the Atlanta field office of FBI, said he has been authorized by Chief G-man J. Edgar Hoover to announce the arrest of "two German aliens." He did not reveal their names.

It was learned, however, that Government agents entered the apartment of Dr. Bolz at 1206 Peachtree Street, late Monday or early Tuesday, arrested him, and placed him in Fulton Tower under a hold order.

Dr. Bolz has lived in Atlanta since 1931, when he became a member of the faculty at Spelman College, Atlanta Negro institution of higher learning. He is a native of Germany and received a Ph. D. degree from Heidelberg University in 1925. He studied in France at the University of Dijon and at Oxford in England. He taught in England before coming to this country.

An outspoken admirer of Adolf Hitler, Dr. Bolz had lived at his present residence for a number of years. He was an inventor of various small devices.

It was understood that Dr. Bolz had been "watched" by the FBI for more than a year.

GEORGIA STATE PROVIDES COMMON SENSE EDUCATION

STUDENTS ARE REQUIRED TO SELECT SOME TRADE

By BENJAMIN F. HUBERT
President, Georgia State College

You will need to know the Georgia State College in order to apprecate it. You will want to meet the student body of more than 700 students. You certainly will want to know the individuals who make up the faculty that guides and inspires these young men and women who are seeking to prepare themselves for places of leadership in the economic, social, and spiritual life of a great state.

As the visitor enters the campus, he will see spread out before him, a beautiful landscape of evergreen oaks dotted in between with buildings, which are largely the handiwork of students and teachers. He will find these hundreds of students busily engaged, each in his own field; some on the farms, milking and tending a fine herd of registered Guernseys, and some of the South's best Hereford beef cattle. Other students will be in the farm crops division, operating tractors, harrows, and harvesting crops of various kinds. Boys will be found feeding and caring for the 1,000 white leghorn and Rhode Island red pedigreed hens that make up the college poultry project. There will be other boys working with the fine herd of Duroc-Jersey pedigreed hogs. Here, boys are innoculating hogs in an effort to find the most efficient way of preparing them for market and for home use. In the canning plant will be a group of boys and girls operating the modern cannery. Here, they are taking products from the garden and farm and preserving them for the use of the college dining hall. This is the most modern cannery in any negro college in America. The farm shop department boys will be building poultry houses, hog houses, farm gates, stretching wire fences, cutting steps, and doing the innumerable jobs that are found necessary on any up-to-date farm. In the creamery, boys and girls will be separating milk, making butter and cheese, and carrying out all of the necessary steps in assuring a sanitary milk supply.

Passing from the farm, we enter the shops, where there will be boys and girls learning to paint; others in mechanical and architectural drawing; some in capentry; still others in auto mechanics, applied electricity, radio repair, and shoe repairing departments. In the laundry, there will be found a large number of students learning how to clean their own clothes. They will also be hard at work learning to repair and to keep in motion the machine that they use. The steam-fitting and laundry divisions have students heating the buildings and keeping the plumbing facilities in repair.

The home economics division has several hundred girls enrolled for training young women in the latest methods and arts of homemaking. In this division, girls learn to do by doing. They not only prepare meals that have the right balance to keep me nand women well, but they are learnig nhow to serve these meals in an attratcive manner. They make the clothes they wear. They are also learning how to make their environment what it should be. When these girls go out, they will be able to take hold of unattractive homes and communities and create new environment sfor themselves and the people whom they serve.

Teachers in the academic program will be found busily engaged providing a practical approach in English, socal science, education, business, chemistry, physics, and biology, so that students will understand and appreciate the close relationship that should exist between theory and practice.

In the library—the heart of the whole college—boys and girls, along with their instructors, will be concentrating on research in their particular fields of study. This is one of the rapidly expandig departments of the college. It is the desire of the administartion to have this the strongest division of the institution.

Physical education and health are strongly emphasized at the college. This becomes evident as the visitor observes the beautiful physical education building—a building made possible by the united efforts of students and teachers. It surpasses most buildings of its kind in the colleges of the Southeast.

At the very entrance to the college is the community house. This beautiful building, now nearing completion, will serve asa social center for students and teachers of the college. In this building will center the social and spiritual life of the institution. Here, students will be found meeting in the various group assemblies. Teachers will find rooms for student-teacher conferences. Faculty men and women clubs will have their headquarters here.

Just outside the entrance to the college will be found the College Co-op Shoppe. This is the largest and oldest successful student-teacher co-operative of any negro college in the world. The co-operative was organized six years ago by poor students for the purpose of supplying their immediate school needs. It is organized so that there is no profit. Students and teachers receive dividends according to the amount of purchases made. There are 600 members of this co-operative. The business division of the college uses this co-operative as a laboratory for teaching better business methods to students in the department. Sanitation, food preparation, efficient service—are all a part of the training that students receive in this co-operatively owned and operated business.

People often ask about the program of the college. They want to know what its objectives are. Briefly, it is our purpose to inform, educate, train, and inspire young men and women to prepare themselves for the jobs that they are likely to do. The college has developed a program of common-sense education. Every student in college must select some trade or industry in which he is to become proficient before he can receive a degree from the college. The trades and industries chosen for specialization are the trades that are basic and fundamental to the welfare and progress of the state.

We feel and believe a man should not only be taught to think in abstract fields, but he should think about the practical problems of life, and the individual will achieve success in life in proportion as he is able to contribute something definite and tangible toward the progress of the people about him. That in order to be a leader, he should be able to convince men of his ability to lead at some job that is worth-while.

We believe that in order for a man to be helpful, he should be able to show a practical appreciation of the things he attempts to teach others to do. We believe education of the hand is equally as important as mental and spiritual development. We feel a man should develop the poise and skill and technique necessary to get along with people, regardless of race or creed. The attitude of the man, as developed in college, will have much to do with his success in life. We believe that honest-to-goodness hard work, and use of educated common sense will inspire men to follow a sincere leadership in a practical and scientific world.

The Georgia State College—the land grant college for the negroes of Georgia—now 50 years old—not only serves Georgia by educating and training a far-visioned leadership but is able to grapple with the practical problems of Georgia in a way to encourage the common people to more satisfying ways of living. Through its various extension services, it reaches out into the state and touches farmers and other workers.

A total of 100 counties send representatives to the college for statewide meetings. Conferenees are held on community problems and correspondence courses reach the far corners of the state, where men and women seek co-operation in their efforts to build for themselves better and more wholesome ways of living.

UNIQUE SCHOOL ONLY LICENSED ONE IN SOUTH

APR 5 - 1941

BY J. C. CHUNN

ATLANTA, Ga., April 3 (Special)—The Griffin Barber College, 556 Mitchell Street, S. W., was founded in 1936 by Mr. James F. Griffin, who is serving in the capacity of president of this vocational institution.

Mr. Griffin has watched his efforts in building the college from a mere humble shack to a brick structure grow into the only accredited colored barber school in this section of the South. Many rehabilitation students have found their mark at this college and are now well on their way in making themselves self-sustaining in society.

APR 5 - 1941

To this, Mr. James F. Griffin can be accredited as the life-line for many unfortunate people who had lost themselves but found an ideal vocation in the help and training that this school offered. So it is reasonable to say, regardless of the environment or any other short-coming that the school may have, it is a worthy and responsible college serving humanity and showing the light to a profession that was once degraded in the eyes of the Negro world.

FOUNDED THE LATTER PART OF 1936

Mr. James F. Griffin, president and founder of the Griffin Barber College, started his career in the barbering business with a small capital of $65 in 1906. At that time, the barbering trade in the South had no ethics and there was no such thing as sanitation. As Mr. Griffin tells it, "A barber shop at that time was known as a 'hang-out joint,' a place where banjo-pickers, gamblers, and vice which composed the underworld made their headquarters." From this humble beginning, Mr. Griffin had a different idea about how a shop should be operated. He wanted it to be of the first-class caliber, a place of respect and refinement and that he achieved by the proper methods of handling a public that in that day had very little education and illiteracy was supreme throughout the South.

From 1906 when he first opened the shop, his ambition dwelt upon the idea of operating a barber school where young men and women could be trained to properly apply the modern sciences of barbering. He struggled through the many years, investing his money in real estate, and wise investments that brought him good profits. Mr. Griffin sought some way to end the unsanitary conditions in barber shops at that early age among Negroes. He also sought the advice of the late A. F. Herndon, who at that time operated what was considered throughout America as the finest barber shop in the world. That was before the founding of the Atlanta Life Insurance company to which Mr. Herndon devoted the latter part of his life, but kept the finest shop in the world until his death. Mr. Herndon advised Mr. Griffin along the lines of sanitation and what could be achieved by proper methods of barbering among Negroes. In 1910, 1911 and 1912, Dr. Raymond C. Carter, prominent physician here, was employed by Mr. Griffin in those early years to lecture to his barbers on hygiene, sanitation, and sterilization. Dr. Carter proved to be a great help in this theory that Mr. Griffin was stressing among the barbers in his employ. Mr. Griffin followed this advice and opened at that time the finest Negro barber shop in Atlanta in the old Odd Fellows Building on Auburn avenue. From this shop, Mr. Griffin increased his earnings to over $20,000 in real estate and other investments.

He opened the Griffin Barber College on Mitchell street in 1936. He built this building, himself working on it part time over a span of two years. He wanted to open the college free of debt in every respect and thereby insure its permanency. He invested a small capital, at that time, and opened the college with two students. Today, over a hundred young men and women have graduated from this school and are making their living in this profession

STUDENTS CAN ENTER SCHOOL ANY TIME DURING YEAR

The Griffin Barber College was accredited in 1938. Mr. Griffin delights in the fact that his institution is the only one this side of Texas who the State Board of Examiners issued an instructor's permit to. He realized at the opening of this college that he would have to educate the public to his idea as there had not been state laws governing the barber profession in Georgia where a barber would have to attend a college, although many states in the South had made it compulsory that a barber had to be trained in a school before making it his life's profession. The Georgia General Assembly has a bill now pending in the Legislature sponsored chiefly by the Associated Masters Barbers of America to make such a law effective in Georgia.

Students can enter this school any time during the year as it is open the whole twelve months. The school has students from four southern, three mid-western, four eastern, and three northern states. He can ably take care of a hundred students at the college as equipment can be provided from time to time to give all the necessary practical and theoretical training that will enable them to pass any state board in America. He is planning to enlarge his building to twice its present size in the very near future and to add on at least two more instructors to take care of a growing demand for barbers. The requests for barbers come to him from all parts of the South and border states, and the college boasts of the fact that they can place every graduate of this institution in a shop of note.

FORMER STUDENTS AN ASSISTANT INSTRUCTOR

Miss Vera L. Brown, a graduate of the college was retained at the time she finished the course as an assistant to Mr. Griffin. She has proved her efficiency and is recognized by Mr. Griffin as an expert in her field. She has proved to be of unmeasurable aid to the women students taking the profession and holds herself within the bounds of an advisor to the many problems which faces a student in this line of vocation. To her, Mr. Griffin gives a world of praise for the high standard of work many of the students who have graduated from the college have maintained.

Miss Bertha Brown, secretary to Mr. Griffin, has also made an unique contribution in adding prestige to the college curriculum. She has earnestly worked by the side of the founder, aiding him in every way possible to give the institution the background that they are now enjoying.

Behind it all stands the energetic figure of Mr. James F. Griffin who has labored and sacrificed to aid members of his race in vocational training and rehabilitating young men and women who other wise could not have carried on, which would have made, in all probability, a burden upon society.

Negro College Founder Paid High Tribute

FORT VALLEY, Ga., May 9.—(AP)—Governor Talmadge paid tribute today to the late William Merida Hubbard, Georgia Negro educator, as a man of sincerity and simplicity who always honored his obligations.

The chief executive spoke at memorial services for Hubbard, who founded the old State Teachers' and Agricultural College at Forsyth as one of the state's first Negro colleges, and served as its president 40 years.

Attorney George B. Culpepper, of Fort Valley, introduced Talmadge as "a man who kept the common touch."

Talmadge said that Negroes "show the values and true dignity of labor."

He told of an instance in which Hubbard indorsed a note that proved to be worthless and then "paid the note in full before its maturity."

He said Hubbard's work had contributed to the advancement of education in Georgia and added that more persons of his type were needed.

Two student-built co-operative farm houses were dedicated in Hubbard's name and the Governor said he was "gratified to see so practical a venture taking shape." In these units, men students are living co-operatively at a cost of $7 each per month.

Mayor C. A. Riley, of Fort Valley, and the city and county boards of education formed a motorcade escorting the Governor to the campus. Others on the program were Chancellor S. V. Sanford, of the University System of Georgia; Vice Chancellor J. C. Dixon, and State Regent Lucien P. Goodrich, of Griffin.

Hubbard was born at Irwinton of slave parentage. He attended Ballard Academy at Macon and Fisk University, Nashville, Tenn., and at Cornell.

Settling in Forsyth in 1902, he began a school with four students in a church basement, supplementing his income by photography. His pay as a teacher then was about $15 to $20 for the three months' term.

Twenty years later his expanded school was made a state institution. In 1939 the college was moved to the Fort Valley school and Monroe county took over the old institution.

One of Hubbard's sons is continuing in educational work at Forsyth, a daughter is a physician in New York, and two othetr sons are in the legal profession and in business respectively in Philadelphia.

Talmadge Lauds Wm. Hubbard For Work for Negro Education

FORT VALLEY, Ga., May 10.—(AP)—The late William M. Hubbard, Georgia Negro educator, was described by Governor R. Eugene Talmadge Friday as a man of sincerity and simplicity.

The Governor, speaking at a memorial service for Hubbard, founder of the old State Teachers and Agricultural College at Forsyth and for 40 years its president, said that Negroes "show the value and true dignity of labor."

Hubbard's work, the Governor said, had contributed to the advancement of education in Georgia. He told of an instance when the educator endorsed a note which proved to be worthless, but "paid the note in full before its maturity."

Governor Talmadge said he was "gratified to see so practical a venture taking shape," as the two student-built cooperative farmhouses dedicated in Hubbard's name. Men students are living in the houses co-operatively at a cost of $7 a month each.

A motorcade headed by Mayor G. A. Riley of Fort Valley escorted the Governor to the campus. Chancellor S. V. Sanford of the University System, Vice Chancellor J. C. Dixon and State Regent Lucien P. Goodrich, of Griffin, also were on the program.

Hubbard was born at Irwinton of slave parents. He was educated at Ballard Academy in Macon and Fisk University at Nashville. On completing his education, he settled in Forsyth, where he opened a school with four students in a church basement. Twenty years later his school had prospered and was made a state institution. It was moved here in 1939.

Georgia State College In Nation-Wide Broadcast

SAVANNAH, Ga. (SNS)—In a nation-wide broadcast of the Farm and Home Hour arranged by the United States Department of Agriculture Wednesday, Dr. Benjamin F. Hubert, president of the Georgia State College, described his institution as a "school of workers."

Dr. Hubert told his audience: "When a young man or woman graduates from Georgia State College he or she is qualified to do something. Every student is encouraged to select some trade or industry, in addition to courses in theory and in cultural subjects. All the work on our 100-acre farm and in the shops is done by students."

Dean W. K. Payne said that the first two years of the college course are devoted to general studies, after which the student spend two years in specialized study of agriculture, home economics, the arts and science or one of the trades. About 90 per cent of the graduates turn to teaching, he said, and the college regards the training of teachers as its major undertaking as part of the University System.

P. H. Stone, state supervisor of Negro extension work, following faculty members who reviewed the work of the several departments concluded the broadcast with the statement:

"We are attempting to bring more Negro families in Georgia to realize that they can live better if they produce more of their own food, so much of our work deals with poultry, vegetable gardening, dairying, food preservation and other topics which are part of the live-at-home program."

Fletcher H. Henderson Sr. Given Ft. Valley State Award

Ceremonies Fete Henderson Jr. Band

By MINNIE D. SINGLETON

Fletcher Hamilton Henderson Sr., Cuthbert, Ga., principal of the Cuthbert High school, who has given 63 years of active service to the school rooms of Georgia, one year in South Carolina and 61 years as principal of Cuthbert High, lived to see the fruits of his untiring labor ripen and be relished by hundreds of educators and citizens of Georgia, Tuesday, July 29, when he was the recipient of the second annual Fort Valley state award, as the program was broadcast over station WBML, Macon, Ga., from the auditorium of the Fort Valley State College.

The broadcast set to music the award to the veteran educator, Henderson Sr., of a scroll, for his outstanding contribution to the education of Negro children in Georgia, signed by 1,400 teachers enroled this summer at the Fort Valley State College. A choir composed of special voices of these teachers interspersed the program with the singing of appropriate songs in keeping with the history of the educator as unraveled in script style by the announcer, Prof. Aaron Brown, in charge of the summer school. Among the numbers heard were Deep River, Oh Write My Name, Trampin', A Band of Music, Sit Down, Servant, and Stay In the Field. The music was arranged by Willis James.

DR. BOND PRESENTS

Dr. Horace Mann Bond, president of the Fort Valley State College, presented the 1941 award to Prof. Henderson, using in part the following tribute: "For courageous, vigorous and unselfish efforts as a citizen in the interest of the growth and development of an enlightened Negro community and an enlightened relationship between the races, standing as an inspiration to citizens throughout the state of Georgia, in witness whereof, the committee on award, the faculty of the Fort Valley State College, have hereunto set their hands and the seal of the college this 29th day of July, 1941."

The award was accepted for Prof. Henderson by his only daughter, Miss Irma Henderson who expressed her complete joy "I accept this award for my father with humble gratefulness to the school and to the persons who have been instrumental in making possible this occasion."

Beautiful expressions of tribute to Prof. Henderson were read by the Rev. Driggers, pastor of the Paine Chapel AME church where Fletcher Henderson Sr. was superintendent of the Sunday school for 58 years; the superintendent of the public schools of Cuthbert, superintendent of the public school of Randolph county and the mayor of the city of Cuthbert.

Prof. Aaron Brown and John S. Lash served with Dr. Bond on the committee on award; Prof. James O. Slade, chairman of subscriptions and Prof. L. R. Bywaters, general chairman, were principals serving.

The Rev. J. L. Walker and the Rev. J. Crawford, offered the invocation and benediction.

FLETCHER JR. DEDICATES

Fletcher Henderson Jr., winner of the golden trophy annually awarded the Nation's No. 1 music arranger, after traveling 400 miles to be present, considered it the most outstanding event in his career to play a dedicated number on the occasion of this memorable event in honor of his father. Following the award program Fletcher played for a concert and dance reception as a further tribute to his father, in the school's auditorium. About 500 attended.

The nimble fingers of Fletcher Henderson Jr., that played Chopin, finally ragtime, and later went on to arrange music, great music—for Benny Goodman, for Paul Whiteman, for great bands and orchestras the world over and for his own band, was listened to by his father Tuesday evening until the late hours. Occasionally as the aged father sat near his son, Fletcher, he would remind him of the fact. "Papa, you may not like this kind of music but this is what the world wants."

MILLION PINE FARM IS STUDIED

Hancock County Growth Proves to Be Revelation

LOG CABIN CENTER, Ga., July 27.—The summer school for colored rural teachers conducted at Log Cabin Center by the Georgia State College during the past nine years, among other things, is making a study of the Million Pine Farm. This farm, located one and a half miles from the Community Center, is being used to train vocational and high school teachers to understand and appreciate the value of the pine tree to the communities of Georgia and the South. Negro teachers have an opportunity to note the rapidity with which pines develop on waste land if properly protected from fires and destructive forest insects.

The Million Pine Farm, so named because it has over a million pine trees on it, is located on the county highway between White Plains and Sparta. It consists of 866 acres of land, 650 acres of which is in pine forests and pasture lands.

There is a beautiful, commodious, three-story house with basement. The house faces a local highway on which mail is delivered daily and sets back about 500 yards from the main highway. The records in the family cemetery just to the rear of the house show that the Hilman family, former owners of this farm, migrated to Georgia from North Carolina and settled on this farm nearly 150 years ago. As evidence of the character of the early Hilman settlers, the cemetery has a five-foot wall around it constructed of heavy polished granite. All of the graves are walled in with cut stone.

This farm came into the possession of negroes about two years ago. William Heath and his family, including his wife, five boys and three girls, moved into this community from an adjoining county with plans to purchase the farm. This family began a program of farming that has encouraged negroes to look forward to success and happiness on the farms of Georgia. He and his family have impressed the people of both race groups with his sincerity, ability and high moral character.

Naming the farm "Million Pine Farm," Heath has made definite progress toward the improvement of his forest lands. Systematic thinning out of undesirable trees and the development of measures for the prevention of fires is part of the general farm program.

The first year on this farm, a most difficult and trying year, Heath proved his claim as one of Georgia's best farmers by marketing 17 bales of cotton and large amounts of chickens, eggs and butter. He raised all of the meat to supply his family needs and had some to sell. There was plenty of corn and hay for his cows and work stock, and in addition, meal for family use. A supply of sweet potatoes and canned vegetables to supply the family's needs can always be found on this farm. This year, in spite of the poor season, the farm produced 179 bushels of wheat, 20 bushels of rye and several hundred bushels of oats.

The house has been made attractive by shrubbery and flowers in the front and back yard. The best garden in Hancock county, sanitary toilet, screens on the house, electric lights and a radio add to the comforts of family life on this farm.

The raising of pure-bred Hereford beef cattle is one of the four objectives. A permanent pasture has been wired in on the bottom land and this is being seeded to carpet grass and Lespedeza. Twenty beautiful Hereford cows and a pure-bred bull, foundation stock for one of the finest herds in Georgia, point the way to success in the breeding of beef cattle on this farm.

William Heath and family are very religious. They attend church and Sunday school regularly on Sundays. But when Monday morning comes, the family is just as diligent in making headway on the farm. They rise early and work late in the busy farm season. A pile of cut stove wood about as high as the house evidences the fact that the people on the Million Pine Farm prepare for the comfort of the family while farm work is slack.

Donald R. Brewster, widely known forester, who has made a careful study and appraisal of this farm, says that it should become the nucleus of a great forestry training center for negro youth of the South.

People of Georgia would do well to visit the "Million Pine Farm" and see at first hand what negroes are doing to improve their own opportunities on the farms of Georgia. This farm indicates how negroes may own and operate their own businesses by the application of hard work and plenty of common sense.

The Million Pine Farm as it develops in the near future will be an inspiration and a challenge to negro leaders who look for "a way out" for negroes in the South. When pine trees are needed for national defense activities, it will be great for negroes to be able to supply the nation's needs from their own farms. The Million Pine Farm points the way to success and a more satisfying life.

(Special to the Daily Worker)

ATLANTA, Nov. 5.—Students and faculty members of Atlanta University, Morehouse College and Spelman College, Negro institutions here, last week heard Lord Marley, British statesman, praise the Soviet people and their government in their war against Hitler and German fascism. The lecture was given in Sisters Chapel, Spelman College, before approximately 1,500 persons.

Lord Marley began by pointing out that the Soviet Union's military preparations were essentially for defense but that the country's leaders had not overlooked the necessity of training for offense. That was one reason why, he said, the Red Army had made so "courageous" a stand and exhibited "better morale than most people expected."

He pointed out that the Soviet people had overcome "the feeling of antipathy toward farming and farmers" and that, under the system of collective farms, the government had raised the status of the population as a whole to that of industrial workers. He declared also that Soviet farmers had learned that the collective farm system permits them such prosperity as they otherwise would not have and that they, therefore "believe in and support their government."

Lord Marley said the living conditions of the people as a whole had been "standardized" in the USSR and that, "with the religious freedom guaranteed by the Soviet Constitution, these people are drawn into a spiritual closeness which is felt by the armies with good effect."

In a comparison of Communism with fascism, Lord Marley said that Communism "is built on the principle of supplying the economic needs of men," whereas fascism "attempts to control men's minds and spirits, which, in itself, is a real threat to democracy."

Last week was the third of Lord Marley's lectures to the students and faculties of the Atlanta University system. He is a former Under Secretary of State for War and holds a number of honorary titles under the British government. He has written extensively on the Soviet Union.

College Speaker Advocates Cooperation Of Race In The Present Crisis

SAVANNAH, Ga., Jan. 30—At the Friday morning chapel service of Georgia State College, Dr. A. Clayton Powell Jr., pastor of the Abyssinia Baptist church of New York City, requested the cooperation of Negroes in solving current problems, in his address on "The Negro Church Meeting the Present Crisis." Dr. Powell stated that we live in the most critical hours, but only out of such a crisis grow strong men and women. We live in an hour filled with more potential tragedy than any other hour. Very few of the things possessed by Negroes have been won on their own merit, but now is the time for the Negro to move on his own power. Negroes must think of a method of solving their problems, for they are politically disfranchised.

The whole question, according to Dr. Powell, is an economic one and he feels that the answer is to be found in a higher standard of living among Negroes.

Since the church is the one Negro organization, it should meet the present problems. Dr. Powell stated that the Abyssinia Baptist Church does not merely face the economic problems of today, but it meets them. His church, which has a roll membership of 14,000, an active membership of 9,121 and an average collection of $800 per Sunday, has approximately 40 paid workers. The members of Abyssinia Baptist Church were influential in instigating the founding of a Consumers Cooperative and a bank for Negroes in Harlem.

Young men and women, according to Dr. Powell, should go back to the church after college and rejuvenate it.

Negroes should look at life through the centuries and not as the clock ticks. Regardless of how dark the hour, the sun will shine again. "Faint not," said Dr. Powell, "be strong; tomorrow comes a song."

YMCA Officials To Serve As Lecturers Here

YMCA, New Orleans, Louisiana, Major Campbell Johnson, Twelfth Street Branch of the Washington YMCA, now on leave as Civilian Adviser to the United States War Department; Mr. Henry G. Ware, secretary Student Work, Southern Area Council, YMCA,, and Mr. E. G. Wilson, executive secretary Southern Conference on Human Relations in Industry.

The recognition means that young men who complete the work at the social school will have the official approval of the YMCA for employment, will be better equipped for association work, and will logically be in line for YMCA jobs, and thus wider occupational opportunities.

Mr. Washington emphasized the the fact that no part of the program of the school as an institution for the training of young people for all the various occupational fields of social work will be relinquished as this additional YMCA work is assumed. The curriculum of the school which is kept abreast of present constantly changing socio-economic conditions especially as they affect Negroes, was studied very carefully by the representatives of the National YMCA Council and the Southern Area Council. The consensus of opinion was that because the Atlanta University School of Social work already offered practically everything which is ordinarily offered at YMCA Training Schools plus courses not offered elsewhere on the special problems of social work among Negroes, that only the addition of four courses referred to above was necessary in order that young men who satisfactorily complete all the regular work of the social school would adequately meet the requirements for YMCA secretaries. Further emphasis has been placed on the fact that the school will be used to train association workers, not only for the South but for all sections of the country.

Col. Simmons Inspires 148 Apex Grads

MAY 1 - 1941

Declaring that woman's power is both in her goodness and attractiveness, Col. Roscoe Conklin Simmons, renowned Chicago journalist and nationally-known political leader, Wednesday night praised members of the Atlanta Apex College graduation class for having selected a profession that "represents an endeavor to bring into our kind the lovliness of woman and to join beauty and beauteousness."

The speaker was presented to the crowded audience at Big Bethel church by John Wesley Dobbs, president of the Atlanta Civic and Political League, who served as master of ceremonies.

MAY 1 - 1941

Mme. Sara Spencer Washington, founder and president of the Apex Company, Atlantic City, was a distinguished visitor at the graduating exercises.

"If I were called upon tonight to issue a degree to you," Col Simmons asserted, waving a bony finger at the white-capped graduates, "I would confer the degree, bachelor of self-respect. For your profession is dedicated to the important task of increasig to a larger measure the respect of mankind of womanhood."

MAY 1 - 1941

The speaker before him into his address fondly re his first introduction to Georgia "many years ago," when he had his first teaching experience as a young man in Greene county.

He was lavish in his praise of two eminent Georgians, Henry Lincoln Johnson and Henry McNeal Turner, whose names he declared, "will remain forever written in the stars."

"There is no reason in the world today," he asserted, "that every woman should not be beautiful." And, he added, "Every woman is beautiful. It is the job of you graduates to introduce those unfortunate women who have not yet found it out to themselves."

An elaborate musical program was given in connection with the commencement exercises. Graham Jackson, widely known musician whom Col. Simmons praised as a "born genius," directed the class in the singing of three numbers Mr. Jackson following the address played a medley of operatic selections on the organ. Miss Mahala Smith, sang two numbers.

Others who spoke included Mrs Washington, after her introduction made brief remarks. Miss Tempi Hall, who read a Wordsworth poem, and Miss Louise Thornton who presented the diplomas.

Greetings from the class were brought by Miss Lillie Mae Roundtree, while the invocation was offered by the Rev. D. T. Babcock pastor of Big Bethel church.

Brotherhood Head Visits Campus Of Morehouse College

MAY 1 1 1941

In one of the most dynamic addresses ever delivered from the rostrum of Sale Hall Chapel, Mr. A. Phillip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, predicted to come in this generation "some of the most profound transformations in our economic and social life that have ever been witnessed in the modern world. Changes are taking place that are so vast, the students were told, that unless we are able to adapt ourselves to them crystallization will set in that will prevent us from ever taking our place in the new economy."

"No longer can the Negro depend on outside agencies" the speaker declared, "as philanthropic foundations are drying up and the good people who were concerned about humanity are not existing as they once did." A great challenge to the young Negro of today as described by Mr. Randolph is in the organization of the power of the masses. "Get tools of information and learn how to analyze problems" he told the students. "develop power, intelligence, courage, and the will to do and go out into the masses and place your genius into industry. Organize cooperatives upon the farms consumer cooperatives in cities, trade unions, tenant farmer organizations, develop mass movements in order to place power where it might be of greatest advantage to the group, for in this area is the new statesmanship among Negro people" Rewards might not come in terms of money, Mr. Randolph said, but in the higher terms of service to the race and the nation.

The speaker is a former lecturer at the Rand School of Social Sciences in New York. He is one of the most able leaders in labor circles today and was in Atlanta this week to hold conferences with members of organized labor. He is the editor of "The Black Worker" a labor journal, and author of "Terms of Peace and Darker Races" and the "Truth About Lynching."

Accompanying Mr. Randolph to Morehouse College was Mr. Milton Webster, first vice president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters and Chairman of its international executive council. He spoke challengingly to the Morehouse students about the work of the Brotherhood, stating that the efforts of this organization show that progress can be made on the industrial front. More Negroes are hired by the Pullman Company than any other organization, he stated, and the problems this company faces in personnel are used as examples by other industrialists the country over that hire Negro help. The porter is a vital factor in the sale of service, he informed the students, and this is really what the Company exists to sell. Although we have professional men and business men, the masses of Negroes for a long time to come will be workers, and if the business man is to be successfully he observed, it will be because he does business with successful workers. Since the working people are the foundation of the Negro race, we cannot make much progress unless this foundation is built on a solid rock he said. The Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters has opened up a way to show Negroes what can be done the speaker concluded, with a result that workers have definite hours with pay for overtime, and now the Negro can get proper recognition regardless of whether he is located in the North or South.

A number of prominent people in educational and political circles are expected to be present when Governor Eugene Talmadge comes to the Fort Valley State College to deliver the principal address at a memorial service in honor of the late William Merida Hubbard, founder and long-time president of the State Teachers and Agricultural College at Forsyth, now merged with the Negro college here.

The exercises will be held in the college auditorium, and Dr. H. M. Bond, president of the school states that ample accommodations will be provided for all white people who will come. The program will begin at 2:30 o'clock.

The circumstances surrounding the Governor's visit are of interest. Early in February, knowing that the venerable educator was in feeble health, and wishing to make a gesture to him in recognition of long years of service in Forsyth, Governor Talmadge agreed to be the honor guest at the services originally scheduled to be a celebration. After the death of Professor Hubbard, who unfortunately did not live to see this crowning recognition, the program was made a memorial service.

The deceased educator was acquainted with most of the men who stood high in Georgia public life during the past several decades, and was well liked by them. Hoke Smtih, Tom Watson and others were his friends and recognized him as such.

The memorial service will be concluded with the dedication of the recently erected farm self-support units, built by students, in honor of the deceased educator.

Motorcade to Escort the Governor

A motorcade will form in the center of town to accompany the Governor out to the school. All persons with cars who desire to join the motorcade are requested to communicate with Chief of Police G. W. Cochran, who will have charge of these arrangements.

Governor Talmadge will be the guest of A. J. Evans and Geo. B. Culpepper, Jr., while here, and will be entertained at luncheon at the home of Mr. Evans.

TALMADGE LAUDS NEGRO EDUCATOR

FORT VALLEY, Ga., May 10.—(AP)—The late William Merida Hubbard, Georgia negro educator, was described by Governor Eugene Talmadge as a man of sincerity and simplicity.

The governor, speaking yesterday at a memorial service for Hubbard, founder of the old State Teachers and Agricultural College at Forsyth and for 40 years its president, said that negroes "show the values and true dignity of labor."

Hubbard's work, the governor said, had contributed to the advancement of education in Georgia.

Hubbard was born at Irwinton of slave parents. He was educated at Ballard Academy in Macon and Fisk University at Nashville. On completing his education, he settled in Forsyth where he opened a school with four students in a church basement. Twenty years later his school had prospered and was made a state institution and was moved here in 1939.

Rural Problems Of Negro Studied

Georgia Community Center Opens Talks

Special to The Evening Times.

SPARTA, Ga., April 28 (AP).—A new approach to solution of Negro farm problems — the "fireside chat" — attracted planters from eight southern states to the initial session at Log Cabin center.

The center is a Negro community where problems are studied and coped with first hand, instead of on paper or in forum discussions.

The initial "fireside chat" was called by the federal farm security administration, a three-day meeting directed by Giles A. Hubert, senior specialist of the FSA. States represented were Georgia, the Carolinas, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana and Arkansas.

Basic topics included erosion, forestry, co-operative marketing and agricultural co-operation. Theme of the sessions was the problem of how to improve economic and social conditions of the south's Negro farm population. Leaders reported "a general feeling that a more realistic approach to the solution of some of the difficulties confronting rural Negroes must be developed in our colleges."

Negro's Future With Labor Class, Dr. Mordecai Johnson Tells Grads

Says Last Ten Years Have Been Darkest in Negro's History

MEMPHIS, Tenn.—(SNS)—Pointing out hopeful signs in this, "The darkest period of Negro life in America," Dr. Mordecai Johnson, president of Howard University captivated a record-breaking commencement audience at LeMoyne College Tuesday afternoon of this week in the closing exercises of that seventy-one year old institution.

Altho evening shadows had begun to fall before the end of his memorable address, indicating an unusually lengthy program as compared with previous years, the crowd remained, almost to a person, to catch every word of this noted orator, and head of the race's largest educational institution in the country.

Dr. Johnson, in a recapitulation of three periods in the life of the Negro, said that the greatest contribution made to the freedman following emancipation was the establishment of such schools as Fisk, Howard University, Talladega and LeMoyne by the American Missionary Association, and other institutions of learning by similar Christian organizations interested in emancipating the mind as well as the physical being of the Negro.

"The most hopeful period was during and shortly after the first World War," the speaker averred. It was a period in which Negroes in masses began to migrate from the South to the North. . . when great values were placed upon his labor, and he made tremendous strides in many avenues of useful endeavors. He appraised the last ten years as the darkest period.

Jobs once regarded traditionally Negro jobs were thrown into the open market for anyone to make a bid for. When conditions became precarious in the North. . . employment limited. . . and the Negro began to lose his earnings, homes, and his material gains of many years, he looked back to the South for salvation. Many return only to find that the Southern white man had not only learned to wait tables, run elevators and do other domestic chores, but were clamoring for these jobs that the Negro over the years had taken for granted were his.

Declaring that the present period was one of general pessimism among Negroes in the North and South, Dr. Johnson added that there were hopeful signs to indicate that these conditions of economic distress were only temporary and not an incurable economic disease.

He paid tribute to the present administration for its broad, social program to raise human values to an even higher standard than the pre-depression period. Trends in this direction are accreditable not merely to any one section of the country but to a United America, Dr. Johnson asserted.

The future of the Negro, he stated, was bound up with the laboring classes of America. "There are only about 40,000 Negro college graduates in this country," the speaker said. "Not enough to support all the Negro churches in America."

"We are beginning to think as laboring people," he declared, and added that the South is coming around to the viewpoint that the great reservoir of Negro labor must be treated with the same consideration of the white group if the South is to progress in comparison with other sections of the country.

Following his address Miss L. E. Campbell, teacher at Booker T. Washington high school, presented Dr. Johnson with a traveling bag on behalf of Memphis city teachers for his outstanding success in the field of education. Dr. Johnson, in response, said that was "the most unexpected diploma" that he had ever received. A native of Paris, Tennessee, a few miles from Memphis, Dr. Johnson had spent many years of his early manhood in this city, and studied at Howe Institute under Dr. T. O. Fuller, pastor of First Baptist Church, and former president Howe.

Degrees were conferred upon the fifty-five seniors by C. Arthur Bruce, chairman of the Board of Trustees. Dr. H. C. Hamilton, retiring Dean of LeMoyne, presented the class to Mr. Bruce. President Fred A. Brownlee, who delivered the baccalaureate sermon the previous Sunday, gave each graduate a copy of "Fearless Advocate," a book penned by Miss Margaret McCulloch, former LeMoyne history teacher, on the life of Dr. Julius LeMoyne, for whom the institution was named. Each year a character-building book is given to members of the graduating class.

The LeMoyne chorus under direction of Prof. J. A. Whittaker, head of the music department, rendered music for the occasion. Rev. Alfred Loaring-Clark, Rector of St. John's Episcopal church, gave the invocation.

Fort Valley Ceremonies Honor Negro

FORT VALLEY, [AP] — Governor Eugene Talmadge paid tribute Friday to the late William Merida Hubbard, Georgia Negro educator, as a man of sincerity and simplicity who always honored his obligations.

The chief executive spoke at memorial services for Hubbard, who founded the old State Teachers and Agricultural College at Forsyth as one of the state's first Negro colleges, and served as its president 40 years.

Attorney George B. Culpepper of Fort Valley introduced Talmadge as "a man who kept the common touch."

Talmadge said that Negroes "show the values and true dignity of labor."

MAY 10 1941

He told of an instance in which Hubbard endorsed a note that proved to be worthless and then "paid the note in full before its maturity."

He said Hubbard's work had contributed to the advancement of education in Georgia and added that more persons of his type were needed.

The student-built co-operative farm houses were dedicated in Hubbard's name and the governor said he was "gratified to see so practical a venture taking shape." In these units, men students are living co-operatively at a cost of $7 each per month.

Mayor C. A. Riley of Fort Valley and the city and county boards of education formed a motorcade escorting the governor to the campus. Others on the program were Chancellor S. V. Sanford of the University System of Georgia, Vice Chancellor J. C. Dixon, and State Regent Lucien P. Goodrich of Griffin.

Hubbard was born at Irwinton of slave parentage. He attended Ballard Academy at Macon, Fisk University, Nashville, Tenn., and Cornell.

Governor, Others To Pay Tribute to Late W. M. Hubbard.

FORT VALLEY, Ga., May 8.—(AP)—White and Negro Georgians will join in tribute here tomorrow to the late William M. Hubbard, founder and president of the State Teachers and Agricultural College at Forsyth, with Governor Talmadge as principal speaker.

The Governor had promised some months ago to address a service planned for Hubbard before his death. The talk was not delivered because Hubbard died March 21, and the celebration was advanced to Friday and changed into memorial services.

Hubbard made friends among white and Negro citizens of Georgia through 40 years as an educator. He counted the late Hoke Smith and Tom Watson among them.

One feature of tomorrow's service will be the dedication of the two farm houses built by students and operated by them as self-supporting projects. The students finance the work by raising poultry and gardens.

Besides being a widely known educator, Hubbard also was a photographer and served many of the prominent white families of the state. Talmadge, his father and mother became interested in Hubbard's work and the Governor contributed to the Forsyth school before it was taken over by the State Board of Regents.

Dr. Aquilla Chamlee, former president of Bessie Tift College, and George B. Culpepper Jr., of Fort Valley, also have accepted invitations to speak.

FORT VALLEY, Ga. — The old gentleman stood with his hat lifted, a wide grin on his wrinkled face, when Governor Talmadge and his party drove upon the campus of Fort Valley State College last Friday.

"Old Gene is okeh," the elderly gent said as the chief executive's car moved down the winding drive. "Of course, I never liked some of the things he said on the radio about our folks when he was campaigning for office, but I guess he made those remarks to keep the other fellow from getting too many votes."

The old Georgian shuffled off at a slow pace, hoping to reach the auditorium and get a back seat by the time the Governor started his speech.

"I like coming around this place," he said. "It's beautiful to me. All of these stately buildings encircling a big island of green grass. The pretty girls and young men moving about, laughing and talking as if they'd never heard of Hitler's European nightmare."

He walked on punching holes in the earth with his ancient walkingstick. Now and then he would wipe tobacco juice from the corners of his mouth.

"You know," he said, "me and Mr. Henry Hunt were good pals. He was a perfect gentleman and he really loved this place. I watched him as he planned this school and then I watched it grow under his fine leadership. He was a good man and a handsome fellow in his young days. Tell you the truth, he reminded me of a South American land owner. He really made a grand picture walking over these grounds with his long legs."

MAY 1 1 1941

"This fellow, Mr. Horace Bond, is a fine gentleman too" the talkative old man went on. "He's really made this school a good president since Dr. Hunt passed. He's putting Fort Valley State College on the map. He's a man with ideas and knows how to put them to good use. They tell me Fort Valley is rating with the bigger colleges now."

The old man was at his destination. He took out a blanket-sized handkerchief and wiped the perspiration and dust from his face. Then he said:

Governor Is Heard at Ft. Valley College

By CLIFF MACKAY
(World Managing Editor)

FORT VALLEY, Ga. — Serving as a rebuke to those industrialists who arbitrarily refuse to employ Negro workers in the nation's defense industries, Governor Eugene Talmage Friday strongly praised black labor "as the best in the world."

Georgia's Chief Executive was appearing as principal speaker during the first annual observance of William M. Hubbard Memorial Day, honoring the memory of the late founder and president-emeritus of the State Teachers and Argicultural College at Forsyth.

Frowning on those who seek to belittle the ability of Negro workers, the governor asserted that laborers of no other race possess the "patience, strength and endurance" of the Negro and that "their sweat and toil has contributed as much as any others to the development of Georgia into a great state".

During the course of his address Governor Talmadge recalled his personal acquaintance with Professor Hubbard whom he praised as "earnest, tender, reserved" and possessing with it all a determination to help his people, especially the children that were in his care.

He remembered Mr. Hubbard as a man who was meticulously strict in meeting his obligations, declaring that was one trait all who were within the range of his voice might well follow.

PRAISES NEGROES

"Even if you do make a bad deal, do not fail to live up to it," he asserted. "Go through with it. It will be a good lesson. It will teach you to be more careful and use better judgment on your next trade".

MAY 10 1941

The Governor expressed pride in the "strides in education that Negroes have made in Georgia," declaring that it was his fond desire to "see the colored people of the state grow and flourish."

In closing, the Georgia Executive admonished his hearers to return to the influence of the church declaring that the "only answer to the present ills that afflict the world can be found in the christian way".

Dr. Horace Mann Bond, president of Fort Valley State College served as master of ceremonies. The Governor was introduced by Attorney George B Culpepper, Jr., while 11-year old Joseph Solomon read the scripture.

Chancellor S. V. Sanford, during brief remarks, highly praised the singing of the Fort Valley choir under the direction of Edgar Rogie Clark. In closing he told his hearers that "We should appreciate that it is a great thing to live under the stars and stripes emblematic of the eternal truths".

Other speakers were Chancellor PGaee xssvrtp 9999 9 8.. .... Lucien P. Goodrich of the University system of Georgia and A. J. Evans Fort Valley businessman.

The Invocation was offered by Dr. Acquilla Chamlee, president-emeritus of Bessie Tifty College and the Benediction was pronounced by the Rev. V. A. Edwards, Religious Extension worker of Forsyth.

Following the chapel services a brief dedicatory exercise was held at the two recently completed farm cooperative units which bear the name of W M. Hubbard.

Governor Talmadge spoke briefly at the services praising the idea behind the development of the farm units declaring it was the type of thing that "More of our white and colored people must go back to" The Rev. T. J. Crawford, Sunday School Missionary of Fort Valley, offered the dedicatory prayer.

"Lemme go in here and hear what the chief is going to say. I got a hunch it's going to be good."

The old man's hunch was right, because Governor Talmadge came out with some strong words.

The executive denounced those industrialists who refuse to employ Negroes in the nation's defense industries. He frowned on those who belittle the ability of Negro workers. He called Negro labor "the best in the world."

MAY 1 1 1941

He paid high tribute to colored Georgians, especially the late Prof. William M. Hubbard, in whose memory he was speaking.

The Governor's speech in Fort Valley will be broken down by critics who possess that habit of trying to determine whether or not the speaker spoke sincerely.

It is possible that Mr. Talmadge was sincere in what he said because politicians usually don't care for their white friend and supporters to know of their interracial doings.

Colored and white newspaper agencies sent the Governor's speech over the State Friday afternoon. And old Gene knew about it, too.

Beauty Business

Rev. John Clarence Wright

ABOUT TWO WEEKS ago, along with hundreds of other interested, if not to say thrilled, Atlantans, I witnessed the graduating exercises of our local Apex College of Beauty Culture. With academic "pomp and circumstances", some one hundred and forty women of varying ages, garbed in spotless white gowns and mortar board caps, marched proudly down the aisle of Big Bethel church to be addressed by Col. Roscoe Simmons, one of America's most noted platform speakers.

These women had completed a brief, but intensive, course in cultivating and preserving the assets of beauty, whether small or great, possessed by all women. They were being inducted into an ever-increasing army of experts whose business (or profession) is to make the world a more liveable place by making it easier and more inspiring to look at the men and women who are perennial actors in the drama of daily living.

WORK ESSENTIAL

That their work is at once essential and highly esteemed is evidence by the phenomenal progress and expansion over a period of a single generation of this "beauty business." It hos made individuals of the race wealthy, and given dignified and lucrative employment to thousands of others. It has, in some cases, miraculously transformed the women of our race. It would not be too much to say that these apostles of beauty have discovered the Negro to himself.

He has found that in addition to being a study race, capable of bearing almost unbelievable physical hardships and survice, he belongs to a race of rare physical charm and beauty-a race quick to sense and to make the most of personality assets of which it had been almost totally unaware.

Thus the candidates for certificates as beauticians as they proudly assembled for the plaudits of their friends and relatives the other night, were, whether they were conscious of it or not, missionaries in one of the most important areas of human service.

NOT A LUXURY

For beauty is not a luxury in whatever form it may be sought. Man has an instinctive longing for it, and God has provided him with the five senses through which its constant inflow will reach the soul. The more highly civilized a people, the more completely will utility be wed to beauty in all the products of his hand and bran. And even the savage in the bush finds himself moved by an urge to "paint the lily" in his personal adornment, and in his crude efforts to cheer, brighten and decorate the places where he resides.

So it is reassuring to see a great, emerging people like the Negro in America rating among his most successful and lucrative callings, the business of Beauty Culture. And we somehow believe that it is not to mere vanity that its marvelous growth and expansion can be attributed, but rather to the Negro's inherent love of beauty whether it is of form, color or sound.

We can only hope that a passion for beauty of thought and of action will hold just as compelling a place in his quest for the ideal. So we salute the growing numbers who are making the creation and preservation of beauty their life work. What higher, more exalted calling could be theirs for

"If you have spoken something beautiful,
Or touched the dead canvass to life,
Or made the cold stone to speak—
You who know the secret heart of beauty
If you have done one thing
That has made gentler the churlish world,
Though mankind pass you by
And feed and clothe you grudgingly—
Though the world starve you,
And God answer not your nightly prayers,
And you grow old hungering still at heart
And walk friendless in your way,
And lie down at last forgotten—
If all this befall you who have created beauty,
You shall still leave a bequest to the world
Greater than institutions and rules and commerce;
And by the immutable law of human heart
The God of the universe is your debtor
If you have made gentler the churlish world.

Georgia Editors Say:

NEGRO COLLEGE GRADUATES

(From The Valdosta Daily Times.)

Latest available figures indicate that during the school year just closing there were 200 per cent more Negro men and women in college in Georgia than in 1926. This is another proof of the progress that is being made by the Negro residents of Georgia in the matter of education.

In 1926 the Negro college enrollment in Georgia was only 1,224. During the past year there were 3,063 such students.

Within the next few days 11 Negro colleges in the state will graduate 449 Negro men and women. The degrees to be conferred include bachelor of arts, bachelor of science, bachelor of divinity, master of arts, master of science and master of social work. In addition, there will be a number who will receive diplomas for special work in agriculture, home economics and education.

This increase in Negro college enrollment is an encouraging sign. It means that the colored people of the state are giving more time and attention to higher education and this is certain to work for a better and more enlightened citizenship.

Spelman Class Hears Address By MacLean

College Women Must Work for Nation, He Says.

American college women must carry on the work begun by other organizations in the interest of the welfare of the nation, Dr. Malcolm Shaw MacLean, president of Hampton Institute, told the graduating class at Spelman College yesterday.

Warned of the dangers ahead, Dr. MacLean pointed out to the senior class that by organized thought, planning and effort, "war can be stopped by joining together and demanding a world union, a world police force and a world court so as to make it impossible for a bully to tear loose again."

President MacLean was introduced by President Florence M. Read, of Spelman College, who also presented the Bachelor of Arts and the Bachelor of Science degrees to the 64-member graduating class.

The Spelman College Glee Club and the college quartet furnished a program of music. Benediction was pronounced by Rev. Daniel H. Stanton and prayer was offered by President Rufus E. Clement, of Atlanta University. Rev. W. H. Bordors, of the Wheat Street Baptist church, read the Scriptures.

Opportunities For Service, Johnson Says

52 Get Degrees From Morehouse College Tuesday

There are plenty of opportunities for giving real service in the professions, President Mordecai Wyatt Johnson of Howard University, told the graduating class of Morehouse College yesterday at the 74th commencement exercises of this famed institution. On this occasion, 52 men received either the degree of bachelor of arts or bachelor of science from President Benjamin E. Mays. The honorary degree of doctor of science was conferred on John Wesley Lawlah, Morehouse, '25, medical director of Provident Hospital and recently elected to the deanship of the Howard University Medical School.

Giving the graduates some of the ideals which make for successful living, President Johnson, one of the most distinguished of Morehouse College alumni, declared there is a shortage of doctors, dentists, and other professional men in the isolated sections of the south, but no shortage of opportunities for men who want to get joy out of a big job. We must think of ourselves as workmen he said, and realize that the greatest reward to come from people is not from their pockets, but in their trust and affection.

FIND CAUSE FOR SACRIFICE

The speaker pleaded with the young men to find a great cause to give their lives, declaring that any man who loves his cause will stick to it, and even though suffering exploitation, humiliation, or physical injury and death, the strength to suffer will be there. The supreme joy of a real man's existence is what goes on inside of him when he puts all that he has in a great cause, the graduates were told. Men of intelligence stand in need of something from the practice of their professions which money of the people cannot buy, and every man needs a cause big enough to gain his utter devotion and to give him the will to exercise all of his power freely.

Before closing his address, President Johnson paid tribute to the head of Morehouse College as exemplifying the qualities of the immortal leaders of Morehouse—Archer, Brawley, and Hope.

The morning exercises opened with the procession of Morehouse College faculty and graduates into Sale Hall Chapel. After the singing of the hymn, "These Shall Be" the invocation was delivered by Reverend Burgay L. Davis, pastor of the Liberty Baptist church. Just before the commencement address was delivered, the Men's Chorus sang "On the Sea" by Buck and immediately afterwards the congregation joined in singing the spiritual, "The Rock and the Mountains." Following a number by the Morehouse Quartet, "Remember Now Thy Creator" by Rhodes, prizes were awarded by President Mays. The J. B. Blayton Prize in Accounting went to Charles Edward Maxey, '42 and to Edward Earle Wells, '41. The Benjamin J. Brawley Literary Prize for creative writing, offered for the first time this year by the Class of 1920 went to William Albert Robinson, '44 for the best short story; and to Calvin Watson, '41 for the best poem. The Benjamin J. Brawley award for the highest record in English for four years also offered for the first time this year by Mrs. Margery Gillard of Birmingham, Alabama in memory of her brother, went to Calvin Watson. The Morehouse Auxiliary Prize of $12 to the most worthy and useful student, was awarded to Robert M. Preer of the Class of '41. The coveted Starks prize "The best man of Affairs", to the most helpful Christain gentleman was won by Frederick D. Funderburg, also of the Class of '41.

HOPE PAID TRIBUTE

After the degrees were conferred, the congregation joined in the singing of College Songs, and Benediction was pronounced by Reverend Anderson G. Davis, pastor, Beulah Baptist church. At the close of the services, the entire assemblage gathered at the grave of Dr. John Hope, for twenty-five years president of Morehouse, for a brief memorial service conducted by the alumni.

Thirty-nine degrees of bachelor of arts were awarded to the following:

Charles Togo Ama, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania; Ulysses Frederick Amos, Detroit, Michigan; Mitchell Cornell Ateca, Kissimmee, Florida; Lorenzo Buck, Chattanooga, Tennessee; Richmond Stanley Bennett, Macon, Georgia; Otis Charles Boddy, Chattanooga, Tennessee; Alonzo Mills Brown, Griffin, Georgia; Clinton Kyle Calloway, Clanton, Alabama; Charles Henry Clarke, Birmingham, Alabama; Richard Mataw Clarke, Birmingham, Alabama; Sterling Marcellus Collins, Dania, Florida; John Thomas Driskell, Albany, Georgia; Elbert Bernard Dudley, Orlando Florida; Grover Carter Dye E. berton, Georgia; Purvis Floyd Easley Greenville, South Carolina; Frederick Douglas Funderburg, Monticello, Georgia; Ernest Lee Harden, Atlanta; James Paul Howard, Athens, Georgia; Abraham Patterson Jackson, Chicago, Illinois; Joseph Carl Johnette, Dermott, Arkansas; William Edward Mims, Jr., Atlanta; Fred King Persons, Columbus, Georgia; Albert Asbury Pettis, Atlanta; Maurice Dickerson Pierce, Hinton, West Virginia; Alvin Schwartz, Monroe, Louisiana; Tracy James Smith, Atlanta, Morris Moran Speed, West Palm Beach Florida; Clarence Stephens, Atlanta; George Strickland, Detroit, Michigan; Roswell O'Neil Sutton, Atlanta; Joseph Tiedom Thomas, Memphis, Tennessee; Adolphus Brenson Truitt, Atlanta; Lorenzo Alexander Wallace, Atlanta; Calvin Frederick Watson, Atlanta; Edward Earle Wells, Morristown, New Jersey; Charles Ravien Whatley, Atlanta; Lucius Willingham, Atlanta; Ernest William Wright, Columbus, Ga.

The Jerome Award for creative work in any field was awarded this year to Dorothy Ateca, for her interpretation of the role of Mrs. Midget in Outward Bound; of Hagar in Mamba's Daughters; and of Helena Primus, in R. U. R. High honorable mention for this award went to Helen Nash for a piece of scientific research.

For the first time this year, Spelman College awarded the Eula L. Eagleson Prize, which will be given annually as a memorial to his wife by Dr. H. V. Eagleson of the Morehouse College faculty. The prize is to go to the senior who best exemplifies the spirit of love and devotion to Spelman College. It was won this year by Sadie Sims, president of the senior class.

Before the close of the Chapel exercises, Miss Alice Clement, a member of this year's graduating class, played an original organ composition, a Prelude in A Minor.

Students who will graduate with honor this morning are Adline Boyd, Katheryn Brown, Johnnie Mae Hines, Sadie Sims, Jennelsie Walden, Jean Warren, and Beverly Washington. One student, Penelope Bullock, will be graduated with highest honors.

On display at the morning exercises were two large colorful afghans for the British War Relief, which were knitted by members of the various classes.

Survey Shows 334 To Graduate in State

Atlanta, Ga., May 29—Within the next few days the twelve Negro colleges of South Carolina will graduate 334 men and women with degrees won by four years or more of college work, according to a survey just completed by the Commission on Interracial Cooperation. The degrees to be conferred will be Bachelor of Arts 206, Bachelor of Science 127, Bachelor of Theology 1.

During the year these twelve colleges enrolled 1391 men and 1924 women, a total of 3315. Contrasted with a Negro college enrollment in the state of only 688 reported by a government survey in 1926, the current figure represents a gain of nearly 400 per cent in the intervening fifteen years. By colleges, the statistics for the current year are as follows:

College	Enrollment	Graduates
Allen Univ., Columbia	381	42
Avery Charleston	79
Benedict, Columbia	505	68
Bettis Acad. (approx.)	131
Claflin, Orangeburg	218	35
Clinton Normal, R. Hill	70
Coulter, Cheraw	69
Friendship, Rock Hill	280
Morris, Sumter	505	60
Seneca Junior, (approx.)	60
State, Orangeburg	865	129
Voorhees, Denmark	152

In the 109 Negro colleges in the entire country the survey revealed an enrollment of 45,876, of whom 5,064 will receive degrees this commencement. In 1926, according to the government survey, there were only 79 Negro colleges, with an enrollment of 17,506.

Professor Studies Clothes Colors For Negroes

SAVANNAH, Ga.—(ANP)—Negroes, because of their background in Africa and other countries have much more appreciation of certain colors than have other race groups. At the same time, they have not had sufficient education and training on how to select inexpensive fabrics and clothing of the right colors to make the most of their personalities.

So says Miss Ella M. Washington, professor of home economics at Georgia State college, who did research work on the subject while studying for her master's degree at Iowa university. Her study, "Clothing for Negro Women," is the only one of its kind on record in this country.

In it she calls attention to the fact that now while there is great need of saving for national defense, much can be accomplished by teaching Negroes how to conserve their income and at the same time dress more becomingly. In making up the color charts, 15 Negro students, men and women, at the university were used. All were of different color, ranging from very dark to very light.

It is proposed by Georgia State to establish in the division of home economics this course thus making it possible for students in all divisions of the college to profit by the same. President B. F. Hubert in speaking of this contribution in the field of home making and home industry for Negroes states that this is a very fertile but long-neglected field. Colored people in order to do their best in any industry should use their personalities to best advantage. They cannot do this unless they know how to dress well at little cost.

The state supervisor of home economics for Georgia, Miss Elizabeth Mayes, is tremendously interested in this whole field. It was at her suggestion as well as at the suggestion of President Hubert that this study was made. It is planned to put this study in book form so that it will be available to Negro boys and girls in all the schools of Georgia.

Negro Teachers Urged to Aid Race

By The Associated Press.

ATHENS, Ga., July 12.—Dr. Benjamin F. Hubert, director of the Association for the Improvement of Negro Country Life and president of the Georgia State College, today challenged Negro teachers to concentrate their efforts on "necessary subjects and bring about a radical change for better times in Georgia."

"Georgia teachers should pioneer in doing the things that they tell other people to do," he continued. "Every Negro teacher could envisage how he could get a spot of ground in some community and teach children and adults reading, writing and arithmetic and other necessary subjects as they relate to life about them."

Hubert said that in spite of many handicaps, "Negroes have succeeded in Georgia to a remarkable degree. There is opportunity for Negro youth everywhere one may look in rural Georgia. There is opportunity for technical and inspirational guidance in the improving of farm crops, the improvement of breeds of poultry, hogs, dairy and beef cattle. There is opportunity in organizing communities to co-operate in the buying of farm supplies and the selling of farm products."

Negro Teachers Hold Institute

By The Associated Press.

LOG CABIN CENTER, Ga., July 15.—(AP)—Negro teachers today undertook the job of learning how to build rural community life to make it attractive to Negro youth, studying at the unique summer school here sponsored by the Georgia State College.

The school is in the center of a farming community where Negroes have made a living at farming all their lives. There is an eight-teacher rural high school here, a community church, a community center and a health center.

Summer work is arranged by H. T. Sampson, of Quitman. The classes are tied in with such meetings as the religious conference and ministers' institute sponsored by the State Baptist Convention and a ten-day clinic arranged by Dr. F. S. Belcher, president of the Negro state medical convention and local physicians.

Hubert said that in spite of many handicaps "Negroes have succeeded in Georgia to a remarkable degree. There is opportunity for technical and inspirational guidance in the improving of farm crops, the improvement of breeds of poultry, hogs, dairy and beef cattle."

He said there are 7,000 Negro teachers in Georgia "entrusted with the responsibility and opportunity of guiding the youth of the 1,000,000 Negroes who make Georgia their home."

DR. BROWN HEARD AT STATE COLLEGE

Educator Urges Students to Best Efforts

Dr. Charlotte Hawkins Brown, prominent negro educator, addressed the students, teachers and friends of the Georgia State College at the chapel exercises yesterday. Dr. Brown was introduced to the group by Mamie George William, political clubwoman of Georgia.

From her forty years of experience, Dr. Brown feels that she has gained much from 1901 when she left Cambridge, Mass., to take up her work at the Palmer Memorial Institute, Sedalia, N. C. There she found children who had come from the better class of negro families for preparation before entering college. These young folk were, in some instances, delinquent in culture, but notwithstanding this and other problems, Dr. Brown, with the greatest of patience brought about by an overwhelming interest in her people, continued to work, building up the Institute to the high standing maintained by it today.

Dr. Brown, in her talk, challenged the group to ask themselves the following questions:

"What is your name? Is your name kindness, honesty, scholarship, culture?

"Where are you from? Not literally your home, but from a home where you are properly taught how to behave. Your teachers can only judge you by your actions. Do you make everyone feel that your mother is a queen and your father a king? Do you give your teachers the impression that you come from a home where truth, beauty and kindness prevail?

"Why are you here? Are you here just to get your degree—thinking next year that you will be drawing a check? This should not be. You should be here for the purpose of preparing yourself for life.

"I want you girls and boys to vote—the government of the people, by the people and for the people gives you this right. Negroes must vote. You are the future of this race to which we belong. Some of you will take my place—some will take President Hubert's place. The opportunity that you have has been bought at a tremendous price. The rest is what you make it.

"Where are you going? Whether you come from the town or city, upon returning to your homes, you should endeavor to help the people in your community with group work, needed repairs and anything else that is needed, thus making your parents proud that you are securing a practical as well as theoretical education.

"I want every negro boy and girl to keep before him the fact that he is going somewhere and will be somebody. Like the bird, if we fly high, some day we will land in the promised land of light and freedom."

Dr. Brown also paid high tribute to President B. F. Hubert by calling attention to the fact that after securing his education in other sections of the country—Massachusetts State College, Harvard, Wisconsin and Minnesota—he returned to his native state to work among his people to help provide for them a finer type of living, and thus allow them to profit by his years of training and experience.

NOTED NEGRO EDUCATOR TO DELIVER ADDRESS HERE NEXT SUNDAY

An organization of this city, and which in its lifetime of some three years, has done some very fine things toward relieving the poor an ddistressed, helping to finance various institutions, churches, etc., is to observe its third anniversary, and we have been informed that it will be held at the Walton county court house, starting promptly at 3:30, Eastern standard time, Sunday afternoon.

Fountain To Speak

The club feels very much complimented in that it has been able to engage the services of President W. A. Fountain, of Morris Brown College, one of the leading schools for negroes in not only the state, but in the nation. It is very likely that the speaker will be accompanied to the city by the famed quartet of his college. Having just returned from a tour in behalf of his school, he was unable to say, at a late hour yesterday, whether his singers would come or not. However, he indicated that they would.

Prominent Atlanta white people, men and women, are very glad to recommend to a Monroe audience this upstanding negro educator and insist that he be given a large hearing when he speaks here next Sunday afternoon.

GEORGIA STATE'S SUMMER SESSION

Pres. Hubert Announces Its Opening On June 9

The Georgia State College announces its twentieth annual summer session. Two sessions of the summer school will be held on the college campus. The first summer session will convene from June 9 through July 12, and the second session from July 14 through August 16. A second session will also be held at the Log Cabin Center near Sparta, Ga., from July 14 through August 16. Registration fees and fees for board and lodging will approximate the cost of former years and will be most reasonable, thus giving teachers in every section of the state an opportunity to improve themselves for larger service. During the session at the college, a workshop for teachers of rural education will be held. During this time, experts in the field of education and representatives from the State Department of Education will address the special groups of teachers in this special course.

An effort will be made this year to offer to teachers a well-rounded and well-balanced program to meet the needs of teachers, individually and collectively. Prof. W. K. Payne, Dean of the College, will conduct the sessions at the college. Prof. H. T. Sampson, director of the Junior Division of the college, will conduct the session at Log Cabin Center.

The spring quarter began at the college March 17. Several new students registered, most of whom are teachers in service whose schools have closed or who have been granted leave of absence to continue their work at the college. Many of these teachers will remain for the summer session. The quarter will end on May 30.

Commencement week will be observed May 25-30. Commencement will take place on May 30. Baccalaureate exercises will be observed on May 25.

This evening at 8:30, President B. F. Hubert will be the special speaker at the Butler Presbyterian Church, of which Rev. C. H. Richmond is pastor. The college quartet under the direction of Elizabeth Adams, instructor of music at the college, will furnish the music for the services.

On April 7-9, President Hubert and various members of the college staff will attend a conference on secondary school study to be held at Atlanta University. This conference is being called by the director of the secondary school study of the Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools for Negroes, Prof. W. A. Robinson. Among other things, the conference will attempt to restate the purposes of the study in the light of past experiences, and compare points of view from colleges and high schools in making plans for the future of the high schools.

During the week of April 25-27, the boys' and girls' Hi-Y Tri-Y conference will be held at the college. This conference will be conducted by Dr. H. W. Rohrer, state secretary for the Y. M. C. A., and will bring together boys and girls from all sections of Georgia for study in Christian education and living. Among the speakers to appear on the program during this conference will be Dr. Benjamin E. Mays, president of Morehouse College, Atlanta.

Professor W. K. Payne who is studying at Chicago University this year, returned to the college campus during the spring vacation. While on the campus, he conferred wtih President Hubert and L. M. Lester of the State Department of Education relative to plans for the summer session. Professor Payne will return to the University of Chicago this week-end to complete his work there before assuming his regular duties at the college.

The Founders' Day program includes the annual Glee Club concert, decoration of memorial plaques, campus exercises, and formal exercises in Sisters' Chapel with President Felton G. Clark, of Southern University, as principal speaker.

Spelman was established by Sophie B. Packard and Harriet E. Giles, the former being its first, the latter its second president. Lucy Hale Tapley succeeded to the presidency in 1910, and the present president, Florence M. Read, has since been head of the institution.

Fort Valley Memorial Honors Negro

MAY 9 - 1941

FORT VALLEY, [AP]—White and Negro Georgians will join in tribute Friday to the late William M. Hubbard, founder and president of the state teachers agricultural college at Forsyth, with Governor Eugene Talmadge as principal speaker.

The governor had promised some months ago to address a service planned for Hubbard before his death. The talk was not delivered because Hubbard died March 21, and the celebration was advanced to Friday and changed into memorial services.

Hubbard made friends among white and Negro citizens of Georgia through 40 years as an educator. He counted the late Hoke Smith and Tom Watson among them.

One feature of Friday's service will be the dedication of the two farm houses built by students and operated by them as self-supporting projects. The students financed the work by raising poultry and gardens.

Besides being a widely-known educator, Hubbard also was a photographer and served many of the prominent white families of the state. Talmadge, his father and mother became interested in Hubbard's work and the governor contributed to the Forsyth school before it was taken over by the state board of regents.

Dr. Aquilla Chamlee, former president of Bessie Tift college, and George B. Culpepper Jr., of Fort Valley, also have accepted invitations to speak.

The Best Labor

FORT VALLEY, Ga.—It was the writer's good pleasure last Friday to sit in during the first annual services given under the sponsorship of Fort Valley State College memoralizing of the late William Merida Hubbard: truly one of the greats of not Negro education but education in Georgia.

Through the influence and appeal of Fort Valley's dynamic young president Dr. Horace Mann Bond, and the still living power of Professor Hubbard, the principal speaker on the program was Georgia's unusual chief executive, Governor Eugene Talmadge.

MACKAY

Many there are among our people, who, not knowing him, just as they did the late Huey Long, firmly and profoundly dislike Mr. Talmadge. And just as in the case of Huey Long, whom the Negroes of Louisiana, I have been told, really loved, so do the colored citizens of Mr. Talmadge's native McRae to hold him in like esteem.

SOUND THEORIES

Whether you are among those who like or dislike our chief executive's blunt and uncompromising approach to various issues, certainly there were none who sat in the audience at Fort Valley College who could find any disagreement with the beliefs of policies he expounded during his address Friday.

For our trail-blazing governor with the boldness typical of his administration of state affairs spoke out his beliefs on a question so often approached in moot manner by many of our so-called white friends in position to do us good.

And that question was the very vital issue of Negro labor. For lo these many score years, the Southern white man has known the value, the loyalty, and the strength of Negro labor.

The first craftsmen of the South, history tells us, were Negroes, born into slavery, but whose native skill with tools drew the admiration of the world. Many were sent abroad during pre-Civil war days to study under the most skilled craftsmen of Europe, and on returning were the virtual builders of the South.

SKILLED BLACK FINGERS

Most of the beautiful wrought-iron work that is the very breath of picturesque New Orleans is the work of skilled black fingers. The genius of black hands with the trowel is still reflected even in those fading days Negro skilled workers in the South. For it is in these trades of bricklaying, plastering and cement finishing that Negro skilled workers now have the best chance.

But back to Governor Talmadge. The governor answered in bold words the question that probably is now puzzling many an industrialist on whose desk is piled high thousands of dollars worth of defense contracts, but in whose plant a black man is not even allowed to sweep the floor.

The problems becomes increasingly important to these industrialists in view of the recent letter sent out from the Office of Production Management by Mr. Sidney Hillman, who heads the labor division. And to follow this letter so the writer has heard, will come further efforts to integrate Negro workers in these plants. One committee has gone so far as to ask President Roosevelt to speak out on the matter.

NEED HAVE NO FEAR

But, according to Governor Talmadge, these industrialists need have no fear of the productive abilities of black workers. "Negro labor," he said, speaking unqualifiedly, "is the best in the world." And continuing, he said, "None can equal colored men in performing a job with patience, strength and endurance. Any race should be proud of the record Negro workers have made."

That is the truth as all of us know. But getting a member of the opposite race, particularly in view from a just share of the jobs accruing in the press of all the nationwide efforts to bar black workers from the present defense effort, to admit it is something else.

And when the governor of the state of Georgia admits it, that is something that really should clinch the argument for all time to come.

To Governor Talmadge from this writer goes a vote of thanks. No doubt his forthright declaration in defense of the undemocratic stonewall which black workers face today whether it was designed to do it or not will have profound influence in helping solve the problem. This at least is our fond hope.

Negro College Founder Paid High Tribute

Governor Talmadge Lauds Late W. M. Hubbard at Fort Valley.

FORT VALLEY, Ga., May 9.—(AP)—Governor Talmadge paid tribute today to the late William Merida Hubbard, Georgia Negro educator, as a man of sincerity and simplicity who always honored his obligations.

The chief executive spoke at memorial services for Hubbard, who founded the old State Teachers' and Agricultural College at Forsyth as one of the state's first Negro colleges, and served as its president 40 years.

Attorney George B. Culpepper, of Fort Valley, introduced Talmadge as "a man who kept the common touch."

Talmadge said that Negroes "show the values and true dignity of labor."

He told of an instance in which Hubbard indorsed a note that proved to be worthless and then "paid the note in full before its maturity."

He said Hubbard's work had contributed to the advancement of education in Georgia and added that more persons of his type were needed.

Two student-built co-operative farm houses were dedicated in Hubbard's name and the Governor said he was "gratified to see so practical a venture taking shape." In these units, men students are living co-operatively at a cost of $7 each per month.

Mayor C. A. Riley, of Fort Valley, and the city and county boards of education formed a motorcade escorting the Governor to the campus. Others on the program were Chancellor S. V. Sanford, of the University System of Georgia; Vice Chancellor J. C. Dixon, and State Regent Lucien P. Goodrich, of Griffin.

Hubbard was born at Irwinton of slave parentage. He attended Ballard Academy at Macon and Fisk University, Nashville, Tenn., and at Cornell.

Settling in Forsyth in 1902, he began a school with four students in a church basement, supplementing his income by photography. His pay as a teacher then was about $15 to $20 for the three months' term.

Twenty years later his expanded school was made a state institution. In 1939 the college was moved to the Fort Valley school and Monroe county took over the old institution.

One of Hubbard's sons is continuing in educational work at Forsyth, a daughter is a physician in New York, and two othetr sons are in the legal profession and in business respectively in Philadelphia.

When one considers the three Negro colleges of the University System in comparison with what they were a few years ago he is inclined to comment on the remarkable progress and growth achieved. For example, the Georgia State College at Thunderbolt had only about sixteen or twenty students in the entire college department when the present president took over whereas today there are hundreds of young men and women in this college which is accredited by the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools. Something similar has taken place at Albany and the new State College at Fort Valley is most certainly an improvement in every way over the former so-called college at Forsyth which it replaced in the system about two years ago. But compared with the progress and development achieved in other states of the South, not to mention the North, the state colleges for Negroes in Georgia are retrogressing: that is, they are progressing at a slower rate than the others and they started behind most of them. Also compared with the progress made by white units of the system in financial support and improvement the Negro units are relatively falling behind.

THE NEGRO UNITS OF THE UNIVERSITY SYSTEM OF GEORGIA ARE ALL INADEQUATELY HOUSED, INADEQUATELY E Q U I P P E D, INADEQUATELY HOUSED, INADEQUATELY QUIPPED, INADEQUATE. SUPPLIED WITH MATERIALS AND EQUIPMENT AND THEIR STAFFS ARE OVERWORKED AND UNDERPAID. In brief, the Negro Colleges are rapidly being pauperized with the result that Georgia is failing to produce the Negro leadership essential for normal progress.

Saint Mark Pastor Thrills His Hearers

By ERIC ROBERTS, '32

Historic, solemn and impressive was sixty-ninth observance of Founder's Day at Clark College Thursday, February 19, before an appreciative audience in historic Crobman Chapel.

FEB 2

Historic because the school, in sixty-nine years ago as Clark University, now, due to the exigencies of modern educational concepts, becomes Clark College.

Solemn because Thursday's observance was last ever to be held at the South Atlanta premises, as the institution, leaving time worn buildings and familiar landscapes, moves to its new home in modern edifices adjacent Atlanta University come the fall. Impressive because under the impact of such far-reaching and singular implications, the words and greetings of every participant were fused with the hope of a new day, the memory of a glorious Clark past. Before key members of the District Conferences of the Methodist Episcopal Church, visiting ministers attending the Ministerial Training Conference at Gammon, the Clark student body and many guests, the ceremonies unfolded under the guiding hand of Resi[illegible] the Atlantic coast area, Dr. Lorenzo H. King.

ATLANTA—The Atlanta University School of Social Work has been requested by officials of the national board of the YMCA and of the Southern Area Council of the YMCA to become an official training center for YMCA workers, Forrester B. Washington, director of the social school, announced recently.

Several courses on YMCA history, administration and activities will be taught by the YMCA national, regional and local officials, including Dr. Channing H. Tobias, Lloyd R. Killam, Carleton Lee, E. B. DeFrantz, Ralph W. Bullock, William Mitchell, Major Campbell Johnson and others.

Young men who complete the work at the social school will have the official approval of the YMCA for employment. Mr. Washington has emphasized that no part of the program of training for all occupational fields of social will be relinquished as this additional YMCA work is assumed.

INTRODUCTORY—

Serving as master of ceremonies and taking the platform after Reverends P. L. Inman and J. W. Thomas had led the hymn "How Firm a Foundation" and read the scripture, respectively, and supplemented by a fervent prayer from the lips of Dr. Willis J. King, Gammon Theological Seminary President, Bishop King's discourse followed.

"Education is an evolutionary process," he declared, reminding that "Clark must not be judged by its short span as moulder of men and women—that time alone will vindicate its spirit, its objective and its motive."

The focal point of his remarks stemmed from a quotation by the famous English historian, H. G. Wells, who has written: "Civilization is a race between education and catestrophe." Dr. King recommended an amendment to this declaration and said: "Education is a race between Christian education and catastrophe." Adding that, "Christian education is fundamental to any concept of education—that accent on Christian feeling is a basis, a life philosophy.

In closing the Bishop, using an axiom from what he described as the "old book" said: "Except the Lord build the house, they build in vain who build it." His final words hinged on the Clark generations to come—those who drink at these fountains, I hope, may depart its halls with spiritual vision and spiritual stamina." That "The kingdom of God is the realm and rule of righteousness and the Clark ideal, the world ideal, is the building of men and women under the impact of these Christian institutions."

TWO GREETINGS

The Rev. J. W. Queen, district superintendent of the Atlanta district, next brought greetings from the conferences. Declaring that the Conferences and the college were now closer than ever, he vowed loyalty, the will to secrifice and whole-hearted support. In a direct commitment to the retiring President, Dr. M. S. Davage, he concluded: "We are with you, with the school—count on us."

A glowing greeting from the alumni was brought by Miss Mabel Brigham, '36. Expressing gratitude upon being honored in bringing a message for the Clark son and daughters "who paused here", her words were woven around choice quotations and excerpts. One of these were: "Destiny makes us brothers, we cannot live alone; the things we do to make others happy, often come back into our own."

Her conclusion, blended with the closing implications of the Clark alma mater, sent her to her seat under the sound of immense applause.

REV. RUMBLE'S ADDRESS

The main speaker, Rev. Lester Rumble, pastor of St. Mark Methodist Church, Atlanta, adherred to the problems now confronting the young American college man in particular, the youth of America as a whole.

He discussed the chaotic state of the world today, "A confused, jittery old world beset by the judgment of history, or rather the judgment of God. We are now harvesting the sowings of ages now chronologically past."

He added, "Faith is the hope of things unseen. Youth, today, regarding the threat of war, says: Well, what's the use? Why should I prepare, study, study, study, when on tomorrow I may be in the army—why? The speaker implored; "In spite of what tomorrow may be—prepare for a useful life."

In conclusion he added, "I believe in world fellowship, in planetary civilization. In every lookout we should erect towers of goodwill and understanding in these times of darkness.

Under the direction of Prof. DeKoven Killingsworth, the Clark Philharmonic Society evoked favorable response from the audience It's rendition of Dawson's "Soon Ah Will Be Done" will live long in the memory of those present. This was the final feature of the day's program except for riotous applause and a round of congratulations from the retiring President, Dr. M. S. Davage. Then followed the Alma Mater.

After the benediction delivered by Rev. C. L. Johnson of Marietta Union Chapel, Marietta, Georgia, the guests departed. The Roll Call, involving Conference representatives in the various areas, was finished under the direction of Bishop King.

WASHINGTON—D. C.—(ANP)—Conclusive evidence that all is not well with the social security setup is indicated by the fact that Dr. Ira DeA Reid has been called in for special duty with the department in its research division. Dr. Reid has been granted leave of absence from Atlanta University for the rest of the term in order to render service to the government at this particular time.

Asked, it is reported, to coordinate certain phases of the social security work as it relates to Negroes, Dr. Reid is facing several puzzling problems, concerning which he will not talk. It is certian, however that most of the work has to do with labor and wages, for the old age pension division is perhaps the only division which is straight as far as the Negro is concerned.

The entire department under Paul V. McNutt has been in a peculiar position since the introduction of the McAlpin case, which as yet has not been definitely settled.

Realizing the uproar created in this instance, the administrator of the Federal Security agency, of which social security is a part, wants to be sure and careful in his procedures in the future concerning Negroes.

Criticism of all sorts was leveled at the security agency during this case and from all parts of the country came letters, editorials and articles on the McAlpin case.

DAVIS NAMED TO CHICAGO U. SUMMER STAFF

Will Teach In Field Of Human Developments At 1941 Classes

FEB 15 1941

The department of education of the University of Chicago last week appointed Allison Davis, staff member of the division on child development of the American Council on Education, to the faculty of the summer school for 1941. Mr. Davis will teach in the field of human development in the department of education during both summer sessions.

His recent book, "Children of Bondage," written in collaboration with Dr. John Dillard of Yale university, is a required text in the course on child development at Chicago this fall. The first printing was sold out in five months.

The book is a required or supplementary text in education or anthropology at Harvard, Yale Stanford, Columbia, Cornell, Chicago, California, and several other institutions. A second printing is being made by the American Council on Education.

Through the use of intimate life-histories of Negro adolescents, this work dramatizes the struggle of the lower class and middle class Negro child to succeed in spite of color-caste handicaps.

It illustrates a point which has proved startling to the average white reader—the fact that the goals and behavior of the middle class Negro child are the same as those of the middle class white child. At the same time it furnishes the teacher and social worker with a method for analyzing the social motivation and culture of Negro children of different class environments.

DR. H. M. BOND IS CHICAGO 'U' SPEAKER

CHICAGO, Feb. 27. (ANP)—Dr. Horace Mann Bond, prominent young educator, president of Fort Valley State college of Fort Valley, Ga., and alumnus of the University of Chicago, was the speaker in Rockefeller chapel last Sunday. Addressing the regular Sunday morning congregation on what has become known as Race Relations Sunday.

Tracing the meaning of race relations to his audience and the problems which faced them; problems of food, clothing and comfort; national and international complications, economic, social and spiritual, Dr. Bond gave a picture of what race relations meant to the Negro.

"We see ourselves as we are mirrored in the minds of those about us," he said, "the majority portrait of us becomes, insensibly, yet overwhelmingly, a portrait to be accepted, either in the margin or the full focus of consciousness. If we are universally esteemed lazy, contemptible, trifling, we will laugh shame-facedly, perhaps at our valuation; but the valuation sticks. The majority has powerful weapons for enforcing public attention to, and compliance with, stereotypes; it has a public press; it has editorials, news photographs, comic cartoons; it has a radio, highly commercialized where stereotypes racial and otherwise, have market value." MAR 1 1941

But said Dr. Bond, despite that portrait of reality, despite the mockery and hollowness with with the majority surrounds us, "In those same human beings there is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen.

"We of the Negro minority see high human virtue in ourselves. We see among us those who live as Micah said God required men to live; we see those who do justly, those who love mercy, those who walk humbly with God. Not in high places, not in historical figures, not in a selected few; but in those same swarming masses from which arises both great evil and great good, we find the source of a lasting assurance."

CITIZENS FIGHT CLOSING OF PORO FOR $50,000 BACK TAXES

Protesting the eviction of students, many of whom were non-residents of Chicago from buildings on the site of Poro college, nationally known enterprise of Mme. Annie P. Malone, at 44th and South Parkway, leaders in civic and religious circles led a delegation Wednesday to the office of the Collector of Internal Revenue, Carter Harrison.

Poro college was ordered closed for default in payment of $50,000 in internal revenue taxes. The delegation, headed by Dean H. M. Smith of the Chicago Baptist institute, presented Mrs. Malone's case before Chief Field Deputy D. J. Conerty, of the Internal Revenue Department.

The conference resulted in an extension of 21 days to allow the committee, headed by Dean Smith time to work out some plan whereby the taxes owed by Mrs. Malone might be paid. They were granted the interview after Dean Smith, unable to contact the office of the Collector of Internal Revenue Tuesday evening, called Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt in Mrs. Malone's behalf.

Dean Smith, contacted late Wednesday night, stated he became interested in the case when it was disclosed that government agents were evicting students from one of the buildings. "Many of them were non-residents of Chicago and were without places to go," he said.

"When we were unable to reach anyone in the office of the Collector of Internal Revenue, Mrs. Roosevelt was called as a last resort. Her secretary informed us of the home telephone number of the Collector in Internal Revenue, and we called Mr. Conerty. A conference for the following day (Wednesday) was arranged.

"We were granted three weeks to investigate conditions at Poro and recommend a plan of operation to handle the indebtedness and continue operation of the business. In the meantime," he continued, "we were assured that Poro would be allowed to operate as usual, pending our action and recommendations."

Poro college was closed last Thursday, May 8. Business will be resumed today (Thursday) pending the three-week grace period granted Dean Smith and the committee working on recommendations for its continued operation and the payment of $50,000 back taxes.

Among those conferring with internal revenue officials were Dean H. M. Smtih, Rev. H. H. Howard, pastor of Christ Temple Community church, 33rd and State streets; Bishop James A. Bray, Rev. Hawkins, president of the Baptist Ministers Alliance; Bishop J. H. Walls, Rev. A. Wayman Ward, Rev. Clarence H. Cobb,

Flagrant Rule Violations Reported In Buildings, Says Topeka Physician

SEP 12 1941

Allegations Are Without Foundation; Schools' Heads Declare

Kansas 183

By STAFF REPORTER

Startling charges made by Dr. J. L. Ransom of Topeka, against two state-supported institutions were made public in the Sunday, September 7, issue of the Topeka Capital. The schools, against which the charges were made, are the Kansas Vocational school of Topeka and Western University of Kansas City. These accusations had the intent to bluntly expose the facts that "unsanitary living conditions in the dormitories have been alleged and flagrant violations of the public health rules have been reported." Heads of the two schools, however, branded the accusations as being absolutely "untrue" and with "no foundations."

These conditions, Dr. Ransom averred, are responsible for the dropping off of the enrollment at these two schools. In full, Dr. Ransom charged as follows:

"Negro weeklies thruout the nation are attacking racial discrimination in the national defense program. Kansas colored citizens were proud when Governor Payne Ratner denounced racial, class and religious discrimination in his public address before the Kansas Legislature; this statement of Governor Payne Ratner has been quoted and published often thruout the nation.

"Now what confuses the writer is the report that the national defense program sponsored by the National Youth Administration for young colored men out at Kansas Vocational School, a state-owned institution, has been scuttled because of the lack of proper cooperation from the state administration represented by State Board of Regents.

"Unsanitary living conditions in the dormitories have been alleged and flagrant violations of the public health rules have been reported in the dining room, kitchen, store room and cold storage quarters. These allegations have prevailed under both Democratic and Republican administrations for many years.

"This writer has contended that both such conditions as alleged are responsible for the dropping off of the enrollment at Kansas Vocational School at Topeka and Western University at Kansas City, Kansas. It will be remembered that the Board of Regents recommended the closing of one of the colored institutions to save the tax payers money rather than operate both institutions with such a few colored students attending.

"It strikes me that a clean out, clean up, and keep clean policy at these two colored state institutions is what is really needed. Clean up the dirt, "clean out" the politics that exploits the educational interests of Negroes and "keep clean" of political exploitation and unsanitary conditions.

"What a shame that a governmental agency such at the National Youth Administration finds such conditions in any state institution that they cannot be condoned for a defense program in such a needy time.

"It is time for the State Board of Health and the Board of Regents to act and not allow this condition to reflect upon the administration of such a princely state executive as Gov. Payne Ratner of Kansas.

"Topeka, Kan. J. L. Ransom."

Denial from KVS

When contacted by this writer, Herman Jones of KVS branded the statements as being "all out of proportion and there are no foundations for the same." Mr. Jones stated further that he would "like to invite someone from the Plaindealer to inspect the school and look at conditions." Further he stated:

"I believe a fair investigation should be made in order to see both sides. The article is a one-sided affair and there are absolutely no grounds for the allegations—the statements about the living conditions are untrue and there are no violations of public health rules. It is all absolutely false."

Mr. Jones stated that he took Dr. Ransom through the school a few weeks ago during the legislature and that he had expressed no complaint as to the conditions. He made no comments at that time about unsanitary conditions. Mr. Jones said, too, that this is the first time any such complaints as those appearing in the paper have been made.

Closing the interview, Mr. Jones requested that a representative of the Plaindealer visit the school at any time and that "it is unnecessary to notify me when they are coming—come anytime."

Western U Refutes

Dan Matthews of Western University was also interviewed. Like Mr. Jones of KVS, he refuted the charges.

"All we can say," said Mr. Matthews, "is to let the situation out here speak for itself, and all those who are in a position to, know know better anyhow. It is a matter of record which anyone can see that those statements are not true. If anyone wishes to come out and examine the buildings and campus, they can do so at anytime. They will find that they are absolutely not like the statements made in the article."

"I would never want to eat out here myself if conditions were unsanitary. To have that sort of statement made does not give us credit for having any self-respect and decency. Dr. Ransom has been out here and he knows better."

In speaking of the drop in enrollment at the university, Mr. Matthews stated that there has been a drop in enrollment but that the drop came because the junior college was not accredited. He said that there was no use running the college when it could not compete with other schools that were accredited.

Board of Regents Visits

Both school heads affirmed that the Board of Regents had often visited the schools. They go through the entire school, including dormitories, kitchen, dining room and other parts of the school. Hardly a month passes without the board of regents paying an inspection visit. No complaint has been made on any occasion by the board, stated both men. Each agreed, however, that improvement could be made in replacing old equipment with new, but that this had naught to do with the sanitation

Clark's Adminstration at Southern Approved By State

BATON ROUGE, La.—One of the highest compliments ever paid a state college president for the conduct of his office was given to Dr. Felton G. Clark, president of Southern University by the Louisiana State Board of Education in its first meeting of the new year held in the Louisiana State Capitol Building.

Early in the summer of 1940, the State Board of Education was reorganized under the new state administration and directed to follow certain objectives. One of the objectives was to make all the presidents of the state institutions of Louisiana acting presidents until such time as a special educational committee would have an opportunity to visit all the state supported institutions, study the work of the institutions, the qualifications and fitness of the presidents, and make recommendations to the Board at some specified time of its findings.

This special educational committee visited all of the institutions and studied carefully the growth, program, character of work, faculty qualifications, and president's qualifications, and made its report to the Board in the recent meeting.

PRAISED IN REPORT

In the committee's complete report and summary on Southern University, it is pointed out that, "Southern University has a fine physical plant that meets the needs of Negroes seeking higher education in the state. The local committee for the institution has enthusiasm and wide knowledge of the whole history of the institution. They have the greatest admiration for the elder Dr. Clark and for his son, the present president.

"Dr. Felton Clark has a Ph.D. degree and has had experience as a teacher outside of the state of Louisiana. His educational qualifications are excellent, both as to training and experience. He carries on the traditions established by his father of grateful cooperation with both races. Members of his faculty reflect this attitude. His business ability makes it possible for the institution to receive the maximum benefit from every dollar expended on the institution."

Not only was the general comment about the Southern University administration laudatory, but there was not a single negative statement about the operation of the institution. After the committee chairman had read the recommendation on Southern University, the Board's president commented that, "Felton Clark is the best prepared man in the state."

LAUDED FOR WORK

Just before this formal report was made, the Board's educational committee chairman wrote to the Southern University president, expressing appreciation of the board upon his election to the presidency of the Land Grant College Presidents Association.

The chairman stated, "I understand you were not even in the session's meeting at the time of your elevation to this office, which is evidence of the professional standing the nation accords you. The State of Louisiana is proud of your work and the honor you bring her."

The Board reacted favorably to the committee's recommendation that Dr. Felton Clark be elected permanent president of Southern University, along with four other college presidents.

After the committee chairman had read the recommendation on Southern university, the board's president commented that, "Felton Clark is the best prepared man in the state."

Express Appreciation

Just before this formal report was made, the board's educational committee chairman wrote to the Southern university president expressing appreciation of the board upon his election to the presidency of the Land Grant College Presidents association. The chairman stated, "I understand you were not even in the session's meeting at the time of your elevation to this office, which is evidence of the professional standing the nation accords you. The state of Louisiana is proud of your work and the honor you bring her."

The board reacted favorably to the committee's recommendation that Dr. Felton Clark be elected permanent president of Southern university, along with four other college presidents.

CARNEGIE CORPORATION GIVES SOUTHERN U. COSTLY MUSIC SET

JAN 24 1941

BATON ROUGE, La. — Following the gift of $4,500 to the Southern university library by the Carnegie corporation two months ago, Dr. F. G. Clark has received a letter from the Carnegie corporation this week stating that it is "glad to be able to inform "him" that the Trustees of the Coroporation have allocated a Carnegie Music set to Southern university.

Gift of this set, which comprises a large reproducing machine, 945 records, 151 scores, 79 titles (100 volumes) of books on musical subjects, and machines culminates three years of intense effort on the part of the Southern university president. Normally state schools have not received these sets unless the Corporation has carefully been convinced of the effectiveness of their music instruction programs.

Supporting the Southern president in his effort were Professor J. O. B. Moseley, former head of music department at Southern, Miss Aquilla Matthews and director J. Harold Brown of the University's music department; they encouraged him when he was consistently told with regrets that the Louisiana state school's request for one of the sets could "not be granted at this time."

The Carnegie Set will be used for music appreciation by making records available for the 1200 odd students on the Scotlandville campus during their leisure hours and using it for formal instruction in fine arts, public school music, piano, band, orchestra, and vocal work. The academic divisions of the college will also employ it. One of the most helpful advantages which it will serve will be to make records available to the people of the local community and the State through university itinerant teachers under the supervision of the institution's music deparment.

Said Dr. Clark, "With our moving picture film library which has been in existence amost two years, and which we will gladly make available free of charge to any Negro schools of the State with acceptable projection equipment, this music set takes us a step nearer our goal of giving to the Negro youths of our section every opportunity to acquire experiences through highly modern inventions which would otherwise be attained only at great cost or not at all. We will be satisfied by merely being made to know and feel that the Negro citizens will use and appreciate these 'extra' things which we put at their disposal."

Only Catholic College For Negroes Alone Has Anniversary

BY AUSTIN BOYLE

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 13 — A procession of sturdy young Negroes, gowned in black cassocks and white surplices, moved down a church aisle singing Latin hymns. They had the build of football players.

They were—the gridiron squad of Xavier University, only Catholic College in the world exclusively for Negroes.

The University is quietly observing its twenty-fifth anniversary this year. This coincides with the fiftieth anniversary this week of the founding of the Sisters of the Blessed Sacrament, who conduct it.

Order's Founding Noted

The order of nuns was founded in 1891, to work among American Negroes and Indians, by Rev. Mother M. Katharine Drexel, a member of the wealthy Drexel family of Philadelphia.

Its 400 members supervise four high schools and approximately 100 grade schools for Negroes and Indians. Thirty-one members are here at Xavier, which has 1,100 students —coming from many states — and more than 100 faculty members, lay and clerical.

The university has a college of liberal arts and sciences, including departments of music, fine arts, home economics and a pre-medical school, and a school of education including a department of physical education, college of pharmacy, and a school of social service.

The average annual fee for tuition and books is $100, and the university serves a 15-cent luncheon of meat, bread, and two vegetables.

There are no social fraternities or sororities. Students live in approved rooming houses.

French Is Popular

French is the most popular foreign language. Each year Dr. Leon Baisier, professor of romance languages, stages a play in French. Last year it was Moliere's "Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme," and his students played it in seventeenth century French costume.

The department of music presents a grand opera each year, and there is a concert every fourth Sunday. Free music lessons are given to poor Negro children every Saturday. There is a story hour for them in the library, and children and adults not connected with the university may borrow books from the library of 30,000 volumes.

There is a stadium and athletic field on the campus also. Ralph Metcalfe, famous Negro sprinter, is track coach. The track and basketball teams have hung up enviable records, and Xavier holds the national Negro college tennis championship.

Properties of the old Armstrong Literary and Industrial college, negro, went on the block and were auctioned for $25,000 to satisfy a $37,437.65 mortgage Saturday.

The foreclosure sale was conducted by Dr. S. L. Calhoun, coroner and acting sheriff, to satisfy a mortgage issued in December 1930 by Price W. Rogers, et al, to Ira L. Thomas, Sr.

Mrs. Loula M. Thomas was successful bidder on the property, described on courthouse records as "square 30 of the South Alexandria Land company, Limited's, addition to the city x x x." Sheriff Calhoun said sale of the properties brought the highest amount paid at auction sales here in recent months.

DILLARD STUDENT, HIT BY AUTO, DIES AFTER OPERATION

Treated for Broken Leg, Bruises on Nose and Head in Wake of Accident

Struck by an automobile at 1:40 a. m. April 26, Charles McKenzie, 20-year-old Negro student at Dillard university, died at Flint-Goodridge hospital at 3:20 p. m. Tuesday following an operation on his left leg which was fractured when he was struck. McKenzie, whose home was at Fort Valley, Ga., lived in a dormitory at Dillard.

According to Fifth Precinct police, McKenzie, with Clinton Wooding, Negro, 18, also a resident at Dillard, descended from a New Orleans Public Service Inc., bus on the river side of Gentilly Boulevard between Allen and Annette streets, and started to cross the street to reach the university.

Walking approximately two feet ahead of Wooding, McKenzie stepped off the neutral ground onto the lake side of the street, police said, and was struck by an automobile diven by Lawrence Zibilick, 23, 3918 Perrier street, who stopped, placed the injured student in his automobile and took him to Charity hospital, where he was treated for the fracture and bruises of the nose and forehead. McKenzie later was transferred to Flint-Goodridge hospital, where the operation was performed.

Horticulture Work At Dillard U. Reorganized

NEW ORLEANS—The work in horticulture at Dillard university, New Orleans, inaugurated in 1938 after a careful investigation of the occupational opportunities which the field afforded, will be offered on a twelve-month basis, beginning in September, it was announced early this week. The program has been reorganized in order that students may take advantage of the training to be gained during the summer months, and is now modeled after the curriculum of the New York Botanical Garden. As a result of the reorganization, students who do not wish to matriculate for a degree may enroll in the Department of Horticulture only until they have attained sufficient skill to be recommended for a position.

An especially interesting feature of the new program will be the work arrangement. Upon entrance to the Department, the student will begin a field apprenticeship which will include work on the university campus and in private gardens in the city. In return for this work, and in order to develop a sense of responsibility and to stimulate the proper employer-employe relationship, each student will be paid a weekly wage, ranging from $6 per week for first-year men to $8 per week for fifth-year men. No scholarship or work aid will be given and the student is expected to provide for the remainder of his expenses from personal funds.

Frank G. Mackaness, trained in the Royal Botanical Gardens of Kew, England, and the University Botanic Gardens at Cambridge university, is in charge of the work in horticulture.

Southern U. Progress Under Dr. Clark Lauded

BATON ROUGE, La. (ANP)—One of the highest compliments ever paid a state college president for the conduct of his office was given to Dr. Felton G. Clark, president of Southern University, by the Louisiana State Board of Education in its first meeting of the new year held in the Louisiana State Capitol building.

Early in the summer of 1940, the state board of education was reorganized under the new state administration and directed to follow certain objectives. One was to make all presidents of the state institutions of Louisiana acting presidents until a special educational committee would have an opportunity to visit these institutions, study the work, qualifications and fitness of the presidents, and make recommendations to the board at some specified time of its findings.

This special educational committee visited all of the institutions and studied carefully the growth, program, character of work, faculty qualifications, and president's qualifications, and made its report to the board in the recent meeting.

DR. FELTON G. CLARK

In the committee's complete report and summary on Southern university, it is pointed out that "Southern has a fine physical plant that meets the needs of Negroes seeking higher education in the state. The local committee for the institution has enthusiasm and wide knowledge of the whole history of the institution. It has the greatest admiration for the elder Dr. Clark and for his son, the present president.

Dr. Felton Clark has a Ph. D. degree and has had experience as a teacher outside of the state of Louisiana. His educational qualifications are excellent, both as to training and experience. He carries on the traditions established by his father of grateful cooperation with both races. Members of his faculty reflect this attitude. His business ability makes it possible for the institution to receive maximum benefit from every dollar expended on the institution."

Not only was the general comment about the Southern administration laudatory, but there was not a single negative statement about the operation of the institution. After the committee chairman had read the recommendation on Southern, the board's president commented that, "Felton Clark is the best prepared man in the state."

Just before this formal report was made, the board's educational committee chairman wrote to the Southern president, expressing appreciation of the board upon his election to the presidency of the Land Grant College Presidents association. The chairman stated, "I understand you were not even in the session's meeting at the time of your elevation to this office, which is evidence of the professional standing the nation accords you." The state of Louisiana is proud of your work and honor you bring her."

The board reacted favorably to the committee's recommendation that Dr. Felton Clark be elected permanent president of Southern university, along with four other college presidents.

May Expose Fake Degree Plan Buyers

NEW ORLEANS, La.—The college degree selling racket in Louisiana took on a new aspect this week when educational authorities hinted that several of the persons purported to have purchased credits for degrees will be exposed in a statewide investigation.

Although J. Frank Smith, extension teacher from Southern university, has been silent since he was jailed at Amit several weeks ago, it is rumored that the state superintendent of education has in his files the names of nearly 100 persons who have received degrees on bogus credits sold to them by Smith.

It is reported that phony credits sold by Smith have been responsible for persons graduating from Southern, Leland, Xavier and Tuskegee. The racket is believed to have been in operation since 1937.

In 1935, the state department of education announced that all teachers in the state in a certain classification would have to qualify for degrees by 1941. This opened the way for the racket.

NEGRO COLLEGE'S GROWTH IS CITED

(Special to The Times-Picayune)

Scotlandville, La., March 11.—In delivering the 27th annual Founder's Day address at Southern university in the college auditorium here Sunday afternoon, Dr. J. S. Clark, president-emeritus of the university told the story of the early development of the institution. He pointed out that the school was started 27 years ago in one building on a plantation of 520 acres with 48 students and seven teachers. Now, he said, the school has 108 teachers and 1300 students. He stated now that the school has a plant of 75 modern buildings built by state and federal funds valued at $3,915,350. He said that the appropriation this year by the Legislature for support and maintenance was $355,000. Continuing, he said that this was a demonstration of the faith that the white citizens of Louisiana have in education for Negroes. During these 27 years that Southern university has existed, "it has graduated 2301 students and turned out in service 13,695 in all walks of life where honesty and intelligent service are required," said the speaker. He said that Southern university furnishes 75 per cent of the Negro public school teachers of the state, 80 per cent of all teachers in home economics, and 60 per cent of Jeanes teachers.

It's greatest present contribution in the teaching profession is agriculture and mechanic arts, Dr. Clark said, emphasizing the importance of the Negro's duty in the national defense program.

In conclusion, he pointed out what Southern university will be in the next 25 years if it continues its present program. He said it will furnish every type of education the Negro needs.

The meeting was presided over by Dr. F. G. Clark, president of the institution, who presented Y. L. Fontenot, president of the White School for the Deaf Students, and J. E. Williams, state director of Negro education. Music was furnished by the university a cappella choir, directed by J. Harold Brown. A holiday has been declared Monday for a continuance of the celebration.

NEW ORLEANS, La.—Almost fifteen hundred volumes will be added to the Dillard University library by the close of the present school year, Nathaniel J. The grant of $4500, to be expended over a period of three years, is one of twenty-eight made to Negro colleges throughout the country in an effort to stimulate general undergraduate reading. At least seven hundred of the new books will be bought from the Carnegie Corporation grant, and the remainder will constitute purchases out of the regular University library.

Dr. Mays Inspires Dillard Graduates

NEW ORLEANS (SNS)—Speaking on dependable guides in a time of crisis, President Benjamin E. Mays of Morehouse College, Atlanta, told fifty-two members of the Dillard University graduating class that they must cultivate a belief in religion, must develop a sense of missions in their work, must continue to use their minds, and must develop a sense of responsibility for the present state of affairs.

"It is the duty of every citizen to be loyal to America," he said. "It is the duty of the Negro to be loyal, even though America has not been loyal to him, because despite its shortcomings our present democracy is better than anything that Hitler would have if he won the war."

Dr. Mays cautioned his listeners that there would be a world-wide depression following the present war and suggested that the Negro should look ahead and make preparations, since it would be he who would be hardest hit by such a depression.

In his introductory remarks Dr. Mays offered congratulations to the president-elect of Dillard, A. W Dent, who is a graduate of Morehouse College. After the address by Dr. Mays, Acting Dean Rudolph Moses presented the candidates to Edgar B. Stern, president of the board of trustees, who conferred the degrees.

President Holmes Explains Liberal Arts Colleges Have No Handwork

Baltimore, Maryland

BALTIMORE—Lack of facilities for teaching handwork, characteristic of liberal arts colleges, has so far prevented Morgan State College from participating in the government's program of vocational defense training.

This explanation was made by Morgan's president, Dr. Dwight O. W. Holmes, in connection with the AFRO's recent survey of the steps being taken by leading colleges to share in the $8,000,000 provided by the government for such training.

"Need More than Teachers"

Dr. Holmes, recognizing the need for "training our students to do something else besides teach school," expressed eagerness to do everything possible to supplement or extend the defense program being carried out by vocational schools, "if buildings and equipment could be provided."

These facilities, he pointed out, are already available in agricultural and mechanical schools, which need only emphasize their program to take advantage of the government's offer, but difficulty would be experienced in making such provisions in a liberal arts college, customarily organized with classrooms and teachers around the library.

Aviation Course Denied

Dr. Holmes recalled Morgan's efforts to secure one of the pilot training courses established under the Civilian Aeronautics Authority as the original application of the defense program to schools.

Failure of these efforts was traced in part to lack of student interest and to the government's contention that the Howard University unit should satisfy the needs of this area.

THE FOUR-EGG COLLEGE-STRIKE CALLS FOR ACTION

A quarrel among the president of the Maryland State Teachers' College at Bowie, his wife, and his secretary over the ownership of four eggs led to a two-day student strike last week.

We had this strange situation: Students said the president's wife read her diary to them publicly. They petitioned the president to fire his secretary. The president refused and the strike was on. He remained firm, and the students, at the request of the president's wife, went back to classes.

This school is a non-accredited, four-year college. This means that its faculty, courses of study or equipment are not recognized as up to minimum requirements of rating agencies.

Under such circumstances, it seems that faculty and students would apply themselves so busily to overcoming deficiencies that they would have no time for puppy-love tragedies staged at midnight by the administration, and the consequent disruption of college work for two days.

The situation is without precedent in the history of teacher-training institutions. Whether it constitutes an isolated case, or represents a farce that has been going on for some time, is not known. It ought to be known.

Taxpayers should know whether their money is being spent wisely at Bowie. They should ask the State Board of Education to make an investigation and to replace those guilty of improprieties with more earnest teachers—teachers with a larger sense of public decorum and public responsibility.

James and His Assistant at Bowie Out

Mrs. Thomas Mr. James

BALTIMORE—As a result of a student strike at Bowie State Teachers' College three weeks ago, the State board of education Saturday ordered the suspension of President Leonidas S. James and his assistant, Mrs. Thalia Davis Thomas, acting registrar and teacher of physical education, pending a formal hearing before the board on charges of incompetency.

The student strike, which lasted two days and was called in protest against what the students termed the "low morale" of the school, followed after President James denied the students' demand that he dismiss Mrs. Thomas

DEC 6 - 1941

Wife Made Charges

This demand was precipitated by charges of improper conduct made to the student body by Mrs. James against her husband and Mrs. Thomas.

The State board of education, which also serves as trustees of the school, at its meeting Saturday in the Lexington Building, ruled that the suspensions were effective as of November 28.

Joseph A. Wiseman, supervisor of rural practice, and Hampton and Columbia graduate who has been on the faculty 12 years, has been designated acting president until the hearing.

Mrs. Thomas's hearing has been set for Friday, December 19, at 10:30 a.m. The board has permanently relieved her of her duties as acting registrar, a temporary appointment she held under the State merit system, but she is under suspension as teacher of physical education.

James's Hearing Dec. 18

President James will be given a hearing on Thursday, December 18, at 10:30 a.m., and, in addition to charges of incompetency, will also face charges of failure to exercise proper administrative control of the college. Josiah F. Henry, Jr., local attorney, will represent him.

Mr. James, president of the school for nearly twenty years, is a graduate of Morgan College and Columbia University and has completed resident requirements for his Ph.D. degree at the University of Pennsylvania.

Mrs. Thomas, a member of the well-known Davis family of Washington and a niece of Brigadier General B. O. Davis, is a graduate of Howard University and joined the Bowie staff in 1938. Charles Houston, special NAACP counsel, will represent her.

NAACP Asks to Sit in on Bowie Case

BALTIMORE — The local NAACP, at a special executive meeting Saturday, voted to send a letter to Tasker G. Lowndes, president of the State board of education, which serves as trustees of Bowie State Teachers' College, asking permission to appear when President Leonidas S. James and Mrs. Thalia Davis Thomas are given hearings next week on charges of incompetency.

Cites Grounds for Plea

In the letter, copies of which were sent to all members of the board and Governor Herbert R. O'Conor, the association stated that it based its request on the following grounds:

That "public schools should be in the hands of the best men and women we can get"; that "their private lives must be above reproach and suspicion," and that "if the board in its investigation finds the charges true, it should remove those responsible."

The letter was signed by Dr. J. Leslie Jones, chairman of both the local and State educational committee of the association, and Mrs. Lillie M. Jackson, president of the local branch, both of whom will represent the body should the request be granted.

Prexy, Teacher Suspended

President James and Mrs. Thomas, teacher of physical education and former acting registrar, are under suspension pending the hearings before the State board, which have been set for December 18 and 19 at 10 a.m. at the board's offices in the Lexington Building.

Their suspension was the outgrowth of a two-day student strike at the college last month which followed a denial of the students' request that President James dismiss Mrs. Thomas after Mrs. James made charges of improper conduct against her and her husband.

Both Hire Attorneys

The State board, in ordering their suspension on November 29, also permanently dismissed Mrs. Thomas as acting registrar, a post she held temporarily under the State merit system. She is thus only under suspension as a teacher.

President James has engaged Josiah F. Henry, Jr., Baltimore attorney, to represent him, it was learned, and it is understood that Charles Houston, nationally known lawyer and a member of the Howard University Law School faculty in Washington, will represent Mrs. Thomas.

Admit Negro To Harvard U. Medic School

First Negro In 14 Years To Enter; Philadelphian Last Graduate

BOSTON, (ANP)—Bernard Whitfield Robinson, high ranking honor student at Boston college, who will graduate in June, is the first Negro student to be admitted to the Harvard Medical school in the past 14 years.

An honor graduate from the Boston Latin school, he has been on the dean's list for the past 4 years. He is a member of Alpha Phi Alpha. The last Negro to enter and graduate is Philadelphia's brilliant young Dr. Douglas Stubbs, who received his M. D. cum laude in 1931.

Attention has recently been focused on the plight of the Negro doctors, internes and medical students in their quest to obtain clinical experience and treat patients in the various hospitals, by an article written by the feature writer of the town's leading conservative daily, the Boston Transcript.

An applicant to Tufts medical school who is at present a senior in the college department was reported to have been told bluntly, by the dean, "We do not admit Negroes."

At Boston University's school of medicine, there are two colored students, one in the first and the other in the 2nd year class.

M. I. College Enters 39th Year Of Progress

HOLLY SPRINGS, Miss.—The Mississippi Industrial College was founded at Holly Springs, Mississippi, in 1905 by the late Bishop Elias Cottrell of the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church under the auspices of the Colored ME Church and particularly the Conferences in Mississippi.

These conferences selected ministers and laymen and organized themselves as trustees with Bishop Cottrell as chairman. Their object was to establish and found an institution of learning for the literary and industrial training of the Negro youth and to train young men and young women in Christian ideals and to furnish a practical education and to make them better citizens. This great idea of Bishop Cottrell is today one of the finest seats of learning of the Negro race and a credit to the state of Mississippi.

The college is situated on a 120-acre tract of land purchased for the sum of $35,000.00, which was paid in cash, beginning in the suburbs of Holly Springs and facing U. S. Highway 78 in the city limits with concrete driveways and sidewalks.

At a meeting of the Trustee Board in 1905 plans were laid for the building. Architects were consulted and finally plans for a building were drawn and submitted by the architects, Heavener and McGee of Jackson, Tennessee. They were accepted and bids were received and the building was begun. The first school session began January 11, 1906, and closed in May with an enrollment of nearly 200 students. Thus the Mississippi Industrial college began its great career. A peculiar thing about the M. I. College is that it was founded a college.

The campus is high and well drained, with beautiful shade trees of pine, beech, cedar, oak, silver poplar and pecan. The first building, Catherine Hall, was named in honor of Mrs. Catherine Cottrell, the beloved wife of Bishop Cottrell. It is a three story building with a large basement which contains the college laundry and cold storage room. On the first floor may be found the students parlor, music studio, practice school, school arts room. cafe. domestic science and arts department. The second and third floors are used for dormitories for girls and women. This building was erected at a cost of $35,000.00.

The second building is Hammond Hall. This building is used as a dormitory for boys and men. It was named in honor of Dr. J. D. Hammond, former secretary of the Board of Education of the ME Church, up-to-date modern schools. On the second floor is the grand chapel and auditorium. It has a capacity for seating 2,000. In the same building may be found the physical and chemical laboratories and lecture rooms. The auditorium is said to be the finest and best equipped of any owned and controlled by Negroes. This building was greatly damaged by fire in February of 1930.

Randalia, the home of the presitained by the Colored ME church and ed in honor of Bishop Randal A. Carter who was presiding over the conference of Mississippi at the time it was built. The first Randalia was a beautiful building containing eight rooms at a cost of $7,500.00 but was destroyed by fire in 1929. A more stately, modern building has been built upon the site. It is a beautiful brick structure with basement South. It has two stories with a basement which contains the college shoe shop, barber and pressing shop, lavatories and shower rooms. The first and second floors are used for the boys and men's dormitory. It was erected in 1906 at the cost of $25,000.00

Washington Hall was erected in 1910 at a cost of $40,000.00. It was named in honor of the late Booker T. Washington, a personal friend of Bishop Cottrell. It is used as the administration building. In this building are the general offices, class rooms, library, commercial department and college gymnasium.

Carnegie Hall is considered the crowning work of Bishop Cottrell. It is large, magnificent and stately and portrays the vision of this great man. The building is named in honor of Andrew Carnegie who contributed $25,000.00 towards its erection: It cost $100,000.00 On the first floor is the dining room with a seating capacity of six hundred. Both kitchen and dining room are well fitted as and contains ten rooms suited in every way to its purpose. It was completed at a cost of $10,000.00. Other buildings on the campus of frame structure include Rose Bud Cottage built in 1928, the home of the Dean, but at present being used as the home of the lady teachers. It was built at a cost of $850.00 and is modernly equipped and comfortable.

At present a more spacious administration building is needed to meet the growing demands and increase in classes in both the college and high school departments, and a separate building for the department of education. A building is also needed for trades and scientific agriculture. Here is an opportunity for some philanthropist to help the race and become a benefactor in the name of Christ.

The M. I. College has been maintined by the Colored ME church and it is desired that religion have a recognized place in the life of its teachers and students. The college is open to all people regardless of their religious faith. The school is not dogmatic in its teachings but at the same time emphasis is placed upon the principles of Christian religion maintained by the YMCA, YWCA, and church relations are constantly Epworth League, Sunday School, Vesper and Weekly Prayer Services.

Loyal men who labored with Bishop Cottrell in helping to realize his dream were Revs. Bogard, Johnson, Bates, Pegues, Leach, Williams, Benton, Stinson, McEwen, Stephenson Rodgers, Goodman, Mhoon, Murdock Teer and a host of others whose memory will remain with those interested in the school.

During the 39 years of its existence M. I. College has had eight presidents and nine administrations, namely, Presidents Rodgers, Petts Newell, Goodman, Ramsey, Broome, Montgomery and Frazier. Dr. Rodgers, its first president, served two terms and saw the erection of the first buildings.

President Frazier and his well-trained faculty desire to develop the young men and women along four lines, physically, mentally, morally and socially. In other words to secure for the students the highest possible development of body, mind and spirit. This ideal governs the course of study, its discipline and its daily life.

MORE EQUITABLE OUTLAY ON NEGRO EDUCATION URGED

Junior College in Delta Is Also Asked by Teachers' Committee

(Special to The Times-Picayune)

Jackson, Miss., March 14.—A more equitable expenditure of state funds for Negro education and establishment of a junior college for Negroes in the Delta, "where are concentrated so large a proportion of the Negro population in Mississippi," were recommended to the Mississippi Education Association in annual convention here Thursday by a special committee headed by R. L. Hunt, superintendent of schools at Louise.

The report urges the association to present the matter to the Legislature and to render its co-operation in seeking to carry out the proposals in order to secure an improvement in Negro education in the state.

Stating that "the only way to improve Negro education in Mississippi is to assure a more equitable expenditure of the per capita funds distributed by the state," the committee charged that "not all the money given for Negro children reaches the schools for Negroes in some counties."

"The act of the Legislature, in accordance with the constitution of the state, makes appropriations of the per capita for each child regardless of race," the resolution pointed out. "We conceive it the responsibility of educational authorities to make full accounting for such funds."

Unfair Cuts Noted

Pointing out that "over $9 is spent for each white child in Mississippi when each dollar is spent for a Negro child," the committee stated that "it has happened more than once when budgetary difficulties arose, Negro schools were asked to bear all reductions."

"If a reduction from a budget must be made, it seems to us fair that Negro schools should bear no more than a proportionate reduction to meet the exigencies of any school year," the resolution stated. "We respectfully petition the cooperation of the state department and local educational authorities to the end that the meager funds allotted to Negro schools in the budgets accepted by the state department of education shall be spent in support of the schools for Negroes."

Negro schools are already under budget allotments which provide for the Negro school terms which are shorter, salaries for teachers which are smaller, buildings, equipment and supplies far below the levels for the white schools," the resolution said.

Need Delta School

The committee, composed of Chairman Hunt, George Ditto of Biloxi, W. H. Braden of Natchez, L. L. Bryson and P. H. Easom of the state department of education, said that a review of the opportunities for higher education in Mississippi indicates that no such opportunity for Negroes exists within the Yazoo-Mississippi Delta.

"There is within this area a concentration of a large percentage of the Negro population in Mississippi and we count the establishment of some institution (junior college) for higher learning for Negroes in this area as one goal for the improvement of Negro education," the resolution continued.

Increased financial support for Alcorn Agricultural and Mechanical college for Negroes, the only institution of higher learning supported by the state in Southwest Mississippi, and continuance of a co-operative program with the Julius Rosenwald Fund for the recently opened Mississippi Negro Training school at Jackson were urged.

In connection with Alcorn college the committee stated that "its funds for maintenance have remained the same while its enrollment has been increasing and the school has some very definite building needs."

L. Reddix. It is considered one of the forward steps in disseminating information to farmers and homemakers in Mississippi.

Lecturers and consultants on the program will be T. M. Campbell field agent, U. S. department of agriculture; A. L. Holsey, field officer of the AAA, Tuskegee Institute; Cornelius King, special assistant to the governor, FCA, Washington; Giles A. Hubert, assistant to the director, rural rehabilitation division, FSA, Washington; L. H. James and A. L. Perkins, department of social science, Jackson college; J. F. Potts, principal of Waverly school, Columbia, S. C., and J. Gooden, principal of Mary Jones school, Jackson.

This week of discussion with rural folk who can best disseminate this information to the farmers and homemakers of Mississippi, because of their close contact with them, promises to set a precedent for other institutions.

NEGRO COLLEGE SEEKS ACCREDITED RATING

Request Of Alcorn Officials To Be Considered

APPROVAL IS EXPECTED

School Near Fort Gibson Is Oldest Land Grant Institution Of Its Kind In United States — Contains 900 Acres

By KENNETH TOLER

From The Commercial Appeal
Jackson, Mississippi, Bureau

JACKSON, Miss., Nov. 27.—Placement of Alcorn College for Negroes, state owned and operated since 1871, on the Southern Association of Colleges' accredited list of institutions of higher learning Thursday was recommended by a committee of the State Department of Education.

J. S. Vandiver, state superintendent of education, said the request for accrediting of the state's only institution of higher education for negroes, was made by P. H. Easom, A. P. Fatheree and D. R. Patterson of his department.

To Be Considered Tomorrow

The recommendation is to be considered in Louisville, Ky., Saturday by the Southern Association's committee on negro education headed by Dr. H. M. Ivy, president of the Meridian Junior College. Approval of the request is anticipated, since Governor Johnson, the board of trustees of state institutions of higher learning, supervisory group of the college, and the Department of Education have joined in urging favorable action.

Alcorn College is the oldest land grant college for negroes in the United States. The physical plant consists of 900 acres and 52 buildings including 28 cottages for teachers. Seventy-five acres are devoted to the campus; the remainder to fields, pasture and woodland.

At present, certificates of graduation from Alcorn College are not recognized by accredited colleges, but with the rating graduates will be permitted to attend institutions where negroes are enrolled for advanced courses.

Curriculum Is Varied

The curriculum of Alcorn College is varied to meet the needs and interest of all students. However, major emphasis is placed upon agriculture, home economics and vocational trades. Courses leading to the Bachelor's Degree in agriculture, arts and science, home economics, mechanical arts and teacher education are available.

Dr. W. H. Bell, native negro of Mississippi, is president of the institution, which was first established in 1830 as a Presbyterian supported college for the training of young white ministers. It was first known as Oakland College, and grew rapidly until the outbreak of the Civil War when the enrolment had reached around 2000 students.

In 1871 during the administration of Gov. James L. Alcorn, the state purchased the institution and dedicated it to the higher education of negroes. It was named in honor of the governor who was instrumental in executing the transaction.

Revels First President

As a negro institution, Rev. Hiram R. Revels became its first president, and until 1878 the school was known as Alcorn University. The Revels' administration (1871-82) began with an allotment of $50,000 a year for support.

In July, 1862, Congress enacted a law providing Government funds for the support of state schools coming under the head of land-grant college. In order to comply with this act, the school was reorganized in 1878 and named Alcorn Agricultural and Mechanical College.

Entrance fees at the college are now $64.50 for new students, and $59.50 for former students. Most students are able to pay at least half of the entrance fees upon registration and the remaining half within 30 to 90 days after the opening of school, according to President Bell. Students usually work on an average of 50 hours a month or 10 hours a week. Thus it is possible for them to aid themselves financially and to carry on their classroom assignments simultaneously, Dr. Bell said.

Students in the division of agriculture provide all the farm and garden labor; the division of mechanical arts does all painting, repairing and general upkeep of the buildings, and students in the department of business administration provide some of the secretarial assistance needed at the institution.

PINEY WOODS SCHOOL WORK WINS PRAISE

By C. E. GILMAN
Secretary of YMCA,
Mason City, Iowa

Every once in a while we run into a situation that opens our eyes to something we hardly knew had existed before. It is a new world, one of which we had only the slightest conception if we knew anything about it at all.

That experience was mine recently when I went to Piney Woods school not far from Jackson, Miss., and had an opportunity to see and learn of the fine work being done toward the betterment of the Negro race at this unique institution.

When I accepted the invitation to be the commencement speaker there, I little realized the scope of the work being done at Piney Woods by Prof. Laurence C. Jones, an Iowa born and educated Negro who has gone into the deep south to spend his life bettering the lot of his people.

The Piney Woods school to most persons is a place from which a traveling band of colored singers comes each winter to appear at churches and give concerts, taking a free will offering to pay its way, and, although you may not know it, help pay the expenses for the school.

In reality it is far more than this, for hundreds of Negro children from both the North and South are receiving an education there. Most of them are children of the kind of poverty known only by members of the Negro race in this country and the opportunity that this school gives these children to better themselves and their standard of living is the greatest thing about it.

Piney Woods was founded by Professor Laurence C. Jones more than 30 years ago, when, as a young University of Iowa graduate, he arrived in the deep South with a deep resolve to use the education he had earned in Iowa for the benefit of his people.

At first the way was difficult. He had no school and no one was willing to help him get one. But one day he remembered the story of Mark Hopkins and his famous log, of whom it was said that Mark Hopkins on one end of a log and a student on the other would constitute a college.

So the word was passed around that the school would take up the next day. All summer it met under a cedar tree on which is now part of the Piney Woods campus. Fall came and the weather grew cold. Roaring bonfires were built and the school continued.

Then one day an ex-slave who lived nearby gave the school its first contribution when he donated an old tumbledown shack, 40 acres of land and $50 in cash. The belief that this uneducated man had in Laurence Jones and his idea was the start that Piney Woods needed.

Today the school is a far cry from the three student affair that started on a log underneath a cedar tree. Four hundred pupils ranging from grade school through junior college attend school at Piney Woods, more than half of them living in dormitories on the campus.

Since it is primarily a vocational education school, Piney Woods is able to make the utmost of the donations it receives by building and teaching at the same time. The bricks in the fine buildings now on the beautiful campus were made at Piney Woods by Piney Woods pupils. The masonry was handled by them, the plumbing was installed by them, the carpentry was done by them and all other work to be done was handled by them.

In this way the children and the young men and women have been taught trades at which they earn a good living after graduation from the school and at the same time they are helping earn their way through Piney Woods.

Perhaps a description of a typical commencement at Piney Woods will give a better idea of what the school is doing.

The ceremonies are held in the auditorium of the school with approximately 400 persons, nearly all of them colored, in the audience. This year's graduating class consists of 26 high school and junior college seniors, all of whom have received first class training in a vocation and have been taught some of the history, value and general aspects of the work as well as how to do it from a strictly mechanical standpoint.

The first girl on the stage is a high school graduate. After a short talk on sewing with special reference to what she is about to do, the girl sets about to make a gored skirt, using a pattern, cutting of the cloth and stitching on a sewing machine.

While she is finishing the work, another girl appears and tells the audience that she has been trained as a stenographer. After giving the requirements for a good secretary, punctuation, spelling, accuracy and sentence construction, the girl writes a business letter in shorthand on a big blackboard as it is dictated by another student. Then she sits down at the typewriter and types it out.

I later had a chance to see this piece of work which I found to be very neat.

Next on the stage a cook. He tells how to make strawberry shortcake and in a short time is all involved in the process. Before the hour and a half of demonstrations is over he has turned out a short cake that looked exceptionally good.

Then a carpenter comes out and tells about and demonstrates the building of a screen door. When he finishes he has turned out a workmanlike job and had shown that he not only knows what he is doing, but why he is doing it.

But perhaps the finest demonstration is the one that follows. A youth shepherds a group of smaller children on stage and announces that he is about to teach a school in a rural community where there is little equipment. Using a mail order catalog, he had a child pick out a pair of shoes and write on the blackboard the kind, color, size and price of the shoes. This not only teaches reading and writing, but also lays the foundation for simple arithmetic problems.

A girl graduate also shows what she can do when she demonstrates what she could do in the same situation along the lines of reading and sentence construction. She asks a little boy is he has a pet. He says yes, that he has a kitty.

From this situation, the girl builds an entire lesson, expanding the words "John has a kitty" on the blackboard to more complex sentences as the children progress.

This, in short, is the main feature of the Piney Woods graduation exercises, although of course, there still remains the traditional awarding of diplomas and commencement address. But it is hard to tell much in a commencement address after such a stirring demonstration has done so much.

Particularly interesting to me was the work being done at Piney Woods with blind colored children. There are 22 or 23 of them there, all of them getting training in reading, Braille, rug weaving, canning chairs, making baskets and in music.

This work, in a way, typifies what Piney Woods is doing, making it easier to see. For the unfortunate blind children are only a little more handicapped than their sighted brothers and sisters, many of whom are orphans and nearly all of whom are underprivileged. Piney Woods does not encourage colored children who can pay their own way, although it is glad to enroll them if they come to school there. It is really interested in those who cannot pay their own way.

Vast as this Piney Woods projects has come to be, it is still but a drop in the bucket compared to what can be done and should be done among the colored people. Laurence Jones, Ella Carter, Singleton Bender, C. E. Dishman, Eula Kelly and those others of his race who control the school, realize this, and to the best of their ability they are trying to expand the work they are doing.

The present effort is toward the construction of a community hospital. It will be a two-story, 45-bed hospital and will offer its facilities to the people of the surrounding countryside as well as the students. And it will be open to colored and white people alike.

And that, briefer by far than it should be, is the story of a great project, one which I thank God that I have come to know. It is my sincere hope that Piney Woods' work will spread and that the good it does will increase a thousand fold.

A HOME-MADE SCHOOL IN THE DEEP SOUTH—3

AFTER graduation from the university, Laurence Jones was invited to join the staff at Tuskegee Institute, but he chose to go to one of the many struggling offshoots of the famous school. This one was located in Hinds County, Mississippi. It paid him less than five hundred dollars for two years of teaching, but it gave him the chance to learn what the Mississippi Negro was like and why. He knew by this time their general reputation as "no-count 'n' lazy," and he knew that every other man in Mississippi was a black man. He had learned that the black half of the population, by and large, had made almost no progress since the Civil War, but he did not know why this was so. Now he set out to explore the poorer hill counties where some of his pupils lived.

For six months he visted around, travelling by mule or ox wagon or walking fifteen miles a day, and lighting his way through the great dark woods with a pine torch at night. He slept on the dirt floor of cabins built for slaves of half a century ago; he ate coarse cornmeal with the stringy meat of razorback hogs. And all the time he talked about modern farm methods to men who had never heard of them. To most of these people he was the only man they knew who could read and write, except possibly some preacher, and they began calling him "Fesser," shortened from "Professor." He found them anxious to educate their children, but with no possible way of doing it. They owned nothing but the ragged clothes they wore and a few primitive tools and household utensils.

These people were sharecroppers, growing and picking some white owner's cotton supposedly for half a share in the profits, but in reality getting hardly a penny from one year's end to the next. How could they know the market price of cotton and consequently what their share should be? How could they tell that the plantation store was often making a hundred per cent profit on its sales to them, when a white agent kept the books which none of them could read? What could they say when the agent assured them that they were in his debt because their year's labour had not covered their supplies of food and clothing? No wonder that most of them had lost all ambition—why not be lazy when there was no hope of ever making more than the barest living? "Fesser" Jones, thought, thought that he knew the cure for that kind of laziness, and he set about raising money for a school building.

TOBY was only a farm mule, but his death meant a crisis for a whole coloured school. A few days after his death it took three members of the school staff to open the mail containing letters of regret nd one dollar bills to help toward the purchase of a new Toby. Only a mule, mind you! But firmly attached to the mule was a boy whose only way of keeping in school was to take care of Toby, and besides that boy were five or six hundred other boys and girls whose whole chance of schooling was involved in the farm on which Toby had been working. Without Toby, how could the school crops be cultivated and what would the students have to eat? And how could the boys stay in school unless they had vegetables to sell to the kitchen department?

In other words, so delicately balanced were the workings of the school that the loss of Toby would mean the loss of a student. Therefore, the principal set the story in type and struck off a letter of appeal on his hand press.

"We pitched a crop," he had written, "counting on Toby to help cultivate and harvest it. His death has thrown us back a good deal. To catch up and also to harvest all the hay we can, we ought to have a pair of mules. This would also mean that two boys could work their way in school."

What school is this where the balance of work and study is closely calculated that "minus one mule" means "minus one boy"? Not Tuskegee, for that institute is long past the stage where farm work proceeds by mule power, and it is too heavily endowed to be staggered by the loss of one farm animal. Also many years have passed since Tuskegee was a one-man institution, dependent on Booker T. Washington to raise funds through friendships.

True, this small farm school which lost Toby is a sort of Tuskegee of the early days. Imagine the dense pine woods of a state in the deep South, flavour the air with the scent of old pines and of rough pine lumber, listen for bird-calls and the ringing of tools all day long, and you have the setting of the Piney Woods Country Life School in Mississippi. So thick are the woods that the school can hardly be seen from a hill a mile away. Even more completely hidden in the woods of the surrounding forest counties are nests of log cabins, many of which were built by slaves before the Civil War and are today inhabited by their descendants, practically slaves themselves under the sharecropping system of tenantry.

EVER since those days the school has kept "inchin' along," in the words of a favourite spiritual, until now eight hundred people, students and staff, are housed on a farm campus of twelve hundred acres. It is a self-contained community with its own electric light plant, a hundred-thousand-gallon water tower of steel to supply its own water system, and its own post-office, named Piney Woods, Mississippi. It has a community house, too, with rooms for the guests who come almost every day to visit the campus.

The visitors are people from far and near who have an interest in education for country life. They enter through an attractive archway and drive along an excellent road, forewarned that everything they see, including the roads and drives, is home-made. Most of them have come on purpose to learn how something can be made out of nothing under primitive conditions. If they are from the tropics—and many of them are—they find something familiar in the long grey moss hanging from the live-oaks, in the darkness of the thick woods on every side, and in those long luxuriant pine needles. "It all has a far-off look of the jungle," commented a woman who had gone to Africa also to observe rural education.

The visitors include both white and coloured people. An official of the state department of education comes regularly and the best white people of the state are friendly to the school. The principal of the white high school at Braxton brings his seniors over on an annual trip. Thomas Campbell often swings around from Tuskegee Institute. Mississippi is one of the seven Gulf states for which he is field agent, and he comes over to confer with the Smith-Hughes vocational worker who lives on the campus, or with one of the home extension workers. A visiting British commissioner of education from South Africa studies those things that coloured children of farmers in Cape Province or the Transvaal could profitably learn about—the chicken house and the dairy barn, the sweet potato drying house and the broom making and cobbling shops. But he will probably think that the garages and auto repair shops are too modern to be of use to most of them at present. A visiting professor of education from a Northern university is most keenly interested in the fact that what was originally planned for a high school has developed at both ends. It has grown forward to include the first two years of an industrial junior college. At the lower end a Rosenwald Training School has been added which takes the neighbouring children through the first six grades, and at the same time provides teacher training for students. The word "neighbouring" signifies a wide area when used to describe the children who attend this school, for some of them walk as much as twelve miles a day in order to do so.

Missouri to Get J.C. School of Journalism

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. — In what observers consider a scheme to nullify the fight of Miss Lucile Bluford of Kansas City to force the university to admit her to its school of journalism, State officials are contemplating the establishment of such a school for colored students at Lincoln University here.

The plan was revealed on Friday when Democratic Floor Leader H. P. Lauf introduced in the House of Representatives a temporary funding resolution which contained a $65,000 item for that purpose.

Early Opening Planned

The Bluford case is set for argument before the Missouri Supreme Court during the May term, and the urgency of the $65,000 fund appeal indicated that plans for the new Lincoln University addition are to proceed in time for opening at the second semester.

This action, observers say, will put an end to the Bluford case unless it is carried on to determine whether or not the jim crow journalism school is equivalent to the one for whites at the University of Missouri.

GIVES RINGING MESSAGE AT LINCOLN U.

JAN 17 1941

75th Anniversary Is Celebrated; Notables Participate

By RICHARD JACKSON

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo.—Jan. 12 — Historical old Lincoln U. began an auspicious observance of its founding 75 years ago by a group of Negro soldiers from the Civil War last Sunday with a Founder's Day program consisting of a public meeting, banquet and musical recital. Cast on a sunny January day which lent beauty to the occasion, many alumni, friends and celebrities joined the student body in commemorating the occasion.

The highlight of the day was the scholarly and masterful address of Dr. W. E. Burghardt DuBois on "The Future of the Negro State College." His talk was delivered in Page Auditorium, following an address by Governor Lloyd Stark, who eulogized the "constructive program of education at Lincoln" and expressed faith in a "glorious day of greater achievement." President Sherman D. Scruggs, presiding, said that the outlook for Lincoln U. was the most promising.

DuBois Digs Deep

Dr. DuBois denounced separate schools as extravagant and idiotic and predicted that the Pan-African movement, being espoused in Negro colleges in foreign lands, will probably bring the "colored world." to its "rightful heritage."

Dr. DuBois in the high points of his address saw:

Lincoln getting away from the evil of being a "political football or an employment office for politicians; inferiority of Negro state-supported schools to the white state schools, poorer in equipment cultural advantages, attempt to imitate where it cannot be real and to boast of what it has not; Lincoln should not desire to become another University of Missouri as Missouri could hardly be placed among the country's leading universities; Lincoln can become a focus of research and as a place of culture for a new and evolving world; Lincoln can show (as the still small voice of the oppressed and the despised who knew more than to die and planned more than mere survival) the way of life; Lincoln has chance of becoming a real university in the larger and broader sense that here science and education are being so administered that the place of the Negro in the world and his relations to the body of his fellow human being is being made clear. There is a unity of the working classes everywhere, a new unity of men. The proposed economic solution of the Negro problem in Africa and America has turned thought of Negroes toward a relization that the modern white laborer of Europe and America has the key to the serfdow of black folk. in his support of militarism and colonial expansion. He is beginning to say to these workingmen that, so long as black laborers are slaves, white laborers cannot be free.

There are signs in South Africa and the U. S. of the beginning of understanding between the two classes. Most men in this world are colored. A belief in humanity means a belief in colored men: the future world will in all reasonable probability, be what colored men make it: the character of the Negro race is the best and greatest hope for in its normal condition it is at once the strongest and gentlest of the races of men.

Events Close Day

More than 200 guests attended the sumptuous banquet in the school cafeteria in the evening and heard sparkling and encouraging talks about a "new Lincoln." On the program were Mayor Jesse Owens of Jefferson City, State Superintendent of Schools Lloyd King, Dr. DuBois, Dean Winterton Curtis of the University of Missouri, President G. L. Harrison of Langston U., Prof. N. P. Barksdale, Miss Jesuita Hughes, representing the Student Council, and the Revs. E. W. Dalcour and J. Wogelveid, J. Ernest Wilkins prominent Chicago lawyer, presided.

The recital in Page Auditorium was the closing event of the day. John Green, bass-baritone of Chicago, and Miss Jean Coston, pianist from Indianapolis, featured artists, were well received by an appreciative audience. Mr. Green was accompanied by T. Theodore Taylor.

$65,000 FOR JOURNALISM SCHOOL AT LINCOLN UNIV. OKAYED ON HOUSE FLOOR

Two years ago the Missouri legislature passed the Taylor act which by the meager sum it appropriated cast doubt upon the state's intentions to give wholehearted obedience to the U. S. supreme court's order for equal education made in the Gaines case. The state's establishment of a single school, the law school, instead of the nine which Lincoln university for Negroes lacked compared with Missouri university for whites indcated Missouri's reluctance. It's defense when journalism was asked by a Negro still further proved that it thumbed its nose at the high court.

Now the proof is complete that Missouri does not plan to make education for Negroes equal to that for whites until it is driven to do so,—The legislature is passing an act appropriating $60,000 for a school of journalism, without offering to add money for engineering, for agriculture, for mining, for medicine and the other branches which Lincoln university lacks! Missouri will set up schools for the education of Negroes only after they at great expense through separate cases for each type of learning sought, compel it to act.

It is no wonder that many school districts in this state offer no education for their Negro children. They have the state's refusal to educate Negroes as their example. For shame, Missouri! That this bill passed the house by a strict party vote in notice to its Negro supporters that they have work to do before next election.

NEW MISSOURI NYA HEAD IN KANSAS CITY

Gilbert Robinson Promises To Give Sympathetic Ear To Negro Needs

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Gilbert O. Robinson, newly appointed state NYA director for Missouri, was in Kansas City last week to become acquainted with the Kansas City NYA program and to make a survey of its needs.

Mr. Robinson made a tour of all NYA projects, both Negro and white, with James L. Russell, state supervisor of Negro projects, and George Sykes, Kansas City NYA director.

The new state director, who took over his duties on February 1 succeeding C. Clark Buckner, said that all requests and needs of Negro youth in the state would be treated with a sympatheic attitude by his office.

Since he took over the work of the state office only a few days ago Mr. Robinson was not in a position to make definite commitments but he assured the Negroes of Kansas City that it would not be long before projects for Negro boys would be started. Negro citizens have been making requests for many months for projects to prepare Negro youth for jobs in national defense industries.

Both Mr. Sykes and Mr. Russell are working at top speed now trying to rush plans for the opening of additional classes for Negroes. Mr. Robinson said that he would do all in his power to help speed the work.

Mr. Robinson is a native of Patton, Mo., and attended the Maryville college, Maryville, Tenn., receiving his A.B. degree in 1916. He took post graduate work in education at the University of Missouri, receiving his Ph.D. degree in 1935.

Robinson has had wide experience in the fields of education and administration. Prior to joining the staff of the NYA, he served for four years as dean of Albany college, Albany, Ore. From 1922 to 1924 and again from 1926 to 1930, he served as superintendent of mission schools in Thailand (Siam). He also has held teaching positions at Columbia, Mo., Senath, Mo., and Ashland, Kas.

Robinson served as a corporal in the United States army in 1919.

The new state NYA director has invited Negro citizens to send any requests and suggestions that they have to his office in Jefferson City.

Lincoln U. Budget Only $900,000

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo.—The house appropriations committee of the Missouri legislature ignored Lincoln university's request for an appropriation of $3,500,000 for the next biennium when it returned a recommended budget of only $9,500 to the house of representatives this week.

The Lincoln request embodied provisions for a library building, auditorium, gymnasium, agriculture buildings, dormitory, and reconstruction of existing structures. The sum provided by the committee includes funds for none of these items.

The measure is yet to be approved by the house, the senate, and the governor. Open hearings in both the house and senate chambers will permit Lincoln authorities to impress upon the legislators the need for the increased budget recommendation.

LINCOLN APPROPRIATIONS

It has been brought to our attention that the Senate Committee on Appropriations has recommended a cut in the appropriations for Lincoln University to the extent that that institution will be seriously handicapped in carrying out a reasonable educational program for at least two years. This news, we are sure, was not pleasing to the ears of the Negro citizens of the state, especially those who have worked for so many years to bring this institution to the place where it now is. Many of us have regarded Lincoln, which is the only institution of higher learning for Negroes in the state, as the "apple of our eyes" because the training of the future men and women of our race [illegible] in that institution and the kind of citizens they will be will depend upon the training which the state provides for them.

Unfortunately there are those who are inclined to make political capital of the present situation. Some are saying that it is the Democrats, while others are saying that the final word rests with a Republican governor. But we say that whether it be Democrats or Republicans the damage to our race is the same.

Therefore, it is the duty of our leaders to inform the leaders of both political parties that the future lives of the Negro youths who are to be trained in this state institution are too precious to be played with through political manipulations.

Argus
St. Louis, Missour:

WARNING

The first step the colored people in the state should take to guard the welfare of Lincoln University is to watch closely the appointment of new members to the Board of Curators of that institution, which will be made by Governor Donnell. Rumor has it that the name of Duke Diggs of Jefferson City has been mentioned to the Governor as a suitable curator. And while we have nothing against Mr. Diggs personally, many of us still remember that Mr. Diggs was a member of the old Sam Baker plunder regime at Lincoln which plunged that institution into politics which threatened to bring about its ruin. Surely Governor Donnell will not allow himself to be used to put Lincoln University back into politics as it was under the Baker regime.

In the meanwhile we call upon the citizens of Missouri to think, watch, and think.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. — Leon Henderson, commissioner in charge of the Price Stabilization Division of the National Defense Advisory Commission, Friday announced appointment of Dr. Booker T. McGraw, registrar and head of the Department of Economics and Business Administration at Lincoln University of Missouri, as consultant in charge of a research project for that division.

Dr. McGraw will direct a study designed to trace the recent financial experience of France during the current European war. The study is expected to evaluate that Republic's economic and financial policies and to disclose their defects as a possible safeguard for this country in the present national defense effort.

The economist directed a similar study at Harvard University and wrote his thesis for a Ph. D. degree there in 1939 on recent French economic and financial policies. Before undertaking this study, Dr. McGraw had received an A.B. degree from Atlanta University, an M.A. an M.B.A. degrees from the University of Michigan, and M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from Harvard.

Prior to his affiliation with Lincoln University, Dr. McGraw was employed for several years as an officer of the Benga State Bank in Chicago, and was at one time an instructor in economics at Bishop College in Marshall, Texas.

He is the first Negro economist to be engaged as a financial expert by the Price Stabilization Division of the National Defense Advisory Commission to serve as consultant to the War Finance Section of that division.

LINCOLN UNIV. HAS FOUNDER'S DAY PROGRAM

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. — (Special)—The historic campus of Lincoln university will be the scene of a celebration rare and unprecedented in the annals of the Missouri institution during the approaching 75th anniversary observance which begins Sunday, January 12 with the annual Founder's Day program. Outfitted with a pageant conceived by two Lincoln sophomores and directed by a staff member, recitals, a series of lectures on different occasions by national figures, an educational conference in the spring, and other features designed to make 1941 a red-letter year in Lincoln history, the celebration has for its theme "The Negro College in a Changing Order."

The discussion of Lincoln's—and the Negro college's—role in the past, present, and future order of things will be introduced at the opening of the diamond anniversary ceremonies on January 12. A man of national stature will deliver the annual Founder's Day address in the afternoon at a ceremony to be preceded by an academic march of faculty, curators, and guests. A Founder's Day invitational dinner, scheduled for the late afternoon in the University cafeteria, will be followed by a recital by guest artists in the evening.

Two thousand invitations are being mailed alumni and to leaders in the business, church, educational, newspaper, civic and governmental life of our nation. Listening space for overflow audience is being provided in the College library with the aid of public address quipment.

Lincoln approaches the three-quarter century mark with the largest faculty (83 members) and student body (almost 900 in all divisions) in her history. A nine-member bi-racial, non-partisan Board of Curators recently approved a budget request almost three times the size of any request ever submitted to the State of Missouri by Lincoln. Such increased funds are needed for the program of expansion and intensification now going on at the Missouri institution.

Negro College Does Not Have to Imitate White School, He Says, But Has Opportunity for 'Social Invention'

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. —Citing the part which the Negro has played in the history of Missouri and analyzing the functions and future of the Negro state university, Dr. W. E. B. DuBois of Atlanta delivered the Founder's Day address at Lincoln university Sunday afternoon.

The learned scholar, historian, educator and author spoke in Page auditorium, crowded with students, teachers and friends from all parts of the state who had gathered here to celebrate the seventy-fifth anniversary of Lincoln U.

On the platform sat Governor Lloyd C. Stark who made remarks preceding the address of Dr. DuBois; and three members of the Lincoln U. board of curators, Clifford Scruggs of Jefferson City, C. C. Hubbard of Sedalia and Dan Lewis of Hannibal.

"The Negro race has touched and influenced the history of the state of Missouri in many and curious ways," Dr. DuBois began.

He told how Toussaint L'Ouverture, black leader of Haiti, frustrated the attempt of Napoleon to transmute political revolution into America and to use Haiti as a gateway through which to annex the whole of what is now the United States west of the Mississippi river.

The plan, said Dr. DuBois, "was frustrated by a black leader, and this leader through his dogged resistance to Napoleon. Spain and England finally succeeded in making Haiti independent; in freeing the slaves of the West Indies and South America and in handing the sovereignty of Louisiana including Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska and the whole Northwest to the United States."

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. — The final amount approved by the Conference Committee on Appropriations for Lincoln University was $895,000 for the biennial 1941-42. Governor Donnell did not cut this appropriation as he did most of the other state institutions, evidently thinking the amount was already too small.

Of this amount $65,000 was appropriated for the establishment of work in journalism in connection with Lincoln University, and $40,000 for out-of-state tuition aid; that is students who desire to attend school in adjoining states to receive instruction in subjects not taught at Lincoln University, may have their tuition paid by the state out of this fund.

Civil War Began In Mo.

The Civil War "between two conceptions of American democracy" also was begun in Missouri, said Dr. DuBois.

"The Cotton Kingdom as it grew to its culminating power towarc 1830," he said, "looked for increased territory, expanded political power and a new economic basis of society. The battleground on which the idea of peasant proprietorship and industrial democracy as against economic caste and colonial imperialism was started in modern times, was this state of Missouri and was personified in the fight which the colossal figure of John Brown made against the border ruffians who were determined to make Kansas a fellow slave state with Missouri.

"Here the Civil War between two conceptions of American democracy was begun, ending as you well know, not simply with the legal destruction of slavery but with an attempt to extend practical democracy to its ultimate logical theory."

Concept of Lincoln U.

After setting forth conditions which led to the Civil War and painting the Reconstruction period as "an economic revolution on a mighty scale and with world-wide reverberation" rather than simply a fight between the white and black races in the South, Dr. DuBois told how black soldiers of Missouri conceived the idea out of which Lincoln university grew.

"It was among the black soldiers of Missouri," he said, "fighting the last battle of the west which spelled the final crippling of the Confederacy that the idea arose of systematic education of their fellows in their home state.

"Nor was there anything unusual or merely local in this thought and movement. The public school system of the whole South is the gift of black folk.

"An element in the white South had struggled for a public school system, had sought to follow New England and the West in this direction long before the Civil War, but it is a needless exaggeration to say that there was in the confines of the former slave states south of Mason and Dixon's line, any real state public school system until the black votes of Reconstruction furnished one.

"Even in the Middlewest, Ohio, Illinois, Indiana and Missouri, the public school system did not usually include or envisage Negroes and it was only when Missouri colored troops saw with their own eyes what Negroes were doing for publis education in Louisiana and Texas that they sent back the idea to their own state."

Traces School Development

Dr. DuBois traced the development of the school in this country from the time when the privately endowed institution to serve the children of the well-to-do offered the only educational opportunities.

DuBois—

The situation gradually changed, he said, and the demand for high school and college training on the part of the mass of youth outran the facilities which private institutions could furnish. The public school and the state university followed.

Dr. DuBois said that the public school facilities "have grown so rapidly and expanded so enormously in work and attendance that it is manifest that by the twenty-first century the problem of higher education is going to be primarily a problem of the state."

On this point, he stated:

"This fills some folk with satisfaction and others with dismay, because it puts into the hands of the state, the necessity of facing and facing squarely certain social situations and problems which the state as it is now constituted has not shown itself capable of handling.

"Not only is there the older problems of religion and social status, but what are today the much more pressing problems of class distinction based on income and of racial distinctions based on physical differences and appearances and on historical associations supported by prejudice and folk lore."

"The new state system of education, therefore, is faced, first of all with this question of income, this question which the democratic experiments following the Civil War attempted to meet and failed.

"It is all well enough to talk about equality of human beings and their liberty to act; the real fact of the matter, as we have known for generations, and as we are beginning to admit today, is that a man who does not have enough to eat or the clothing and shelter necessary for health; and who is uncertain as to how long his present meagre income is going to last, is not free and cannot be called the equal of the man with sufficient and assured income and security of status.

The comfortable solution of this economic problem, which regards this situation as largely inevitable; which looks upon poverty as the permanent accompaniment of civilization, is not only being questioned today, but is the real burning problem which lay at the basis of the last World War, is the cause of this present World War and of other revolutions to come.

"The solution of attitudes toward this economic problem," he said, "is in the hands of our educational system and it goes without saying that the present educational system is not designed to meet it.

"It is a system largely determined by that very economic inequality which it seeks to solve; and the power to administer the system lies all too largely in hands interested in privilege rather than in justice, in class advantage rather than in democratic control.

The problem of the education of Negroes has been met with every conceivable difference of attitude, said Dr. DuBois, varying from open and careless neglect to desperate and often misguided efforts at solution.

"In a state like this," he said, "the usual attitude long has been to resent the fact that such a problem must complicate the policies of the state system of education.

"It could of course, be argued that the simpler the problems of education are, the easier it would be to solve them; that if a state school system had to deal with persons of about the same income status, the same cultural background and comparatively few physical differences, that the resultant problem of education would be easy.

"Perhaps so, but it certainly would not be a problem of education suited to this nation or this world. This is a world where the physical, mental and cultural differences between human beings are vast, where the absolute segregation of human beings is increasingly impossible and undesirable; where the annihilation of space, the economic iinterdependence of peoples are such that no problem of education in any country can long hope to escape the resultant questions of facts of human contact."

"So admitting today," he continued, "that the state system of education has got to regard the different elements in the state as an inescapable part of its problem, we come to the second situation: namely that as an heritage from slavery and the Civil War we are required by state law to carry on separate institutions for persons of Negro descent.

"There is no doubt that this is unfortunate and even idiotic. It is needlessly costly and it is a direct contravention to that democratic equality toward which all education in the end must strive.

"One would think that in a state like Missouri where Negroes form but one-sixth of the population and where the actual illiteracy of whites and blacks is not great, that time and a reasonable amount of tolerance would make the waste and duplication of work necessary in two state universities uncalled for; and that a little patient waiting and thoughtful pressure might even in our day have opened the doors of the University of Missouri to colored students.

"In the meantime, there were certain losses which could hardly be faced. The admission of a few colored students to the University of Missouri would not alter the mental complexion of the teachers and professors in that institution. They would know as little about the cultural history and group difficulties of Negro students after as before .....

"Whether, then, it was inevitable or not, Missouri has embarked upon the road of establishing a Negro university and of making that institution a center of learning and scientific advance deserving to be classed as the equal of other universities in this land.

A Difficult Job

"That, of course, is a difficult job. First of all, any time that a state is compelled by higher law or by lower prejudice to embark upon a program for which it has no real liking, the work will be done, at first certainly, in a cheap and slipshod way. The separate institution will be by all standards a poor institution; poor in physical equipment, poor in cultural advantages, tempted to imitate where it cannot be real and to boast of what it has not . . .

"Inevitably among a poor people and inexperienced, the temptation will come and recur to make an institution like this a means of earning a living or of adding to income rather than an institution of learning. The Negroes of Missouri will be tempted in the future, as in the past, to sell their votes not for the establishment of a state university but for small offices and temporary preferment; for the paying of personal debts and squaring of personal dislikes and enmities rather than the larger and more intangible object of building here a center of thought and speculation, of scientific research, of literature and art."

Speaking of the aims and objectives of Lincoln university, Dr. DuBois asked, "Should Lincoln university try to become another University of Missouri? After all, among the great universities of America, the University of Missouri would hardly be placed among the first . . .

"Lincoln university has before it certain obvious differences of method and aim; it can and should be smaller and more compact; it can be more certain of its objects and more definite and thorough in its methods. There are certain lines of work in which it can stand out not simply in Missouri but in the United States as a focus of research and as a place of culture and civilization for a new and evolving world."

In order to carry out such a program, however, Dr. DuBois said that the school will need freedom and funds. It will need to be administered by men of large vision who think of this school not as a temporary make-shift or as a place where their relatives get positions or their firms sell goods, but rather as a center where the cultural outlook of this country is to be changed and uplifted and helped in the reconstruction of the world."

Dr. DuBois, who said that Lincoln U. has come a long ways since he was offered and refused an invitation to come here 47 years ago, stated that the Missouri school has an extraordinary opportunity for "social invention, for planning and carrying through methods by which without hatred, agitation or upheaval, you can show how a minority cannot simply repeat the accomplishments of a majority but can show the majority the way of life and in doing this you but reiterate an age-old custom that not from the overwhelming, rich and powerful groups which from time to time rule the world have come salvation and culture, but from the still, small voice of the oppressed and the determined who know more than to die and plan more than mere survival."

Concluding, Dr. DuBois spoke of the "slowly rising strong brotherhood of Negro blood throughout the world" and the "common cause of the darker races against the intolerable assumptions and insults of Europeans."

"Most men in this world are colored," he said, and "the future world will, in all reasonable probability, be what colored men make it. In order for this colored world to come into its heritage, must the earth be continuously drenched in the blood of fighting, snarling human beasts," he asked, "or will Reason and Good Will prevail?

"That such may be true, the character of the Negro race is the best and greatest hope; for in its normal condition it is at once the strongest and gentlest of the races of men; but that character can only be raised above emotion to planned reason by institutions such as this may become."

Future Of World Will Be Whatever Colored People Make It--W. E. DuBois

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. — Propounding the optimistic conviction that "The future world will, in all reasonable probability, be what colored men make it," Dr. W. E. Burghardt DuBois, "whose voice is heard above the confusion" of a world "retreating towards disintegration", delivered a clarifying and poignant address last Sunday afternoon at a program commemorating the 75th anniversary of the founding of Lincoln University.

Dr. DuBois shared the speakers' platform with Governor Lloyd C. Stark, retiring executive of Missouri, who preceded Dr. DuBois to the rostrum, and eulogized the "constructive program of education being carried on at Lincoln" and expressed sanguine anticipation of "a glorious day of greater achievement in this institution."

Sees Segregation Idiotic

Discussing "The Future of the Negro State College", the sage of Atlanta University traced historically the evolution of those conditions which resulted in the creation of separate schools for Negroes, denounced the idea of segregated schools as being extravagant and "idiotic", said that state public school education in the South resulted from "the black votes of Reconstruction", and predicted that the Pan-African movement, which is being espoused in Negro colleges and in foreign lands, will probably bring the "colored world" to its "rightful heritage".

The internationally-famed research expert said that state public school education and that of schools like Lincoln University must be "administered by men of large vision" and that Lincoln University should be thought of as a "center where the cultural outlook of this country is to be changed and uplifted and helped in the reconstruction of the world."

Tells of College Problems

Problems facing the state system of education, under which Lincoln operates, according to DuBois, are economic and religious and are "those class distinctions based on incomes, and of racial distinctions based on physical differences, and appearances and on historical associations supported by prejudice and folk lore."

Speaking of segregated schools, Dr. DuBois said that these are a "direct contravention to that democratic equality toward which all education in the end must strive." The laws which prescribe separate schools for races "simply put into words a deep feeling and determination on the part of the dominant group that coeducation of the races is a thing more to be feared than the failure of democracy."

Anniversary Speaker

DR. W. E. B. DuBOIS

Separateness Means Inferiority

Negro schools supported by the state are not equal to white state-supported schools, Dr. DuBois said, because "any time that a state is compelled by higher law or by lower prejudice to embark upon a program for which it has no real liking the work will be done, at first certainly, in a cheap and slip-shod way. The separate institution will be by all standards a poor institution; poor in physical equipment, poor in cultural advantages, tempted to imitate where it cannot be real, and to boast of what it has not."

The facts that Negro institutions seldom get the best of teachers, engage in political intriques and sacrifice the welfare of the institution to personal gain were brought out by Dr. DuBois.

In the opinion of the speaker, Lincoln University should not become another University of Missouri, for 'among the great universities of America, the University of Missouri would hardly be placed among the first. It can be considered a sort of average of those plodding miscellaneous centers of crowds, dispensing an education with varying degrees of efficiency.

Challenges Lincoln

"Lincoln University has before it certain obvious differences of method and aim: it can be smaller and more compact; it can be more certain of its objectives and more definite and thorough in its method. There are certain lines of work in which it can stand out not simply in Missouri but in the United States and in the world, as a focus of research and as a place of culture and civilization for a new and evolving world."

The people at Lincoln University, Dr. DuBois said, "have an extraordinary opportunity, not so much for social limitation and social conflict; but for social invention, for planning and carrying through methods by which without hatred, agitation or upheaval, you can show the majority the way of life and in doing this you but reiterate the age-old custom that not from the overwhelming, rich and powerful groups which rule the world have come salvation and culture, but from the still small voice of the oppressed and the despised who knew more than to die, and plan more than mere survival.

See Real Chance

At Lincoln University Dr. DuBois saw "the chance of establishing a real university, a Negro university not in the sense that it is teaching Negro science or merely Negro mathematics, but in the larger and broader sense that here science and education are being so administered that the place of the Negro in the world and his relation to the body of his fellow human beings is being made clear; and a fertile starting point prepared for a democracy of human cultures which will make peace in the world not only possible but profitable for all men."

Because Negroes at American colleges and other colored people are thinking, new "unities" are evolving, Dr. DuBois continued. "These are a unity of the working classes everywhere, a unity of the colored races, a new unity of men. The proposed economic solution of the Negro problem in Africa and America has turned the thoughts of Negroes toward a realization of the fact that the modern white laborer of Europe and America has the key to the serfdom of black folk, in his support of militarism and colonial expansion."

Workmen Getting United

"He is beginning to say to these workingmen that, so long as black laborers are slaves, white laborers cannot be free. Already there are signs in South Africa and the United States of the beginning of understanding between the two classes.

"The future world will, in all reasonable probability, be what colored men make it. In order for this colored world to come into its heritage, must the earth again be drenched in the blood of fighting, snarling human beasts, or will Reason and Good Will prevail? That such may be true, the character of the Negro race is the best and greatest hope; for in its normal condition it is at once the strongest and gentlest of the races of men..

Jefferson City, Mo., Jan. 13—More than 200 guests representing churches, businesses, colleges, students and other groups throughout the state were entertained Sunday evening at a banquet held in honor of the 75th anniversary of Lincoln University. The banquet was held in the Lincoln U. cafeteria.

Harrison of Langston University; J. Ernest Wilkins, prominent Chicago lawyer, the Rev. E. W. Berlekamp and Rev. J. W. Wogelveid were among the guests.

Future Of World Will Be Whatever Colored People Make It--W. E. DuBois

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. — Propounding the optimistic conviction that "The future world will, in all reasonable probability, be what colored men make it," Dr. W. E. Burghardt DuBois, "whose voice is heard above the confusion" of a world "retreating towards disintegration", delivered a clarifying and poignant address last Sunday afternoon at a program commemorating the 75th anniversary of the founding of Lincoln University.

Dr. DuBois shared the speakers' platform with Governor Lloyd C. Stark, retiring executive of Missouri, who preceded Dr. DuBois to the rostrum, and eulogized the "constructive program of education being carried on at Lincoln" and expressed sanguine anticipation of "a glorious day of greater achievement in this institution."

Sees Segregation Idiotic

Discussing "The Future of the Negro State College", the sage of Atlanta University traced historically the evolution of those conditions which resulted in the creation of separate schools for Negroes, denounced the idea of segregated schools as being extravagant and "idiotic", said that state public school education in the South resulted from "the black votes of Reconstruction", and predicted that the Pan-African movement, which is being espoused in Negro colleges and in foreign lands, will probably bring the "colored world" to its "rightful heritage".

The internationally-famed research expert said that state public school education and that of schools like Lincoln University must be "administered by men of large vision" and that Lincoln University should be thought of as a "center where the cultural outlook of this country is to be changed and uplifted and helped in the reconstruction of the world."

Tells of College Problems

Problems facing the state system of education, under which Lincoln operates, according to DuBois, are economic and religious and are "those class distinctions based on incomes, and of racial distinctions based on physical differences, and appearances and on historical associations supported by prejudice and folk lore."

Speaking of segregated schools, Dr. DuBois said that these are a "direct contravention to that democratic equality toward which all education in the end must strive." The laws which prescribe separate schools for races "simply put into words a deep feeling and determination on the part of the dominant group that coeducation of the races is a thing more to be feared than the failure of democracy."

Separateness Means Inferiority

Negro schools supported by the state are not equal to white state-supported schools, Dr. DuBois said, because "any time that a state is compelled by higher law or by lower prejudice to embark upon a program for which it has no real liking the work will be done, at first certainly, in a cheap and slip-shod way. The separate institution will be by all standards a poor institution; poor in physical equipment, poor in cultural advantages, tempted to imitate where it cannot be real, and to boast of what it has not."

The facts that Negro institutions seldom get the best of teachers, engage in political intriques and sacrifice the welfare of the institution to personal gain were brought out by Dr. DuBois.

In the opinion of the speaker, Lincoln University should not become another University of Missouri, for 'among the great universities of America, the University of Missouri would hardly be placed among the first. It can be considered a sort of average of those plodding miscellaneous centers of crowds, dispensing an education with varying degrees of efficiency.

Challenges Lincoln

"Lincoln University has before it certain obvious differences of method and aim: it can be smaller and more compact; it can be more certain of its objectives and more definite and thorough in its method. There are certain lines of work in which it can stand out not simply in Missouri but in the United States and in the world, as a focus of research and as a place of culture and civilization for a new and evolving world."

The people at Lincoln University, Dr. DuBois said, "have an extraordinary opportunity, not so much for social limitation and social conflict; but for social invention, for planning and carrying through methods by which without hatred, agitation or upheaval, you can show the majority the way of life and in doing this you but reiterate the age-old custom that not from the overwhelming, rich and powerful groups which rule the world have come salvation and culture, but from the still small voice of the oppressed and the despised who knew more than to die, and plan more than mere survival.

See Real Chance

At Lincoln University Dr. DuBois saw "the chance of establishing a real university, a Negro university not in the sense that it is teaching Negro science or merely Negro mathematics, but in the larger and broader sense that here science and education are being so administered that the place of the Negro in the world and his relation to the body of his fellow human beings is being made clear; and a fertile starting point prepared for a democracy of human cultures which will make peace in the world not only possible but profitable for all men."

Because Negroes at American colleges and other colored people are thinking, new "unities" are evolving, Dr. DuBois continued. "These are a unity of the working classes everywhere, a unity of the colored races, a new unity of men. The proposed economic solution of the Negro problem in Africa and America has turned the thoughts of Negroes toward a realization of the fact that the modern white laborer of Europe and America has the key to the serfdom of black folk, in his support of militarism and colonial expansion."

Workmen Getting United

"He is beginning to say to these workingmen that, so long as black laborers are slaves, white laborers cannot be free. Already there are signs in South Africa and the United States of the beginning of understanding between the two classes.

"The future world will, in all reasonable probability, be what colored men make it. In order for this colored world to come into its heritage, must the earth again be drenched in the blood of fighting, snarling human beasts, or will Reason and Good Will prevail? That such may be true, the character of the Negro race is the best and greatest hope; for in its normal condition it is at once the strongest and gentlest of the races of men..

Jefferson City, Mo., Jan. 13—More than 200 guests representing churches, businesses, colleges, students and other groups throughout the state were entertained Sunday evening at a banquet held in honor of the 75th anniversary of Lincoln University. The banquet was held in the Lincoln U. cafeteria.

Mayor Jesse Owens of Jefferson City; Lloyd King, superintendent of Missouri's public schools; Dr. W. E. B. DuBois of Atlanta University; Dean Winterton Curtis of the University of Missouri; Dr. G. L. Harrison of Langston University; J. Ernest Wilkins, prominent Chicago lawyer, the Rev. E. W. Berlekamp and Rev. J. W. Wogelveid were among the guests.

Lincoln University In Unique Role Training Negro Youth Of North

Lincoln University presents an opportunity to the colored youth in America. It is situated in healthful and wholesome surroundings with a fair plant and equipment, and a well prepared and experienced faculty. It offers a college training with all that college life means to an American student. A faculty made up from both races helps to keep education from becoming propaganda for either race. The student is brought in contact with the accumulation of the ages from the human standpoint.

Lincoln presents an opportunity to the white man in America. Our fathers determined that we, the people of the United States, should be a mixed people, that the African should be here as well as the European. When they landed on these shores they decided that University education was essential to their life. Out of their poverty they established Harvard University three hundred years ago and the hundreds of colleges that followed it are the expression of the faith of the people in the college trained mind as an essential to the nation's progress.

Plight in South

When we mention the Negro, our thoughts turn automatically to the South to the million Negroes in Alabama or to an equal number in Georgia. Without drawing away the needed attention to the South, may I call to mind another million right at our doors in the three great Middle Atlantic States—New York, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania? We have more than a million Negroes.

What is their educational opportunity? Colleges and universities are scattered all over the area from Pennsylvania to Maine within easy geographical and economic reach of the ordinary youth. A few Negroes can enter them but economic and other barriers keep most out.

Reviews Statistics

The August number of the Crisis reported 161 Negro graduates in 1940 from the white institutions of the North. The economic situation presents a formidable barrier, scholarship funds are not held out as an inducement to the Negro student. If he enters, he is largely shut out from that essential part of college life which President Conant in his tercentenary address at Harvard described as the "never failing river of student life carrying all the power that comes from the gregarious impulses of human beings."

Beyond this limited opportunity, in the North the Negro has one Liberal Arts College. If we believe in education rather than ignorance, and that our own future is wrapped up with that of the Negro, we are vitally interested in a trained Negro leadership. The first necessity for this is to develop at least one well equipped institution in which the Negro youth of our own area may have advantages equal with those of other men. In our northern area there should be one college at least peculiarly their own

Lincoln Meeting Need

To meet this need, Lincoln University presents these facts. She has a plant worth three-quarters of a million dollars, an endowment of little more than a million, a history going back eighty years into pre-slavery days, a record of constructive leadership on the part of her graduates that does not suffer by comparison with the output of any college in the land, a present location with a million Negroes within a hundred miles of her doors.

The race, the country needs trained leadership in the profession and in business. Only a few can get this opportunity in the white colleges. They are not going five hundred to one thousand miles into the southland for their education. With its freer spirit and greater opportunity in the social and political fields, the leadership of the Negro people for good or ill, in ignorance or wisdom, is likely to come in greater proportion out of the North.

A former Minister of Education in Great Britain emphasized the eternal debt in education which maturity owes to youth. We owe a debt to our Negro youth which should be paid in defense of our own future as well as theirs.

DUBOIS AT LINCOLN U.

There is much "food for thought" in the address delivered by Dr. W. E. B. DuBois at the 75th anniversary of the founding of Lincoln (Mo.) University on January 12. Notwithstanding the presence of the governor of Missouri, Dr. DuBois, as usual, spoke plainly on several topics which usually are taboo for such occasions and under such circumstances. The publicity department of Lincoln is widely distributing a report of Dr. DuBois' speech and from it we publish some excerpts as follows:

Propounding the optimistic conviction that "The future world will, in all reasonable probability, be what colored men make it," Dr. William E. Burghardt DuBois, "whose voice is heard above the confusion" of a world "retreating towards disintegration," delivered a clarifying and poignant address Sunday afternoon at a program commemorating the 75th anniversary of the founding of Lincoln University.

Already there are signs in South Africa and the United States of the beginning of understanding between the two classes.

"In a conscious sense of unity among colored races there is today only a growing interest. There is slowly arising not only a curiously strong brotherhood of Negro blood throughout the world, but the common cause of the darker races against the intolerable assumptions of the Europeans has already found expression. Most men in this world are colored. A belief in humanity means a belief in colored men.

The future world will, in all reasonable probability, be what colored men make it. In order for this colored world to come into its heritage, must the earth again be drenched in the blood of fighting, snarling human beasts, or will Reason and Good Will prevail?. That such may be true, the character of the Negro race is the best and greatest hope; for in its normal condition it is at once the strongest and gentlest of the traces of men.

Lincoln U. Prof. Strives For Citizenship In Study

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo.—Perhaps the most active exponent of the Booker T. Washington philosophy of Negro life in the middle west is the tireless, friendly fellow who has developed a $47,000 plant for the purpose of teaching boys and girls to use their heads, hearts and hands.

He is a man who has direct supervision over 153 employees-teachers, skilled and unskilled workers, and assistants. What he has done was accomplished within the last three and one-half years; but what he intends to do will take a lifetime.

He is teaching boys to be good thinkers, good citizens, and good workers. Ten of the 11 boys graduated from his department are regularly employed in the vocation of their choice. MAY 10 194

When Cotton, with a B.S. degree from Hampton institute and an M.S. degree from Kansas State Teachers' college (Pittsburgh) came to Lincoln in 1937, he was the only full-time teacher of vocational courses on the Lincoln university staff.

Assigned the task of organizing a four-year course in mechanic arts Cotton worked with what equipment he had, and one year later through the sympathetic assistance of an administration struggling to advance all departments despite financial limitations, his department received equipment sufficient to allow the school to offer a B.S. degree in education with a major in industrial arts. MAY 10 1941

In the same year, 1938, Cotton was appointed head of the department, and in the fall of that year he became superintendent of buildings and grounds when Cecil F. Heariold, who held that position died.

In the spring of 1939, the separate office of superintendent of buildings and grounds was abolished and its functions were combined with those of the head of the mechanic arts departments. From his assistant professorship he was promoted to the position of associate professor, and he became director of the department. MAY 10 1941

Cotton was born in Kansas City, Kans., and received his elementary education in Kansas City, Mo., Indianopolis and Detroit. He was graduated from high school in Kansas before he went to Hampton and K. S. T. C.

Before teaching at Lincoln university, he taught at Atchison, Kans., and in Kansas City, Kans. Before he went to college and until recent years he worked in the summer as a contractor for small buildings. Now he does very little teaching because of his responsibilities as head of the mechanic arts department and superintendent of buildings and grounds.

LAW SCHOOL

The phenomenal growth of incoln (Mo.) University's mechanic arts course from a nine-student class to a 100-student department occupying all available space in the school's four-year old Damel Hall is one of the unsung, meritorious chapters in the development of Negro education and to George Robert Cotton, above, to a large degree goes the credit for it.

The American Bar association, in its annual meeting in Indianapolis, Ind., announced that the Lincoln university school of law has been given a "class A" rating. This speaks well for the faculty of a school only two years old.

Much credit belongs to Dean William E. Taylor of Lincoln whose administrative foresight as well as professional judgement enabled him to select a faculty competent to meet the academic requirements of the American Bar association.

Since this law school grew out of the refusal of the University of Missouri to admit Negro students to its law courses, we believe that the partial victory won before the Supreme Court of the United States in the Gaines case against the registrar of the University of Missouri, would be negligible in character if the faculty of the Lincoln school of law should fail to insist upon adequate facilities and equipment for further development of the institution. This is essential to its prestige if this law school is not to close its doors for lack of student enrollment.

B. T. McGraw To Study French Money Record

Missouri College Expert Directed Like Harvard Study

WASHINGTON (ANP)—Dr. Booker T. McGraw, registrar and head of the department of economics at Lincoln University in Missouri, was named consultant in charge of a research project for the price stabilization division of the National Defense Advisory Commission, under the direction of Leon Henderson, commissioner in charge, who made the appointment recently.

He is the second Negro economist engaged in defense activity in the last few weeks. The first Dr. William H. Dean, assistant professor of economics at Atlanta University, is conducting two studies for the National Resources Planning Board on the lotacion of defense industries and on national defense transportation policy.

He will direct a study designed to trace the rececnt financial experiences of France during the current European war. The study is expected to evaluate that republic's monetary policies and to disclose their defects as a possible safeguard for this country in the present national defense effort.

WELL PREPARED

Dr. McGraw directed a similar study at Harvard University and wrote his thesis there in 1939 for a Ph. D. degree on recent French economic and financial policies.

Before undertaking this study, Dr. McGraw had received an A. B. degree from Atlanta University, M. A. and M. B. A. degrees from the University of Michigan and M. A. and Ph. D degrees from Harvard.

Dr. McGraw was employed for several years in the Binga Bank in Chicago and later as an instructor in economics at Bishop College in Marshall, Texas.

L. U. STUDENTS FINAL HOME EC. BUILDING

All Construction Work on New Cottage Done by Student Labor

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. — Almost all of the construction work on the new home economics cottage at Lincoln university was done by student labor. From the initial stage of excavating to the application of the final coat of paint on the outside, young men attending the University have constituted the major working unit and have thus added a new chapter to the increasingly rich part the student plays in the life of the Jefferson City institution.

Only the heating, plumbing, electrifying, and paperhanging were done by non-students. All of the concreting flooring, footing, sanding and brick work, including that on the fire place, was the work of the L. U. young men.

In addition, they set the reinforced steel, laid the outside sewer line, painted interior and exterior, set the metal window frames, and did all of the rough and finished carpentry work, including that on the built-in cabinets.

Supervising, guiding and assisting the student workers were: G. Robert Cotton, (Director of Maintenance,) contractor; Luther W. Hatcher (Instructor in mechanic arts), foreman; Oree Connor, assistant in building construction,) foreman. They were assisted during the past summer by Mr. Smith, a teacher in brick laying at the F. T. Coles Vocational and Junior high school, Kansas City, Mo.

The new house, begun last June and now completed except for the landscaping costing about $1000.00, is located on a site formerly used as burial grounds by the Missouri State Penitentiary. Costing approximately $8,500.00, the new structure has four bedrooms to a living room, dining room, kitchen, two bath rooms and a full basement to be divided in to recreation, storage and heating rooms. The design is of latest English Colonial.

Six senior majors in home economics live in the house for nine weeks at a time under the supervision of the resident instructor, who dwells there permanently. The structure faces Dunklin Street on the East Campus.

JEFFERSON CITY, MO. July 11—There was hearty spontaneous laughter, moments of almost reverent quiet, exclamations of surprise and delight and, running through it all, a steadily mounting pride and confidence which showed itself in the intent faces of the students and teachers who made up the audience, as well as in the impulsive outburst of vigorous applause which punctuated the showing of the Atlanta Life Insurance Company's "Parade of Negro Progress" Thursday night, July 10, in Lincoln University's, Page Auditorium. For the graduate and undergraduate summer session students left no room for doubt that they had received not only bountiful entertainment, but something much more vital and satisfying from the pictures. That something was the element which expresses the guiding purpose of this record of Negro achievement brought to the Negroes of our nation as neither advertisement nor as a bare account, but as an affirmative of faith and a challenge.

The laughter came mainly when J. Richardson Jones, who was both photographer and narrator for the film, added his dry, painted commentaries to the lighter proceedings on the screen. But when it was the warm, rich voice of Marian Anderson singing "Ave Maria," Paul Robeson's always magnificent "Water Boy," Roland Hayes rendering "Hear de Lamb a Crying" and "Plenty Good Room" in that beautiful and moving tenor which touched things elemental in his listeners, or when it was the clear and lovely music of Dorothy Maynor singing "Oh Sing, Why Dost Thou Leave Me?"—then the auditorium was hushed in that breathless tribute which is beyond applause. And there was applause—plenty of it: Dr. George Washington Carver, slender and stooped, walking slowly out of his laboratory at Tuskegee, into the sunlight; Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune, dynamic and commanding, directing the activities of Bethune-Cookman College's anniversary, posing for a picture with Mrs. Roosevelt; Lincoln University's own President Scruggs presenting a gift to Mrs. Bethune from Lincoln, also celebrating an anniversary—its 75th; student aviator climbing into the sky for his solo flight at Tuskegee—there were some of the scenes that stirred the audience to immediate, audible response.

But the picture had a more practical point which was stated, elaborated upon and driven home, as scene after scene revealed what the Negro has done in business—his achievements in the office, the grocery store, the filling station, all the bread-and-butter pursuits which demand confidence and the ability to do the job better than the next man. The support of Negro business enterprises by Negroes was not urged on sentimental grounds, not even as being merely a matter of "race pride": but the relation between living standards, housing, education, churches in the Negro community and that community's patronage of its own business was as clear as the logic of the camera could make it.

Nothing that ever came out of Hollywood could have had such a direct effect upon the students and teachers who saw and heard the promise of the Negro in America as it was interpreted through Negro singers, educators, business men, doctors, storekeepers, students and laborers. To the ordinary audience for which the film city's fare is made, it would perhaps have had little significance. But on Thursday night, in Lincoln University's Page Auditorium, the "Parade of Negro Progress" found its audience.

White, Negro Centers Closed; Program For 1941-42 Still Pending

More than 500 National Youth administration employes today had been released in Greenville county as a result of the closing of all projects not dealing directly with national defense, District Supervisor A. M. Moseley announced.

Closed projects include the white residence center on West Washington street, the negro center on North Calhoun street, the Parker camp, and the service project which provided girl employes for various public offices over the county.

Although no definite arrangements have yet been announced, Mr. Moseley explained that the NYA policy hereafter will be "production and construction" for defense.

He said the defense shops and construction projects begun in the past few months in the county will be continued, and the hospital aid project classed as national defense.

Within the next two weeks, Mr. Moseley said, the federal agency will announce its 1941-42 fiscal program.

"It may mean some increase for this county and district, or it may mean further decreases," he said. "I won't know until the actual appropriations are made."

Fewer than 200 youths remain on NYA rolls in the county, it was understood.

Recently, under a consolidation program, Mr. Moseley was placed in charge of the NYA district including Greenville, Spartanburg, Cherokee, Union, Pickens, Oconee and Anderson counties. His offices have been moved to the old Stone avenue school.

NYA Allots $85,000 For Student Aid

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Aubrey Williams, Administrator of the National Youth Administration, announced this week the allocation of $85,000 for the National Youth Administration special program to aid Negro college and graduate students.

This fund is intended to provide NYA employment to needy Negro students who cannot be employed within a particular institution's quota after that institution has already made a fair allocation for students from its regular funds. In this way, higher educational opportunities will be open to a small number of students who come from sections of the country where limited facilities exist.

It is expected that more than 500,000 different students will be employed on the NYA student work program in the course of the 1941-42 school year. About 27,000 non-profit making tax exempt secondary schools and about 1700 colleges and universities will participate in this program.

Secondary school students will earn between $3 and $6 a month. College undergraduates will earn between $10 and $20 a month, and graduate students will earn between $10 and $30 a month. Individuals earnings will vary according to the number of hours worked and hourly rates of pay in the locality.

Negro NYA Workers Help On Maneuvers

Negro workers of the National Youth Administration project at Slossfield did their bit in helping to prepare for the big maneuvers in Louisiana.

More than 4,000 red arm bands to be worn by soldiers in the sham battles were made by members of the domestic sewing unit of the project, and boys in the woodwork shop produced 22 large size fly traps and 30 large cases for electric fans.

The laundry unit at Slossfield has been so successful it is soon to operate on two shifts daily, it was announced by Dr. John E. Bryan, Alabama administrator of the National Youth Administration. The laundry, which serves NYA projects and many charitable institutions, averages 7,000 pounds of laundry in a five-day period. This output is expected to jump to 15,000 pounds.

Opening of a canning project was announced by C. J. Parrish, supervisor of the project. Seventeen girls are at work canning corn, beans, beets, soup mixtures and fruits, he said. The project is planning to begin a garden in the next few weeks, the supervisor added.

Two highly successful concerts were recently presented by the Slossfield Youth Choir. One was for state and area officials of the NYA and the other was given before the Alabama state branch of Summer school teachers at Parker High School.

NEGRO IN DEFENSE

TAMPA.—Where youths between the ages of 17 and 25 are employed in National Youth Administration work, I was shocked to find Negro youths doing nothing but digging ditches, rolling wheelbarrows, etc., and a few Negro girls working in an outmoded, dilapidated Negro laundry.

There are about 500 Negro youths willing and able to enter every phase of activity of the defense program. In a time like this, when it seems that the totalitarian powers are making inroads on our democracy, can we afford to allow such conditions to exist merely on account of color? Our country needs every available ounce of energy to be employed and trained to help stop Hitler before it is too late.

Director Charges Neglect of NYA Opportunities

WASHINGTON

Opportunities to prepare for national defense jobs through NYA work experience projects are being neglected, Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune, special NYA director, charged in a statement issued last week.

Part of this neglect is due, she said, to failure of various community agencies and organizations to inform the young people of these opportunities and to urge their participation.

"The efforts being made by the NYA and by other governmental agencies to see that equitable opportunity is given colored Americans," declared Mrs. Bethune, "will bear fruit only as the colored people themselves take advantage of the opportunities offered."

Openings in Prospect

Calling attention to the "increasing tendency" of defense contract holders to lift racial bans in keeping with the President's executive order, the NYA director included a reminder that NYA work experience projects cover practically all skills required in industries where more than a half million new workers will be required by 1942.

Already, she said, ordnance plants throughout the country have indicated the intention of hiring over 2,000 colored workers within the next few months.

COLORED TRAINING SCHOOL PROPOSED

Application Made to NYA for Funds to Conduct Domestic Training Classes

Plans to organize a domestic training school for Negroes in Danville are under serious consideration G. L. H. Johnson, superintendent of schools, declared yesterday and application has been made to the National Youth Administration and the State Home Economics Division for funds with which to set up the school.

Mr. Johnson stated that the matter has been under consideration for some time and rapid progress has been made to date. The superintendent said that the matter should be settled within the next two weeks.

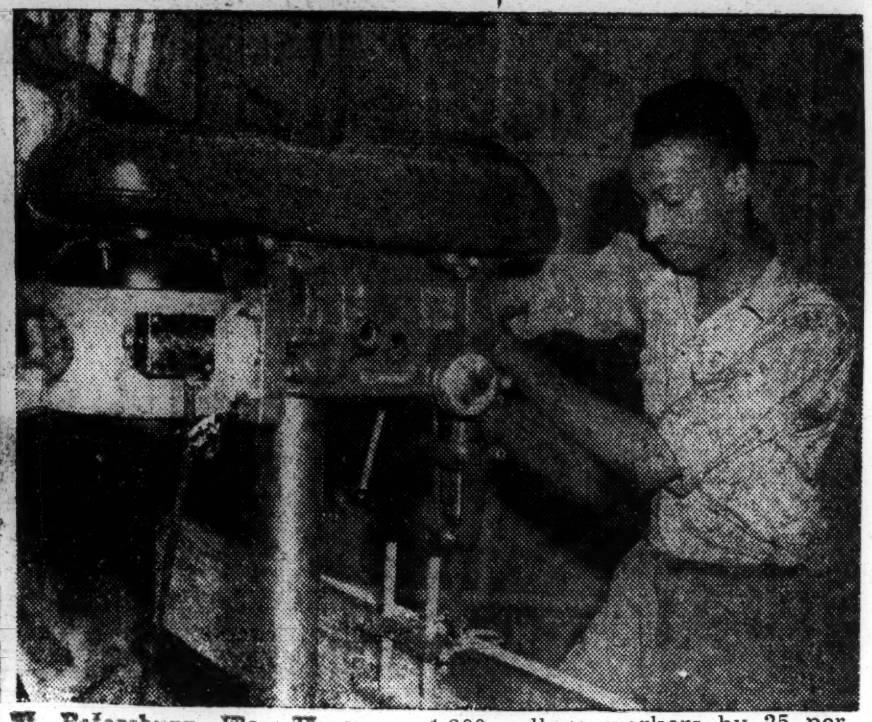
The purpose of the classes is to provide opportunities for colored persons to equip themselves for advancement in domestic work, and training will be offered in practical nursing, child nursing, cooking, hygiene and other fundamentals necessary in efficient housekeeping.

Two difficulties must be overcome, the superintendent said; first, a place must be found to hold the classes; and, second, a small amount of local funds must be provided.

Mr. Johnson said that the new school is an outgrowth of classes now being conducted at John M. Langston High School under the auspices of the NYA. Approximately 40 women are now being instructed in the afternoon courses, the superintendent continued, and the new school will follow along the general lines of these classes, though on a much larger scale.

The superintendent declared he had his eye on the old Providence Hospital building on South Main Street which the city is considering as a purchase for use as headquarters for a clinic.

SCENES OF NYA ACTIVITIEES AT JESUP



Picture to left is a youth learning to operate a drill press. Before coming to the Jesup project this boy had never been exposed to machinery of this sort. He's making good now and hopes soon to cast his lot with fellow workers in some industry vital to the defense of his nation.

Picture to right: Since arriving at the Jesup project a few months ago, this lad has helped to build and recondition barracks, shops and cabins. Now while he works, he is learning to handle with skill the steel bending brake. He works in a shop which he helped to construct and [illegible] machinery installed by youth workers at the project.

Jesup, Ga. (SNS)—Machines are humming and hammers beating against the piercing echoes of turning saws—the scene is the resident work experience center for Negro youth operated by the National Youth Administration for Georgia on the outskirts of this city.

Several months ago when a Negro CCC outfit which had been stationed in Jesup for some time was needed in another section of the state, the N. Y. A. upon the request of officials, educational leaders and citizens of Jesup and Wayne county, accepted the abandoned camp site for a Negro resident project. Prior to taking over present facilities, the NYA maintained a small part-time resident project here for Negro boys.

Today, on the expanded project almost 200 boys are receiving valuable work experience and related training in jobs designed to equip them for placement in defense industries and private employment. Units of work experience offered here include woodshop, sheet metal, construction, agriculture, laundry operation, and dietetics. As soon as shops now under construction are completed the youth will be offered work experience in welding, forging, auto mechanics and other work fields. Girls are also to be assigned to the project to gain work experience in weaving, the crafts. food preparation and additional work units identified with homemaking.

Uner a plan effected between NYA and the offce of Education, the state division of vocational education will be responsible for providing youths on this project and other projects with classes of related training.

New NYA Setup Names Reagin As District Head

TAMPA. —(AP)— Florida's new National Youth Association setup, reduced from five areas to two on orders from Washington, was outlined by Charles G. Lavin, state administrator to a gathering of officials of the new south Florida area here yesterday.

Headquarters of the new area, now comprising 34 counties instead of 14, will be in Tampa, with H. E. Spangler remaining as director. Other officials are: J. S. Allen, work projects officer; Robert L. Vaughn, finance officer; Broward Miller, student work officer; Miss Catherine Brabson, health and girls' work supervisor, Leon W. Parrish, shop supervisor, and John H. Wright Jr., negro affairs supervisor. The area has been subdivided into four districts with a local representative for each. For the local district A. T. Reagin, Tampa, was named to represent Charlotte, Collier, DeSota, Hardee, Hernando, Highlands, Hillsborough, Lee, Manatee, Pasco, Pinellas, Polk and Sarasota counties.

Lavin explained that under the reduction order, the NYA's 4,400 high school workers could be reduced by 50 per cent and the 1,200 college workers by 25 per cent.

The regular out of school program will be reduced from an average of 3,400 workers to an average of 2,100 he said. The NYA defense program will remain unchanged.

Gains Made By Negro Youth Under NYA Shown At Convention

For a program studded with distinguished white and Negro speakers from all parts of the South, hundreds of Alabama's Negro educators thronged to the Alabama State Teachers College in Montgomery last week for the fifty-ninth annual session of the Alabama State Teachers Association.

Dr. John E. Bryan, state youth administrator, National Youth Administration; Cornelius King, of Washington, assistant to the head of the Farm Security Administration, and Frank L. Grove, Montgomery, executive secretary, Alabama Education Association, were among speakers of the first-day schedule.

The part that NYA has played in rehabilitation of thousands of Negro youth of Alabama was described by Dr. Bryan. Since inauguration of NYA in 1935 special attention has been given needs of Negroes, Dr. Bryan said. "Few states have taken greater pains to reach Negro youth than this one," he pointed out.

"When this agency was created by our president," Dr. Bryan said, "thousands of Negro youth in Alabama were out of work, out of school, out of hope. The NYA has brought to these once forgotten youth a new hope and painted for them the dawn of a new day."

Supplementing the out-of-school work program, Dr. Bryan explained, is a program of related training conducted by the state department of vocational education. NYA youths are instructed in trades and skills related to those in which they are getting their work experience, and in subjects that will be of general use.

There are 3,006 Negro boys and girls employed in the out-of-school work program, and NYA is enabling 4,122 Negro boys and girls to continue theid education by paying them for work experience jobs at schools and college, Dr. Bryan said.

King spoke on "The Credit Union —a Power for Democracy and Brotherhood," and Grove's subject was "Contribution of the A. E. A. to Public Education in Alabama."

Other Thursday speakers were Mrs. Charles S. Johnson for the P.-T. A.; Dr. E. W. Taggart, Birmingham, for the A. S. T. A.; Edward Yoemans, Jr., secretary-treasurer, Southeastern Cooperative Association; Dr. Muriel Pettioni, of State Teachers College; Dr. R. L. Johns, on "Financing Public Education in Alabama."

Officers elected are J. W. Nicholson, president; R. A. Carter and T. H. McCormick, vice presidents; Felix L. Paul, executive secretary; H. C. Trenholm, research secretary; W. A. Shields, treasurer; I. A. Derbigny, T. R. Speigner and J. A. Edwards committee members.

Dr. Milton S. J. Wright, of Wilberforce University, spoke on "Government Programs for National Defense" Friday morning and a business meeting Friday afternoon concluded the convention.

NYA Head Speaks At Biltmore

Praises President Roosevelt For Humanitarianism

Dr. Mary McLeod Bethune, national director of the Negro Division of the National Youth Administration, with headquarters in Washington, D. C., held in rapt attention religious directors from 11 states Wednesday morning at 11 o'clock at the Biltmore Hotel.

Although not listed as a speaker on the program, Mrs. Bethune was honored by the Methodist Regional Conference on Higher Education with the opportunity for delivering a stirring 15-minute address in which the eminent NYA higher-up told of the board and expansive program of the National Youth Administration.

TELLS OF YOUTH NEEDS

In the more intimate phases of her speech, Mrs. Bethune told dramatically of the staggering needs of Negro youth of college and pre-collegiate age and elaborated on how President Roosevelt, with a million dollars availed for aid to colored youth called together 32 key leaders in youth training fields five odd years ago and, upon their recommendations and advices, set up the now well known NYA program.

Mrs. Bethune told of how, being summoned to head up the national program for Negro youth, she has devoted herself zealously and wholeheartedly to that dire responsibility She interpreted the NYA program to the religious leaders assembled and praised President Roosevelt for his magnanimity and broad, humanitarian spirit.

RECLINES RINGING OVATION

The universally loved and respected NYA national director received a ringing ovation at the conclusion of her brief but sincerely delivered message.

Only a fortnight ago, Mrs. Bethune resigned as pioneer president of Bethune-Cookman college, Daytona Beach, Florida, Later however under insistent pleas for a reconsideration, because her leaving would virtually jeopardize the future outlook of the institution, Mrs. Bethune withdrew her resignation.

At the present time, though it is a tremendous physical requirement Dr. Bethune is filling the dual role of national director, Negro Division NYA, and president of historic Bethune-Cookman college.

Democratic Administrator

APR 6 - 1941

MARY STUART ANDERSON, State Administrator of the National Youth Administration, in a speech at East St. Louis, gave the correct answer to the question of training Negroes for national defense industries when she said: "The constitution provides equal opportunities for Negroes. People might ask why give a Negro experience in machinery when there is no place in industry for him? The National Youth Administration answers this by saying 'we are giving Negro youth an opportunity today because national defense needs him tomorrow.' I am looking forward to the time when we shall be able to say that there are 22,000 young people working in Illinois rather than there are 5,000 Negroes on the NYA in Illinois." Her speech ought to be given to those Chicago principals of public schools and other agencies who refuse to permit colored pupils to take training on machines used in the national defense industries because, they point out, colored workers will not be hired. Defense industries take the position that they will not be hired because they are not trained. Hence, a vicious circle is created.

APR 6 - 1941

Our state NYA administrator is training youth for tomorrow. She is training all of them. Their race is not her concern. If industries refuse to hire them after they are trained she will know that no blame can attach to her. She will have done the job of preparing Americans for America's defense and in a manner consistent with the highest ideals of democracy.

NYA To Publish 'The Tenth Youth' A New Magazine

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 3—National Youth Administrator Aubrey Williams this week announced the release of a new NYA publication entitled, "The Tenth Youth."

"Every tenth youth on the National Youth Administration program is a Negro youth," Williams said. "During the last fiscal year 130,000 different Negro boys and girls were employed in NYA part-time jobs. Our most recent figures show that a total of 63,922 Negro youth were employed on our out-of-school projects during the single week ending February 22, 1941, making the number of Negro youth workers thirteen per cent of the 490,000 youth employed for this week. During December, 1939, only ten per cent of NYA youth employees were Negroes.

"It is clear, therefore, that Negro youth not only have sthared in the expansion of NYA employment in connection with National Defense but have actually increased their representation on the out-of-school work program.

"The Tenth Youth" describes the work which the National Youth Administration is doing and has done for Negro young people since the NYA was established in 1935. At the very beginning, a Division of Negro Affairs was established as an integral part of the organization to insure the integration and complete participation of Negro youth in every phase of the program. Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune, Director of the Division of Negro Affairs, and members of her staff have helped formulate the policies under which Negro young people have received a fair share of the benefits available to high school, college and graduate students and of the work experience provided for out-of-school youth to earn while they learn to work. Since the NYA program began to operate in June, 1935, about 300,000 Negro youth have received wages from the National Youth Administration for part-time work to fit them for employment in private industry.

Negro young people employed on the NYA student work program are assisting in classrooms, laboratories, museums, on research and statistical studies; working in the libraries; constructing classroom models and apparatus; and tutoring physically handicapped students.

About ten per cent of the Negro youth employed by NYA are doing clerical and general office work. About twenty per cent are serving as assistants to professional recreation and health workers. Another twenty per cent are gaining experience in various types of shop work, in woodworking, sheetmetal, auto mechanics, and machine shop practice, or making and repairing clothing.

First Lady Lauds Negroes on NYA

QUODDY VILLAGE, Me.—Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt told the officials of the famed youth government of the National Youth Administration's largest resident work-experience centre, located in this model community, that the vocational opportunities for Negroes were improved, when the First Lady visited the centre on Saturday, June 21, as the guest of the young officials. Three Negro youths, two of them recently chosen officials of the youth government, had prominent roles in the welcome accorded Mrs. Roosevelt by the NYA youths.

Mrs. Roosevelt was welcomed to the centre by the mayor of the village, Allan Blanchard, Cambridge, Vermont, enrollee, and was presented to the village council, called together in special session to greet her. The taking up of routine council business waived by the careful use of parliamentary procedure by the civic-trained young men, Councilman John Anderson, of Salem, Mass., asked that a scroll, made by NYA workers and inscribed with the symbolic poem, "Opportunity," be presented to Mrs. Roosevelt. The mayor asked Council Clerk Cecil Peterson, of 535 Edgecomb Avenue, New York City, a radio trainee, to present the scroll to the President's wife. After Peterson had proudly handed the scroll to Mrs. Roosevelt, Councilman George Greene, of [illegible] Copeland Street, Roxbury, Mass., a machine shop worker, rose to ask that the floor be granted to Alexander Clinton, of 57 Aberdeen Street, Stamford, Conn., a cafeteria trainee, and the president of the recently formed Dr. Bethune Young Men's Club of the centre.

NYA And Defense Training

CONSIDERABLE credit is due the National Youth Administration for its policies concerning the courses of training it has given persons desirous of finding jobs in the defense industries. The NYA has maintained that there would be no discrimination on the basis of race or color in its effort to train workers for the preparedness program. It took this position from the very beginning and has consistently maintained such an attitude.

No NYA executive has been more outspoken in these regards than Mary Stuart Anderson, Illinois administrator. Recently, at East St. Louis, she told a group to "Give Negro youth training today because national defense needs them tomorrow." She has taken the position that any of her subordinates who do not share her view with respect to full and unlimited opportunity for persons of all races in the NYA set-up may submit their resignations with full assurance that they will be accepted.

This attitude is consistent with the Presidential order asking defense industries to cease and desist racial discrimination. The NYA training program will short-circuit the excuse of some concerns that Negroes are not hired because they are unable to do the work. The NYA training center located at 153 West Huron street, has provided the answer for that excuse as is attested by qualified colored men who have received training in machine shop work, moulding, and other phases of work useful in the manufacture of materials to defend our shores.

It has not passed our notice that while the NYA had a program of preparing persons of all races to work in the defense industries many other institutions obtaining support from public funds denied Negroes the opportunity to obtain such training or discouraged them. The ostensible reason was based on the assertion that defense industries would not hire them even if they were trained. Therefore, they reasoned, why train Negroes?

Thanks to the broad and liberal policies of the National Youth Administration which will, without doubt, go far toward the realization of the hopes of American Negroes to be fully integrated in the national defense program. It will go further than this. It will aid in building a healthy and more tolerant attitude on the part of white workers toward colored employees. It will make for national unity.

Putting Young Folks To Work

As the National Youth Administration hits full stride in the defense program, projects are being set up to fit young men and women for production work in defense industhies. The objective is not so much turning out finished workers, but rather developing the initial skills in youth, it was explained by Alabama State NYA Administrator John E. Bryan.

One of the largest work projects in Alabama will be at Auburn, where work experience will be given to 375 young men at least 17 years old and not more than 24, who are out of school and in need of work. Applications may be made at any NYA office in the state, location of which may be learned at court houses, from school superintendents, and from offices of the Alabama State Employment Service. NYA youth personnel representatives travel in each county and spend one-half day each week at each application office.

Young men admitted to the Auburn project will live at Graves Center, a group of 30 buildings adjoining the campus of Alabama Polytechnic Institute, and A. P. I. shops will be used for the work. Teachers of the vocational division of the State Department of Education will instruct the youth in subjects related to the work they are to do.

Another large project is being opened at Holtville, 26 miles north of Montgomery. One shop has been completed, another is under construction, and a third will be built later. Youths assigned to the project also will construct a mess hall in addition to receiving work experience in sheet metal work, welding and wood work.

At present youths working at Holtville represent the following counties: Chilton, Coosa, Tallapoosa, Chambers, Dallas, Autauga, Elmore, Lee, Russell, Macon, Bullock, Montgomery, and Lowndes. Other counties may be added soon, Dr. Bryan said.

* * * *

Proof that the NYA is giving valuable work experience to its young men and women is found in a survey which discloses that in the five months ended June 30, a total of 1,659 NYA youths in Alabama found private employment. Throughout the nation, the survey reveals, 151,949 young men and women moved on to other work, many of them in defense industries.

* * * *

Girls, too, are doing their part in the defense work right along with the "stronger sex." At the Boys' Work Center in Birmingham, a score of young women are working in the machine shop, sheet metal shop, wood shop and the radio department, doing the same work, even heavy manual labor in some instances, as the boys.

* * * *

Praise of the work done by Negro NYA workers on the building of the Waterman Technical School at Murphy High School in Mobile is contained in a letter written to the state office by the project supervisor. The supervisor says it is the boys' aim to make the project a monument to the NYA, which he terms a "worthy cause."

* * * *

A recent survey of projects showed the Escambia Board of Education was sponsoring the largest exclusive NYA paint shop in the state. The board, too, is the first in Alabama to put its painting on a county-wide basis exclusively as a NYA project.

Alabama Is Allocated $409,623 To Operate NYA Student Program

Youths To Have Part-Time Work And Study Remainder Of Period

Alabama will receive $409,623 from the $21,088,125 allocated for operation of the National Youth Administration student work program, which will aid approximately 500,000 needy students over the United States during the 1941-42 school year.

Aubrey Williams, national NYA administrator, announced the allocation in Washington Saturday. The Associated Press reported. Of the amount appropriated to Alabama, $236,013 will be used for the secondary work program and $173,610 for college and graduate work.

The fund will provide part-time work for youths between 16 and 24. The amount was more than $5,000,000 less than allocated last year, the agency explaining that Congress had reduced NYA funds.

Secondary school students will earn $3 to $6 a month. These students comprise about 75 per cent of those aided, and the money is used for car fare, clothing, books and lunches.

College undergraduates will earn between $10 and $20 a month, and graduate students $10 to $30.

Williams also announced allocation of $85,000 for the NYA special program to aid Negro college and graduate students.

Among the allocations by state, for the secondary work program and for college and graduate work, were:

Arkansas, $160,851 and $93,825; Florida, $132,640 and $108,000; Georgia, $265,698 and $207,225; Louisiana, $181,744 and $209,520; Mississippi, $156,748 and $127,845; New Hampshire, $33,530 and $53,730; South Carolina, $174,864 and $161,595; Tennessee, $238,777 and $194,265.

$18,000 IN NYA FUNDS PROVIDED IN MEMPHIS

Memphis school students will receive $18,800 in NYA funds this year for in-school jobs or student aid, Ernest Ball, superintendent of the city school system, said yesterday.

Breaking down this figure, this means that 233 white students will receive a total of $1398 a month and 117 negro students may obtain $702 monthly, Mr. Ball explained. Students 16 years old and over are eligible to receive from $3 to $6 a month, which helps cover carfare, lunches and other expenses.

Since there are about twice as mand demands for NYA jobs as there are placements, Mr. Ball said he has spread the allotment over as great a number of students as possible. Applicants are assigned to office work, science laboratories, libraries and cafeterias.

Brands N.Y.A. Irregularity Report As 'Smear' Campaign

Report Tends to Arouse Wrath of Southern Congressmen—Viewed As Direct Challenge to Mrs. Bethune

By ALVIN E. WHITE

WASHINGTON, Oct. 16—(ANP)—"The recent report against the NYA charging irregularities is merely an attempt to smear NYA," said Verne Kuhne, speaking for Aubrey Williams, Thursday afternoon in the NYA headquarters in this city when questioned by an ANP representative on the status of the charges given wide publication in local papers the previous day.

"The first we knew of the report was when we read of it in the papers," said Mr. Kuhne, "and we are not in a position to say anything much about it." First, we would have to see the report and study it.

The report submitted by Lindsay C. Warren of North Carolina, the new controller-general of the United States, charges "numerous irregularities and questionable transactions" touched the Negro question when it included in a categorical denouncement, "13-aviation school for Negroes in Chicago taken over by the NYA."

Mr. Kuhne said the matter immediately was referred to the Illinois authorities for a complete investigation, pending the full report and nothing was available at this time, either in defense or denial of the activities.

BELIEVED RAP AT RACE TRAINING

Going into the matter at some length, it would seem that the whole report was built with an idea of rousing the wrath of the southern bloc of representatives and senators who oppose anything representing any progress on the part of the colored citizenry of the country.

The whole matter seems to be a well-defined plan to discredit the Negroes in the NYA and an effort to curtail the benefits they have been receiving lately as a result of liberal-minded persons who see in the training program of the NYA the salvation of the young Negro in the United States.

Some seem to feel that the charges are a direct challenge to the popularity and power of Mrs. Mary McLeod-Bethune and see in the hidden charges direct accusations at the actions of the head of the Negro division.

But her supporters have rallied to the cause immediately and declare that there is nothing in the charges which directly or indirectly affect the stand she has taken for her people in the administration and they further promise a bitter battle should the integrity of Mrs. Bethune be questioned or assailed.

TO DROP 4200 YOUTH FROM NYA PROGRAM

Forty-two hundred and eighteen Illinois youth gaining experience on the regular out-of-school work program of the National Youth Administration will be dropped from the rolls of that federal agency between now and December 1, it was announced today by State NYA Administrator Mary Stuart Anderson. The action was necessary, it was stated, as a result of the recent impounding by the U. S. Bureau of Budgets of $24,400.000 of NYA funds.

Approximately one-quarter of the youth affected are Chicago young men and women gaining work habits and basic skills in anticipation of jobs in private employment, Administrator Anderson said. The retrenchment in youth personnel amounts to $94,837.50 per month. with an added saving of $31,612.50 per month on supplies and supervisory personnel.

Illinois Hard Hit

A corresponding cut in administration costs was announced by the Illinois NYA head, who declared that throughout the state full-time personnel with combined salaries of $41,767 monthly would be terminated. Of this sum, $5,800 per month will come off the administrative payroll of the state NYA office in Chicago; $17,000 monthly in personnel services will be eliminated from the NYA area offices at Rockford, Galesburg, Springfield, Decatur, E. St. Louis, Herrin, Mt. Vernon, Chicago Heights and Chicago and project supervision on the regular out-of-school work program throughout the state will be decreased by $18,900 monthly.

"Beginning at once the NYA for Illinois will bend every effort to improving its youth work defense program, pointed at preparing youth for jobs in defense industries," said Administrator Anderson. "At present there are 7,544 youth, of which 2,679 are young women, on payrolls gaining the practical experience they need to take their places in our industrial defense front lines. That figure will be maintained or slightly increased.

NYA Plays A Vital Role In Aid To Negro Youth, State Leader Asserts

In Few Places Has More Been Done Than In Alabama, Dr. Bryan Says

The part the National Youth Administration has played in the rehabilitation of thousands of Negro youths in this state was described to Negro teachers of Alabama at their convention in Montgomery Thursday by Dr. John E. Bryan, state youth administrator for the NYA.

Speaking before the Negro Teachers Association of Alabama, Dr. Bryan said that since the National Youth Administration was inaugurated in the Summer of 1935 special attention has been given the needs of Negroes. "Few states," he said, "have taken greater pains to reach Negro youth than this one."

Back on the fringe of that dark era when this agency was created by President Roosevelt, thousands of Negro youths in Alabama were out of work, out of school and out of hope," Dr. Bryan declared. "The National Youth Administration has brought to these once-forgotten youths a new hope and painted for them on an erstwhile black horizon the dawn of a new day."

The administrator stated that the NYA program was divided into two divisions. In one, useful work experience is given to youths out of school and in need of jobs. In the other, youths in schools and colleges who need more money to continue their educations are given various kinds of jobs in these places.

Supplementing the out-of-school work program is a program of related training conducted by the State Department of Vocational Education, Dr. Bryan explained. In this phase of the program, NYA youths are given instructions in trades and skills related to those in which they are getting work experience. Instruction also is given in subjects that will be of general use to the youth and particular emphasis is placed on the building of better citizenship, the teachers were told.

He said 5,156 Negro youths were awaiting assignment to NYA projects. It is necessary, however, to keep the quota within a certain limit because of the appropriation for the program allowed by Congress, the administrator said.

The NYA is enabling 4,122 Negro boys and girls to continue their education by paying them for work experience jobs at schools and colleges, Dr. Bryan reported. Alabama, he said, has 549 Negro schools participating in the program and nine Negro colleges.

OFFICIALS SAY STUDENTS IN 30 SCHOOLS AIDED

100 GIRLS EMPLOYED

Some 30 schools are taking part in the hot lunch program sponsored by the local district of the National Youth association, it was announced yesterday by NYA officials. More than 100 girls are being employed by the government to handle and prepare the food which is given the schools by the WPA and the Federal Surplus Commodities corporation.

ALL SCHOOLS HELPED

Both grammar schools and high schools are receiving the benefit of the expanded program, officials said. At the present more than 40 applications from schools of this district, which includes Greenville and Pickens counties, are in the hands of officials.

Pickens was reported to be ahead of Greenville county in applications and in schools receiving the benefits. However, officials said they expected the total in this county to increase rapidly in the next few days.

The project, started a few years ago by the WPA was dropped rapidly in the past few years until a law was passed giving the NYA permission to take up where the WPA had left off. The girls preparing and serving the food have been carefully selected and are required to have food handler permits, officials said. Both white and negro girls are being employed and the lunches are being served in both white and negro schools.

Included among the schools now receiving the services are New Pilgrim near Simpsonville, Golden Grove near Pelzer, Chapman's Grove, near Pelzer, the negro school at Welcome, the negro school of Simpsonville, Jordan school near Greenville, Flat Rock near Piedmont, St. Albans negro school near Simpsonville, St. Albans white school, Judson mill grammar school and Berea in Greenville county while in Pickens county the Croswell grammar school of Croswell, Norris negro school, Maynard school near Easley, Mile Creek near Pickens, New Hope at Pendleton, the Pickens mill school, Central high school and grammar school, Central high school and grammar school for negro students, Pickens negro school, Simpson school near Easley and Mount Tabor school near Central are being served.

For a program studded with distinguished white and Negro speakers from all parts of the South, hundreds of Alabama's Negro educators thronged to the Alabama State Teachers College in Montgomery last week for the fifty-ninth annual session of the Alabama State Teachers Association.

Dr. John E. Bryan, state youth administrator, National Youth Administration; Cornelius King, of Washington, assistant to the head of the Farm Security Administration, and Frank L. Grove, Montgomery, executive secretary, Alabama Education Association, were among speakers of the first-day schedule.

The part that NYA has played in rehabilitation of thousands of Negro youth of Alabama was described by Dr. Bryan. Since inauguration of NYA in 1935 special attention has been given needs of Negroes, Dr. Bryan said. "Few states have taken greater pains to reach Negro youth than this one," he pointed out.

"When this agency was created by our president," Dr. Bryan said, "thousands of Negro youth in Alabama were out of work, out of school, out of hope. The NYA has brought to these once forgotten youth a new hope and painted for them the dawn of a new day."

Supplementing the out-of-school work program, Dr. Bryan explained, is a program of related training conducted by the state department of vocational education. NYA youths are instructed in trades and skills related to those in which they are getting their work experience, and in subjects that will be of general use.

There are 3,006 Negro boys and girls employed in the out-of-school work program, and NYA is enabling 4,122 Negro boys and girls to continue theid education by paying them for work experience jobs at schools and college, Dr. Bryan said.

King spoke on "The Credit Union —a Power for Democracy and Brotherhood," and Grove's subject was "Contribution of the A. E. A. to Public Education in Alabama."

Officers elected are J. W. Nicholson, president; R. A. Carter and T. H. McCormick, vice presidents; Felix L. Paul, executive secretary; H. C. Trenholm, research secretary; W. A. Shields, treasurer; I. A. Derbigny, T. R. Speigner and J. A. Edwards committee members.

Dr. Milton S. J. Wright, of Wilberforce University, spoke on "Government Programs for National Defense" Friday morning and a business meeting Friday afternoon concluded the convention.

Putting Young Folks To Work

As plans mature for training of young Alabamians in the national defense program, the National Youth Administration quota for the state has been stabilized at 11,000, according to announcement this week by Dr. John E. Bryan, State Youth Administrator.

This stabilization has been thought necessary with the report that Congress is considering the reducing of the Nation's appropriation for NYA by $10,000,000.

This cut is in a supplementary appropriation of $32,000,000 (reducing it to $22,000,000(to the regular annual appropriation, a supplement adopted because of the extensive defense program being carried out throughout the United States.

In the state of Alabama at the present time, 11,916 young persons are busy at their NYA jobs, gaining work experience and a salary, training by the vocational division of the State Department of Education, and producing for the good of the community. Of these, 6,673 are boys and 5,243 are girls, all between the ages of 16 and 25.

At the present, 12.927 young persons are on roll waiting for assignment. Of these, 5,219 are boys and 7,708 are girls.

Dr. J. B. Hobdy, Director of Vocational Education for the state department of education, at a joint meeting of vocational educational and NYA officials held in Birmingham last week, announced that between 4,000 and 5,000 NYA young people are taking advantage of the offer of related training in various subjects.

According to Dr. Hobdy, 210 vocational classes have been established by the vocational education department to train NYA youth in their after work hours. Though optional, the free classes are being well attended. Forty more are in the process of being set up.

In Culman County NYA girls are appearing in lunch rooms of schools in all parts of the country with the launching this week of a new project. The girls are busy preparing and serving meals, making uniforms and table linen, all to the advantage of the county's school children.

At Knterbish Elementary school for Negroes, Cuba, in Sumter County, a two classroom frame addition is being built by NYA boys, And in Roanoke, in Randolph County, a three-room addition is to be made to the vocational building for Negroes at a total cost of $5,500 of which $3,756 is being furnished by NYA. Both these projects are newly approved by Washington.

NYA Work Open To Negro Girls

Area Supervisor Milton F. Nardin announced today that there were openings for four Negro girls at the Colored Girls Resident Center at Chester.

Those interested from Oconee are urged to make application at the City Hall in Seneca on Tuesday. Girls accepted will be trained in various phases of domestic service. They will get room and board and nominal pay while learning. The minimum period for training is three months.

"There is no program of any sort in Oconee County for Negro girls," Mr. Nardin stated, "and for that reason I feel that applicants from Oconee will stand an excellent chance of being accepted for the Chester training."

COLORED PEOPLE TRYING TO BUILD SCHOOL BUILDINGS ENDORSED BY OSWALT

At the present time NYA is spending considerable money in labor and foremanship in school building projects. The colored people have only one two-year high school in the county and they need one or two four-year high schools with vocational work training in agriculture, shop work and home economics for girls, with special emphasis on cooking and child care.

It looks as if they can get one or two of these buildings if they can raise money sufficient for building materials and get land donated for them. They are making this effort and I think it is highly commendable. I am assisting in making plans and will sponsor the building of shops and vocational buildings if it is possible to get the money for materials.

These buildings and this work will be valuable to all the county and will not require tax money to build them.

Assuring the public of my interest in this work and a businesslike use of any funds donated to them.

Respectfully submitted,
FRANK OSWALT,
County Supt. of Education.

NEW TRAINING CENTER FOR NEGROES PLANNED

New Bern, April 12.—Subject to approval by NYA authorities in Raleigh and Washington, plans are being made for the early establishment near this city of a $100,000 NYA rural training center for 100 to 200 Negro youths from counties throughout the eastern part of the State.

About 300 acres of land on Highway 17 about five miles south of here have been leased by the county for the purpose. Free electric current will be provided by the city.

The main objective of the agricultural center will be to encourage Negro boys and girls to return to farms and to train them in scientific agriculture and kindred vocations. Individual units will be arranged for practical experience. Each youth will be allowed a salary of $30 a month during the training period. Farm work will be supervised by NYA specialists, with other training under the supervision of the vocational education department. The entire project is considered of importance from a standpoint of national defense.

Advisory Committees Of NYA Will Bolster Work In State

Judge Moore, Of Fayette, Will Head Group Being Formed To Study Problems Of Youth

Youth's shoulder, already to the wheel of the national defense program, is to receive further support through the organization of advisory committees of the National Youth Administration in every community of Alabama. A nucleus of this statewide organization is to be a state advisory committee of the NYA which was formed last week at a meeting at the Tutwiler Hotel.

Probate Judge J. M. Moore, of Fayette, was chosen chairman of the state committee, and C. C. Moseley, representing education, was elected vice chairman.

Youth is represented on the committee by Frank Dominick, of Birmingham-Southern College, and Joe Bill Knowles, of Headland, now attending Auburn, president of the State Future Farmers of America.

Other members are W. D. Moore, president of the American Cast Iron Pipe Company; John Gill, of Mobile, C. & M. Railroad official, both of whom represent business and industry on the committee; B. Otto Boyd, of Montgomery, representing labor; Haygood Paterson, state commissioner of agriculture; Alexander Nunn, editor of The Progressive Farmer, and J. C. Ford, coordinator of Negro work of the Alabama Extension Service, representing agriculture.

J. S. Lambert, director of the Division of Education, State Department of Education; J. A. Keller, president of State Teachers College, Florence; Dr. Richard C. Foster, president of the University of Alabama; Frazer Banks, assistant superintendent of Birmingham public schools, and C. C. Moseley, superintendent of Anniston schools, all representing education.

Mrs. Walter Will Bankhead, of Jasper, and W. T. Perry, of Ozark, represent social welfare, and Mrs. Frank Dixon, the state's first lady, and Judge Moore, of Fayette, health.

Other members are to be announced by Dr. John E. Bryan, state youth administrator for the NYA in Alabama.

In a welcome to the members present at the organization meeting, Dr. Bryan observed that if youth is to bear the brunt of the present emergency, it is imperative to know what youth is doing and thinking about and to obtain a proper understanding of what youth thinks should be done about its problems. The local advisory committees, he pointed out, can serve in helping to make these discoveries.

"I hope you will undertake to do whatever you can to help the youth of your communities do their part in strengthening the national defense program," he told the state advisory committee.

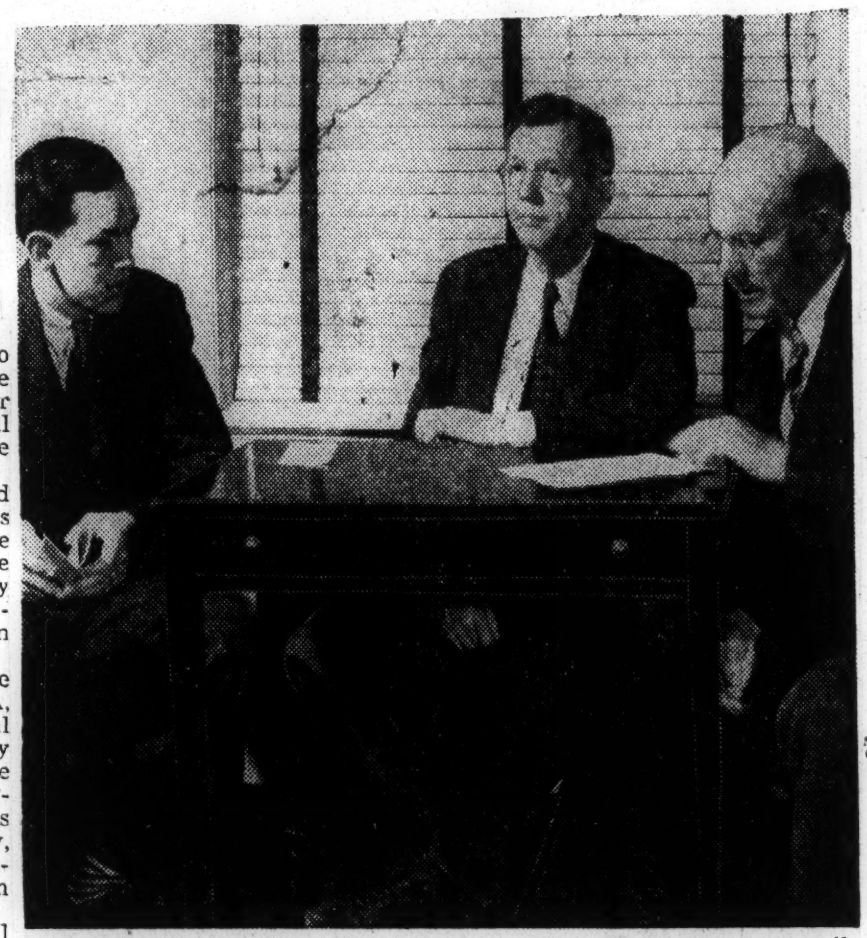
Probate Judge Moore announced he had already taken steps in this direction through a questionnaire sent 200 youths in the Fayette community asking them what they think youth can do in their respective communities to strengthen the program of national defense.

Mrs. Lucey R. D. Ficklen, of the Memphis regional office of NYA, who is representing the national advisory committee appointed by President Roosevelt, stressed the need for helping to solve the long-term problems of youth as well as the present ones. With this in view, she explained, it was decided to extend the advisory committee plan to every community.

All recommendations of the local advisory committees of a worthwhile nature will reach the national committee through the state advisory committee, Mrs. Ficklen assured the committee.

A subcommittee composed of Judge Moore, Mr. Ford and Mr. Dominick was appointed to work out a statewide program.

A motion picture entitled "Jobs, Not Handouts," showing NYA activities in various parts of the country, was presented at the conclusion of the meeting.



NYA COMMITTEE MEETS—Organization of a state advisory council for the National Youth Administration Friday had been perfected after a meeting at the Tutwiler Hotel. Civic leaders and youth will serve on the committee, advising NYA officials on the needs of youth in Alabama.

FINAL DRIVE BEGUN FOR NYA DONATIONS

Anniston Negroes Boost Beginning Of Project

A final financial drive, staged in an effort to raise $600 necessary as Anniston's part for the establishment of a $75,000 Negro National Youth Administration center at Margaret Barber Seminary, will begin tomorrow and close Tuesday night, treasurers boosting the project announced today.

This committee is made up of Lucius Fleming, financial chairman, E. Julius Williams, acting financial secretary, and Margaret Jackson, financial treasurer.

The committee has asked that all pledges to the NYA fund be paid during this two-day period. However, it stressed that contributions should be given only to solicitors certified by the financial committee.

In announcing the drive, the committee paid tribute to a local company for its support. They said: "The financial committee wishes to thank the managers and employes of the Anniston Pipe Corporation for their moral and financial support. We would have accomplished but little without their aid."

In explaining the purpose of the NYA project which is proposed and which will teach Negro youth various home and industrial trades, the committee stated that "we should not forget that this is not a race institution but a public benefactor . . . thousands of dollars each month will be spent in the county and city to help raise the moral, economic and industrial standard of boys and girls of our group, making them self-reliant and conscious of their debt to society."

The financial committee has also announced that on July 20 a county-wide "Tag Day" will be observed. At this time every Negro boy and girl, out of school, between the ages of 16 and 25, will be expected to register with NYA officials, presenting their social security cards if they possess them.

LITTLE BUSINESS FOR COMMISSION

Negro NYA Program Remains In Questionable State

After an all-morning session with Public Works Administration officials, City Commissioners W. S. Coleman, P. A. Quinn and Arthur Lee experienced a meeting with little business yesterday afternoon.

An appeal for an extension of his license was heard from C. R. Allison, convicted last week of faulty plumbing practices, but commissioners delayed action on the case until they can investigate the facts.

J. W. Truitt was granted permission to sell soft drinks and ice cream for six months, and because of his financial difficulties, the commissioners agreed to allow him to pay for his license at the rate of $1 a month for four months.

Sibyl Moses, Negro civic worker, addressed the city officials in regard to the establishment of a $75,000 NYA project here. Before the establishment of the project, government requirements are that $150 to $200 must be assured for monthly maintenance costs. The city had previously agreed to give $100 a month providing the county did likewise. The County Board, however, stated that it could only contribute $50 each month. The commissioners said yesterday that they would meet any proposition of the county's and advised Sibyl Moses to appeal to the County Board again.

The commissioners met yesterday morning with national defense officers, establishing priority rights for the construction of public work projects in Anniston.

National Youth Administration in Illinois Goes "All Out" to Prepare Negro Youths to Take their Rightful Place in Industry—4,604 Benefit.

CHICAGO, May 1.—(Special for The Courier)—Leading the nation in giving work experience to Negro youth, the National Youth Administration in Illinois has a total Negro employment of more than 20 per cent of its youth personnel, according to a report made public today by State NYA Administrator Mary Stuart Anderson.

In Chicago, second largest city in the United States, where the total population is approximately 3,500,000, Negro youth employed by NYA is predominantly higher, currently ranging from 40 to 45 per cent of the total number of youth on the program, the report shows. This is an indication, Administrator Anderson said, that the NYA has taken proper cognizance of the fact that the larger Negro population in Chicago, in keeping with the total population figure, requires greater representation on its youth rolls, than in other sections of the State.

4,604 BEING GIVEN TRAINING IN ILLINOIS

For Illinois as a whole, Negro youth receiving NYA work experience on the program aggregate 4,604, a figure which represents more than one-fifth of the total. This ratio compares more than favorably with the national figure which gives the number of Negro youth employed at the recent compilation as only 13.2 per cent of all youth employed all over the nation.

Of the total of 4,604 Negro youth working for NYA in Illinois, 2,610 are boys and 1,194 are girls, a breakdown of the figures shows. The largest number on one project, 2,604, of which 1,722 are boys and 883 are girls, are receiving work experience in workshops and other semi-skilled and skilled production work. Their activities are designed to give job experience in vocations predominant in industries engaged in national defense manufacturing.

The second highest number, 649, are receiving training in clerical assistance. Recent demands by tax-supported agencies for the services of NYA youth indicate a sudden upturn in the number of young people needed to fill celrical jobs due to the national defense program, Miss Anderson pointed out.

opportunities can only be fought for, if our people are prepared.

Dr. Mary McLeod Bethune is Director of office of Negro Affairs of the NYA.

Third highest among the occupations in which Negro youth are gaining work experience is the preparation and serving of lunches to school children with 282 thus engaged. Predominating in this work are 202 girls. One hundred and sixty-three, mostly boys, are engaged in supervising outdoor recrational facilities while 154 are doing the same type of work indoors.

MAY 3 - 1941

Experience in nursery school assistance is being given 136 while 134 are gaining experience in public health and hospital work. Arts and related crafts occupy the attention of 174.

NEGRO YOUTHS BEST IN SILK SCREEN REPRODUCTION

A feat of which Administrator Anderson is proud was the X-raying of more than 1,300 NYA youth for tuberculosis at the Chicago work experience center in one day by Negro girls assigned to the health project.

Among the best operators in the silk screen reproduction department in the Chicago work experience center, largest of its kind in the middle west, are the Negro youth employed on the project. An occupation that is closely allied to art, only those with a natural bent for precision and artistic work make good on this project.

Indicative of the many fine skills in which Negro youth are given training in Illinois NYA work experience centers is that offered in the woodworking shops. Woodshop experience ranges rom cutting mortises in parts for chairs to gluing materials together and spraying the finished product with lacquer.

The machine shops are providing opportunities to Negro youth to fit themselves with proper work habits and attitudes for future employment in some of the most vital of national defense industries. Among the large production orders on which Negro youth are working in the Chicago work experience center machine shop is one for artillery parts for the United States army.

WHEN THEY FINISH, THEY'RE GETTING JOBS

cupations in connection with national defense in which Negro youth are being trained are welding and use of the acetylene torch in the sheet metal shop. For the girls, power sewing is a popular occupation and some of the best operators turned out by this project have bene snapped up for employment in private industry.

Improvement in the situation of jobs in private industry for Negro youth in recent weeks is seen in the fact that six Negroes employed in the welding shop of the Chicago work experience center have landed outside jobs. Another important phase of Negro activity on NYA in the Chicago area, largest in Illinois in point of population, is the Chicago resident center where some sixty youth specialize in automobile mechanics and related aviation mechanics.

Second largest in Illinois in point of Negro youth on the program is Illinois area seven which takes in East St. Louis and surrounding territory of the State. Approximately 1,100 Negro youth are gaining work experience on the program in this area. Of the total, 900 are employed in the centers situated in Madison, Lovejoy and East St. Louis. In the East St. Louis center 40 of the Negro youth have left NYA in the last six weeks for jobs in private industry which were obtained as a result of their NYA training.

EAST ST. LOUIS SET-UP PRODUCTIVE

Four buildings house the major centrs in East St. Louis where production gains are being registered in woodworking, sheet metal and sewing. Office furniture has become a specialty of the youth in the woodworking shops while the sewing project is kept employed to the limit of its capacity through cooperation of the township relief officials. Items produced in the sewing department include dresses, play suits, uniforms for workers, pillow cases and smocks.

Headed by a graduate of one of the leading trade schools of the nation, the machine shop in the East St. Louis center is making rapid strides of progress, according to area officials. While production is not up to the same standard reached by the woodworking, sewing and sheet metal shops, the machine shop is fast becoming an important factor in giving a number of Negro youth basic training and experience to operate machines sufficiently well to get them jobs in private industry, according to report of NYA area heads.

PUTTING YOUNG FOLKS TO WORK

Young men and women on the National Youth Administration resident project at Jacksonville are setting an employment pace that's hard to bead. And, incidently, they're aiding the Army.

In the past three months a total of 48 youth who received work experience on the project found job for themselves—at considerably increased salaries.

Twenty-four of them are now working at nearby Fort McClellan as clerks, hospital aids, librarians, swithcboard operators, landscap laborers and one is an Army hostess.

Some of them are earning salaries of $120 or more, putting them on a secure footing of economic indepedence. As NYA workers they made $30 a month, from which $ 18 was deducted for their subsistence.

A great many of these now working at Fort McClellan received their work experience at the Army camp, and were then accepted for regular employment. Girls from the project do a variety of clerical, lunchroom and hospital work at Fort McClellan in order that they may gain the necessary experience.

Boys on the project get experience in the machine shop, at woodworking, as assistant bakers, laborers, drivers, painters, and clerks—also predominately at Fort McClellan.

National Youth Administration officials have given approval for construction of three projects at Camden, Elba, and Gilbertown.

They are a community building for Negroes at Camden, $3,500; a workshop addition to the Elba High School, $500, and a standard wrokshop at Gilbertown, $5,000 for constructionand $5,000 for equipment.

NYA canning projects will be operated in Fayette, Lamar, Cherokee and Talladega Counties this Summer, final approval having been given by National Youth Administration officials.

White girls employed as NYA workers will can fruits, meats and vegetables on equipment set up by the NYA in Fayette, Lincoln, Winterboro, Vernon and over to the Boards of Education in the various counties to be used in feeding indigent children during the next school year.

Negroes and NYA Jobs

A report from the local NYA headquarters that some 8000 new workers will be added to the payroll before February 1 ought to be good news for Harlemites. We urge all those persons in need of work to apply at the nearest office since it is further reported that the rolls are being increased by something like 400 each day.

Provision for the employment of these youths was made possible through the recent allotment of $1,813,892 to the local NYA under the First Supplementary Civil Functions Appropriations Act. Soon there will be openings for 1000 youths in the construction and repair of radio transmitting, receiving and amplifying apparatus. Eligibility requirements are that the youth be out of school and unemployed; within the ages of 18 and 24 inclusive; actively registered with the New York State Employment Service and willing to sign an oath of allegiance to the United States government. Young people, 17 years of age, who are high school graduates, are also eligible. Officials of the local NYA have given assurance that there will be no discrimination in the assigning of these jobs. Again, we say this ought to be good news.

NYA in Mobile has a 36 piece Negro band. None of the boys could play when the orchestra was started in August by Edward Lancaster, Negro musician. But they used discarded instruments from the army and navy and on January 18, they were able to give a concert at the YMCA. Negro girls sang spirituals to the accompaniment of some of the instruments and now E. B. Bowman, supervisor of the Mobile area, points to this orchestra as a wonderful illustration of What NYA can do for youth.

NYA Launches School Improvement In Five Ala. Counties

The sound of workmen busy at their tasks in Echo this week marks the beginning of repair and remodeling of the town's school building as the National Youth Administration launches school improvement in five Alabama counties.

Young men and women of NYA are beginning the construction of a $6,700 woodwork shop building at Coffeeville in Wilcox County; the construction of a five room frame building for Negroes at Headland in Henry County.

Raglands school system is receiving most extensive projects this week as work gets under way on the demolition of an old school building, construction of a new classroom building, and painting of the woodwork of the 10-room brick school house.

The NYA community assistance is available to all sections of Alabama, as Dr. John E. Bryan, state administrator, points out.

NYA PROJECT OPEN TO COLORED BOYS IN COUNTY

..An NYA project open to all colored boys in the county between the ages of 16 and 26 has been launched in the county. The work consists of maintenance and repair on the white and colored school buildings in the county. The work is under the supervision of Napoleon Howard, col., of Faison who is a graduate f A & T Colored College at Greensboro. The work is under the directio nof O. P. Johnson, county superintendent of Schools.

White boys are needed in the shop project in Kenansville. Boys alrady receiving training have in many instances secured work on defense projects or in private employment. Because of the demand for young men who have had this training it is difficult to keep a large force in the shop office in Kenansville.

A Day With . . . Mrs. Bethune

ATLANTA, Ga.—(Special)—"Young men of Morehouse, give of your best and the best will come back to you" were the stirring words of Dr. Mary McLeod Bethune, director of the Negro Division of the NYA, at the morning chapel hour in Sale Hall Friday.

Dr. Bethune, regal in black velvet, was impressive as she emphasized the need for seeking an education not for selfish purposes, but rather to enrich and broaden the lives of others. The opportunities for contacts with teachers and leaders at Morehouse, she told the students, should be a challenge through which their blessings might flow out to others.

MRS. BETHUNE

The youth of today, the speaker declared, have the greatest opportunity that has ever been theirs in the history of the world. She maintained that she believes more in the youth of today and in his development and leadership than at any other time in her life, stating to the students "I am willing to sit at your feet to get the trend of your minds for you are thinking in a more courageous strain than the youth of yesterday —you are getting your feet more solidly placed on the ground, and you are now wanting to be counted among the youth of America."

After thirty-six years devoted to the service of young people with scarcely any let-up day or night, Dr. Bethune stated that she has only gratitude in her heart that God has counted her worthy to participate with Him in doing something to help somebody else.

In concluding her address, the speaker urged the group to be unselfish and sane in this hour of defense when America is calling, to realize that we are all American citizens together whether we have all that is ours or not, and to keep in mind that we have more here than anywhere else.

Dr. Bethune was introduced to the audience by Dean Brailsford B. Brazeal. She recently resigned from the presidency of Bethune-Cookman college, which she founded, to devote all of her time to the National Youth Administration.

MARCHING THRU GEORGIA

—By ARTHUR P. STOKES—

ON THE NYA PROJECT IN JESUP MAR 8 1941

FAR DOWN IN Southeast Georgia, only 40 miles from Waycross and but 50 miles from Brunswick, the National Youth Administration for Georgia has under construction what will eventually be the largest NYA project in the State of Georgia.

Located in Jesup, Georgia, on the site of an old CCC camp quarters, construction is moving forward to complete a vast NYA project fed by the boy and girl youth from every corner of the State of Georgia. On January 2, NYA in Jesup took over these quarters occupied for seven years by the CCC camp.

STOKES

The project had its beginning in 1939 under the direction of the late J. C. Richardson and his wife, Mrs. Olivia Richardson. In the beginning there was part-time resident training. At that time 32 boys made up the project and work was carried on in an ordinary dwelling. Today there are 75 boys at the project. Seventy-five others will be added within a few days; and 300 are expected by June 1. There are 13 buildings at the project site; one is under construction, and 12 will be built in the near future. The new building plan includes quarters for the girl youth of the state. MAR 8 1941

In 1939 ths project was only local. It is now state wide. Negro NYA youths are represented from 11 counties and soon will come from all over the state.

PERSONNEL AT THE PROJECT

At present the project has 8 supervisors. A. T. Wilson of Fort Valley is director; B. R. Engersol of Columbus, is business manager; Thomas Hines from Mobile, Alabama, teaches auto mechanics; Bruce MacKay, of Atlanta, directs physical education; Charles Hixon from Columbia is chef; Miss J. I. Benefield comes from Selma, Alabama, and serves as dietitian; Mr. Spellman of Monticello directs woodshop work and Mrs. Olivia Richardson, native of Jesup supervises activities.

With the completion of the project the staff is expected to number approximately 28. This project is one of four similar in the State of Georgia. Others are located at Dorchester Acaemy, McIntosh; Forsyth and Albany.

INTERESTING PERSONALITIES ALONG THE WAY

Quiet, dignified, and unassuming is Dr. A. S. Clark, president and founder of Gillespie Seldom school. Dr. Clark, himself, and the institution built by his efforts are eloquent testimony to thirty-six years of successful educational pioneering. MAR 8 1941

There was once a fish pond and swamps where Gillespie Seldon now stands. That is what Dr. Clark found when he first arrived in Cordele as a missionary sent by the Board of Mission for Freedmen as early as 1902. James Crowley Daniel cleared the swamp; a little frame building was erected, and 27 pupils completed the enrollment.

If you visit Gillespie Seldom today you will find 440 pupils enrolled, an administration building girls' and boys' dormitories and a modern hospital with 30 beds. Not unusual is the fact that here there is no Negro doctor on the staff. I was told there was none to be had. And although due credit must be given white doctors for an unusual interest in Negro patients, yet, this community and hospital could surely support a colored physician. Again the question, when will America's Negro medical graduates cease to neglect such centers as are seen in Thomaston and Cordele, Georgia, for the starvation of the crowded city.

A CENTURY OF LIVING

Mother Alice Maxwell Jones doesn't know her exact age. Yet, folks in Cartersville well know that Mother Jones is well past 100 years old. You see one's memory begins to fade after a century of living. Things are not clear to Mother Jones now. She gets all mixed up. Yet, she recalls Beaufort, S. C., as her birthplace. And she can tell you of the grand old Lincoln birthday celebrations in Chickamaugua square. There is recollection of the first Emancipation Day: and vividly Mother Jones remembers the venerable efforts of the renowned Bishop Turner during Georgia's reconstruction days. Five generations are represented in this household on Tabernacle street, testifying to Mother Jones' long life. There is a child, Isabelle Jones Lindsey, a grandchild, George Jones; great grandchildren, Clara Leatha, David and Dorothy; and a great-great grandchild, Lewis Hall. To Mother Jones, we tip our hat for having lived a century.

A GOOD IDEA MAR 8 1941

We were very interested in the idea voiced by the Rev. William Stephens, well-groomed young pastor of Mt. Zion AME church of Waycross, Georgia. Negro church members have often raised objections to the numerous and continuous church collections that have a tendency to spoil the thought and value of a good Sunday sermon. Stephens is effecting a prognam where each member of Mt. Zion pays a monthly church dues on the first Sunday of the month. Thus they are free of financial obligations for the next three weeks and can sit in perfect ease enjoying the full fruits of the Divine preachments from the Sunday pulpit. The beauty of the word is often lost in the fear and threat of the collection plate. Perhaps the Rev. Stephens has a good idea here.

Trained Negroes Have Their Own Office and Personnel; New Men Added to Staff

Since January 1, 1941, State Youth Administration Boisfeuillet Jones has authorized the appointment of two persons to the staff of the division thereby increasing its personnel to seventeen, according to information originating in the offices of William H. CRAVEN COUNTY BOARD HEARS OF NYA SCHEME

Huge Negro Center, Costing $100,000, May Be Built South of New Bern

New Bern, April 9.—Plans for the establishment of an NYA agricultural training center for Negro youths of this region were revealed here Monday to the Craven county commissioners, who agreed to provide a tract on Highway 17, south of New Bern, if this county is chosen for its location. The project has been endorsed by the county board of education.

Under the proposed plan, from 100 to 200 Negro youths would be given practical training in scientific farming at the $100,000 center. They would come from a number of different counties. City officials told NYA representatives that they thought ways and means could be worked out for providing free electric current for the proposed school.

NYA and Negro Youth of Alabama

Recently thirty million dollars of NYA's funds were impounded to encourage economy. The funds of several other federal agencies were impounded. Impounding of NYA funds means youth, supervisory, and funds for other purposes will probably be reduced by from twenty-five to fifty per cent in Alabama. There are around 500 white NYA supervisors in Alabama. There are only about 45 Negro supervisors. The Negro youth quota is far below that setup in Washington. Further cuts or reductions of Negro supervisors and youth in NYA, would not be in the interest of National defense. Giving Negro boys the kind of training they need and the kind of training which will make them strong enough to serve in the postwar period, is not being given them by NYA. NYA could give that training. If NYA gave such training to both boys and girls, NYA would be the one agency that the government could not afford to cripple in the name of National Defense.

Negro boys and girls should be trained in trades, which will enable them to do the work the world needs done, and is and will be willing to pay for today and in that postwar period. Such training is just as important as the building of other forms of defense facilities, because we are going to need all the manpower we can muster up in the days ahead. I am a friend of NYA, but I do not think those charged with administrative leadership have been as forward looking as they should have been. I don't think Negro leadership in the NYA program, has had enough rope in directing and shaping an NYA program for Negroes. I don't think white leadership can possibly do that unless is is guided by Negroes who know Negro needs, because its racial identification, prejudices and lack of sufficient knowledge of the whole problem facing the Negro youth and the Negro race. To expect white leadership to deal with Negro youth on a factual, impartial and equitable basis is quite impossible. And this very thing, makes the loss to the whole of society a bold demonstration of un-Americanism such as cannot be excused on any ground no matter where found.

Several hundred Negro boys and girls are getting school aid from NYA. If 25% or 50% of these youths are to be dropped, what is to become of them? How are they going to keep healthy? How are they going to prepare themselves to spend and be spent as American citizens? What NYA could do for youth on a bigger scale under more aggressive, courageus, fair-minded and square dealing leadership, on the basis of the golden rule, is just as important as training a soldier, sailor or aviator—yes, it's just about America's most important opportunity to insure the conservation and development of Alabama's greatest inadequately cared for resource—Negro youth.

I want to see Alabama make the most of everything in Alabama. Generally speaking, I think Alabama—that is white Alabama, baring exceptional instances, is "missing the bus" in its forgetfulness of what it might do for itself, if Alabama approached the problem of making better citizens of its Negro people in a positive way. I think the absence of a Negro voice, in all that has to do with Negro welfare, means missing having facts which would enable Alabama to adopt a positive program for its Negro people, based upon a Holy ground that it could stand upon in the most prejudiced places, prejudice based upon misunderstanding, ignorance and the lack of knowing the truth and nothing but the truth —the truth which frees one from misunderstanding; prejudice and backwardness in dealing with great human and social problems.

Down in Montgomery, there should be what I might call a State Advisor on Negro Welfare. It would be the business of this individual to gather and make available facts on what might be done for and with the Negro in all walks of life, to the end that the Negro might become more and more of a contributor to all that would make for a bigger, richer and fuller life, for all the people of this state. You see in this day and age, the general practitioner method in dealing with anything is out of place, and yet that is the basis upon which the Negro is dealt with in this and many other Southern and Northern states. This means a lot of makeshift negative attitudes and programs or lack of construtive programs for Negroes.

I believe, a capable, adaptable, scientific, level-headed and unbiased Negro to serve the state in the capacity of State Advisor on Negro welfare, can be found in Alabama. One who would serve the state in developing its greatest undeveloped human resource—the Negro. I think further that going without such a Negro advisory setup is constructive criminality.

The world is on fire, as never before, if we are to survive, it will be because we take vigorous and courageous steps to effect free-will liberty based upon instituting adjustments, founded on the golden rule, without regard to traditions, inhibitions and dog-eat-dog attitudes between American groups, regardless of race, creed, or color. Without this we are doomed. With this, it would be a pleasure to die for such a way of life, but no one wants to die to preserve discrimination and some men up and other men down. We must remove everything that gives any justification for a dislike of our way of life by any of our native peoples.

No matter how much we may love our prejudices, hates, white men or black men, we must cut that out now, for that is a luxury we cannot afford as a nation any more. As painful as it may be to any of us, we MUST give that luxury up if we are to have unity—the real unity, we must have to save ourselves in this burning world.

And finally, if you are like Moses, standing before the burning bush—in your attitude you want every American to have security, liberty, justice and equal economic opportunity and an equitable share in what we as Americans have built up, you stand upon holy ground, and you have nothing to fear. God is as much in the present conflict as any of the beligerents. He will take care of His own, be they groups or individuals. We Americans are going to keep for ourselves, the security and opportunity to live and grow that we give to the least among us.

Position Of Negroes In New Setup For NYA Discussed At Parley

Leaders Of Race Meet At Montgomery College To Talk Of Future

Meeting to discuss the position of Negroes in the whole plan of reorganization of the National Youth Administration in Alabama, all members of the Division of Negro Affairs, NYA, gathered at the State Teachers College, Montgomery, recently.

"We realize that you have come at a time when the program of the National Youth Administration is uncertain," Dr. H. C. Trenholm, college president, said in his welcome address. "We appreciate the very important place in that program which each of you has had.

"We hope that the results of your conference will show that this program will continue in some form, to the end that we as Negroes may be able to make a contribution to all phases of this democracy and that you may have a better concept

Stressing the necessity of a decrease in the program along lines of youth labor, supervision and material, and curtailment of construction activities, Assistant Administrator Louie L. Rhudy urged the Negro personnel toward greater emphasis on food preparation and conservation, and farm projects.

W. McKay Wright, administrative assistant, discussed need for making a more rapid readjustment both mentally and physically in order that youth may take its rightful place in the new social order. "If the earth stands still," he said, "we fall off, and if we stand still, we fall out."

Presided over by Ligon A. Wilson, state adviser of Negro affairs, with C. J. Parrish, of Slossfield Center as toastmaster, the program included talks by Judge J. M. Moore, Fayette; J. W. Letson, Jr., area director, NYA, Montgomery; Mrs. Augusta Sledge, director, division of youth personnel; B. L Balch, student work director; J W. Ford, coordinator of Negro work, extension service, Auburn; Alonzo Davis, Tuskegee Institute; E. G. McGehee, Jr., supervisor, Negro education, Montgomery; Dr. Walter L. Brown, medical consultant, NYA, and Alonzo D. Saunders, student work representative.

Opening music was given by the Mrs. A. M. Brown, social welfare worker of Jefferson County; Alonzo Saunders, student work representative of the NYA; Dr. Walter L. Brown, NYA medical officer; Mary Alice Ragland, supervisor of the laundry unit, Slossfield NYA Center, Birmingham; Edward L. Langster, supervisor of the Negro NYA recreation program in Mobile, and Helen Dixon, supervisor of the preschool unit at Slossfield.

A number of white state staff members of the National Youth Administration have been invited to participate. These include Louis L. Rhudy, assistant administrator; W. McK. Wright, administrative assistant; B. E. Dickinson, director of finance; Mrs. Augusta Sledge, director of the division of youth personnel; O. Clay Burgess, director of project planning, and B. L. Balch, director of the student work program.

Particular attention will be paid by the conference to methods of meeting the reduction in the NYA appropriation, it was said. Amounting to between 25 and 50 per cent, this cut will affect both youth and projects. Approximately 1,920 Negro youth are now employed on the NYA out-of-school program in Alabama, but this number will be materially reduced as a result of the reduction caused by a withdrawal of originally appropriated funds by the United States Budget Bureau, it was said.

Last year on the student work program, 5,736 Negro youth were given part-time jobs in schools and colleges which enabled them to continue their education. There will be a considerable reduction in the next six months in both the number of youth and the amount they will be paid each month as a consequence of the impounded funds, it is feared.

Negro NYA Officials Will Meet In Capital In Annual Conference

Determination Of Status In View Of Withdrawal Of Funds To Be Sought

Negro supervisors in the National Youth Administration in Alabama will meet at State Teachers College in Montgomery Friday and Saturday, Dec. 5 and 6, for their annual conference.

A number of white NYA officials and educators will also participate in the program, it was announced by Ligon A. Wilson, head of Snow Hill Institute, and Alabama adviser on Negro affairs of the NYA.

Theme of the conference will be "Where Do We Stand?" and its objective will be an effort to determine how far the NYA program can advance in view of a withdrawal by the U. S. Bureau of Budget of between 25 and 50 per cent of the present year's appropriation.

Negro leaders of the state who have been invited to participate include Dr. H. Councill Trenholm, president of State Teachers College, Montgomery; Prof. Frederick Hall, head of the department of music at State Teachers College;

NYA Center Cause of Official Headache; a Longer Time Granted

Commissioners Run Into Obstacle — Legal Opinion Is Enabling Act Necessary—Other Communities Than Lenoir County 'Taking Bull by Horns'—Barfield Gets Extension

Will Kinston get the NYA colored agricultural center? is still a moot question. Unless County Attorney Tom White finds a way to overrule himself, it seems that the opportunity will be muffed.

After several days of "special sessioning" by the county commissioners and a virtual purchasing agreement for the Caswell Lodge property had been arrived at, it developed that the cleared land involved carried 10 acres of tobacco acreage and that the tenants, who had already made plans for 1941 crops could not be easily transferred. The site was accordingly abandoned.

The commissioners assembled again Friday afternoon to consider other proposals and sites which it is understood would be suitable to the government, along comes the legal adviser to the commissioners in a written opinion that the county governing group had no legal right to make any such purchase without a special enabling act of the Legislature.

There are several other places which have offered sites, it is stated on good authority, and as far as is locally known none of them had any special enabling acts. It seems to be another case where Kinston may lose a chance to get a government project which is worthwhile, established here because of too much legality and red tape, while some other place goes ahead and takes the bull by the horns.

Extension of Time

Secretary Frank Barfield, of the Kinston Chamber of Commerce, secured from the government representatives an extension of the deadline from Monday to Thursday next. In the meantime the commissioners will meet and endeavor to find a way out of the dilemma.

The project is to establish a training center for Negro farm youths from 18 to 25. Capacity will be 100 students and an initial investment on the part of the goverment will approximate $50,000, it was stated. The students will be paid $30 per month and the additional payroll for instructors, et al., will run to $500 additional, giving a total payroll of some $3,500.

NYA Youths Hear Defense Talk By Negro County Youths

Some 40 out-of-school youths employed on the second shift of the newly NYA project got their first talk concerning the National Defense Program and how it relates to the out-of-school youth Friday afternoon. The talk was given by R. L. Hannon, negro county agent, assisted by A. N. McCoy, vocational agriculture teacher. The group was told that a total of $10,000,000,000 had been appropriated for industrial production by the government and this amount was divided as follows: Ships—$3,300,000,000; factory expenses and housing $1,500,000,000; airplanes and ports—$1,500,000,000 and trucks and tanks $400,000,000. According to Hannon's talk a great training program was in action for out-of-school youth with the mobilization of skill labor. This included 300,000 youths in CCC camps and 210,000 boys and girls getting training in 3,500 NYA shops and other youth projects. The youths were told that the must have strong bodies as their first goal in the National Defense Program and could only be obtained through healthy living and that wholesome recreation. They were encouraged to read more about current news, information concerning agriculture, housing, industrial material, price stabilization as it relates to National Defense. Information was given by A. N. McCoy concerning courses that are expected to be offered to local out-of-school youths that would give them some type of defense training.

The first shift of the NYA group was scheduled to get this information today at 12:30 p. m.

On Thursday night, County Agent Hannon will be guest speaker for the local Boy Scout troop of the Christian Discipline church. His talk will be concerned with National Defense and the Boy Scout organization.

BOARD NO LONGER INTERESTED IN NYA'S PROPOSAL

Chairman Measley of Commissioners Says Board and Public Think Influence Be Demoralizing

Unless public sentiment for the proposed NYA colored agricultural center, is manifested, the county commissioners will give no further thought to the matter.

Chairman Willie Measley, of the board, told a representative of The Free Press Monday that sentiment both in and out of the board was opposed to the location here of such a work. The government, he said, would require the students at the center to work short hours and that the example, in the opinion of members of the board and farmers who had expressed themselves, would be demoralizing to other farm labor in the county. It will be difficult, he thought, to get regular farm labor to work full hours, as is customary and necessary, if the students are permitted to stop off at four o'clock and spend the rest of the day in recreation.

Representative F. E. Wallace, home for the week-end from the Legislature, told Secretary Frank Barfield of the Chamber of Commerce, that he thought it would be possible to get a special enabling act through by Thursday, which would make it all right for the commissioners to acquire the site and meet the conditions of the NYA administration for the location of the center. It appeared that the commissioners were not interested in pursuing the matter further when upon the advice of the county attorney they decided that they could not legally make the purchase of the site needed for the location of the center.

Chairman Measley also stated that the farm loan bank officials, who consulted with the board last week and at first made an offer to sell 144 acres of the Caswell Lodge farm, north or the railroad tracks, had later stated that it would be necessary for the county to acquire the entire farm. As a result the commissioners knew of no other sites available. Secretary Barfield intimated to The Free Press at the week-end that he had several other prospective sites for the commissioners' consideration.

Commissioner May Favors It

Commissioner Joe May, only Kinston resident on the county commissioners' board, stated to The Free Press Monday, that he favored the location of the project. He stated that he did not see that it would be any more demoralizing to local labor, if it was located here than if it was placed at New Bern, Rocky Mount or elsewhere in the area.

The pay-roll, Mr. May understood from the NYA representative, would run from $3,500 to $5,000 per month, and he like many others thought that a fifty-thousand dollar pay-roll shouldn't be sneezed at.

Did Race Prejudice Play Part?

It appeared from unofficial reports Monday morning that Kinston's chances to get the NYA colored agricultural center are slim. Reputedly the board of county commissioners are "no longer interested" in the matter.

The Free Press has been informed that some of the commissioners, at least, were not enthusiastic over the proposition because of the race element. The project was for Negro youths.

Just why any such prejudice should arise is not clear to us for if we understand the plan outlined for the project and its purpose, it was entirely a worthwhile one and as far as we can see there are no objectionable features. In short the government proposed to put an institution near Kinston which would have capacity for a hundred Negro boys from 18 to 25 years of age, who would be given instruction in better methods of farming. Unquestionably Lenoir County and this section could use a lot of better farmers. Hundreds of the tenant farmers are Negroes. What objection could there be to making better farmers out of them?

The Free Press hopes that this report is not well-founded, though it seems to be, and that at least a majority of the commissioners was not moved by any race prejudice in the premises.

There is yet time to secure this project and give to Kinston another pay-roll running almost a thousand dollars a week to say nothing of the benefits to be obtained from the training school and project.

Lenoir's representative in the Legislature, Mr. Fitzhugh Wallace, is quoted as saying that he could remedy the legal obstacle by getting an enabling act through the Legislature in time for the Lenoir county commissioners to accept the proposal of the NYA administration.

Why not do it?

100 Youths Given Work Under New NYA Program

NYA Starts Erection Of Buildings In Towns In This Vicinity

Over 100 boys and girls were put to work through the NYA program last week, in Anderson, Abbeville and Oconee counties and equally as many are expected to be added to the program this week, Milton F. Nardin, area supervisor, said today.

The construction of buildings at the cost of approximately $900 each in materials has started in five places of the area. Vocational buildings are being erected at Fair Play, Westminster and Honea Path. A potato curing house is going up at Madison in Oconee County; and a Negro School is under construction at Cold Springs in Abbeville County.

These buildings are of standard design and will feature in the NYA national defense program.

Officials expect to have a total NYA employment of 700 in the area by the end of this month. This figure will include 60 per cent boys and 40 per cent girls. The minimum quota has been set at 636 for January. divided as follows: 150 at Abbeville, 300 at Anderson and 186 at Oconee.

Employment figures for the month ending December 23 totaled 405 as compared with the total of 388 employed in November. Last month Anderson County showed a total employment of 210 young people; Abbeville, seventy-seven; and Oconee, 128.

A good many applications are being received daily, but many more can be taken, Mr. Nardin said. All young men and women between the ages of seventeen and twenty-five who wish to enroll for training and work in NYA are requested to register at the local office in the City Hall.

Further expansion is contemplated in the present National Defense program. Various types of work are offered enrollees: shop work, construction work, canning, handling and preparation of foods, cooking, sewing and making of hospital supplies.

Training is offered in various trades and at the same time boys and girls receive remuneration.

SIX NEGROES EMPLOYED ON N.Y.A. STAFF

JAN 19 1941

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Jan. 16—A partially completed survey of Negro staff employees of the National Youth Administration for Ohio reveals that in the state office of Ohio NYA here, six Negro staff members are employed whose positions range from a mail clerk to a field representative responsible to the state NYA administrator.

All reside in Columbus. Their ages correspond to those of the other staff members of the federal youth programs—ranging from 21 years of age for the mail clerk to 32 years of age for the field representatives. Four are single, two are married.

Alexander D. Gaither is field representative under Leo B. Jacobs, newly appointed Ohio NYA administrator. Jacobs succeeded S. Burns Weston a few weeks ago, and was promoted from the post of deputy administrator. Administrator Jacobs and Representative Gaither have been associated together with youth work in NYA since June, 1939.

Gaither has been prominent in social and administrative activities among the various Negro communities of the state since his appointment with NYA, and has been responsible for bringing to Ohio communities for repeated visits, such outstanding leaders as Mary McLeod Bethune, T. Arnold Hill, Pauline Redmond, and others.

Born in Knoxville, Tennessee, Gaither attended Kentucky and Tennessee schools, Knoxville college—where he received his A. B. degree—and Ohio State university where he received his M. A. degree. Gaither was a football player, edited his college annual, and directed dramatics. He supervised NYA's well known resident center on the campus of Wilberforce university before his appointment as field representative. He is regarded as one of the most zealous and persevering workers for the improvement of the vocational opportunities of Negro youth. Gaither married Dorothy Helen Dogan, a graduate of Tennessee State college.

Dorothy Mann Williams, formerly a secretary with the Columbus Urban League, is accounts secretary in NYA's State Finance Division. Mrs. Williams is 25.

Mary Elizabeth Harris, born in Garnett, Kansas, is a clerk-stenographer in the state office secretrial pool.

Alice Elizabeth Covington, 21, is a junior mail file and records clerk in the same office. She had been employed with NYA's local area office as a typist, switchboard operator and mimeograph worker.

Mary Gould Stewart, 21, graduate in social administration at Ohio State university, holds a position similar to that of Miss Harris.

Vernon Henry Robinson, most recent Negro appointee to NYA's state office, is 20, is a Wilberforce graduate, born in Huntington, West Virginia, and is employed as an assistant in the state office mail room.

All NYA staff personnel are hired on the merit basis according to standard personnel practices similar to those prevailing in national industrial corporations, and the U. S. Civil Service.

NYA's state office is located on the third floor of the Hoster Building in downtown Columbus at One South Fourth street. The headquarters directs the activity of eight area offices through which about 12,000 out-of-school young men and women are obtaining part-time work experience now concentrated upon national defense industry. Also directed from the central office is the NYA Student Work Program for the state, which provides practical work for 76,000 high school students and 5,500 college students in Ohio. Most of NYA's current program is directed toward providing sound preparation for Ohio youth who may qualify for jobs in the rapidly expanding industries affected by national defense orders. Many Negro NYA youth are obtaining private employment by means of their experience with NYA in Ohio.

LENOIR GETS NO NYA CENTER; IS DEAD ISSUE NOW

With Commissioners, at Least—They Appear to Be Determined to Forget About It—County Is Loser

Hugh Evans, head of the National Youth Administration in Eastern North Carolina, today said it appeared that the Lenoir County commissioners had abandoned the idea of providing a site for a training center for Negroes in the county. The NYA would have set up the center.

"Word that comes to me is that they have given up the idea of acting now, at least," he said.

Evans' office is in Kinston.

Cost to the NYA, for buildings and equipment, would have been $50,000, it was estimated, to the county some such sum as $10,000—for the site. Pay of the students and their instructors would have approximated $50,000 a year.

The Kinston Chamber of Commerce and local business men urged the commissioners to provide the site. There was some opposition to the establishment in the country.

Objections

Rural dwellers said they would object to an all-Negro community in proximity to their homes. Advocates of the center said it might be possible to locate it where it would not be near planters' homes. At any rate, the students would be disciplined, they said. They would be kept busy most of the time.

There would be no more reason to expect trouble from them than from students at Negro colleges over the State, whose conduct in the main is exemplary.

In the face of the agitation for the center the commissioners did nothing. Four of the commissioners are rural dwellers.

A different attitude was taken at Rocky Mount when the NYA proposed setitng up a center of another sort, but a center for Negroes. It will be a larger establishment than the one proposed for Lenoir County. It will be close to a white community. It was welcomed.

DECISION IS PUT OFF ON NEGRO NYA CENTER

Kinston, Jan. 18.—Lenoir County's commissioners, most of them farmers, today considered whether they should provide the National Youth Administration with a farm for a center for Negro youths.

On the farm the Federal agency would teach the youths practical agriculture. It would construct dormitories, a barn and other buildings. It has been estimated the farm would cost the county $10,000 or a little more or less. The students and their instructors would be paid about $50,000 a year.

Objections of some rural dwellers to the possible proximity of an all-Negro community to their homes were studied by the commissioners. Objections to the investment were ignored by some of them, at least. The investment would not cause an increase in the tax rate.

The government's investment would be $50,000. In case of abandonment of the center the buildings would remain on the farm, it was assumed. Youths would go to the center to remain 18 months. The colony would number about 100.

Reports said the commissioners were unlikely to make up their minds for a day or two. They had held one meeting with citizens and might hold another, it was said. Most of the citizens at the meeting were residents of Kinston favoring the project.

Number Has Doubled Since September

MAY 10 1941

RICHMOND—The number of of Negro youths employed on the National Youth Administration out-of-school youth program has more than doubled since September and the Negro percentage of the total employment figure has increased 4.4 per cent in that time, with the NYA's increase in employment to help fill the need for defense workers, according to Dr. Walter S. Newman, NYA Administrator for Virginia.

In the month of March, 3,072 Negro youths were employed on the program, representing 28.12 per cent of the 10,924 persons employed. In September there were 1,272 members of the race represented in a total employment of 5,363—a Negro percentage of 23.72. The Negro population percentage in Virginia is 27.47 per cent.

The allocation of $451,050 of additional funds to the NYA for Virginia, from the $21,955,000 total NYA appropriation contained in the first deficiency appropriation bill, signed by the President April 1, will assure the maintenance of the present employment level until the end of the fiscal year, June 30, the administrator said.

ALLOTMENT MADE

In order to help fill the need for workers in the defense program, an allotment of $32,500,000 to the NYA nationally was made in October from defense funds, on the recommendation of the President and defense officials, for the increased employment of young persons on mechanical and other projects having a direct relation to national defense.

An allocation of $627,730 of these funds to Virginia made possible a sharp increase in the employment of youths on such projects and the improvement of the opportunities offered, according to the NYA Administrator.

From these same funds, money was allocated to the Office of Education specifically for the training and instruction of NYA youth in subjects related to the work in which they were getting work experience through the NYA. Accordingly, such courses are being offered by the school system in Virginia.

GAIN EXPERIENCE AND DEVELOP SKILLS

Young people on the out-of-school program of the N. Y. A. are between 17 and 25 years of age and are employed 80 hours a month on local projects and 100 hours a month on resident projects, producing goods and services for public agencies. In doing this work the young people gain experience and develop skills that help prepare them for private employment.

In February, when there were 2,811 Negro youths employed, employment as to type of work was as follows: roads, streets and bridges, 217; improvement of grounds around public buildings, 327; construction, repair and remodeling of buildings and facilities, 551; recreational facilities other than buildings, 11; water and sanitation, 58; workshop and other production, 252; resident projects (full-time), 268; resident projects (part-time), 33; clerical assistance, 195; public health and hospital assistance, 148; library service, two; recreational assistance, 42; nursery school assistance, 42; school lunch assistance, 393; and home service, 267.

Outstanding local projects manned by Negroes are distributed throughout the state, Dr. Newman said, and he cited a number of such projects. At the Culpeper Training School in Culpepper County 37 persons are employed grading and landscaping the grounds; a brick vocational agriculture farm shop is being built at Bowling Green by 22 boys; in Boydton 26 boys are remodeling and repairing a building to serve as headquarters for the Mecklenburg County Board of Health; and in Mathews, 15 boys are constructing a vocational agriculture shop, using materials salvaged from old school buildings.

OTHER LOCAL PROJECTS

There is a woodworking shop at Ruthville in Charles City County in which 27 boys are employed, repairing and constructing school furniture, and a similar project at Dillwyn in Buckingham County, on which 31 boys are employed.

Sixteen boys and 26 girls are assigned to Richmond City hospitals to do routine non-technical tasks under close supervision of the hospital's regular technical staffs.

One of the outstanding home service projects in the State, employing Negro girls, is the Norfolk center where 28 youths are assigned. These girls are working on materials for service hospitals.

There are eight resident projects for Negroes in operation in Virginia, Dr. Newman said. The resident project at St. Paul's Normal and Industrial School, Lawrenceville, is sponsored by the division of rehabilitation of the State Board of Education for physically handicapped youth. There are 31 boys on this project, which affords work experience in auto mechanics, barbering, tailoring, woodworking and painting.

DILLWYN RESIDENT CENTER

At Dillwyn there is a resident center with 40 girls assigned, 20 of whom are on the project at a time. This project offers experience in homemaking, sewing, cooking, gardening and canning.

Ninety-six boys are enrolled on a resident project at Virginia State College for Negroes, where experience is offered in sheet metal work, auto mechanics, tailoring, dry cleaning, building trades, cabinet-making, electrical wiring and mechanical drawing.

At Aberdeen Gardens, near Newport News, there are 32 girls in a resident project offering work experience in homemaking, sewing, cooking, gardening, canning and laundering.

At Hampton Institute 40 boys are assigned to a resident project offering work experience in building construction, carpentry and electrical wiring.

AGRICULTURAL PROJECT

A project offering experience in all phases of agriculture is located at Christianburg Industrial Institute; 16 boys are currently assigned to this project. Another such project, with the addition of building construction work, is at the Manasas Institute where 28 youths are assigned at this time.

A resident project in Norfolk has assigned 31 girls who are receiving work experience in homemaking and, at the Craney Island establishment of the Public Health Service, are receiving experience in laboratory technician and medical secretarial work.

MRS. BETHUNE CALLS CONFAB OF NEGRO WOMEN IN JUNE

From her office in Washington, Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune, president of the National Council of Negro Women; president of Bethune-Cookman college at Daytona Beach, Fla., director of the Division of Negro Affairs of the National Youth Administration, and leader in so many causes for the welfare of her race, has issued the following call to the National Council of Negro women and to the thinking Negro womanhood of America:

"A call to the National Council of Negro women and to the thinking Negro womanhood of America:

"The hour has come for thought and action on the part of the womanhood of our country to the end that the Negro may participate fully in all phases of the National Defense program.

"While democracy is attempting to prove itself here in America, we believe with Anson Phelps Stokes and others that the very test of Democracy is the participation of the Negro in the activities in which our government is engaged. Particularly is this true at this time when the defense of our nation requires every ounce of energy and loyalty from every man, woman and child.

"At the suggestion of the ever ready Alpha Kappa Alpha sorority, which is a member of the National Council of Negro Women, a mobilization of women to study the defense program and urge the acceptance of Negroes in it, is called for June 28, 29 and 30. As president of the National Council of Negro Women, I am hereby requesting all members to participate in this conference—if not in Washington, by setting up smaller conferences during these three days in every section of our country, thereby pressing our claims as American citizens for just participation of the Negro group in every branch and unit of national defense.

"This is our hour to proclaim anew our allegiance to America and its democratic ideals by protesting the exclusion of any minority group from a national program in which all citizens should serve and serve alike. This is important today when we are mobilizing all our resources to defend our democratic heritage against subversive influences from other lands."

Negro Boys Erected Fine Shop Building

Negro NYA boys of this county are to be congratulated for the fine job of constructing a manual arts shop at the Negro school near Heath Springs. The structure, to be used as a shop to teach manual arts to Negro boys, is a credit to any community and the building is so nicely built that one would think that mature and exeperienced carpenters were employd to construct it. The boys will be taught wood working, blacksmithing, machinery repairing and many other things that they have to do or should know how to do in everyday life.

NYA Supervisors Meet In City

Director Reports Work At County High Is One-Third Completed

National Youth Administration supervisors from 13 counties met here Saturday to review work on important projects now in progress in this city and throughout the county.

LeRoy Thomas, area supervisor, announced that a work shop for boys being built in Northport County High School is about one-third completed. Sixty youths are being employed on this construction work and when it is completed many others will be employed in the operation of heavy duty wood working machines to be operated there. The work shop will cost approximately $12,000. About $8,000 of this will be for machinery and equipment. The Tuscaloosa County Board of Education is contributing $2,500.00 as cosponsors. The job is of standard type, of concrete block construction, being built by the NYA throughout the country.

A total of 125 youths, including these 60, are now employed in NYA projects in the city and county, Mr. Thomas stated.

Another important project is the rehabilitation of the County Alms House on Hargrove Road for a NYA girls part time resident project. Eighty girls will be given work experience at the project. They will live at the project for 15 days a month in groups of 40. Much of the work will be in sewing on a large production basis for the Department of Public Welfare. They will also be given 15 hours of vocational training a week in classes set up by the State Department of Vocational Education in the preparation of food, clothing and home care of the sick. Applications for this project are being received in the NYA office in the basement of the County Courthouse. Girls who apply for the work must be 17 and net yet 25 years of age.

NYA employment is also being given high school graduates of from 16 to 24 years of age in various offices of the county. Sixty-five youths are now employed in the office of county agents; county doctors; the Federal Farm Security Administration; home demonstration agents; Departments of Public Welfare; probate judges, the Board of Revenue; the Federal Probation Offices of the federal and state governments at city hall, and at the army section of the airport.

A two class room addition to the Dry Creek negro school has just been completed by the NYA workers, Mr. Thomas reported.

Mrs. Ruth H. Allen, assistant area supervisor, announced that the doors are wide open for such work experience and that the youth who qualify will be promptly assigned. They will receive $14.04 a month and every effort will be made to get them regular employment at higher remuneration. Miss Eleanor Godfrey of Tuscaloosa has just been appointed as supervisor of clerical work it was announced.

Mr. W. N. Peacock, from the state administrative offices in Birmingham spoke to the supervisors on means of developing proper work habits in youth employed on the various projects. He stressed the importance of cleanliness, punctuality, alertness, willingness to take orders, readiness to see a job through and willingness to get along with others. Mr. Peacock is addressing supervisors throughout the state in a series of conferences on the subject of proper work habits.

Mr. Peacock was to escort Mr. Harold D. Smith, Washington, D. C., director of the United States budget, on a visit to NYA projects in Birmingham Saturday afternoon. Dr. John E. Bryan of Birmingham, state youth administrator of NYA was to meet the budget director there. Mr. Smith has been attending a conference on defense finance at the University of Alabama.

Putting Young Folks To Work

As Uncle Sam moves on with his plan to put young folks to work throughout the United States, boys and girls in Alabama are busy doing the jobs they are most interested in, learning to do them well, and getting paid for their efforts.

More than 25,000 young people in Alabama are better off because of NYA—some are combining work and school and others are learning to do things that will get them jobs. One look at the state today gives an idea of the variety of these jobs.

In Mobile, NYA girls are at work on a cooperative plan through which they will sell the handicraft they make. Much of their handicraft is on exhibit in the basement of the YMCA in Mobile, and Mrs. E. R. Bowman, supervisor of Arts and Crafts in the Mobile area, is planning a tour of the projects to show the public how the various handicrafts are done.

NYA is completing a five-room addition to the Excel school in Monroe county to house a home economics department, a workshop and blacksmith shop. A cafeteria has already been built and is providing lunches for the children of the Excel school.

Two teacherage buildings are to be built there.

Thirty-two boys are at work there. The cafeteria, which was built out of $400 worth of old materials, serves lunchs to 110 children and 25 NYA girls every day and, is equipped for sewing and canning in the summer time.

NYA youths of Pine hill are laying the foundation of a gymnasium. Brick piers are already up, though this is the first brick work the boys have ever done. The Pine Hill NYA did a mast-ary job of the new flag pole they put up on funds donated by the senior class of 1941.

Using 80,000 bricks, the NYA of Mobile has completed a new boy's dentention home with all furniture made by NYA. Shaped like an H with two long wings, the home has an immaculate dining room and dormitory. The wings are 108 feet long, the center section is 65 feet in length, and the whole building took ten months to complete. The cost was $13,000 but the estimated value of the new building is $30,000.

Oddity of the home is a unique cut of tile in the bathroom that came originally from Italy. It was found in the attic of the old Van Antwerp building in Mobile and was bought for $25.

NYA in Mobile has a 36 piece negro band. None of the boys could play when the orchestra was started in August by Edward Lancaster, negro musician. But they used discarded instruments from the army and navy and on January 18, they were able to give a concert at the YMCA.

Negro girls sang spirituals to the accompaniment of some of the instruments and now E. B. Bowman, supervisor of the Mobile area, points to this orchestra as a wonderful illustration of what NYA can do for youth.

Supervisor Says 675 Boys, Girls Receive Training

Workers on National Youth Administration projects in Anderson, Oconee and Abbeville counties have been doubled in the past 30 days, now numbering 675 boys and girls from 17 to 25 years of age, Area Supervisor Milton Nardin of Anderson disclosed yesterday.

The increase follows a call for more N. Y. A. employes in a cooperative move educational program for national defense.

In Anderson County the groups total slightly in excess of 300. They work eighty hours a month on projects which teach them work habits and give them actual experience to fit them for private employment.

No person can be employed on any N. Y. A. project longer than one year, Mr. Nardin said.

The supervisor also revealed that the girls' residence center on West Whitner Street has added ten more girls, making a total of 40, and that Mrs. George Reid, Jr., has been named as assistant there to Mrs. Madolyn Hays, supervisor.

Girls accepted for the residence center make their homes there, receiving a nominal pay and board. In turn they study domestic occupations, which include sewing. Hundreds of bandages and other hospital supplies have been made by them, along with other articles of real use.

It was also announced that a residence center for Negro girls would be opened about February 1 at a house on Jefferson Avenue, this project for 40 members to be supervised by Verna Boulware.

Projects in which young men are employed include manufacturing concrete pipes for the City of Anderson; helping at the State Highway Department Shop; work shops construction, serving in the preparation of school lunches and working in public offices.

Lenoir Gets No NYA Center?

In Saturday's Free Press Mr. Hugh Evans, head of the National Youth Administration in Eastern North Carolina was quoted as saying that it appeared that the Lenoir County commissioners had abandoned the idea of providing a site for a training center for Negroes in the county. As far as the paper knows, the commissioners have not had any further meetings on the subject since the meeting in the court-house some night ago, which was fairly well attended and which on the direct question of Chairman Willie Measley of the Board of Commissioners, voted about four to one in favor of the establishment of the center.

All sorts of reports have been circulating. Apparently there are two chief reasons for opposition:

1. Race prejudice unquestionably has played a part.

2. Fear that the center will disrupt and demoralize farm labor.

The Free Press has no particular argument to submit at this time against the first objection. Unfortunately race prejudice is inherent in some and they have failed to appreciate the fact that the Negroes have been apt at taking advantage of the opportunities afforded them—in many cases rather meager—and they have invariably made better and more law-abiding citizens and consequently relieved to some extent the burden of the prison population. Negro youth are amenable to training and development, just as white youth are. Both show improvement, become better citizens and manifest an all-round better attitude to society. As far as we can see there is no race problem entering into the question whatsoever.

In the second place, the Negro youth who have an opportunity to study agricultural methods in the center, proposed to be established by the NYA, naturally will become better farmers. It is quite logical to suppose that if they hire out they will want a little more money and be entitled to a little more than the common, untutored laborer on the farm. The Free Press sees no possibility, however, of any demoralizing influence on farm labor because of the availability of more capable workers.

The NYA administrator for this district hasn't given up all hope of a revival of the question, if we understand him correctly. We hope the Chamber of Commerce, which has been sponsoring the plan, will not give up the ship yet. The best thought of Kinston and the count we believe, favor the plan, or will favc it, when they become thoroughly familia with it, know its purpose and possibilities

3 CLASSES FOR NYA ENROLLEES ARE ORGANIZED

Courses Launched In Radio Code, Blueprint Reading, Carpentry

IN DEFENSE PROGRAM

Classes for NYA enrollees in radio code, blueprint reading and carpentry have been organized by the vocational department of Greenville city schools in the national defense education program, according to C. W. Coons, head of the vocational department and director of the national defense classes.

LEARN MORSE CODE

The radio code class has completed its first week under Instructor Charles Chapman and the other two classes will open tomorrow.

The students in the radio code class are mastering the letters of the Morse code and are doing simple laboratory work. Plans are maturing to put into practice the instruction offered.

There is still room for several more NYA students in this class and, if necessary, a second class will be formed, Mr. Coons said. Young men interested in the course were asked to apply to A. M. Moseley, reg NYA director, with offices on the third floor of City hall.

The classes in blueprint reading and carpentry will be given at the senior high school and at Sterling high school for white and negro students, respectively. The courses are planned for three hours a day, five days a week, and will be supplementary to the practical work being done by the youths at the local NYA work shop.

The classes at Greenville high school will be taught by Lindsey Boozer and Charles Helms, both of the vocational education faculty of the high school. The class at Sterling will be taught by W. R. Sewell of the Sterling vocational department.

NYA in Mobile has a 36-piece Negro band. None of the boys could play when the orchestra was started in August by Edward Lancaster, Negro musician. But they used discarded instruments from the army and navy and on January 18, they were able to give a concert at the Y. M. C. A.

Negro girls sang spirituals to the accompaniment of some of the instruments and now E. B. Bowman, supervisor of the Mobile area, points to this orchestra as a wonderful illustration of what NYA can do for youth.

NYA HAS DUAL GOALS—SAFETY AND HEALTH

Safety and health on the industrial front are the dual primary goals of the National Youth Administration in 1941, according to a program announced this week by State NYA Administrator Mary Stuart Anderson.

With that agency's industrial front reaching great proportions in the operation of 58 work centers in all parts of Illinois where youth acquire basic vocational experience, protection against accidents and safeguarding the health of some 20,000 young men and girls loom importantly, the statement points out. Statistics show that accidents requiring loss of working hours have been held to one-tenth of one per cent during the past three months.

Safety measures already in practice include use of protective guards on all moving machine parts, proper equipment for workers such as leather gloves and goggles in departments where needed, instruction in safe methods of handling meal, materials and tools, in operating and cleaning machinery, use of fire extinguishers and disposal of waste materials, etc.

"The NYA's big problem today is in helping youth get jobs in industry," explained Administrator Anderson. "Giving youth work experience helps meet the problem young people confront before employment. Industry today wants competent workers who also are acquainted with and can observe rules of safety.

"The NYA is exacting close observance of safety regulations as a means of protecting youth against accidents and also conserve manpower for industry in the development of national defense. Health examinations are given periodically to all youth and where available remedial steps to correct defects and prevent disease are provided."

Motion pictures and slide films on safety practices and procedure are shown regularly at the work centers for the benefit of both supervisors and the youth workers, it was announced.

NYA Negro Division In Georgia Undergoes Noteworthy Growth

ATLANTA, Ga.—The division of Negro affairs, National Youth Administration for Georgia, has recently undergone noteworthy expansion in program, personnel and facilities. Since January 1, 1941, State Youth Administrator Boisfeuillet Jones has authorized the appointment of two persons to the staff of the division thereby increasing its personnel to seventeen, according to information originating in the offices of William H. Shell, Georgia NYA administrative assistant on Negro affairs.

The recent appointees were Emmett E. Spurlock and Lawrence C. Mann, both of Atlanta. Mr. Spurlock enters the youth personnel division of the Negro division and will supervise and promise a series of youth conferences to be sponsored by NYA throughout the state during the coming spring. Since graduating from Morris Brown College in 1934, he has had varied experience in educational work and business.

The second appointee, Lawrence C. Mann, comes to NYA as music supervisor and will work through the work projects division in connection with choral and instrumental music on the Negro NYA projects of the state. Widely known in musical circles of Georgia, he is director of the "Chariot Wheels" choir which is heard weekly over an Atlanta radio station and has worked extensively in choral work among the Negro churches of Atlanta. A 1940 graduate of Morehouse College, he has received recognition as a thorough musician.

The Georgia NYA division of Negro affairs comprises three departments. These departments and their personnel are as follows: Administrative, William H. Shell, administrative assistant on Negro affairs, G. S. Alexander, office assistant, Miss Louise Davis, senior secretary, Miss Lucille Hall, junior secretary, Work Projects, Plemon L. Whatley, Jr. work planning supervisor, Mrs. Josephine Williams, girls' work Supervisor; Lawrence C. Mann, music supervisor; Youth Personnel, Moss Hyles Kendrix, youth activities supervisor, Frank A. Negro Band Here Given Training In NYA's Drive

Musicians who never played a note until last August and who are now ready for a concert is the record of Mobile's NYA negro band.

Four months ago the band was organized and the young negroes started practicing on instruments discarded by the army and navy in the Mobile air field. Edward Lancaster, negro musician, was leader and director of the group.

Last week, the 35 instrumentalists presented a concert at the Y. M. C. A. of Mobile—the first public appearance of the youths' orchestra. They played at the supervisor conference at which W. M. Peacock, administrative assistant, spoke on "Proper Work Habits For Youth."

E. B. Bowman, supervisor of the Mobile area, points to the orchestra as a wonderful illustration of what NYA can do for youth, and announces that the four-month-old group will play in the Mobile Mardi Gras celebration in February.

ROCKY MOUNT TO HAVE NYA SCHOOL FOR NEGROES NOW

Lenoir County Commissioners Trying to Make Up Minds About Center in County—Would Be Sizeable Project

The United Press reported today that a site for a vocational training school for Negroes at Rocky Mount had been approved, tentatively at least, by National Youth Administration officials. The school will be a $152,000 project. There will be 14 buildings.

The Lenoir County commissioners have had under consideration for days a proposal that the county furnish the NYA a site for a center at which Negro youths would be taught practical farming. The board is expected to do something "one way or the other" within a few days.

A 100-acre farm would be the site, and the cost to the county, it is asserted by advocates of the project, would not exceed $10,000.

The center could be located so as not to be in proximity to a white community, the advocates point out.

The NYA would invest about $50,000 in buildings and equipment, it is said. The youths in training, say 100 in number, and their instructors would be paid about $50,000 a year.

NEGRO NYA SITE GIVEN APPROVAL

Rocky Mount, Jan. 19.—The selection of a site for the $152,000 Negro National Youth Administration vocational training school suitable to all parties concerned was announced here today by L. B. Aycock, city manager.

If present plans are completed successfully, the school will be located in a Negro section near the Negro high school. Previous locations suggested have aroused controversy because it was thought they were ill-placed and too near white residential sections. W. T. Davis, assistant State administrator for the NYA, told the city manager that if the project goes through the Washington agencies without delay, construction of the school should begin within 30 days. Private contractors will be hired for the work.

Approximately $80,000 will be expended for 14 buildings while the remainder will be used for equipment and engines and beautification of the grounds. Under the plan, 200 students from all over the State could be trained at one time in the trades. The school is expected to operate for a minimum of five years and could renew its option on the property for another five.

"PRACTICAL WORK" TO BE TAUGHT BY N Y A OF GEORGIA

ATLANTA, Ga.—Expansion of the National Youth Administration resident project program in Georgia to offer more Negro young people practical work experience in fields which are expanding as a result of the national defense program has been announced by William H. Shell, Georgia NYA administrative assistant on Negro affairs.

Resident projects for Negro youth are located in Albany, Forsyth, Jesup and McIntosh. Youths are assigned to these projects for periods of from six months to a year, during which time they earn a livelihood plus $10.00 each month in cash by performing productive work which increases their chances of obtaining and holding private employment. On the projects, the youths are given an opportunity to try out several occupations to determine where their interest and aptitudes lie.

Work experience available to boys include welding, auto mechanics, metal and shop work, all phases of construction work, scientific agriculture, and other such fields. Girls may obtain experience in light shop work, craft work including weaving and basketry, and all phases of homemaking such as selection and construction of clothing, child care, cooking, marketing, budgeting, family relationships, and similar aspects of home life.

In addition to actual work experience, these resident centers also have well developed health, physical development, and recreation programs. Every effort is made to give the boys and girls a chance to develop in every way.

There also are located about state local projects where boys and girls may receive work experience similar to those offered on the resident projects and at the same time live at home. All of the projects are open to needy out-of-school youth. No specific educational qualifications are required. For further information youths are urged to visit their local NYA offices or contact Willaim E. Inmon, youth personnel supervisor for Negroes, 426 Herndon Building, 239 Auburn Avenue, Atlanta, Georgia.

Putting Young Folks To Work

Gymnasiums for the general public, educational buildings for schools and colleges, book cases for libraries, linen for local hospitals—the type work being turned out by Alabama's young people under NYA auspices is widely varied.

Throughout Alabama, 25,000 young persons between 16 and 24 are busy producing things needed by the state, ranging from towels to school buildings. And at the same time, the youthful workers are receiving work experience that will carry them far on the success road.

* * * *

The citizens of West Montgomery will soon be able to use their community gymnasium which is being built by NYA boys under supervision of Harry W. Long. The NYA workers are making their own concrete blocks to be used in construction of the building, and when the gym is completed it will be an attractive addition to the West End park.

The first building undertaken by the NYA boys there was a stone office and dressing room for the park, and the playgrounds have been beautiful with shrubbery, concrete walks, a concrete wading pool and playground equipment.

* * * *

Brewton NYA workers are now making two double filling cabinets to be sent to the Negro CCC Camp at Brewton, and two large book cases have already been built for the North Brewton High School library.

The boys take the dimensions of the ordered article, cut and sand the material, joint the pieces together with glue and wire brads, fit in necessary drawers, sand and varnish to make the completed furniture.

* * * *

At Florence, the girls' NYA group is replenishing the local hospital's linen clousets in the past two weeks.

In Florence, many less fortunate children have been helped by new warm clothing made by the NYA girls, and the Florence Fire Department's quilt supply has been comfortably increased by the NYA girls.

* * * *

Students at the State A & M College at Normal, Alabama, North of Huntsville ,are watching with interest the building of two stone and concrete domitories by NYA's young men.

Sturdy foundations of stone, taken directly from the diggings, are being laid in the footings and held firmly by mortar.

Walls of the two domitories are of concrete blocks made on the campus of cement, sand and slag in a block machine operated by the NYA youth. In eight hours, with four boys at the machine, between 300 and 400 blocks are made. With dead-air centers, the blocks are of an extremely dry mixture and dry sufficiently to be removed in a little more than a day. They are then laid similarly to bricks.

On School Building

Work Begins At Boonville

Yadkinville. — Work on the Boonville colored high school began yesterday, it was learned from Guy Angell, NYA supervisor.

The project is the second in the county to be built in co-operation with the national youth administration. An agriculture building at East Bend School was only recently completed. This building is the most completely equipped in the county school system, having a workshop, cabinets, and modern plumbing.

The old Hamptonville School building is being razed, and all good material will be used in construction of the four-room building at Boonville. New material necessary will be furnished by the county board of education, and all labor will be that of NYA boys, working under the direction of Miles A. Martin.

The colored high school, the first and only one in the county, is now in operation at Yadkinville A bus collects students at East Bend, Boonville, and Hamptonville, and Jonesville. All these students will be transferred when the Boonville building is completed.

NYA Head at Confab in Atlanta

By MERCER COOK

The regional conference of NYA adminstrators of eleven States had just concluded its Saturday meeting at the Atlanta YMCA. Since Friday morning, Mrs. Bethune had worked almost incessantly, not only at the conference, over which she had presided and which she had addressed on Saturday, but also before the Morehouse College student body and other groups of young people.

In two hours' time she was to leave on a rush trip to Daytona Beach. Thus her hostess, Mrs. Benjamin Mays, had every reason to insist on her resting and to try to ward off the persistent would-be newspaper man who requested an interview. MAR 8 1941

Breaks Rest to Talk

Mrs. Bethune was reclining on a settee in the Mays' living room. but forgot that she was supposed to be resting as soon as she began to speak of the National Youth Administration. Using her eyes and hands, which are equally as eloquent as her voice, she more than justified the use of the adjective "glamorous," which Forrester Washington had applied to her at one of the meetings.

"Would you agree," I asked, "that the NYA is the major accomplishment of the New Deal?"

"Undoubtedly," she replied, "long after these new buildings (and she might have added battleships and airplanes) shall have crumbled to dust, the effect of the NYA on American youth will continue to be felt. Few people realize, moreover, the impetus the NYA is giving to interracial understanding."

"NYA has made it possible for local white administrators in the South to come in contact with competent young colored people whom they might otherwise never have met. In some NYA projects, white and colored youngsters are working side by side for the first time. At the outset, the whites were somewhat non plussed, but they soon became accustomed to it." MAR 8 1941

Cites Georgia Projects

Her interviewer remembered that there was one such project in the benighted State of Georgia, but before he could interrupt, Mrs. Bethune had proceeded, in her contagious enthusiasm, to pay tribute to the fine young colored people on the NYA staffs. Incidentally, there are seventeen colored persons in administrative posts in the Georgia set-up alone. Mrs. Bethune seemed to have been almost as inspired by them as they had been by her.

"How is the NYA affecting colored students in northern colleges?" I asked. "Are they getting a fair share of the available funds?" MAR 8 1941

"Not only are they sharing in those funds, but thanks to the extra $100,000 appropriated at my request, numerous young colored students have found it possible to pursue their work toward advanced degrees. Yes," she continued, "the NYA is an experiment in democracy, and our young people are fully deserving of the chance they are getting."

Youth's Apostle

As I left Mrs. Bethune, I realized two things. First, that there was at least one branch of national defense which was giving colored Americans an equal opportunity. And second, that for us, NYA does not mean National Youth Administration so much as it means Negro Youth's Apostle, Mary McLeod Bethune.

Hazel Scott is NYU's "Queen of the Prom"

HAZEL SCOTT

NEW YORK—Hazel Scott, brilliant pianist-vocalist from Cafe Society uptown, was crowned "Queen of the Senior Prom" by the New York University School of Education, class of 1941, Saturday evening, at the Hotel Pennsylvania.

Miss Scott will be presented by the newly-organized Harlem Cultural Society in the first of a series of programs, June 8, at 13 W. 126th Street. Born in Trinidad in 1920, she came to this country when she was four years old and, when only eight, went to Juilliard for an audition.

Given Free Lessons

Though she was too young for a scholarship, a professor was so impressed that he offered to give her free lessons, and continued to do so for eight years.

One of Hazel's first big breaks came with the show "Sing Out the News" on Broadway, in which she popularized "F. D. R. Jones." She is a language expert and sings in French, German, Italian, Spanish, Chinese and Yiddish.

Swings the Classics

During the past eighteen months, she has divided her time, first in the downtown branch and then uptown at the Park Avenue spot. On April 23, she was featured at Carnegie Hall in Cafe Society's own concert.

Hazel's swing versions of the classics have become virtual classics themselves; she recorded a album of them and has played many of them on the air.

Yergan, Ousted From C.C.N.Y., Hits Board Bias

Charges Education Body Opposes Permanent Posts for Negroes

Dr. Max Yergan, in his first statement to the press on his dismissal from the College of the City of New York as lecturer in Negro History, charged yesterday that the question at issue is whether or not Negroes are to be "permanently appointed, with tenure, to teaching positions in the city-supported colleges of the City of New York."

Dr. Yergan was notified in a letter written March 31 by Dr. J. Salwyn Schapiro, Acting Chairman of the Department of History of CCNY that the Appointment Committee of the College had decided against renaming its only Negro lecturer. Reason for the decision, Dr. Schapiro said, was the History Department's policy to change the personnel of the lectureships from time to time.

"This decision draws public attention and opposition to the practice of the Board of Higher Education which has barred Negroes from regular teaching positions in the four city-supported colleges," Dr. Yergan said yesterday. "It exposes the nature and purpose of the attack now being made in New York on pubic education, and it reveals the irresponsible and misleading methods used by the educational authorities concerned in the present action."

"Why did the educational authorities desire" Dr. Yegan's statement concludes, "my removal from City College and why have they sought to discredit me? The answer is not far to seek. My position in the National Negro Congress, my criticism of the anti-Negro policy of the government in its 'defense program,' my opposition to discrimination and Jim Crowism against Negroes in the general job life of America as well as in our public social life — these form the real reason which explains the action of the College Administration is not reappointing me.

"Let the Board of Higher Education publicly declare a policy with regard to the permanent employment of Negro teachers in the four city colleges, and let it give evidence of its good faith by appointing qualified Negroes immediately. When the educational authorities and the Board disclear themselves of anti-Negro bias, then they will be in a position to ask the public to believe the flimsy and inconsistent reasons which they give for not reappointing me."

Dr. Reddick To Get Post Of Dr. Yergin

Fisk Alumnus Rated More Noted Scholar And Will Lecture On History At New York College

NEW YORK, May 14—(ANP)—Speculation continued rife as to the true reasons why the College of the City of New York has refused to reappoint Dr. Max Yergan, for four years lecturer in Negro history and culture and now president of the National Negro congress, for the term beginning in September.

Dr. Lawrence D. Reddick, curator of the famous Schomburg collection of Negro arts and literature of the New York Public Library system who is spending this month in Haiti where he is seeking to foster the development of cultural relations with and among the the natives of Latin America, has been recommended for the lecture assignment and will in all probability be approved by the board of higher education.

"Some groups are apparently trying to create a furore about the disinclination of our history department to re-appoint Dr. Yergan for next year. The assignment is entirely unjustified for the department is considering standards of scholarship. Dr. Yergan has never been a full-time member of the department and has for the past four years been hired from term to term to teach one class a semester at an hourly rate.

"For sometime the department has been considering a replacement for Dr. Yergan. It feels that if a man is to give a course in history, he should be a historian. Dr. Yergan is not. He has published nothing on Negro history and has demonstrated no special scholarship in the field. The department therefore has decided through its democratically-elected appointment committee not to re-appoint Dr. Yergan for the full term."

The intention to continue the course was made clear in the statement of Dr. Wright which continued:

"The course in Negro history and culture will be given by a young scholar, also a Negro, who received his doctorate in history at the University of Chicago and who has been active in Negro scholarship and culture. His appointment has been under consideration for many months and he will be hired as special lecturer to teach the course in the school of education in the fall term and in the college of liberal arts and sciences in the spring semester."

At last year's annual convention of the National Negro congress in Washington, the question of Communist domination became so burning and insistent that A. Philip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, refused to continue as president of the Congress. In all the controversy of that convention no clear-cut denial of Communist influence was ever made. It was under such potentially explosive circumstances that Dr. Yergan accepted the helm of that organization.

It is generally known too, that Dr. Yergan's name has been frequently mentioned before the Rapp-Coudert committee, established by the legislature in 1940 to investigate the educational system throughout the state. In New York City the activities of this committee have been directed at uncovering "subversive elements" in the institutions of higher learning run by the city, particularly Brooklyn and City colleges.

The opinion among many therefore has been that Dr. Yergan is now being penalized for "sticking his neck out too far" in pursuing his extra-curricula activities.

His appointment four years ago caused considerable stir in Harlem, it being the first tie a Negro had ever attained such a position in the college. Prior to then he had been a mission secretary for the Y. M. C. A. in South Africa, but is said to have resigned his post over differences of opinion with the association and because he "preferred not to compromise his beliefs." Dr. Yergan is now director of the Council on African Affairs, an organization he founded for the purpose of aiding and improving the condition of natives in South Africa.

Dr. Reddick received both his bachelor and master degree at Fisk University in Nashville and his doctorate from the University of Chicago in 1939. He has enjoyed several fellowships. From 1933 to 1935 he was associate professor of history at Kentucky State college, and from 1935 to 1938 held a similar position at Dillard University, New Orleans. Dr. Reddick is an associate editor of the Journal of Negro History, and has membership in both the American historical association and the Association for the Study of Negro Life and Culture.

Keep Dr. Yergan, He Says

Dear Sir: Due to the fact that the American Government is leading the country straight towards war, it is necessary for the administration to place a check on all progressives or anyone wro denounces the American foreign policy. Committees were formed such as the Dies Committee to Investigate Un-American Activities; and the Rapp-Coudert Committee to Investigate Subversive Elements in the Public Schools.

However, the latter, in its investigation at City College failed to find Dr. Max Yergan engaged in Communistic activities. But, nevertheless, Dr. Yergan is a progressive man, being the president of the National Negro Congress and director of the Council on African Affairs. Progressive men, of course, are dangerous to the administration in that they are leaders who are always fighting for the rights of the individual citizen.

Dr. Harry N. Wright, acting president of the College said, that "Dr. Yergan was not dropped on account of Communistic activities, but his failure to demonstrate any special scholarship in his field." This is an excuse to discharge an American Negro leader. An excuse to rid City College of a man who is honorably worthy of his position; a man who is internationally famous as a Negro scholar and historian; and a man who is well liked by the students at City College.

The fact that the history Department states that they want the students to get the benefits of different personalities, shows a point of illogical reasoning. If a student has Dr. Yergan this Spring term, he will never have him again, since the Negro History Course is only for six months. When a new student desires the course, he shall not be able to take such a course until a year hence, as the latter is offered once a year. One can now see what an unusual excuse thus offered.

Although Dr. Lawrence D. Reddick, curator of the Schomburg Collection of Negro Literature at the 135th St. Public Library, is a qualified man to teach the course, I personally believe that he should not accept this appointment in view of the abrupt dismissal of Dr. Max Yergan.

Every Negro in New York City should write to Gov. Herbert H. Lehman, the Board of Higher Education, 695 Park Avenue; Dr. Harry N. Wright, acting president of City College; J. Salwyn Schapiro, acting chairman of the History Department; and to Dr. Knittle, director of the Evening Session, demanding the reinstatement of Dr. Max Yergan and the appointment of Dr. Lawrence Reddick.

Hazel Scott Is Honored at NYU Prom

NEW YORK — In a statement issued by Irving A. Lester it was learned this week that Miss Hazel Scott, Broadway pianist was to be honored. Mr. Lester said: As chairman of the Senior Social Committee of the New York University School of Education, it was my obligation to provide a candidate for the title of Queen of the Senior Prom for 194'.

Since it is the custom to feature stage and screen celebrities at School of Education functions, the committee decided to follow suit—but in its own way. We invaded the realm of swing for our candidate and selected Hazel Scott, singer and pianist. Miss Scott, whose audition at the Juilliard School of Music at the age of 8 so impressed a professor that he offered to give her free lessons, was a concert pianist in her own right during her teens. She has recently achieved fame through her swing versions of the classics.

The selection of Miss Scott as Queen of the Prom marked the first time that a Negro entertainer has thus been honored by a major American university. The class of '41 presented her with a cup especially designed and inscribed in her honor. The accompanying photo trophy to Stanley Spekker, a student.

The high point of the evening, of course, came when Hazel sat down at the piano to play "straight" and "swing" versions of compositions by de Falla, Liszt, Chopin and Bach.

Her listeners clamored for encores, and Hazel obliged generously. That was her spectacular way of saying "thank you" for the tribute paid her as artist and performer by the seniors of New York university.

Launch Fight for Appointment Of Negroes to N. Y, Colleges

NEW YORK.—(ANP)—A drive to secure jobs for capable professional Negroes on the regular teaching staffs of the four colleges operated by the city was inaugurated Wednesday when the Greater New York Coordinating Committee for Employment, progressive civic group, petitioned the board of higher education to "state its policy and practice in regards to" appointments.

While such thought had been previously given to this subject by the committee, it was said, the failure of City college to reappoint Dr. Max Yergan as special lecturer on Negro history and culture is said to have prompted this action.

The brief, entitled "An Inquiry in to the Appointment of Negroes to the Teaching Staffs of the Municipal Colleges of New York," questions "the factors which have so limited the appointment conditions and opportunities of qualified Negroes." Although Dr. Yergan has lectured at CCNY for four years, it was made clear that he has never been a member of the regular teaching staff "with the same tenure and rights as others."

Asks Several Questions

The petition asks several questions, namely:

1. Is the "young scholar, also a Negro," who will be appointed as "special lecturer" by the history department to give this course in Negro history and culture also to be relegated to the same "tenuous and insecure" position of Dr. Yergan? The quotations are from the announcement of Dr. Harry N. Wright, acting president of CCNY, explaining the institutions position regarding Dr. Yergan. The reference is to Dr. Laurence D. Reddick, curator of the Schomburg Collection, who will succeed the encumbent.

2. Is it the policy of the board of higher education, the College of the City of New York, or the department of history of that college to employ a Negro only to teach a course in Negro history?

3. In the history of the municipal colleges, how many Negroes, if any, have held regular positions on their teaching staffs?

Dr. A. Clayton Powell, pastor of Abyssinia Baptist church and chairman of the coordinating committee, emphasized that his committee is not seeking to champion the cause of any one individual. It is, rather, seeking openings for all Negroes.

Contrast in Policy

The committee's brief points out that of the 1,462 regular teaching positions of a non-administrative nature covered by the current fiscal budget, not one is held by a Negro. It goes on to show the contrast in the policy and practice between the board of education, with jurisdiction over the primary and secondard schools of the city, and the board of higher education.

"We know that the 1941-42 fiscal budget contemplates appropriations for 1,481 regular teaching positions, an increase of 19 over the current fiscal year, the brief continues. "We know, also, that there are Negroes who are qualified and experienced to accept an appointment to many of these positions.

"We feel therefore, that continued absence of Negroes from teaching positions in the municipal calleges must be recognized as due to racial discrimination and a deliberate exclusion, which are undoubtedly incompatible with our democratic principles."

Makes Statement

In releasing this information to the press, the Rev. Mr. Powell made the following statement:

"New York is a metropolis in which all races and creeds work and reside in comparative harmony. In no small measure is our splendid educational system responsible for this state of things for tolerance has been shown inall public schools, from the primary grades through to the high schools, in the unbiased selection of the teaching personnel.

"It is regrettable, however, that this same expression of understanding of an appreciation for the instructional qualifications of Negroes has not yet been felt by those responsible for the selection of personnel for the city's colleges. Nevertheless, to the end that the board of higher education does realize this important fact and that it does take steps to rectify this inconsistency between these two city departments, the Greater New York Coordinating Committee for Employment intends to exert every effort to see that Negroes are placed as regular instructors with tenure in City college, Hunter college, Brooklyn college and Queens college.

Meanwhile, a sub-committee headed by Mac C. Davies, appointed to arrange for the prosecution of the campaign, is making prearations for a mass meeting in Harlem on Sunday afternoon, May 18 at Abyssinia Baptist church. The annual meeting of the board of higher education is scheduled for May 19. At a meeting of the Pan-Hellenic conference, comprising the Negro Greek letter societies of New York city, complete support was pledged to the coordinating committee, according to Mr. Davies. A general meeting of other interested organizations will be held Saturday afternoon at Abyssinia church.

Max Yergen Fired As New York City College Lecturer Because of Radical Contacts

Allege Noted Leader Is Not Historian and Should Be Replaced by Expert in This Field

Deposed Man 'Struck Neck Out Too Far'

NEW YORK.—(ANP)—Speculation continued rife as to the true reasons why the College of the City of New York has refused to reappoint Dr. Max Yergan, for four years lecturer in Negro history and culture and now president of the National Negro Congress, for the term beginning in September.

Dr. Lawrence D. Reddick, curator of the famous Shomburg collection of Negro art and literature of the New York Public Library system who is spending his month in Haiti where he is seeking to foster the development of cultural relations with and among the natives of latin America, has been recommended for the lecture assignment and will in all probability be approved by the board of higher education.

"Some groups are apparently trying to create a furore about the disinclination of our history department to re-appoint Dr. Yergan for next year. The assignment is entirely unjustified for the department is considering standards of scholarship. Dr. Yergan has never been a full-time member of the department and has for the past four years been hired from term to term to teach one class a semester at an hourly rate.

"For sometime the department has been considering a replacement for Dr. Yergan. It feels that if a man is to give a course in history, he should be a historian. Dr. Yergan is not. He has published nothing on Negro history and has demonstrated no special scholarship in the field. The department therefore has decided trough its democratically-elected appointment committee not to re-appoint Dr. Yergan for the full term."

"The course in Negro History and culture will be given by a young scholar, also a Negro, who received his doctorate in history at the University of Chicago and who has been active in Negro scholarship and culture. His appointment has been under consideration for many months and he will be hired as special lecturer to teach the course in the school of education in the fall term and in the college of liberal arts and science in the spring semester."

At last year's annual convention of the National Negro congress in Washington, the question of Communist domination became so burning and insistent that A. Philip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Portres, refused to continue as president of the Congress. In all controversy of that convention no clear-out denial of Communist influence was ever made. It was under such potentially explosive circumstances that Dr. Yergan accepted the helm of that organization.

It is generally known too that Dr. Yergan's name has been frequently mentioned before the Rapp-Coudert committee, established by the legislature in 1940 to investigate the educational system throughout the state. In New York City the activities of this committee have been directed at uncovering "subversive elements" in the institutions of higher learning, run by the city, particularly Brooklyn and City colleges.

The opinion among many therefore has been that Dr. Yergan is now being penalized for "sticking his neck out too far" in pursuing his extra-curricula activities.

His appointment four years ago caused considerable stir in Harlem, it being the first time a Negro had ever attained such a position at the college. Prior to then he had been a mission secreeary for the "Y" in South Africa, but is said to have resigned his post over differences of opinion with association and because he "preferred not to compromise his beliefs". Dr. Yergan is now director of the Council on African Affairs, an organization he founded for the purpose of aiding and improving the condition of natives in South Africa.

Dr. Reddick received both his bachelor and master degree at Fisk university in Nashville, and his doctorate from the University of Chicago in 1939. He has enjoyed several fellowships. From 1933 to 1935 he was associate professor of History at Kentucky State College, and from 1935 to 1938 held a similar position at Dillard university, New Orleans. Dr. Reddick is an associate editor of the Journal of Negro History, and has membership in both the American Historical association and the Association for the Study of Negro Life and Culture.

IS APPOINTED AS A TEACHER OF PSYCHOLOGY

Assignment To Cover 8 Weeks Of Summer School Session

MAY 31 1941

NEW YORK. — (ANP) — Dr. Kenneth M. Clark has been appointed instructor in psychology in the college of liberal arts and science, college of the city of New York, for the eight weeks of the summer session, according to an announcement Friday by college authorities.

The appointment, in a measure, is precedent setting in that no Negro has ever taught in the science at higher city institutions prior to this.

Dr. Clark received his bachelor of arts degree from Howard university in 1935, and the master of science degree from the same institution in 1936. Columbia university awarded him his doctorate in the field of psychology in 1940, a subject he had taught at Howard from 1936 to 1937.

He was research psychologist with the American Youth council from 1938 to 1939 and for the following year was associated with the Carnegie-Myrdal study. The new instructor's writings have appeared both in the Journal of Social Psychology and in the Journal of Experimental Education, both of which are professional publications. He is at present a research fellow of the Rosenwald fund and a member of Sigma Xi fraternity.

Oddly enough Mrs. Mamie K. Clark, wife of the young Dr. Clark, is also a psychology major. She is the recipient of a grant from the Rosenwald fund to pursue further studies in her field. Together they have collaborated successfully in conducting psychological tests and in their writings. "Segregation as a Factor in the Racial Identification of Negro Pre-School Children: A Preliminary Report" is a paper representative of their combined efforts. It was published in the Journal of Experimental Education.

While the appointment of Dr. Clark to the summer session of City college is being welcomed by Harlemites, the community cannot but feel that if he is qualified to teach temporarily certainly he should receive more permanent tenure.

Dr. Laurence D. Reddick, curator of the Schomburg collection of the New York Public library, will also take up a temporary appointment with the beginning of the fall semester. His subjects will be Negro History and Culture.

NEW YORK—Describing the projected dismissal of Dr. Max Yergan from his position as Negro history instructor at New York City College as a "blow to the aspirations of the Negro people," the Committee for the Defense of Public Education here, headed by Dr. Bella V. Dodd, launched a nation-wide protest campaign last week in an appeal sent out to educators and prominent persons throughout the country.

Dr. Yergan, director of the Council on African Affairs and president of the National Negro Congress, has conducted courses on Negro history and culture at the college since September, 1937.

Dr. Yergan, it was announced, received a communication from J. Salwyn Schapiro, acting chairman of the History Department at City College, stating that "in order that the students may get the benefit of different personalities...your appointment will therefore terminate with the end of this term."

Dr. Schapiro's search for "different personalities" was described by Dr. Yergan as "ridiculously absurd." Dr. Yergan said his contract is not being renewed because he had "been unwise enough" to interest himself in community affairs and because he had concerned himself with the conditions under which children are being educated. He called Dr. Schapiro's statement a "pretext."

Dr. Yergan's course at City College was instituted as the result of an intensive campaign led by the Douglass Society at City College and the College Teachers Union Chapter there. Both organizations saw the need for presenting a true picture of the Negro people in the history and development of America. Appointment of Dr. Yergan marked a milestone in the advancement of Negro study since the course is still the only one of its kind in the four municipal colleges of the City of New York. In addition, Dr. Yergan is the only Negro member of the faculty of these institutions.

Reddick Choice Of Board

Ouster Results In Drive For More Appointments

MAY 10 1941

NEW YORK—The Board of Higher Education was petitioned last week " to state its policy and practice in regards to the appointment of qualified Negroes" to the teaching staffs of the four colleges operated by New York City, Hunter City, Brooklyn and Queens. The Greater New York Coordinating Committee for Employment, petitioner in the action, is sponsor of this new drive to enlarge vocational opportunities for Negroes.

MAY 10 1941

While much thought had been previously given to this subject by the Committee, it was said the failure of City College to re-appoint Dr. Max Yergan as special lecturer on Negro History and Culture, prompted action.

FACTORS QUESTIONED

The brief, entitled "An Inquiry into the Appointment of Negroes to the Teaching Staffs of the Municipal Colleges of New York," questions "the factors which have so limited the appointment conditions and opportunities of qualified Negroes." Although Dr. Yergan has lectured at CCNY for four years, it was made clear that he has never been a member of the regular teaching staff "with the same tenure and rights as others."

Dr. Lawrence D. Redick, curator of the Schomburg collection of Negro art and literature of the New York Public Library system who is in Haiti seeking to foster the development of cultural relations with and among the natives of Latin America, has been recommended for the lecture assignment and will in all probability be approved by the board of higher education.

In his statement announcing the determination of the administration, Dr. Harry Wright, acting president of the city institution, said:

"Some groups are apparently trying to create a furore about the disinclination of our history department to reappoint Dr. Yergan for next year. The assignment is entirely unjustified for the department is considering standards of scholarship. Dr. Yergan has never been a full-time member of the department and has for the past four years been hired from term to term to teach one class a semester at an hourly rate.

REPLACEMENT CONSIDERED

"For sometime the department has been considering a replacement for Dr. Yergan. It feels that if a man is to give a course in history, he should be a historian. Dr. Yergan is not. He has published nothing on Negro history, and has demonstrated no special scholarship in the field. The department therefore has decided, through its democratically-elected appointment committee, not to re-appoint Dr. Yergan for the full term."

MAY 10 1941

"The course in Negro history and culture will be given by a young scholar also a Negro, who received his doctorate in history at the University of Chicago and who has been active in Negro scholarship and culture.

Dr. Yergan's appointment four years ago marked the first time a Negro has ever attained such a position at the college. He had previously been a mission secretary for for the YMCA in South Africa. He is now director of the Council on African Affairs.

Dr. Reddick received both his bachelor and master's degrees at Fisk University in Nashville, and his doctorate from the University of Chicago in 1939. He is an associate editor of the Journal of Negro History, and has membership in both the American Historical Association an dthe Association for the Study of Negro Life and Culture.

Rev. Dr. A. Clayton Powell, pastor of Abyssianian Baptist Church and chairman of the Coordinating Committee emphasized that his committee is not seeking to champion the cause of any one individual. It is, rather, seeking openings for all Negroes.

CONTRAST SHOWN

The committee's brief points out that of the 1,462 regular teaching positions of a non-administrative nature covered by the current fiscal budget, not one is held by a Negro. It goes on to show the contrast in policy and practice between the Board of Education, with jurisdiction over the primary and secondary schools of the city, and the Board of Higher Education.

In releasing this information to the press, Rev. Powell made the following statement:

MAY 10 1941

"New York is a metropolis in which all races and creeds work and reside in comparative harmony. In no small measure is our splendid educational system responsible for this state of things, for tolerance has been shown in all public schools, from the primary grades through to the high schools, in the unbiased selection of the teaching personnel.

CALLED REGRETTABLE

"It is regrettable, however, that this same expression of understanding of, and appreciation for, the instructional qualifications of Negroes has not yet been felt by those responsible for the selection of personnel for the city's colleges. Nevertheless, to the end that the Board of Higher Education does realize this important fact and that it does take steps to rectify this inconsistency between these two city departments, the Greater New York Coordinating Committee for Employment intends to exert every effort to see that Negroes are placed as regular instructors with tenure in City College, Hunter College, Brooklyn Colege and Queens Colege."

CALLED REACTIONARY

The release of Dr. Yergan from the instructional staff of the City College of New York, was branded this week an another reactionary drive "against democracy in education" by the committee for defense of public education, 114 East 16th Street. Dr. Yergan has conducted courses on Negro History and Culture at the College since September 1937 under special appointment. He was recently notified by J. Salwyn Schapiro, acting chairman of the history department, that "in order that the students may get the benefit of different personalities, your appointment will therefore terminate with the end of this term."

MAY 10 1941

Dr. Shapiro's search for "different personalities" was described by Dr. Yergan as "ridiculously absurd." He attributed his discharge to the fact that he had interested himself too well in community affairs and in the conditions under which children are being educated.

DENIES CONNECTION

The Board of Higher Education has been conducting a probe of Communist activities at the school but authorities denied that there was any tie-up between the red investigation and Dr. Yergan's release. Dr. Yergan was the second Negro to hold a professorship in a New York College. The late James Weldon Johnson preceded him as a professor of Negro culture at New York University.

Backers of Bus Strike Seek New Job Victory

NEW YORK, (ANP).—A campaign to secure positions on the regular teaching staffs of the four colleges operated by the City of New York was inaugurated on Wednesday by the Greater New York Co-ordinating Committee for Employment.

The group, which played a leading role in the recent strike which led to an agreement with two city bus lines for employment of colored drivers and mechanics, initiated its new drive with a petition asking the board of higher education to state its policy regarding mixed college faculties.

Dr. Yergan Dropped

While much thought had been previously given to this subject by the committee, it is said, the failure of City College to re-appoint Dr. Max Yergan as special lecturer on Negro history and culture is said to have prompted this action.

Although Dr. Yergan has lectured at CCNY for four years, it was made clear that he has never been a member of the regular teaching staff "with the same tenure and rights as others."

1,462 Positions Involved

The committee's brief points out that the 1,462 regular teaching positions at City, Hunter, Brooklyn and Queens Colleges are all held by whites, and contrasts this policy with that of the board of education, with jurisdiction over the primary and secondary schools.

A sub-committee headed by Mac C. Davies, appointed to arrange for the prosecution of the campaign, is making preparations for a mass meeting on Sunday afternoon, May 18, at Abyssinian Baptist Church. The annual meeting of the board of higher education is scheduled for May 19.

Let the '60' Themselves Hire Negroes --- Yergan

By Eugene Gordon

The Negro people question the good faith of the 60 persons who recently signed a statement calling for the employment of Negroes where they have never been employed before, Dr. Max Yergan, president of the National Negro Congress, declared yesterday. Evidence of the good faith of these men, many of whom are themselves employers, would take the form, Dr. Yergan said, "of immediate employment of Negroes in jobs—or in some of the jobs—these men control."

The statement to which Dr. Yergan referred, prominently displayed in the press last Wednesday and commented on editorially in a number of newspapers, was addressed specifically to employers of workers in so-called defense industries.

The newspaper PM, which gave nine pages to the question and whose owner, Marshall Field, is owner also of the big Chicago department store bearing his name, reported as follows on a part of the statement signed by "60 prominent Americans"

MAY 12 1941

"No thinking person can fail to realize the loss to the cause of national defense through such conditions involving the Negro tenth of our population, and their harmful effect upon the character and attitudes of Negro Americans who are eager to give concrete expression to their patriotism. Frustration, destruction of morale, and opening of the doors for subversive agitators opposed to the American way of life, will be almost inevitable consequences."

Marshall Field's name was among the 60 signers of the statement.

The Daily Worker immediately wired its Chicago correspondent for information on Marshall Field and Co.'s policy toward the hiring of Negroes. The reply was that Marshall Field, who so eloquently pleaded in PM for jobs for Negroes, neither hired them in his store nor permitted them to live in his apartment houses.

Dr. Yergan's complete statement follows:

"It is significant that the statement of those 60 prominent Americans place all emphasis on taking the Negro into the so-called defense industries. We do not say that it is an incorrect emphasis, because the Negro people have a right to participate in the full job-life of the country. However, I should like to point out that the pattern, the basis, for excluding Negroes from jobs was laid long before the present so-called crisis; consequently, emphasis should be on that form of economic security which comes from regular, normal participation in the job-life of the country.

"We should like to have evidence of the good faith of these 60 persons in the form of immediate employment of Negroes in the jobs—or in some of the jobs—these men control.

"It would be a mistake, and it would do serious harm to the Negro people, if they demanded jobs in exchange for support of war-making plans and of war itself, since this war holds no good for the Negro but will usher in destruction of his democratic rights and further denial of the meager civil liberties he enjoys already.

"The Negro people must insist on jobs while at the same time opposing this imperialist war and our intervention in it. It is a war which cannot possibly serve to strengthen democracy or to liberate the people, for it is an instrument of oppression of the people the world over."

BELIEVED VICTIM OF RADICAL PURGE

MAY 10 1941

NEW YORK, May 8 (ANP)—Speculation continued rife as to the true reasons why the College of the City of New York has refused to reappoint Dr. Max Yergan, for four years lecturer in Negro history and culture and now president of the National Negro Congress, for the term beginning in September.

MAY 10 1941

Dr. Lawrence D. Reddick, curator of the famous Schomburg collection of Negro art and literature of the New York Public Library system who is spending this month in Haiti where he is seeking to foster the development of cultural relations with and among the natives of Latin America, has been recommended for the lecture assignment and will in all probability be approved by the board of higher education.

In his statement announcing the determination of the administration, Dr. Harry Wright, acting president of the city institution, said:

"Some groups are apparently trying to create a furore about the disinclination of our history department to reappoint Dr. Yergan for next year. The assignment is entirely unjustified for the department is considering standards of scholarship. Dr. Yergan has never been a full-time member of the department and has for the past four years been hired from term to term to teach one class a semester at an hourly rate.

"For some time the department has been considering a replacement for Dr. Yergan. It feels that if a man is to give a course in history, he should be a historian. Dr. Yergan is not. He has published nothing on Negro history and has demonstrated no special scholarship in the field. The department therefore has decided through its democratically-elected appointment committee not to reappoint Dr. Yergan for the full term."

N. C. College Library Science Department Is Approved

DURHAM, N. C.—At the annual meeting of the Southern Association of Colleges held recently in Memphis, Tenn., the department of library science of the North Carolina College for Negroes was approved, Dr. James E. Shepard, president, announced this week.

Plans are now being formulated to secure additional books and at least two more teachers and necessary equipment for this department, the administration disclosed.

Beginning in September the degree of bachelor of arts will be conferred at the completion of the required course.

The course in library science was instituted two years ago and at present students enrolled for the course have access to 23,500 volumes.

LARGER FUND ASKED FOR NEGRO COLLEGE

RALEIGH, Jan. 25.—(AP)—Saying that "colleges are just as much weapons of defense as are armies," Dr. J. E. Shepard of the North Carolina College of Negroes asked the joint appropriations committee yesterday to increase the appropriation for the school.

He pleaded that negroes be given "a chance to prepare for the future in a world certain to change." The increase he asked for was $79,000 over the budget bureau recommendations for the biennium. The budget commission recommended $213,747.

Shepard also suggested a $10,000,000 permanent improvements program for the college. He and other state educational leaders said the program was due for expansion under the increasing requests from negro students for graduate and law school training.

Former Legislator Walter P. Murphy of Salisbury, author of the 1939 act of the general assembly authorizing establishment of a graduate school at N.C.C.N., spoke for the college's request.

He reminded the committee he had drawn the bill at the request of Governor Hoey after the U. S. Supreme court had ruled that state universities must accept negro students who apply for admission if courses which they seek were not available in state negro institutions.

The state has appropriated no funds for the operation of the graduate school in the last biennium.

HEAD OF SCHOOL HAS SUPPORT OF WHITES

Hearings For A. and T. and Other Negro Colleges Are Set For Monday.

RALEIGH, Jan. 24.—(AP)—Pleading that negroes be given "a chance to prepare for the future in a world order certain to change," Dr. J. E. Shepard of the North Carolina College for Negroes at Durham, asked the joint appropriations committee today for an increase of $79,303 over budget bureau recommendations for the operation of the school during the next two years.

In requesting the increase—above recommendations for appropriation by the state of $213,747 for the biennium—the negro leader suggested a $10,000,000 permanent improvements program for the college which he and other state educational leaders declared is due for expansion under the increasing requests from negro students for graduate and law school training.

Speaking in support of the request for the school increase was former Legislator Walter P. (Pete) Murphy, of Salisbury, author of the 1939 act of the general assembly authorizing establishment of a graduate school at North Carolina College for Negroes.

Murphy reminded the committee he had drawn the bill to set up the graduate unit at the request of Governor Hoey in 1939 after the United States Supreme court had ruled in a suit filed by a Missouri negro student that state universities must accept negro students who apply for admission, if courses which they seek are not available in state negro institutions.

The state appropriated no funds for the operation of the graduate school in the last biennium.

Also appearing in support of Dr. Shepard's petition were Deans M. T. Van Hecke and W. W. Pierson, of the University of North Carolina; R. M. Gantt and Oscar G. Barker, of Durham, and C. C. Spaulding, president of the North Carolina Mutual Life Insurance company, largest negro insurance concern in the world.

The college president, advising the committee that he was mindful "we are in the defense program," declared:

Spaulding observed in this connection that of 295 persons executed in North Carolina in the last 20 years, 192 were negroes. "I am wondering why," Spaulding said, indicating that in improved education lies improvement in social life.

Dr. Shepard asked the committee to revert to the axiom and "invest in brains instead of in the soil" to gain highest dividends.

Alluding to the resolution of state authorities to reduce the differential between the pay of white and negro school teachers, the college head asked that an allocation of $250,000 be made for that purpose, to be "almost" accomplished in four years. "I know the heart throbs of these negro teachers and how hard they are working to preserve the harmony between the two races that has long characterized the state of North Carolina," he said.

Upon motion of Representative Bryant, of Durham, the committee voted to suspend its rule against subcommittees and appoint such a body of five members to inspect an 18-acre land site adjoining the campus of the college in Durham for possible purchase by the state. The additional land is "badly" needed, the committee advised.

Gantt told the committee the tract could be bought for "about $1,000 an acre". The college said it would buy the land from the increase in appropriations if its request was honored.

Incorporated in the negro educator's request was a $7,000 yearly increase (above budget estimates) in law school teachers' salaries. The college will conduct a two-year law school in 1942, a three-year school in 1943.

Dean Van Hecke of the university law school said that a check of work being done by the five law students at N. C. C. N. compared favorably with that of students in Chapel Hill.

Further committee hearings had been scheduled today for the Confederate Women's home, the State Industrial Farm Colony for Women and the Eastern Carolina Training school.

However, only Director Sam Leonard of the training school appeared before the committee, presenting to the group a letter from the school saying the recommendations of the budget bureau for its appropriation during the next biennium was "accepted". Leonard's letter said "we are one of the very few" state agencies or institutions that actually asked for less this next biennium than in the past.

The appropriations unit will meet again Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock with scheduled hearings for four state negro teachers colleges—A. and T. of Greensboro, Winston-Salem Teachers college, Elizabeth City State Teachers college and the Fayetteville State Teachers college.

Negro College Appropriations

Appeals for increases in the appropriations for the state-supported Negro Colleges of North Carolina are based on a number of factors.

Not the least important of these factors are: (1) the ruling of the United States Supreme Court that the various states must provide facilities which will allow Negro college students equal opportunities with white students for post-graduate professional study, and (2) the necessity of eliminating as early as possible the differential now existing between the salaries of white and colored teachers.

Other reasons have to do with the steady growth of interest in education among Negro youth and the increasing pressure of applicants upon the existing facilities of Negro colleges. Although the Negroes have eagerly embraced the opportunities for education afforded them almost from the very beginning, for a long while the facilities available to them remained below standard. In recent years, especially in North Carolina, an earnest effort has been made by socially-minded political and educational leaders to remedy this condition.

The benefits to be derived from this policy do not lie entirely with the individual students affected or with the Negro race. As President J. W. Seabrook, of the Fayetteville State Teachers College, reminded the appropriations committee of the General Assembly Monday, it is preferable that the majority of the public elementary school children in this state should be taught by North Carolinians, educated in North Carolina institutions.

In the face of difficulty and handicap, Negro colleges in this state have done remarkably well. Especially is this true of Winston-Salem Teachers College, where standards of efficiency all out of proportion to the facilities of the institution have been consistently maintained through the years under the progressive and inspiring leadership of the late Dr. S. G. Atkins and his sons, President F. L. and Jack Atkins.

The support of the state has been somewhat more generous in recent years and the college is now undergoing a program of expansion which needs to be continued to meet the urgent necessity of standardizing the instructional staff.

Despite the necessity for the state to draw its appropriation lines fairly tight in order to maintain a balanced budget, we believe these requests of the Negro educational institutions should be given full consideration with the aim of extending to them as much aid and encouragement as possible. The hope of our society lies in the education, not of a few of our youth, or half of our youth, but in the training of all our youth to become enlightened and useful citizens.

Negro Colleges Urge Increased Appropriations

Raleigh (AP).—Increases in funds for Negro colleges were linked yesterday as a corollary of the state's announced policy of reducing the pay differential between white and Negro teachers, when spokesmen for four of the institutions appeared before the appropriations committee of the General Assembly.

"With the reduction of the differential and the introduction of a retirement system," President J. W. Seabrook of the Fayetteville State Teachers College told the committee, "school boards will be besieged increasingly by applicants from out-of-state institutions, some of them being nationally known colleges of the north and middle west enjoying much greater financial support than North Carolina is able to give to its institutions.

"If the legislature can see its way clear to give just a modest boost to the appropriations recommended for the teacher-training institutions, they can meet the challenge," Seabrook said.

"We believe that North Carolinians prefer that the majority of the teachers of the public elementary school children should be North Carolinians, educated chiefly in North Carolina institutions under the supervision of North Carolina officials imbued with the viewpoints and ideals of North Carolina," declared the Negro college president.

Seabrook said that the Fayetteville college was operated on a lower per capita cost than any other single publicly supported institution in the United States. The committee had earlier heard F. D. Bluford, president of A. and T. Negro College at Greensboro, describe North Carolina's appropriation for that institution as the lowest for any Negro land-grant college in the south.

The state's contribution to the Fayetteville college this year was listed as $44 a student, and for A. and T. College the per capita appropriation was $66 a student.

President Seabrook asked an increase of $37,510 in the biennial appropriation of $64,855 recommended by the budget commission. The additional funds, he said, would provide for additional teachers, salary increases, equipment, library addition, kitchen addition and purchase of six acres of land.

Others who spoke in behalf of the Fayetteville college were: Senator Stringfield and Representative Cooke of Cumberland, Emil Rosenthal of Goldsboro, and Maurice Fleishman of Fayetteville.

President Bluford told the committee that the Greensboro institution had a "waiting list" of students seeking admission and made a plea for a building program to erect a boy's dormitory for 304 students, a dairy building and a gymnasium. Total cost of the construction would be $428,000.

Increases were also requested for maintenance totaling $97,460. The additional fund would provide more instructors, salary increases, equipment and supplies. The budget commission recommended an appropriation of $132,792 for the Greensboro Negro college in 1941-43.

C. A. Hines, of Greensboro, a trustee of A. and T. College, said that economies at the institution had "gone too far," and Caesar Cone, of Greensboro, another trustee, added that it would be "good business" for the state to invest more money in training Negroes for agriculture and the trades.

F. L. Atkins, president of the Winston-Salem State Teachers College, asked an increase of $20,[illegible] institution over the $85,[illegible] ended for the biennium budget commission.

The Atkins[illegible] Salem institution, cessity [illegible] es the "urgent necessity dardizing our instructio[illegible] to meet the minimum r[illegible]ments of the state departm[illegible] public instruction."

Atkins [illegible]tioned but did not press a re[illegible]uest for a combination physical education building and gymnasium.

Gordon Gray, of Winston-Salem, speaking as a trustee of the college rather than as state senator, told the committee that the institution's plea is "not a frivolous request" and is "endorsed by the citizens of our community." He described the college as a "great force for good throughout the state."

Postmaster Harmon Linvell, of Kernersville, also spoke as a trustee in behalf of an increase in the college's appropriation.

H. L. Trigg, president of the Elizabeth City State Teachers College, asked a biennial increase of $12,490 for salaries and equipment and a fund of $179,499 for the erection of a fine and industrial arts building and the renovation of a boy's dormitory.

Representative Halstead of Camden, Senator Fearing of Dare and G. R. Little of Elizabeth City, chairman of the board of trustees, spoke in behalf of a boost in the appropriation for the college. The budget commission recommended $54,187 for 1941-43.

Earlier the department of conservation and development presented its request for additional funds for forest fire prevention, state parks and general forestry.

C. G. Spencer of Carthage, president of the N. C. Forestry Association, asked an increase of $19,500 for forest fire prevention in order to extend protection to Avery, Stanly, Orange, Gates, Pamlico, Hyde, Tyrrell and Franklin counties. An appropriation for $117,500 for 1941-43 was recommended.

State Forester J. S. Holmes sought to boost a $20,000 in the $53,058 for general forestry during the next two years, and T. W. Morse of the conservation department appealed for an extra $25,730 to provide for the opening and maintenance of three new parks.

Morse said Fort Macon State Park in Carteret county would have a new beach development ready by June 1 and that Hanging Rock State Park in Stokes county would open its swimming, boating and fishing facilities to the public by summer. Pettigrew Park in Washington county may be formally dedicated before 1943, Morse added.

Scheduled to be heard by the committee this afternoon are all the branches of the department of public instruction, including the schoolteachers. The first night session of the committee will be held tomorrow. State College experiment station and extension service will present their requests at that time.

COLLEGE GROUP ENDS WALKOUT

Students at St. Augustine College Back at Desks After Row Over Food

RALEIGH, N. C.—Four days of campus turmoil, created by a reported "food strike" by students of St. Augustine College, here last week ended Monday, according to Rev. Edgar H. Gould, president of the school, who announced that the strike had been settled through the student council.

The entire student body, with the exception of nine youths, and the student council are said to have been involved in the walkout which occurred last Thursday, was prompted by dissatisfaction with the school meals.

The situation, described by striking students as one of long standing, reached a climax Thursday evening, it is said, when students were served a mixture of corn, flour, potatoes and bacon "mixed together like hash," with bread and water.

A mass protest, reportedly termed by Rev. Gould as "an attack of Spring fever," resulted in the strike.

School officials, allegedly blaming the strike on the influence of "northern" students at the institution, denied charges that the meals had consisently been bad, ridiculed one student's description of a meal of spaghetti, syrup and bread as "untrue," emphatically denied assertions that water was the only beverage served regularly.

The striking students are said to have returned to the dining hall Sunday evening on invitation of school officials but revolted again when they were served a meal of "leftovers," including bacon and apples.

Details of the reported Monday morning settlement were not revealed.

GROUP OF BUILDINGS AT IMMAUNEL LUTHERAN AT WORK ON A. AND T. FARM

Immanuel Lutheran Serves Students From Wide Area

Local Negro College Emphasizes the Need For Christian Training Through Religious Instruction and Consistent Application of Principles.

Located in Greensboro since 1905, Immanuel Lutheran college is one of the smaller institutions devoted to the education of the negro. In the past years more than half of its students have come from states outside of North Carolina—from Michigan and New York to Louisiana and Alabama.

Established by the Lutheran church as a preparatory school of a missionary character, the school has always emphasized the need of a thorough Christian training and of a high standard of moral discipline. This is accomplished not merely through daily devotional exercises and regular religious instruction based on the Bible, but also through the consistent application of these principles to everyday life, thought and work. The school believes in a high scolastic standard and insists on thorough study and application as a preparation for life's problems. Men and women are trained for definite missionary work in the Negro Lutheran church, or they can pursue a general course of study suited to their individual needs. Each person receives individual consideration and enjoys the benefits of those experiences which accrue from the Christian paternal relationship between faculty and students.

Maintained By Conference.

The school is controlled and maintained by the Evangelical Lutheran Synodical Conference of North America with headquarters in St. Louis, Mo. At present this church organization maintains about 50 elementary and secondary schools in various parts of the south. A local elementary school is located on East Washington street and Benbow road and has an enrollment of about 100 children. Liberal support given by the above church body has enabled Immanuel Lutheran college to provide a liberal educational opportunity to many negroes at a moderate cost. This has been a boon to not a few parents of small incomes, who otherwise could not have given their children adequate scholastic and cultural preparation.

Immanuel Lutheran college carries on its work in three departments—the high school, the junior college and the theological seminary. The high school is fully accredited by the state of North Carolina and also by the Southern association. It offers standard high school courses, including two years of home economics. Present plans call for an expansion of the curriculm. The junior college offers standard college and educational courses preparatory for senior college and also for special work of Lutheran elementary school teachers. Graduates of the junior college have been recognized as fully qualified by many of the leading senior colleges, and their credits have been evaluated on a par with other schools. Many graduates are now successful teachers, business men or in professional work.

The theological seminary offers a four-year course in theology for Lutheran pastors, one year of which is spent before graduation in actual service under the observation of an experienced pastor. Graduates of the theological department are working in the states of the Atlantic seaboard from New York to Louisiana, and are ministering to approximately 10,000 persons in this area.

Other Activities.

Among the extra-curricular activities of the school, the choral group of Dramatics club, under direction of Mrs. Nadine Lash Hightower, have achieved much favorable comment. The choral group has made frequent appearances in Greensboro and nearby cities. At frequent intervals, plays and productions are given in the college auditorium by the Dramatics club, which are educational and entertaining. The Debating club, Home Economics club, and other organizations offer the students opportunity for self-development.

Athletics occupy a very important place in the school. Last fall football was introduced for the first time. The Red Warriors finished the season with a 500 per cent average. Harry Koontz, the coach, has shown skill in developing excellent basketball teams. Arthur Headen has capably assisted in the athletic program. Tennis, baseball, track, volley ball and similar sports are included in a well-rounded athletic program, which is intended to develop a strong body, good health and clean sportsmanship.

The equipment of the school is modern. The buildings were only recently completely remodeled. The library is enlarged and offers excellent opportunity for concentrated study and research in pleasant and convenient surroundings. The laboratory is well equipped for the teaching of chemistry, biology, physics and other sciences. The members of the teaching staff are all well prepared for their work.

A student government and activity council, in conjunction with the faculty regulate the conduct and activities of students in the dormitories and on the campus. Immanuel Lutheran college is known for its excellent scholastic achievements, its high disciplinary and social ideals, its thoroughly Christian emphasis, and its reasonable cost.

Helping the Negroes

Agencies that have elected to concern themselves in behalf of the welfare and advancement of the Negro cannot henceforth point an accusing finger at North Carolina, in view of latest statistics on educational facilities afforded members of that race. According to evidence offered by the Commission on Interracial Cooperation, the State leads the country in enrollment and in graduations this spring in Negro colleges, and friends and well-wishers of the colored people will take a pride in that achievement.

Facts are not immediately at hand as to what is being done elsewhere, but we have a feeling that North Carolina has made and is making as much progress as any commonwealth, at least in the South, in trying as best it may to do greater justice to the Negroes in lifting standards of compensation for teachers in their schools. Within its limited capacity, moves that could have been made by the State toward more liberal compensation for white teachers have been to some extent held back temporarily in order to assist the colored instructors. This gesture of sympathetic helpfulness is appreciated, too, we are sure, by the Negroes.

Eleven Negro colleges in North Carolina are graduating 911 men and women with degrees won by four years or more of college work. A total of 676 are receiving bachelor of science degrees, 224 bachelor of arts, eight bachelors of divinity and three master of arts. During the year now ending these eleven colleges enrolled 2,035 men and 3,631 women, or a total of 5,666. This is more than one thousand in excess of enrollment in any other State, though North Carolina's Negro population is smaller than three other States. In fifteen years Negro college enrollment in North Carolina has risen from 1,351 in 1926, or a gain of about three hundred percent.

In 109 Negro colleges in the entire country, enrollment the past year was 45,876, of whom 5,064 are receiving degrees this commencement. Fifteen years ago there were 79 Negro colleges in the country as a whole, with an enrollment of 17,506.

It is doubtful if race relations are on a more cordial basis anywhere in the United States than in North Carolina. The white man and the colored man have lived on peaceful terms here for many years, and there is a growing understanding and an increasing tolerance between them and a more thoughtful appreciation on the part of each of the problems of the other. If data were available, it would probably reveal, too, that the economic status of the Negro is as high in this State as anywhere, possibly even higher.

Much remains to be attempted and to be accomplished even yet, but at least North Carolina has shown a desire and a willingness to face the problem and to do its best toward justice and square dealings for the Negro. In that respect, the State is pointing the way to other goals whose attainment should make for more happiness and better living for all of its people.

N. Carolina Leads Nation As 911 Negroes Receive Degrees From 11 Colleges

ATLANTA, (ANP)—North Carolina leads the nation in the granting of degrees to Negroes this year for four or more years of college work according to a survey just completed by the Commission on Interracial Cooperation. The 11 colored colleges of that state will confer 911 degrees divided as bachelors of science, 676; bachelors of art, 224; bachelors of divinity, 8; and masters of art, 3.

Total enrollment for the year at these 11 colleges is 2,035 men and 3,631 women for a total of 5,666 which exceeds the enrollment of any other state by 1,000 although Georgia, Mississippi and Alabama each has a larger Negro population. In 1926, incidentally, a government survey showed only 1,351 Negroes enrolled in North Carolina which indicates a boost of 300 per cent in 15 years.

By colleges, the 1941 graduates are as follows:

Greensboro A. and T., 74; Bennett, Greensboro, 47; Johnson C. Smith, Charlotte, 137; Livingstone, Salisbury, 36; N. C. Law Librarian Also Added To Staff Of Durham School For Coming Year

The Law School of the North Carolina College for Negroes in Durham, with a full-time faculty of three Negro law professors and with a full-time Negro law librarian, will open for its second year on Sept. 18, it was announced yesterday by President James E. Shepard.

The resident law faculty will consist of James Y. Carter, of Winston-Salem; Charles W. Quick, Cleveland, Ohio, and of Albert L. Turner, Tuskegee, Ala. The law librarian will be Daniel E. Moore, of Charlotte.

Carter is a graduate of Yates College and of the Boston University Law School. He was admitted to the North Carolina Bar last Summer and has been teaching history and commercial law at the college here for the past year.

Quick was born in Durham and is a graduate of Talladoga College and of Harvard Law School. He has practiced law in Cleveland since 1938.

Turner is a graduate of Adelbert College and of Western Reserve University Law School. He practiced law in Cleveland, had three years of graduate work in political science at the University of Michigan, and has long been a member of the faculty of Tuskegee Institute where he is now registrar.

Moore is a graduate of Johnson C. Smith University and has had four years of library experience and three Summers of training in the Library School of Columbia University.

This full-time staff will be assisted by four visiting professors from the law school of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, including Henry P. Brandis Jr., John P. Dalzell, Fred B. McCall, and M. T. Van Hecke. Miss Lucile Elliott, law librarian at Chapel Hill, will act as consulting librarian, and M. T. Van Hecke will serve as dean.

During the year 1941-42 only a two-year course of study will be offered. A third year of work will be added in 1942-43 and the first degrees awarded in June 1943. The program has been approved by the North Carolina Board of Law Examiners.

Four Negro Colleges Seek Increased Appropriations

President Of Fayetteville State Teachers College Says Boosts Will Be Needed To Meet Competition From Teachers Trained Out Of State

Raleigh, Jan. 27.—(AP)—Increases in funds for Negro colleges were linked yesterday as a corollary of the State's announced policy of reducing the pay differential between white and Negro teachers, when spokesmen for four of the institutions appeared before the appropriations committee of the General Assembly.

"With the reduction of the differential and the introduction of a retirement system," President J. W. Seabrook of the Fayetteville State Teachers College told the committee, "school boards will be besieged increasingly by applicants from out-of-state institutions, some of them being nationally known colleges of the North and Middle West enjoying much greater financial support than North Carolina is able to give to its institutions.

"If the legislature can see its way clear to give just a modest boost to the appropriations recommended for the teacher-training institutions, they can meet the challenge," Seabrook said.

"We believe that North Carolinians prefer that the majority of the teachers of the public elementary school children should be North Carolinians, educated chiefly in North Carolina institutions under the supervision of North Carolina officials imbued with the viewpoints and ideals of North Carolina," declared the Negro college president.

Seabrook said that the Fayetteville college was operated on a lower per capita cost than any other single publicly supported institution in the United States. The committee had earlier heard F. D. Bluford, president of A. and T. Negro College at Greensboro, describe North Carolinia's appropriation for that institution as the lowest for any Negro land-grant college in the South.

The State's contribution to the Fayetteville college this year was listed as $44 a student, and for A. and T. College the per capita appropriation was $66 a student.

President Seabrook asked an increase of $37,510 in the biennial appropriation of $64,855 recommended by the budget commission. The additional funds, he said, would provide for additional teachers, salary increases, equipment, library addition, kitchen addition and purchase of six acres of land.

Others who spoke in behalf of the Fayetteville college were Senator Stringfield and Representative Cooke of Cumberland, Emil Rosenthal of Goldsboro, and Maurice Fleishman of Fayetteville.

President Bluford told the committee that the Greensboro institution had a "waiting list" of students seeking admission and made a plea for building program to erect a boy's dormitory for 304 students, a dairy building and a gymnasium. Total cost of the construction would be $428,000.

Increases were also requested for maintenance totaling $97,460. The additional fund would provide more instructors, salary increases, equipment and supplies. The budget commission recommended an appropriation of $132,792 for the Greensboro Negro college in 1941-43.

C. A. Hines of Greensboro, a trustee of A. and T. College, said that economies at the institution had "gone too far," and Caesar Cone of Greensboro, another trustee, added that it would be "good business" for the State to invest more money in training Negroes for agriculture and the trades.

F. L. Atkins, president of the Winston-Salem State Teachers College, sought an increase of $20,000 for his institution over the $85,736 recommended for the biennium by the budget commission.

The Winston-Salem institution, Atkins said, faces the "urgent necessity of standardizing our instructional staff to meet the minimum requirements of the State Department of Public Instruction."

Atkins mentioned but did not press a request for a combination physical education building and gymnasium.

Gordon Gray of Winston-Salem, speaking as a trustee of the college rather than as State Senator, told the committee that the institution's plea is "not a frivolous request" and is "endorsed by the citizens of our community." He described the college as a "great force for good throughout the State."

Postmaster Harmon Lintell of Kernersville also spoke as a trustee in behalf of an increase in the college's appropriation.

H. L. Trigg, president of the Elizabeth City State Teachers College, asked a biennial increase of $12,490 for salaries and equipment and a fund of $179,499 for the erection of a fine and industrial arts building and the renovation of a boys' dormitory.

Representative Halstead of Camden, Senator Fearing of Dare and G. R. Little of Elizabeth City, chairman of the board of trustees, spoke in behalf of a boost in the appropriation for the college. The budget commission recommended $54,187 for 1941-43.

Earlier the Department of Conservation and Development presented its request for additional funds for forest fire prevention, State parks and general forestry.

C. G. Spencer of Carthage, president of the N. C. Forestry Association, asked an increase of $19,500 for forest fire prevention in order to extend protection to Avery, Stanly, Orange, Gates, Pamlico, Hyde, Tyrell and Franklin Counties. An appropriation for $117,500 for 1941-43 was recommended.

State Forester J. S. Holmes sought to boost a $20,000 in the $53,058 for general forestry during the next two years, and T. W. Morse of the conservation department appealed for an extra $25,730 to provide for the opening and maintenance of three new parks.

Morse said Fort Macon State Park in Carteret County would have a new beach development ready by June 1 and that Hanging Rock State Park in Stokes County would open its swimming, boating and fishing facilities to the public by Summer. Pettigrew Park in Washington County may be formally dedicated before 1943, Morse added.

N. C. Schools Need Boost To Face Challenge

Committee Hears Pleas of State College Presidents

RALEIGH, N. C. — The presidents of the five state-supported colleges of North Carolina made appeals before the joint appropriations committee, in session here last week, for increases in the amount of money to come from the public funds to operate their schools during the next two years.

The increases were linked up with the plan of the state to reduce the differential of salaries between colored and white teachers.

NEED MODEST BOOST

Dr. J. W. Seabrook, president of Fayetteville State Teachers College told the committee that, "With the reduction of the differential and the introduction of a retirement system, school boards will be besieged increasingly by applicants from out-of-state institutions some of them being nationally known colleges of the North and Middle West enjoying much greater financial support than North Carolina is able to give its institutions."

"A modest boost to the appropriations," Dr. Seabrook, suggested, "would enable the state institutions to meet the challenge."

ASK PAY INCREASE

Dr. J. E. Shepard's plea called upon the state to meet "its minimum obligation to the race." He told the committee that two of the most vital measures they would face, in the sphere of interracial relations and goodwill, were the differential in teachers salaries and the question of graduate training for the race. Here the outstanding educator asked that the legislature without question provide between $250,000 and $300,000 for the adjustment of teachers' salaries.

In the request for his school, Dr. Shepard asked $79,303 above the estimate receipts of the institution. He pointed to the need of $10,000,000 for permanent improvements but declared that he was seeking the minimum needs for a chance at graduate work for the race. His requests made provision for improvements in the library, boys' dormitory, the dining room, purchase of the president's home, and the purchase of 25 acres of land for future expansion of the school.

President Seabrook asked for an increase of $37,510 in the biennial appropriation of $64,855 recommended by the budget commission. These funds would provide for additional teachers, salary increases, equipment, library addition, kitchen addition, and purchase of six acres of land.

A. & T. WANTS BUILDINGS

F. D. Bluford, president of A. & T. College asked an increase of $97,460 above the $132,792 recommended by the budget commission. The urgent need for a building program was stressed. The $428,000 asked would make possible a boys' dormitory, a dairy building and a gymnasium.

Presdient F. L. Atkins of Winston-Salem Teachers College asked an additional $20,000 for his institution over the $85,736 recommended by the budget commission He pointed to the necessity of standardizing the instruction of the school to meet the minimum requirements of the State Department of Public Instruction. He also included a request for a combination physical education building and gymnasium.

President H. L. Trigg of Elizabeth City Teachers College asked an increase of $12,490 for salaries and equipment and a fund of $179,499 for the erection of a fine arts and industrial building and the renovation of a boys' dormitory. This building would provide the offering of courses in industrial, agricultural, health, physical education and music.

Many prominent business men, members of the board of trustees of the various schools appeared before the board in behalf of the requests made by the institution of each one's affiliation.

Durham Negro College Asks Increase in Budget Request

By CHARLES W. DANIEL

Raleigh (AP).—Pleading that Negroes be given "a chance to prepare for the future in a world order certain to change," Dr. J. E. Shepherd of the North Carolina College of Negroes asked the joint appropriations committee Friday for an increase of $79,303 over budget bureau recommendations for the operation of the school during the next two years.

In requesting the increase — above recommendations for appropriation by the state of $213,747 for the biennium—the Negro leader suggested a $10,000,000 permanent improvements program for the college which he and other state educational leaders declared is due for expansion under the increasing requests from Negro students for graduate and law school training.

Speaking in support of the request for the school increase was former legislator Walter P. (Pete) Murphy of Salisbury, author of the 1939 act of the General Assembly authorizing establishment of a graduate school at N. C. C. N.

Murphy reminded the committee he had drawn the bill to set up the graduate unit at the request of Governor Hoey in 1939 after the U. S. Supreme Court had ruled in a suit filed by a Missouri Negro student that state universities must accept Negro students who apply for admission, if courses which they seek are not available in state Negro institutions.

The state appropriated no funds for the operation of the graduate school in the last biennium.

Also appearing in support of Dr. Shepherd's petition were deans M. T. Van Hecke and W. W. Pierson of the University of North Carolina, R. M. Gantt and Oscar G. Barker of Durham and C. C. Spaulding, president of the N. C. Mutual Life Insurance Company, largest Negro insurance concern in the state.

The college president, advising the committee that he was mindful "we are in the defense program," declared:

"Colleges are just as much weapons of defense as are armies," Spaulding observed in this connection that of 296 persons executed in North Carolina in the last 20 years, 192 were Negroes. "I am wondering why," Spaulding said, indicating that in improved education lies improvement in social life.

Dr. Shepherd asked the committee to revert to the axiom and "invest in brains instead of in the soil" to gain highest dividends.

Alluding to the resolution of state authorities to reduce the differential between the pay of white and Negro school teachers, the college head asked that an allocation of $250,000 be made for that purpose, to be "almost" accomplished in four years. "I know the heart throbs of these Negro teachers and how hard they are working to preserve the harmony between the two races that has long characterized the state of North Carolina," he said.

Upon motion of Representative Bryant of Durham the committee voted to suspend its rule against subcommittees and appoint such a body of five members to inspect an 18-acre land site adjoining the campus of the college in Durham for possible purchase by the state. The additional land is "badly" needed, the committee advised.

Gantt told the committee the tract could be bought for "about $1,000 an acre." The college said it would buy the land from the increase in appropriations if its request was honored.

Incorporated in the Negro educator's request was a $7,000 yearly increase (above budget estimates) in law school teachers' salaries. The college will conduct a two-year law school in 1942, a three-year school in 1943.

Dean Van Hecke of the university law school said that a check of work being done by the five law students at N. C. C. N. compared favorably with that of students in Chapel Hill.

Further committee hearings had been scheduled today for the Confederate women's home, the state industrial farm colony for women, and the Eastern Carolina Training School.

However, only Director Sam Leonard of the training school appeared before the committee, presenting to the group a letter from the school saying the recommendations of the budget bureau for its appropriation during the next biennium was "accepted." Leonard's letter said "We are one of the very few" state agencies or institutions that actually asked for less this next biennium than in the past.

The appropriations unit will meet again Monday afternoon at three o'clock with scheduled hearings for four state Negro teachers colleges; A. and T. of Greensboro, Winston-Salem Teachers College, Elizabeth City State Teachers College and the Fayetteville State Teachers College.

A Planned Program In Farm Shop Instruction

GREENSBORO, N. C. — W. T. Johnson, farm shop teacher-trainer at A. and T. College here, is an ardent advocate of farm shop training in rural high schools for students who come from the farm. "Since the rural school serves primarily farm people, and we are living in a mechanized age, the school has a definite responsibility to guide them in meeting their daily farm problems," he says.

"Therefore, students should have an opportunity to receive training in repairing and construction, farm building, farm landscape, tool fitting and grinding, home conveniences and such jobs that will enable them to keep the farm equipment in repair, on an economical basis. The rural boys should have an opportunity to explore some of the different mechanical fields, so as to be able to cope with different changes."

A farm shop course is of particular value to the Negro farmer, Mr. Johnson believes, because "it is obvious the Negro needs to know how to select the best type of farm machinery and equipment, and needs to know how to keep it in repair; how to use electricity wisely and effectively, and how to keep his farm buildings in repair, as well as how to construct other necessary buildings.

"His home surroundings," Mr. Johnson feels," need improving for both hygienic and social reasons. With such training offered in our rural high schools, the youth would stop migration to the overcrowded cities, have a greater love for rural life, and keep up the heritage of our forefathers.

SELF-SATISFIED FEELING

"Students who have the opportunity to put into expression an idea thought through with the hands, will have a self-satisfied feeling of accomplishing something. Farm shop work is designed so as to give students with practical mechanical ability an opportunity to express their creative thinking in real projects or jobs."

Because most teachers have all-day, part-time, and evening school classes, the instruction varies with each group Mr. Johnson stated. In view of this he suggests that the farm shop program be flexible. "For instance," he says, "some jobs may be given during each year either because of their importance, or as a means of perfecting them.

"Further," he continued, "some jobs are too difficult for first-year students. In such a case, by all means, defer them until the boy has progressed enough to master them. Lack of ability is often found in the higher classes so that a variety of jobs must be oered in order to get satisfactory results from the average student. However, it is more important to master a few jobs than to do poorly a large number of jobs.

ADVANCED SKILLS

"The second, third and fourth years would be a continuation of the type of work started in the first year, only it should be advanced as the student develop skills."

"In conclusion, I would like to recommend that vocational agriculture, with a well-equipped farm shop be placed in every rural high school where the enrollment justifies, so that the rural youth will have the same opportunity as the urban youth to do the jobs that are profitable," Mr. Johnson says. "This may be done by a cooperative effort of all state and county educational leaders and the leading citizens of the respective communities.

"Again I would like to say that a well-organized vocational program in all rural high schools would enable the rural youth to compete with the urban youth, and improve the citizenship throughout the south."

NOTED WOMAN EDUCATOR SEEKING YOUNG PERSON AS HER SUCCESSOR

Dr. Charlotte Hawkins Brown Wants Palmer Memorial Institute to Continue as "Charm School."

SEDALIA, N. C., Jan. 16 (By C. Hall for ANP)—One of the finest assets of Palmer Memorial institute is the well-prepared, cultured group of young people with whom Dr. Brown has surrounded herself in an attempt to carry out the program of a first-class finishing school, a fully accredited college preparatory institution, for our group. She has been singularly fortunate in having selected from outstanding colleged and outstanding families, persons who have caught a vision of what she hopes to accomplish in developing young people who will be scholarly efficient, culturally secure, and religiously sincere—the triangular goal of the school.

Parents need not be disturbed because of the periodical absences of Dr. Brown from the campus in her attempts to disseminate this culture more generally, because of the strong administrative committee who are in themselves representative of these ideals. A faculty which coincides and helps to carry out the program is represented in the following persons according to their terms of service to the institution: (1) Miss Norvelle H. Dismukes, A. B., Mus. B., Fisk University; head of department of music. (2) Mrs. Jeanette F. English, A. B., Livingstone college; librarian and director of Gregg cottage. (3) Mrs. Vesta Lawrence Jackson, B. S., Virginia State college; head of department of home economics. (4) Miss F. Elizabeth Burwell, B. S., Virginia State college; Head of the junior high department. (5) Mrs. Dorothy Riley, R. N., Hampton institute, Dixie hospital; nurse and director of Eliot hall. (6) Mrs. Althea Jones, graduate of school of social work; director of Stone hall. (7) Orrington C. Hall, Jr., B. S. Integration of Negro Considered At College

That the negro is becoming more completely integrated in the various divisions of agriculture and industry and that his further integration depends upon the efficiency of his training in spite of racial or economic barriers, was the consensus of opinion reached by approximately 500 participants in the separate agricultural and technical sciences conferences held at A. and T. college this morning. The conferences were a part of the 50th anniversary celebration of the local college.

J. C. McLaughlin, director of the division of agriculture, presided at the agricultural conferences and J. M. Marteena, director of the division of mechanic arts, presided at the technical sciences conference.

With the conference theme established at the "Negro Land Grant College in a Changing Social Order", the discussion tended to center around the educational needs for fuller participation of the negro in the various industrial and agricultural endeavors.

Trends Are Noted.

Discussion at the technical sciences conference centered more specifically around the trends of technical education and opportunities afforded in such fields as commercial art, building trades, and aviation.

In the absence of Dr. J. M. Hunter, director of graduate study at Virginia State college, his paper on "Trends in Technical Education" was read by Douglas Turner, fellow faculty member.

After considerable discussion, present trends in technical education with respect to negro schools were listed as being: (1) Decrease in the number of students taking technical courses; (2) greater emphasis on research; (3) new curricula offered in engineering and vocational courses; (4) greater emphasis being placed on graduate study; (5) four year technical courses are being reduced to three to aid more effectively in the national defense program; (6) more vocational high schools are being established; and (7) trade unions are exerting more influence on course offerings in trade schools, and in many cases control the enrolment in certain vocations.

Considerable opportunities for the well-trained exist in commercial art, the building trades and aviation, said Preston Haygood, Daniel Andrews, and Lloyd Burnside, respectively.

What is being done by governmental and private enterprise to better integrate the negro farmer in the American economy, was the principal theme of discussion at the agricultural conference. The accomplishments of the farm security administration, the United States office of agricultural education; the landscape gardening program of the Southern railway; and the extension service in that direction were praised by their respective representatives.

The principal address was given by W. C. Davenport, farm tenant specialist with the farm security administration, Raleigh. Davenport said the farm security administration offers the negro farmer an excellent opportunity for land ownership, operating capital and the maintenance of self-respect in times of agricultural crisis.

Other participants were R. K. Wright, vocational agricultural teacher, Catawba; J. W. Warren, of Greensboro, national president of New Farmers of America; William Cooper and James Eason, representatives of the Roanoke Farms, Tillery; Dewey Williamson and Bush Buffaloe, county and FSA agricultural officials of Caswell county, respectively; E. D. Harris and G. Black, Southern railway landscape gardeners; Agnes Coggins and Annie Bullock, home demonstration agents of Bertie and Wake counties, respectively; and C. G. Goodman, Gates county farmer.

DURHAM, N. C. (ANP)— Dr. Alphonso Heninberg, named to the presidency of Delaware State College by a board of trustees whose action was later recinded by a new board, will retain his position at North Carolina State college as assistant to the president.

Dr. Richard S. Grossley was ousted by the Delaware board after 18 years as head of the state college, but he was reinstated by a newly selected board of trusetees, and Heninberg would have been out of a position had he not asked for a leave of absence instead of retiring from the Durham college.

AIMS TO TEACH WOMEN ART OF RAISING FAMILY

MAY 10 1941

Its Theory Is That Most Benefit Comes From Educating 'Mothers'

MAY 10 1941

GREENSBORO, N. C.—"When you educate a man you educate an individual, but when you educate a woman you educate a family."

This adage well expresses the aim and spirit of Bennett college here in Greensboro. Operated for the past 15 years exclusively for women, its entire curriculum is geared to provide its students the type of education that will make them intelligent, alert, and progressive—training that will go a long way toward helping them to establish worthwhile homes and happy family and community life.

In its 15 years of existence as a womans college, under the leadership of President David D. Jones, Bennett has made unusual progress. Its work has attracted nation-wide attention. Although its major support comes from the Methodist church, Bennett has received large gifts for permanent improvement and maintenance from both northern and southern philanthropists, as well as from the General Education Board, the Carnegie Corporation, and the Julius Rosenwald fund. Mrs. Henry Pfeiffer of New York City has contributed $1,300,000.

Beginning with ten students and a few inadequate buildings, Bennett has grown until today its student body numbers 360, drawn from 27 states and the District of Columbia.

It has acquired an endowment of nearly half a million dollars, and during the past few years it has spent an equal sum on its building program.

Its recently constructed Carrie Barge Residence hall was the nineteenth modernly built and equipped structure on the Bennett College campus. Another building, a new chapel, is nearing completion.

But more significant than its physical growth, has been the steady, consistent strides that have been made by Bennett in its forward-looking educational program. At Bennett, individualized education is stressed.

The attainments, capacities, and ambitions of each prespective student are studied before she is admitted to the college. A definite program and course of study are mapped out for the individual student when she matriculates.

Faculty advisors observe and take a personal interest in her development throughout the four-year-period of study and keep a record for her future guidance.

The curriculum and guidance program are so organized as to surround each student with wholesome and inspiring influences. Formally the curriculum includes four major divisions, biological physical sciences, social sciences, home economics, and the numanities.

Students may train for teaching careers in either of these divisions of study, or for teaching in primary and grammar grade work. Courses in secretarial science train students for business careers, and in the division of home economics students are equipped for many interesting careers in home making and related fields.

Major emphasis is placed on home economics, the curriculum of the division being planned to meet the needs of women in modern society. The philosophy that underlies all of the work is based on a broad concept of home and family life.

It reaches out to touch the many problems relating to mental and physical health, which include an understanding of, and appreciation for, the arts and sciences that furnish a cultural background for homemaking. This is done through a carefully planned home economics curriculum, and the following media:

A course, "The Art of Living," required of all students, which attempts to develop students with integrated personalities, capable of meeting and solving in an adequate way various complex problems of student as an individual, as a member of a family group, and as a member of society.

The Home-Making institute, held annually for the past fourteen years brings before the students and the community various pertinent phases of home life.

The Nursery school, established in 1938 by means of a grant from the General Education Board of New York City, serves as an observation laboratory for parents, while students get scientific and practical training in the care of the preschool child.

The Summer Institute of Parent Education and Child Development, which this year will be held from June 9-27, serves a real need in the community. The parents, teachers, and other workers with young and adolescent children will use the Nursery school as a laboratory.

The Greensboro Parents' Council, begun last year under the guidance of Dr. Alberta B. Turner, professor of psychology, has created greater interest in the community in the problems of children and parents.

Bennett has "A" rating from the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools and from the State Department of Public instruction, Raleigh. It holds membership in the Association of American Colleges and the American Council on Education, both of national scope, with headquarters in New York City. Bennett's graduates are accepted by the leading graduate schools in the country, and those who prepare to teach receive "A" certificates.

Informally, Bennett offers a free and happy student life. There are the usual religious, social, and study clubs, but there are also a number of groups devoted to community, recreational and civic work.

The latitude of the college extra-curricula program enables every student to find some one thing that she can do well and enjoy. Students interested in social welfare recently made a study of Negro life in Greensboro and turned over a summary of their findings to the social service agencies of the city. The Little Theatre Guild has won special recognition at the annual Dramatic Festival of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. The college choir, directed by Dr. R. Nathaniel Dett, renowned composer and conductor, makes frequent appearances in churches of all creeds and denominations and has successfully toured the eastern and midwestern sections of the country, singing at many of the leading colleges and universities.

Bennett has won for itself a definite and important place in the field of Negro education. Its graduates are successful home-makers, teachers, social workers, librarians, and business and professioanl women. Staffed by a faculty carefully selected and thoroughly devoted to the educational development of young people, it is generally acknowledged to be a living, growing and a thoroughly progressive institution.

Johnson C. Smith University Continues Forward Movement

School For Negroes Expanding Facilities to Take Care of Increasing Enrollment of Women Students.

Johnson C. Smith university, now in its 74th year, is one of the oldest educational institutions in the south for negroes. It was founded as a Presbyterian institution in 1867.

At times the progress was slow, but for more than a quarter of a century, under the leadership of Dr. Henry Lawrence McCrorey, Sr., a man of sublime faith and prophetic vision, the institution has moved forward with vigorous strides. The university has been practically rebuilt and has taken its place among the leading institutions for the racial group in the country.

It has class A rating by the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools. It is a member of the Association of American Colleges and the American Council on Education. Its president is past president of the Presbyterian College union, an organization composed of 53 Presbyterian colleges. The theological seminary is fully standardized and is a member of the American Association of Theological Schools.

John J. Tigert, president of the University of Florida and ex-commissioner of the United States Bureau of Education, made the following statement: "Several years ago I had the opportunity of making the commencement address at Johnson C. Smith university. At that time I looked over the plant and gained a rather definite insight into the program of the work that is being carried on. I was really amazed to discover the great progress which has been made at the institution, materially and educationally, under the leadership of President McCrorey."

During the 74 years of its existence, the graduates of Johnson C. Smith university have served the church and state in practically every area of life opened to the racial group. Each year the institution touches more than 700 students coming from an average of 20 states and several foreign countries.

During the first 64 years of its life, Johnson C. Smith university was open to males only. Since 1932, however, it has been co-educational. In order to accommodate the increasing enrollment of women students, the institution has recently erected a dormitory for women. This building—the James B. Duke Memorial hall—was dedicated on Founders' day, 1940.

COMPLIANCE—While the 1939 North Carolina General Assembly was in session, the Supreme Court of the United States handed down the famous "Missouri case" decision in which it held that any State university must admit Negroes to its law school or other graduate departments unless equal advantages are offered to Negroes in separate institutions.

The decision was regarded as one which would be most expensive to North Carolina and other Southern states. But, the 1939 General Assembly proceeded to act, after a plan satisfactory to leaders of the Negro race had been worked out. For the first two years, the law school at the North Carolina College for Negroes in Durham was manned by professors from the University of North Carolina and Duke University doing extra work. When the school opens in September, however, it will be manned by three Negro professors, plus a Negro librarian. The cost to the State is calculated by the Budget Bureau as $16,700 a year.

N. C. College For Negroes Well Located For Study

Emphasis of Institution On Development of Rugged Character Parallels Insistence Upon Scholarly Attainment. Faculty Well Trained.

Nearly every county in North Carolina contributes students to the North Carolina College for Negroes at Durham, which from its first year established a reputation for serious concentrated study. Emphasis on the development of rugged character has always paralleled the insistence upon scholarly attainment.

The very location of this institution is an inspiration to those who look to it for leadership. In the vicinity of Durham are the two great centers of learning, the University of North Carolina and Duke university. Their presence has brought a spirit of tolerance and appreciation. The libraries of both of these institutions are open to the serious negro student and their combined collection of items relating to the negro is easily the best in the south.

The faculty of the North Carolina College for Negroes is selected on the basis of training and for general acquaintance with educational problems of the day. Nine members of the undergraduate faculty hold Ph.D. degrees.

This college offers to the student the convenience of modern fireproof buildings with dormitories for both men and women tastefully furnished and conveniently located. A new library, center of training for state teacher-librarian service, makes available books and periodicals in a wide variety and provides a pleasant place for study. The B. N. Duke auditorium pronounced nearly perfect in acoustics furnishes a beautiful setting for assemblies and lyceum activities. A new science building houses laboratories and classrooms for work in biology, physics, chemistry and home economics.

The college, although non-sectarian, emphasizes religion as fulfilling a mission to humanity. It endeavors to provide a wholesome religious atmosphere for its students free from all sectarian bias. At various times throughout the year, ministers of national reputation are invited to deliver inspirational messages to student body, faculty and general public.

Speaks Out In Behalf Of Negro Law School

Raleigh, Jan. 25.—Appearing before the joint appropriations committee in support of a plea for more liberal allotment to the North Carolina College for Negroes, particularly in the graduate school, Dean VanHeck of the University law school, said that he did not believe the legislature or the state intended that school to be just a gesture and a buffer to keep Negroes out of Chapel Hill, but that it would be a fraud on the Negro race to provide for them a school which was not recognized by the bar examining board.

Dean Van Heck and other speakers called attention to the Supreme court decisions requiring comparable facilities for the colored students, o rlese admission into the regular university.

LAND IS PURCHASED BY NEGRO COLLEGE

Deed For Approximately Three Acres, Bought For $4,500, Is Recorded

The purchase of three tracts on Alston Avenue sought by the North Carolina College for Negroes for the expansion of its campus was disclosed yesterday with the filing in the office of Register of Deeds W. B. Markham of a deed by which Vannie Cash transferred approximately three acres to the State of North Carolina for $4,500.

Also recorded yesterday was an option giving the State the privilege of buying a tract owned by C. T. Holland for $6,725, valid for 10 days from Feb. 24. A previous option on the same property set a price of $6,950, it was reported.

The third piece of property wanted by the college is owned by the North Carolina Mutual Life Insurance Company. All three tracts total about 11 acres.

Dr. J. E. Shepard, president of the college, has stated that the total of the amounts first asked by the owners for the three sites came to about $16,500, and that he considered this too high.

In asking the General Assembly recently for authorization to buy this property, Dr. Shepard asserted that normal expansion of the college would be blocked forever if the land could not be secured soon. Many prominent Durham citizens of both races backed his appeal, and shortly after the Council of State gave permission for the school to go ahead with the purchase.

SCHOOL MAY SEEK PRICE ADJUSTMENT ON PART OF LAND

President J. E. Shepard Says Property May Be Used For New Buildings

The enlargement of the campus of the North Carolina College for Negroes through the purchase of 11 acres of land adjoining the property was authorized yesterday by the Council of State in Raleigh, Dr. J. E. Shepard, president, announced last night.

Dr. Shepard said options on the 11 acres call for payments totaling $16,500 but N. C. C. N. officials consider some of the prices asked "a bit too steep" and will seek adjustments before definitely deciding to purchase the land.

The 11 acres which the college plans to buy consists of three tracts. One is owned by C. T. Holland, a second by the North Carolina Mutual Life Insurance Company and the third by Vinie Cash of Rougemont.

An option on the Holland property was recorded yesterday in the office of the register of deeds. Holland agreed to sell the property for $6,950 if the option is exercised within 60 days. The Cash option sets a price of $4,500 on that part of the property. All three tracts are located on the Alston Avenue Road.

Action of the Council of State in approving the purchase of the land followed adoption Thursday by the joint finance committee of the Legislature of a subcommittee's report favoring enlargement of the local campus.

Dr. Shepard said the additional land is desired for "general expansion" and may be used for new buildings and for other purposes.

Dr. R. H. Bowling To Conduct Annual Institute

Staff Correspondence

RALEIGH, N. C.—Extending the scope of its extension service Shaw University, began last week the first in a series of courses in religion, offered to ministers, and other students of religious education.

The course, according to Dean John L. Tilley of the school of religion and acting dean of the college, will be on the graduate level and will give college credit.

The course is made possible by the joint sponsorship of Shaw University, the Duke University School of Religion, and the N. C. Division of Negro Education, headed by Dr. N. C. Newbold.

Dr. Kenneth Clark, Duke University School of Religion, is conducting the course which meets each Tuesday afternoon on the Shaw campus.

During the first semester another extension class in religion was conducted on the campus and attended by both students and ministers.

These new courses enlarge the field of service in religion already covered by the university. There is the School of Religion for persons seeking the B.D. degree and courses which make possible a regular college course with a major in religion.

District ministers institutes are held throughout the state each year and last for three weeks with credit going toward a certificate. An institute for ministers and women workers is held on the campus each June.

Already plans are being completed for the institute this year, to be held the third week in June. Dr. C. H. Hubert, former acting president of Morehouse College, and Dr. R. H. Bowling, pastor, First Baptist Church, Norfolk, Va., are scheduled to conduct courses during the week.

THE A. AND T. COLLEGE OF GREENSBORO, N. C.

On the occasion of the fiftieth anniversary celebration of the founding of the Agricultural and Technical college of Greensboro, N. C., the Chicago Defender wishes to congratulate President F. D. Bluford for the remarkable progress made by the institution during his administration.

Despite pressure from many influential quarters, Dr. Bluford has insisted on preserving the original plan of the college as was laid out by its first president, Dr. Dudley. In this he has shown unusual foresight. Today with the advent of a national defense program, the need is for skilled, technical men who can be inducted without too long an apprenticeship in the industrial plants which are filling government contracts.

If Negro applicants for jobs in the various industries were trained and experienced men, the obstacle of discrimination would not be so difficult to overcome. When owners of those plants can conveniently hide their prejudice behind the fact that most Negro applicants lack technical skill and training, the task of combating discriminatory policy becomes indeed a difficult one.

It took a national emergency to make us realize that we have been articulating academic training too much, and placing too little emphasis on mechanical and technical education. We have too few technically trained men, and too few schools and colleges where the masses might acquire the training and experience necessary to meet the demands of a national crisis.

The Agricultural and Technical college of Greensboro justified its existence when it was able to place many of its graduates in the major industrial plants working on defense contracts. Some of the graduates of A. and T. are working in Russia where they have been retained in various technical capacities by the Soviet government.

This is a splendid record for an institution founded only 50 years ago, and with meager resources to carry out its program. Dr. Bluford, somehow, has been able to strengthen the curriculum of his college, and has brought to its staff competent scholars. It must be gratifying to him to know that he has not labored in vain.

Trustees Adopt New Wage Scale For Teachers

GREENSBORO, N. C.—A new salary scale for the teaching staff of A. and T. college, providing for an increase in some classifications, together with requirements for the several classifications, was adopted last week by the trustees in regular quarterly session following recommendations made in President F. D. Bluford's annual report.

The professor, who must have a Ph. D. or ed. D. degree or equivalent and not less than 10 years of successful teaching experience, will receive under the revised schedule $3,000 or up per year, which represents an increase of about $500 a year.

The associate professor who must have the same degree as the professor and at least seven years teaching experience, will be paid from $2,100 to $3,000 per year, also representing an increase of around $500 a year.

The assistant professor, who must have a master's degree and not less than three years of teaching experience will receive from $1,500 to $2,500 a year, representing an increase of about $300 a year. No substantial changes were recommended in the allowances for instructors and assistant instructors to be paid not in excess of $1,500 and $1,200 a year respectively.

In line with this schedule the trustees authorized the personnel committee to make such adjustments in the pay of all workers in line with funds available.

EIGHT SCHOLARSHIPS GIVEN

Dr. Bluford announced the donation of eight $100 scholarships for freshmen by Sears, Roebuck and Company which will be available next year.

Attention was called to the success of the aviation school from which 10 aviators will finish their primary work at this session making a total of about 50 students who have completed the course.

Local Negro College Planning For Biggest Term In History

School Of Public Health Established By N. C. C. N.—Other Expansions Are Revealed

North Carolina College for Negroes faces the most expansive program this year in its history, according to Dr. James E. Shepard yesterday.

Following the most successful Summer School in the history of the college which included the School of Public Health, will be the establishment of a School of Public Health in the local institution.

The School of Public Health conducted here this Summe was sponsored by the State Department of Health and the General Education Board. Forty students from 20 counties came for instruction in public health work and the practical application of the teachings of this department.

The General Education Board of New York manifested such an interest in the experiment at the local college that it granted 15 scholarships to health workers in other Southern States who were sent here to observe the practical operations of the school. These scholarships were granted at a cost of $200 each.

Another feature of expansion to be inaugurated at the North Carolina College for Negroes at the opening session next month will be the School of Library Science. Students will be trained for librarians in colleges and high schools in this newly formed department.

President Shepard yesterday announced that the faculty of the School of Law has been increased by the addition of three well-known Negro lawyers, who will assume their duties at the opening session this Fall.

For the first time the college will have a resident physician for young women. Also, Dr. Carl Hill, who recently received his Ph. D. degree in chemistry from the University of Pennsylvania, has been added as assistant professor of chemistry at the local college.

Dr. Forest O. Wiggins, formerly associate professor of French at Howard University, has been made professor of French here.

Professor C. L. Holmes of the Department of French has been made head of the Department of Spanish and associate professor of French.

Professor Samuel Hill, head of the Department of Music at Alabama State Agriculture College, has been elected to direct the college chorus for the coming year.

Through the gifts of the General Education Board and private donations the Department of Home Economics and Science has received $3,300 far various equipment to be used this year.

Shepard stated that there is a real need for equipment in the School of Library Science. Local friends of the institution are expected to come to the rescue of this emergency, he said.

Another much needed instrument for the institution is that of a program clock. Owing to the great distances between the various dormitories and college buildings the clock is a necessity for keeping the students informed as to the schedules, President Shepard stated.

Included in the requisitions for the 1941-42 session of the school are tennis courts and a pipe organ for the college chapel. Dr. Shepard is of the opinion that these needs are essential for the forward uplift of those attending the college. His faith in his friends leads him to believe that these necessities will be supplied by those who know and appreciate the work being done for young ambitious Negroes in the local institution.

Approximately $40,000 is being spent in the construction of additional dining room space and painting various buildings on the campus this Summer. Formerly the students had to eat in three shifts because of the lack of room in the original dining hall.

Another need announced for the college by Shepard is a supply of standard books for the present college library. Many North Carolina lawyers have contributed standard law books for the law library. H. G. Connor of Wilson gave much of the library of his father, the late Judge Henry Connor of the Federal Court, to the college. Dr. Shepard stated that approximately $40,000 worth of law books have been contributed to the department. A. L. Brooks, prominent attorney of Greensboro recently donated a number of volumnes to the law library, Dr. Shepard stated.

Outstanding features of entertainment have been provided for the college year. Among the outstanding personalities to appear this year will be Paul Robeson of New York. He is said to be the outstanding Negro baritone in America. His appearance at the college Oct. 6 will be the first time he has filled an engagement in the South. Robeson is also an actor of note. He appeared on Broadway in "Emperor Jones" with success recently. At the opening of a new park in Newark recently Robeson sang to an audience of 25,000 people, Dr. Shepard stated. Tickets are already being sold for his appearance here in October.

DR. SHEPARD EXPECTS ADDED ENROLLMENT; INCREASES FACULTY

By ERIC HERCULES

DURHAM, N. C., July 31—Although in its incipiency, the School of Law of the North Carolina College for Negroes has made such significant progress, that today, officials of the institution are looking forward to the indicated increase in the enrollment for the coming term.

When President Shepard of State conceived the idea of a law school for members of the race in North Carolina he especially bore in mind the fact that there are numerous ambitious youths interested in the acquisition of legal training, but in many instances, without funds to leave home in order to receive the necessary training. A firm believer in the high ideals of young people who are educationally promising, this veteran educator who literally came up "the hard way" organized the school of law with the co-operation of persons in all walks of life.

With a faculty whose membership consisted of active professors from Duke university and the University of North Carolina, Dr. Shepard, from the beginning of this new department at once placed at the disposal of the law student, most outstanding instructors in the legal field.

For second year course the aggressive President Shepard has added to the law faculty, two outstanding race lawyers, Albert L. Turner and Charles W. Quick, fully approved by the North Carolina Board of Law Examiners, the law school has an excellent library with countless volumes.

Negro College Having To Turn Away Freshmen, Shepard Says

Lack Of Accommodations Held Responsible; About 800 Expected In First-Year Class

North Carolina College for Negroes yesterday was turning away able and promising students seeking a chance for the lack of accommodations, according to Dr. James E. Shepard, president of the institution.

With approximately 300 freshmen already registered and the prospect of more than 800 in the entire student body for 1941-42 the college will have its largest enrollment in its 31 years of history, it was officially stated.

The formal opening is scheduled for Monday morning at 11 o'clock when Dr. Edgar Knight of the University of North Carolina will make the principal address. Others to address the opening will include Dr. R. L. Flowers, president of Duke University and for many years chairman of the board of trustees of the Negro College; C. C. Dr. Shepard announced yesterday that the college is recpient of the cooperative efforts of the University of North Carolina and Duke University through Dr. N. C. Newbold in furnishing books and literature along the lines of race relations and conferences. The two universities are cooperating with the State Department of Education. The purpose of this effort is to create better race relations through the local college and to give substantial support to this type of work in that field.

The law department of the college will open today with additional students and members of the law faculty. Dr. Maurice T. Van Hecke of the University of North Carolina is dean of the school. He will be assisted by the following members of the faculty: James Young Carter, John Percy Dalzell, Frederick Bays McCall, Charles W. Quick and Albert L. Turner. All of these men hold ranking academic degrees from outstanding institutions of learning. Two librarians will have charge of the law library, Daniel E. Moore and Lucile Marshall Elliott, both of whom are trained in library science.

Dean W. W. Pierson of the University of North Carolina and Dean Calvin B. Hoover of Duke University will direct the Graduate School at the local college which opens Monday. In this school Dr. Howard W. Odum of the University of North Carolina will direct the department of sociology. Other professors will be Dr. Don C. Allen of Duke University in the department of English, Dr. Floyd Edmyster of the University of North Carolina will direct the department of chemistry, Dr. Hugh T. Lefler of the University of North Carolina will direct the department of history, Dr. W. J. McKee of the University of North Carolina will direct the department of elementary education, Dr. N. Carson Ryan of the University of North Carolina will teach in the department of education, Dr. J. M. Thompson of Duke University will teach in the department of mathematics, Dr. N. C. Newbold of the State Department of Education will direct a course in race relations during the year.

Other members of the North Carolina College for Negroes' faculty teaching in the graduate school include Dr. A. Henningburg in the department of education, Dr. L. H. Knox in chemistry, Dr. W. E. Farrison, English, and Dr. Joseph H. Taylor, history.

The first Fall vesper service will be conducted Sunday afternoon in the B. N. Duke Auditorium at 3 o'clock by the Rev. J. Neal Hughley, who will be director of religious education and teacher in the social science department.

Professor Hughley resigned the pastorate of the Calvary Baptist Church of Coffeyville, Kan., to assume his duties in the local college.

Race Youths Trained By Duke Psychiatrist

By LEM GRAVES, JR.

DURHAM, N. C. — The first phase of a unique experiment in the training of Negro youths for work in the field of neuro-psychiatry came to an end at Duke University here in mid-September and although definite conclusions have not been reached regarding the success of this first phase, the results obtained were described as "splendid" by Dr. Richard S. Lyman, director of the department of psychiatry at the Duke University Medical School, who sponsored and directed the project.

In an effort to determine the value of using colored personnel as attendants in a neuro-psychiatric ward admitting only white patients, Dr. Lyman gathered about him 15 Negro youths with college and professional education and used them exclusively for a three month trial period as attendants in the psychiatric ward of the Duke University Hospital. Their work was coordinated with lectures and classroom study in the field of neuro-psychiatry, conducted by Dr. Lyman. These lectures were held in the administration building of North Carolina College for Negroes, which cooperated with Duke in this venture.

At the conclusion of this thre month trial period, Dr. Lyman began a similar experiment to test the value of using white personnel, similarly qualified, under working and training conditions as identical as possible with those under which the colored youths worked.

STUDIED CASES

The colored student assistants worked regular shifts on the psychiatric ward of the hospital, making careful studies of the various cases, and reporting regularly on case histories.

Dr. Lyman, in explaining his reasons for conducting the experiment, expressed the conviction that these students would be successful in relaxing patients and by so doing would be able to get from them information concerning their background which would be valuable in prescribing treatment. He pointed out that results in this first three month period were highly satisfactory. However, he added, they could not be properly evaluated until other groups had been used under similar conditions and their results used as a basis for comparisons.

Because of the location of Duke University in the heart of the South, this unique attempt at exposing Negroes to highly technical education, not available in most colored schools, is being closely watched. Dr. Layman expressed the hope that next summer, colored personnel could be used again at Duke University.

STUDENTS CONGRATULATED

At the conclusion of the trial period, Dr. Lyman congratulated the 16 colored students on their work and urged them to continue in the direction in which they seemed to be going. He told the Journal and Guide that he thought the work valuable to the student assistants as well as to the University because they would certainly have occasion to make use of the knowledge they had gained in their life work.

The majority of the students are studying toward degrees in the field of social service. A few are studying medicine. Those taking the master's degree in social service or sociology are to be given credit toward their degrees for the summer's work. Those studying medicine will have splendid background information in the diseases of the mind.

NAMES OF YOUTHS

The student assistants were: Miss Roberta A. Caywood, Frankfort, Ky., Atlanta Schol of Social Work; Miss Anna M. Patillo, Tarboro, N. C., Atlanta School of Social Work; Frank C. Creft, Monroe, N. C., graduate of North Carolina College who will study medicine; Miss Ollie Mae Butler, Statesboro, Ga., Fisk University; Miss Pearl L. Walker, Jackson, Mich., Fisk; Hubert L. Fitts, Little, N. C., North Carolina College; Hugh O. Hill, Athens, Ga., Atlanta School of Social Work; Frank M. Scott, Lynchburg, Va., Morehouse College;

Grant W. G. Bates, Knoxville, Tenn., Meharry Medical College; Miss Edith Amey Parham, Durham, N. C., North Carolina College; Miss Amey Vermelle Mills, Durham, North Carolina College; Hubert William Langston, Atlanta School of Social Work; Miss Dorothy Washington, Atlanta, Ga., Atlanta School of Social Work; Vincent Cordice, Durham, New York University Medical School; and Crawford Burns, Staunton, Va., Atlanta School of Social Work.

Business Training at N. C. College Finest

DURHAM, N. C.—With the addition of highly trained teachers to the commercial department of North Carolina College, the state of North Carolina now has one of the finest centers for the training of young people in the field of business administration.

Through the vision of its President, James E. Shepard, this well recognized department has become the mecca for the preparation of business-minded students from everywhere. Of added value to the student registered in this field is the unusual opportunity afforded for practical experience in an environment abundant with colored businesses.

One of the largest insurance companies owned and operated exclusively by the race is located in Durham. In addition, the numerous departments of the rapidly growing college has made possible the opening of various set-ups necessitating the use of a well trained personnel.

According to a survey just made ninety-eight percent of the graduates of the commercial department of the college are gainfully employed throughout North Carolina and other states.

From all indications there is a great demand for highly qualified graduates of an institution with a well prepared faculty in its business department.

For the student with limited time and means, a two-year course is offered leading to the secretarial diploma. In the undergraduate department of commerce, students pursue courses leading to the Bachelor of Science degree.

Change At Wilberforce Necessary, Writer Finds

By SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT

XENIA, Ohio.—Wilberforce university, situated some six miles from this peaceful city, is the cause of much concern to those who wish to see the school continues as a place of education, but at the same time, want conditions, which have not been improved recently, corrected.

Wilberforce, although known as an African Methodist Episcopal church supported school, is in reality a dual institution. The church has supported one side of the education institution, while the state of Ohio has supported the combined normal and industrial department.

Looking over the newest of the buildings which grace the beautiful campus, one learns that all of these state buildings with the exception of one, are on state property. A lone state building rests on church property.

Facts Damaging

Delving into the situation uncovers a mass of damaging facts—damaging to the church side. The facts are there, nevertheless.

A bill is now before the senate of the state legislature in Columbus which proposes to change the name of the state supported part of Wilberforce university from the "combined normal and industrial department" to the "college of education and industrial arts" and make it what the latter name implies.

According to Ray E. Hughes, chairman of the board of trustees of the combined normal and industrial department and a practicing attorney, the new bill is an attempt to effectuate a recommendation made by a special committee of the North Central association to the Board of Review of the association on February 14 of this year.

The special committee in its report, dated March 24, 1940, said, in part, "Your committee does not at the present time have the solution, but it would recommend that the North Central association emphasize to the president and the boards of trustees the vital importance of re-organizing on a more satisfactory basis, which would insure unity and at the same time protect the integrity of several divisions of the institution. This, in the opinion of the committee, is the most important problem now facing the u[illegible]

Condition Worse

The committee did not stop there. In the same report this committee stated that since the first inspection made on November 26 and 27, 1939, instead of this condition improving, it had grown "progressively worse."

The committee then suggested as a solution of the problem "the development of a mutually satisfactory plan of cooperation, unity and shared responsibility in the control and management of the university, in the selection of the chief executive and the establishment of general institutional policies."

The committee recommended "that the interested parties be notified at once that such a plan must be developed and submitted to the board of review of the North Central association not later than November 1, 1941. The three year probationary period expires in March, 1942, and it is essential that this development be solved before that date if the institution (meaning Wilberforce university) desires further recognition."

Attorney Hughes declares that the pending bill does not change the relationship between the two departments of the university and that it has none of the fears that have caused many to make spurious statements and cause unfounded rumors.

All persons who have been quoted as being against the bill, so far, have shown by their utterances that they know nothing of the contents of the bill.

In order to get any Federal Defense Funds for the state suported inside of Wilberforce, the combined normal and industrial department must be raised from an out-moded normal department to a standard college—and the pending bill provides for such a move.

A committee of three members of the combined normal and industrial department and three members of the Wilberforce university trustee board (church side) held a meeting in Washington, D.C., on April 16 for the purpose of attempting to solve the problem and to take up the items as recommended by the special committee of the North Central association.

No Ground For Fear

Leaving Xenia and taking a trip to Cleveland this reporter learned that many of Wilberforce's so-called friends were putting out the rumor which instilled fear that the school might become a segregated college or institution of learning.

Wilberforce, at present and for years, has been a Negro operated school in the state of Ohio principally for Negro students of the state of Ohio and has among its student body representative youngsters from as far away as Dallas, Texas; Los Angeles, Calif., and Springfield, Mass. There hasn't been any law or fixed policy of the institution, which would bar a student of any other racial group because of his or her race.

Wilberforce has more students at the present time than there is space in the dormitories to take care of them and as a result there is much doubling up.

Wilberforce, on the other hand, could not accommodate all of the Negro students in the state of Ohio, if it wanted to because it does not offer certain courses which some of these students want to take.

Still another problem faces the school. Students who would go there, refuse to go because of the fear the institution might lose its North Central association rating.

The fact that no white students are enrolled can be blamed most likely on the present situation. Unlike the south which says "state college for Negroes," Wilberforce, in the bill pending, is as free as it is at present.

There are no sinister charges or moves in the present bill now before the state senate. It is either that Wilberforce must be brought up to a standard or lose its rating and financial help from the state. At present it is a university in name only. It does not have medical, professional or graduate school other than the theological seminary.

Not in recent years have any of the teachers done any research work or contributed a paper on research said one learned gentleman this week. If they have, the public is unaware of it. Many of the teachers to be assured of regular full-time pay, teach on the state side.

Dr. Ormonde D. Walker, president of the school, has drawn censure from astute friends of the university. He stumped the state for Franklin D. Roosevelt's re-election last fall and against the advice of many of his friends, went out for a Democrat for governor. A Republican went into office. This added oil on the smoldering blaze.

The consensus is that Walker must go if Wilberforce is to continue and if the two sets of trustees, six in number, who met in Washington cannot come to any solution of the existing problem, then a move is likely to be made by the state which will mean all support of the church side will be withdrawn and another institution, as planned by the bill, set up at Wilberforce—one which will meet the requirements of the bill and the North Central association.

"WILBERFORCE"!

EDITORIAL Cleveland GAZETTE

APR 24 1941

What we have been predicting for several years is now out in the open. Ohio State and Wilberforce University officials have finally come out in the open in their effort to make a "jim-crow" school of the State department at Wilberforce to include Wilberforce University. They have secured State Senator Theodore M. Gray, a Republican member from Miami County, to introduce a bill in the Ohio Legislature "to abolish the Combined Normal and Industrial (State) Department at Wilberforce and establish a separate ('jim-crow') collegs of education." Senator Gray has appaarently been misled. The great mass of our people in this state do not want anything of the kind and should so impress him and the other members of the legislature, just as soon as possible.

Another thing it might be well to call Senator Gray's attention to the fact that UNDER THE LAWS OF OHIO "JIM-CROW" SCHOOLS ARE PROHIBITED EVEN IF THERE ARE SOME OF THEM PERMITTED TO EXIST IN CENTRAL AND SOUTHERN OHIO IN ORDER TO PLEASE 'JIM-CROW NEGROES' AND THEIR PREJUDICED 'WHITE' ALLIES. THEY ARE SHORT-SIGHTED PERSONS, PRINCIPALLY "NEGRO" TEACHERS, WHO WOULD WELCOME "JIM-CROW" SCHOOLS IN OHIO IN ORDER TO INCREASE THE NUMBER OF COLORED TEACHERS THEY HAVE BEEN WORKING FOR SEVERAL YEARS TO THIS END.

State Trustees May Operate a Separate School

By E. W. MAY

WILBERFORCE, Ohio.—Setting July 15 as the deadline for putting into actual operation a separate state controlled college, the trustees of the State Department meeting here this week virtually ordered the trustees of Wilberforce university to accede to their demands for the ousting of President D. Ormonde Walker.

Delayed action was taken as a move still to force the dimissal of Dr. Walker as president despite the fact that in June, 1940, the university trustees reelected him for a four-year term. State trustees are said to have been persuaded that Bishop Reverdy C. Ransom, chairman of the university board of trustees will call another meeting of the board prior to July 15 and urge acquisence to their program.

If the university trustees obey these orders, many believe such will mark the end of the influence of the A. M. E. church in the affairs of Wilberforce university, long regarded as its most outstanding contribution to the progress of the race. It is not generally believed that leadership of the A. M. E. church will suffer its prestige to be so affronted and belittled.

Ever since the establishment at Wilberforce university of the Industrial Department by the state of Ohio, whereby certain funds and services are made available to the university through the use of its teaching faculty, there has been a tendency towards a lessening of financial support of the school by the church and a leaning more and more on financial aid from the state. The situation now prevails that the state provides such a large part of the funds for the teaching faculty that the immediate withdrawal of such funds would seriously cripple the work being developed during the past few years and cause the school to lose its accreditation as a Class A college by the North Central Association of Colleges and Universities.

It is generally conceded that Wilberforce university has enjoyed an era of splendid progress under the administration of President D. Ormonde Walker. That he has made some mistakes is not refuted. Friends of both sides are urging that a way be found to save the situation and permit the school to continue to progress.

Unless differences between the state and University trustees at Wilberforce can be composed, with both sides adopting a spirit of give and take, fear is currently expressed that this, the oldest college in America, manned and conducted by colored people, will be a thing of the past.

Antioch Students 97 Percent In Favor Of Sharing Rooms With Race Students

MAY 10 1941

COLUMBUS, Ohio.—(ANP)—Continuing his successful spring lecture and forum tour, and after speaking at the convocation in Washington and Jefferson college in western Pennsylvania, William Pickens, widely known author and lecturer and director of branches for the N.A.A.C.P., last week went on to Antioch college in Ohio—the school once headed by Morgan, of TVA fame.

He found that there was a colored student at Washington and Jefferson, but at Antioch there is no Negro student, although the charter or the founding instrument calls for no discrimination on account of race, etc. And yet in other respects, Antioch is one of the most liberal in ideas and one of the most unique of all institutions of higher learning.

The students at Antioch voted 88 per cent for Negro fellow-students, andn 97 per cent of the students answered "Yes" to the question asking whether they would be willing to room with colored students.

"The students in almost all of our insitutions," said Pickens, in the presence of members of the Antioch faculty, "are far more civilized—on this subject—than are the faculties."

MAY 10 1941

At a faculty dinner the frankest and most intimate matters of race relations were gone into, the faculty members asking the questions, Pickens supplying the answers. There were two days of seminars, different student groups and teachers groups, taking turns; there were four forums, and a convocation address in the assembly hall.

AT CRISIS—D. Ormonde Walker, president of Wilberforce University faces a crisis as differences increase between the state trustees and the church trustees of the institution. A recent A. M. E. board meeting failed of voting Dr. Walker out by one vote.

Wilberforce Kicks Politics Out; Begins Progress Program

People of all human interest rallied in shouts and cheers of approval to the pledge of unification of the church and state in one single unit and program. "To Build, Promote, and make Wilberforce the Greatest Negro Institution in North America."

The reverberation of this same theme which was carried in the strongest language ever before a gathering of folk from the farm, business world, church, home, professional men, soldier and laborer that, "Wilberforce is out of POLITICS and will stay out of POLITICS."

It was announced it will matter from this point, any single institution of its kind black or white, its education in Ohio, as chairman of the trustee board, Attorney Ray Hughes loudly reiterated in his opening address.

From the farm on the hill in the setting sun Acting President Bishop Wright in choice words followed the chairman in this spectacular and touching theme. "I am here to see Wilberforce grow, and with the strength that God gives these same green fields it shall grow."

WILBERFORCE UNIV. STRIFE NOW IN SERIOUS STAGE

XENIO, O.—Efforts to compose the differences between the state trustees and the church trustees of Wilberforce university appeared to be at a temporary stalemate last week when the college normal and industrial board met and decided to set up its own educational program.

The CNI board which is appointed by the state to administer the state supported side of the institution, set up a committee to formulate a complete and full educational and administrative program for its own work. The committee is composed of Wilbur A. Page, Margaret Barens, Charles Isom, Robert Shauter and Augustus G. Parker.

The committee is to develop its plans and notify the AME board of trustees of its action. The committee has also been ordered to notify the AME group that plans must be made for the immediate shouldering of the financial responsibility for their share of various services which the institution has received in the past principally through state funds.

July 15 is the deadline which has been set for a replay by the state trustees.

Wilberforce has been operated under an agreement whereby the church controlled the college work at the institution and the state handled the vocational end. The state provided the principal funds under which the college functioned. Political differences developed when President D. O. Walker was named to head the school during a democratic administration. Dr. Walker, an ardent speaker, campaigned openly for the democratic ticket which lost. The state group has demanded his dismissal.

A recent AME board meeting on June 10 failed of voting Dr. Walker out by one vote. President Walker has given the school a vigorous administration and is popular with the students. The North Central association, an accrediting body, has given the school until November 1 to compose its difference or lose its status as an "A" accredited institution.

SAVE WILBERFORCE UNIVERSITY

Wilberforce University in Ohio is rated as the first and leading school of the A. M. E. connection in the United States. The school is supported in part by the A. M. E. church and in part by the state of Ohio and is now an "A" class college. It operates jointly by two sets of trustees.

In the June meeting the president was reelected by one vote majority. The retention of concurs the retention of Dr. D. Ormande Walker.

According to newspaper dispatches another meeting of the trustees will be called by Bishop R. C. Ransom. The news article:

"Zenia, Ohio—Setting July 15 as the deadline for putting into actual operating a separate college, the trustees of the State department, meeting there this week, virtually ordered the trustees of Wilberforce to accede to their demand for the ousting of President D. Ormonde Walker.

"Delayed action was taken as a move to force dismissal of Dr. Walker as president, despite the fact that in June, 1940, the university trustees had re-elected him for a four-year term, and had refused to support forces seeking his removal at a recent meeting of the trustees.

Reversal Predicted

"State trustees are said to have been persuaded that Bishop Reverdy C. Ransom, chairman of the university board, will call another meeting prior to July 15, and urge acquiescence to their program.

"Many believe this would mark the end of the influence of the AME Church in Wilberforce affairs.

"Because of increasing dependence on State funds, it is generally conceded that their sudden withdrawal — considered likely in the event of a firm church stand — would seriously cripple the school's program, probably resulting in loss of its standing as a Class A College.

Wilberforce Professor Releases Book On History Of The University

CONFLICT BETWEEN CHURCH, STATE TOLD

Extensive Study By Dr. F. A. McGinnis Traces Evolution Of Wilberforce From Pre-Civil War Days To The Present.

By GEORGE W. HARVEY
Religious Editor

One of the year's significant books on racial life in the field of education and practical religion has recently been released by the Brown Publishing Co., of Blanchester, Ohio, written by Dr. Frederick A. McGinnis, Ed. D., Professor of Education at Wilberforce University.

The book consists of more than 300 pages is the result of observation, research and the practical experience of the writer over a number of years, is called "A History and an Interpretation of Wilberforce University." The history will be a valuable contribution to educational literature as it relates to the higher education of the Negro from the period of thee Civil War until the present.

ORIGIN OF SCHOOL

Wilberforce was established in 1854 by the Mehtodist Episcopal church to educate the children of southern planters whose offspring were barred from southern schools; how it thus succeeded an abortive attempt of the African ME church to establish a school known as Union Seminary near Columbus; how the AME church took over Wilberforce by purchase following its decline and suspension during the Civil War and how it resolved into its several entities in the educational evolution that followed; seminary, college of liberal arts and the state-supported Combined Normal and Industrial Department.

HISTORY IS TRACED

Dr. McGinnis traces this history interestingly and effectively, relating it chronologically to the internal development of the institution and revealing the influences of the personalities and capabilities of the men and women who have had most to do with its development.

To students of Negro racial and educational history his analysis of the factors that alternately pushed Wilberforce, forward and held it back and his analytical appraisal of the various personalities connected with its development and their effect upon the university, will prove of tremendous value.

Written as his dissertation for the degree of doctor in education conferred by the University of Cincinnati, his "A History of Welberforce University" is probably the first comprehensive volume covering the evolution of the school from a tiny pre-war institution of scarcely more than elementary standards to the present.

The present controversy now in full progress between the state and church interests can be fully understood and appreciated after reading the genesis of the conflict originating in the year of 1887.

Divergence of control, financial inadequacy, weakness in selection of the presidents and sectarian over-emphasis of the African Methodist church—these are obstacles to the greatness of Wilberforce University as appraised by Dr. McGinnis.

The author also drew upon his own knowledge of Wilberforce in recent years, based upon a career of 31 years with the institution, part of this time as dean of the college of education. After graduating from a two-year normal course at Wilberforce he obtained his bachelor of philosophy degree from the University of Chicago and his master of arts from Ohio State University. In the meantime he joined the faculty of Wilberforce as instructor of printing in the vocational course and later transferred to the liberal arts college as professor of education in which he has just taken his doctorate at University of Cincinnati.

The volume is printed, clothbound, by the Brown Publishing Co. of Blanchester and the dedication is to the author's wife, Charlie Aretta McGinnis.

WILBERFORCE PRESIDENCY VACANT

For several months there has been strife and very acute unrest at Wilberforce University, the pride of African Methodism. The ever recurrent tension between the church and state boards was heightened because to the state and many church trustees the onetime President Walker had become persona non grata. Exception was taken to his activity in politics, which was his right as an American citizen. Many thot the exercise of his prerogative was inexpedient.

An impasse was arrived at when the church board sustained him recently by one vote, and the state board retaliated by curtailing financial support. Over fifty thousand dollars was involved. The fate and future of the institution was at stake. The one question fronted was whether the board would support a man to the detriment of the institution, or leave the man and stand by the school.. A few days ago the Executive Board met and declared the office of president vacant. The move was epochal, and of far-reaching significance. The affairs of the University are now in the hands of a board of regents, composed of Bishops R. R. Wright, Jr., John A. Gregg, and D. H. Sims. These are all former college presidents, the first two being one-time presidents of Wilberforce. Information comes that just as soon as the state board learned of the move, everything taken away was restored and there was great rejoicing on both sides.

And out goes Dr. D. Ormonde Walker. His career as president was stormy, but he unquestionably did a fine piece of work at Wilberforce. Under his administration the school was accredited by the North Central Association of Schools and Colleges. History will record his name as one of the greatest presidents of Wilberforce. He might not have been tactful but no one can question his ability, courage, honesty, and integrity. For him there are words of cheer,—fellow-alumnus and friend. The church which gave him an opportunity will not desert him. Such a man will make his way.

Wilberforce Head Sought

Final Selection Won't Be Announced Until August

Although a president of Wilberforce University, Xenia, Ohio, will not be elected before the middle of August, The Amsterdam Star-News this week learned that several prominent educators are being mentioned for the important post in the middle-western institution of learning.

According to a well-informed source, the names of the following persons have been entered either by themselves or their friends: Dr. Howard Gregg, president of Edward Waters College, Jacksonville, Fla., who received his doctorate at the University of Pennsylvania, and served as dean of education, at Wilberforce; Dr. John H. Lewis, educator of Little Rock, Ark., a graduate of the University of Chicago and Yale University; Dr. Harry B. Richardson, chaplain at Tuskegee Institute, Ala., graduate of Yale University, who is director of the Commission on Rural Church Life of the A. M. E Church; and Dr. Charles Spivey, dean of the Divinity School of Wilberforce, also a graduate of Yale University.

Bishop R. R. Wright, Jr., a former president of Wilberforce, has been named to act as president until a successor to Dr. D. Ormond Walker, who was ousted by the board of trustees about three weeks ago, has been appointed. The affairs of the university are being handled by a committee composed of Bishops David H. Sims, J. A. Gregg and R. R. Wright, Jr.

While conditions at Wilberforce University have been in an unsettled state for some time, Bishop Sims, in a special interview with The Amsterdam Star-News Tuesday said that the future of the institution is very bright and that whoever is selected to head the university will have the full support of the A. M. E. Church.

"In the first time in the history of the institution," Bishop Sims said, "it has been agreed by the State of Ohio that whoever is elected to the presidency will administer and have charge and direct all academic matters in all the departments of the university. This refers to state-aided departments as well as others."

Under the above arrangement, the office of dean of education, which was the link between the university and the State of Ohio, will be abolished. The president will be responsible and report to the board of trustees.

The new president is to be elected by the trustees. Nominations will be made by the committee of regents, consisting of Bishops Sims, Gregg and Wright, representing the university, and Attorney Ray E. Hughes, and Drs. C. T. Isom and W. A. Page, acting for the State of Ohio. Wilberforce has a budget for this year of nearly a million dollars.

Politics Blamed By Doctor Walker

CHICAGO — (ANP) — Dr. D. Ormande Walker, the former president of Wilberforce university, stopping at International house of the University of Chicago this week, looked back on the turbulent recent history of the school, deplored the dissensions which rend it every now and then, hoped it would be able to keep the academic accreditation which he had won for it and expressed his life long interest in the institution.

Dr. Walker declared he had been the victim of two kinds of politics the politics of the state as well as that of the church. Caught between the two he had been sacrificed, one gathered that he felt, and that the real reasons behind his dismissal had never been disclosed.

Just why were you dismissed? Were any formal charges made against you? the virile, pugnacious minister was asked.

"No charges were made', Dr. Walker replied. "I insisted that they make some. The only reason they have given is that they could not get along with me.

Of course Gov. Bricker, the Republican chief executive of the state, has been violently opposed to me ever since I campaigned against him in 1936. He sought to make certain charges then which would enable him to grasp greater control of the institution but discovered under the laws governing the institution, he had no power over the president of Wilberforce university.

Ransom, spurred on, it is said, by threats made by state forces against his parole board record, controlled the majority of the 21 trustee votes on the church side and Walker's doom was sealed. Under a rule hastily passed Bishop Ranson now signs all checks of the school together with the president, a reversal of a policy which Walker had fought and defeated. Dr. Walker was asked whether if he divorced himself entirely from politics after he went to Wilberforce trouble might have been avoided?

"I don't think so," he said. "It has always been there."

There must be some cause for the conflict, it was pointed out.

WALKER, OUSTED 'FORCE PREXY HITS STATE, CHURCH POLITICS

Dr. D. Ormonde Walker, the former president of Wilberforce university, stopping at International house of the University of Chicago this week, looked back on the turbulent recent history of the school, deplored the dissensions which rend it every now and then, hoped it would be able to keep the academic accreditation which he had won for it and expressed his life long interest in the institution.

Dr. Walker declared he had been the victim of two kinds of politics, the politics of the state as well as that of the church. Caught between the two he had been sacrificed, one gathered that he felt, and that the real reasons behind his dismissal had never been disclosed.

Just why were you dismissed? Were any formal charges made against you, the virile, pugnacious minister was asked.

"No charges were made," Dr. Walker replied. "I insisted that they make some. The only reason they have given is that they could not get along with me.

Governor Opposes Him

"Of course Gov. Bricker, the Republican chief executive of the state, has been violently opposed to me ever since I campaigned against him in 1936. He sought to make certain changes then which would enable him to grasp greater control of the institution but discovered that under the laws governing the institution, he had no power over the president of Wilberforce university.

"The governor had passed a 'ripper' bill which stripped Bishop Ransom, under whose leadership I went into politics, of his place on the state parole board. He shuffled in a new set of trustees for the state side, one which would do his bididng, had this new board to hold up appropriations vital to the life of the school and this forced the state side of the institution to vote me out of office."

Dr. Walker discussed the puzzling dual support which the school received. He said the state provided between $250,000 and $260,000 annually to conduct the affairs of Wilberforce. He said it was the democrats under the urging of Bishop Ransom and himself who first made sizeable appropriations to the school and the current administration had to follow. The above appropriation by the state left $228,000 to be raised by the church from tuitions, church contributions, etc. The church also receives from the state side of the school, pay for certain instruction given state students on the university side. This year that payment amounted to $50,000, a sum vital to the finances of the church side. When the recognized board refused to vote the money to the church they brought about an impasse therefore forcing their will though pleasure. The church trustees who previously had refused to vote Walker out met again, reconsidered, and declared his office vacant.

Where church politics came to the fore and how they worked at cross purposes with their secular counterpart was pointed out by Dr. Walker. Did [illegible] and maintain its own teachers' college?

"That can't be done. It is against the state constitution in Ohio to maintain a separate school for Negroes."

What will happen to the school from the standpoint of accreditation?

"The state group seems uninterested in this. It seems certain that unless these warring groups can get together and present a united front, the school will lose its accreditation. The state side has already employed many teachers whom the North Central Association distinctly discredited."

What do you think should be done in the matter of electing a new president?

"The matter should be held in status quo so as to give ample time for selecting the best man in America."

Federal Bureau Of Education Surveys Langston Univ.

LANGSTON. — Dr. Lloyd E. Block, white, and Dr. Martin D. Jenkins, Negro, both senior specialists in the U. S. Office of Education, Washington, D. C., spent three days last week on the campus of Langston university making observations and interviewing administrative officers, teachers, and students.

Langston university is one of twenty-five Negro institutions of higher education selected by the federal agency for study. According to the visitors, this national survey of higher education for Negroes has a two-fold purpose: (1) It will attempt to ascertain what kind of higher education facilities are available for Negroes; (2) it will attempt to indicate needed developments and suggest directions that this development should take.

The published report of this study will be available to educators and other interested persons in 1942. It was explained by the surveyors that this project did not originate in the federal office but was requested by the Association of Negro Colleges. The information gained will not be used by the federal office for any purpose whatsoever, but will be entirely for the benefit of Negro educators and those charged with the responsibility of promoting Negro education.

This survey, along with three others concerned with Negro institutions of higher learning, is being financed by a special congressional appropriation.

LANGSTON, Okla. — Dr. G. L. Harrison, president of Langston university, on his recent trip to Washington, D. C., spent twenty minutes in conversation with Mrs. Roosevelt in which she queried him regarding the status of Langston university.

Mrs. Roosevelt particularly wanted to ascertain whether or not Langston was receiving its total share of Federal aid. When told of the recent improvements made at the institution, Mrs. Roosevelt listened intently and assured Dr. Harrison that he could count on her support to aid in any way possible of making Langston a greater institution. She promised a visit to Oklahoma's only Negro college on her next visit to the South.

Dunjee, Thompson, Halperin Barred From 'Y' Conference Held at Langston University

Bellegard Holds That Tuesday Investigation Makes Trio Undesirable

Dispatch Editor Wants To Talk

FEB 15 1941

The "Oklahoma Dies Committee" successfully wrecked a civil rights panel at Langston University Saturday, when fear of legislative reprisals caused Langston University officials to bar three scheduled speakers from a one-day "Y" Fellowship Conference.

The speakers barred were Prof Maurice Halperin, University of Oklahoma, Norman, Editor Roscoe Dunjee, Oklahoma City and Rev. John B. Thompson, Chairman of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, Norman.

Word of the disruption of the "Y" program reached Okklahoma City, Friday when Bob Stone, chairman of the State Council of Student Christian Associations, phoned Editor Dunjee from Norman, that Dr. A. D. Bellegrade, professor of Languages, Langston University, had called Stone to state that the three speakers named had been barred because they were under investigation by

"I have some very fortunate information I wish to disclose" said Stone in his talk with Dunjee. "But Dr. Bellegrade was very positive and leaves me no alternative" Stone continued.

When seen in Oklahoma City, where he was in attendance at the Oklahoma Association of Negro Teachers, Dr. G. L. Harrison, president of the University said, "Of course the "Y" Conference is not under the supervision and direction of the University, and I can say only this that I know nothing about the ruling regarding these speakers, and this is the first time it has been called to my attention.

"I have some very unfortunate with a subpoena for the -'Red" hearing'" said Editor Dunjee when questioned regarding the matter "I really don't believe the Oklahoma Dies Committee want to question me because I am really the only member of the executive committee the Oklahoma Federation for Constitutional Rights who can talk for a whole day regarding the denial of civil rights in Oklahoma".

"I'm not worried about my patriotism" the Editor continued "but I would like to have an opportunity, if they don't squalch me, to give them concrete evidence of tyranny right here in our so-called democracy".

"I don't think it would hurt the committee to know that I have just spent a whole week down in Choctaw County trying to salvage the civil rights of a Negro, W. D. Lyons whose civil rights were clubbed and beaten out of him by one of Governor Phillips' high-priced investigators, and I would like to tell that committee that I was denied my civil rights attempting to get to Hugo on a bus." The Editor continued.

"I'm afraid" said Dunjee" that I'm the member of the committee they don't call me the folk who tainly be a terrible denial of civil rights if they don't call me since with their noisy newspaper publicity I have been barred from Langston University. You see if theyd on't call me the folk who barred me Saturday because of what they read in the papers, will of course continue the ban indefinitely".

The Future of Langston University

Governor Phillips' three constitutional amendments have received official okay from citizenship of the state. All three of last Tuesday's proposals are now the law of the land. Whether the new enactments are a forward or a backward step in social organization remains to be seen.

Someone has said that no law is better than the men who administer it. A great deal is going to depend upon the manner by which Governor Phillips organizes his new setup, for the reason that two of the amendments passed last Tuesday, give certain powers to Oklahoma's chief executive trending towards dictatorship.

While the budget-balancing amendment and the coordinating amendments do not say in so many words, both of these amendments provide the means by which an individual inclined to perpetuate himself in office and concentrate power within his own hands, may do so. The coming months will prove or disprove our fears.

All of the Negroes of this state know that the Board of Regents of Oklahoma Colleges is so constituted as to place control of Langston university in the hands of a certain state senator. Whether this was wittingly or unwittingly done is not the question. Regardless to the intenion of Governor Phillips, a close relative of a state senator, who has for many years sought to control patronage at Langston university, landed the position as chairman of the Board of Regents of Oklahoma Colleges. It is, to say the least, an unusual coincidence.

We shall wait with much interest to observe the calibre of the men appointed to the coordinating board of regents, provided under the new law. We will be vitally interested to know if a member of that board is to be selected from Logan County. When we wrote an editorial a few days ago opposing this amendment, persons supposed to be informed, freely mingled among Negroes, saying, "Dunjee has lost the ball. This amendment will free—not shackle—Langston university."

It will be recalled that it is expressly written into the board of regents law, provided for the University of Oklahoma, that no regent shall be named to this board residing in the county where the school is located. People who live in counties where colleges are located accumulate too much of a proprietary interest in state schools. This has been Langston's difficulty across the years. We suggest now that Negroes write letters to Governor Phillips requesting that no members of the coordinating board be named from Logan county. It will certainly be o pleasure to the Black Dispatch if Governor Phillips, in naming this board, refuses to name any of the personnel from Logan or adjacent counties.

We have yet to see the good purpose in having two boards of regents, and we predict that before the next legislature convenes there will be violent conflict between the Board of Regents of Oklahoma Colleges and the Coordinating Board of Regents. Where does the authority of one board end, and where does the other commence? We predict now that strife regarding jurisdictional powers will paralyze higher education in Oklahoma.

Already there juts out into the picture a changing technique which must develop with the Langston Alumni Association. Teachers over Oklahoma have for the past decade been securing appropriations for Langston university through direct attack on candidates for the legislature in the counties where they reside. Legislative appropriations have been increasing for the past few years because Negros in each county cast their votes for legislative solons based upon promises made to support adequate funds for the school.

The amendment passed Tuesday throws all of this program into the garbage can of disuse. Suppose, for instance, a Negro hereafter approaches a candidate for the legislature, seeking to pledge such individual to support Langston university. Immediately the candidate will advise:

> "I have absolutely nothing to do with such matters. Under the recent amendment passed by the people, the legislature appropriates a lump sum of money for higher education. It is not ear-marked for any institution. You will have to carry your troubles to the coordinating board."

That legislator will not be dodging you. He will be telling you the actual truth. If Langston university secures adequate funds in the years to come, interested Negro citizens must on their knees plead their case before a coordinating board of regents who have a lump sum of money handed them by the legislature for higher education in Oklahoma.

The legislators were responsive to the will of Negroes voting in their political unit, but will a board, under no obligation to Negroes, act similarly? In the South, where education is in a large manner dictated for Negroes, we are certainly of the opinion that direct, rather than indirect influence would serve best the needs of Negro education.

It is entirely possible for Governor Phillips to select a group of liberal, sympathetic citizens who will see to it that Langston university is lifted to a plane of accreditation, but whatever happens, it will not result from the effective democratic process provided by the use of the ballot. A staggered board whose tenure runs from one to ten years will be named by Governor Phillips.

We return to our first premise, "No law is better than the men who administer it." Here's hoping that Governor Phillips, in the selection of the new coordinating board of regents, will be guided by the highest standards of integrity and honor, and that all of the fears of the Black Dispatch are unfounded and chemerical.

Will It Be "President Jimmy?"

While Dr. G. Lamar Harrison is out of the state this week on business the ball started rolling on the Langston campus to make Jimmy Taylor, campaign manager for Dr. Louis Ritzhaupt, president of Langston University. Rumor has it that a petition actually started circulating on the campus of the University and that faculty members were asking regent board members to name Jimmy Taylor president.

The Black Dispatch had nothing to do with President G. Lamar Harrison coming to Oklahoma. Since he has been on the Langston campus we have loaned him our undivided support. We are actually of the opinion that if he had been given a free hand, and had not been tied by the same political influences from which Dr. Albert Turner fled, the new president could make some progress.

But Dr. Harrison has had no such freedom. His hands have been completely tied by the "Special Adjuster", who today has almost entire charge of the institution.

It will be recalled that this publication pointed out, in our issue of December 16, 1939, that Jimmy Taylor was being touted for president and that the report, published in the Oklahoma Eagle, that Jimmy had saved the University $6,453.40 during the previous month of September was false. We observed then that if Jimmy continued his gait the institution would at the end of the term be in possession of a $58,000 surplus. Instead of the predicted surplus the institution is now $16,000 in debt.

In order that our readers may know what the Black Dispatch said fully one year ago we republish below a portion of an editorial we wrote entitled "Jimmy Taylor, Business Manager":

> And now with the selection of a new president for Langston University we wonder whether or not the board of regents will insist upon the retention of the wonderful business manager it now possesses in the person of Prof. Jimmy Taylor.
>
> Prof. Taylor, who was also an active candidate for the presidency, and who was supported for this important position by the editor of the Oklahoma Eagle, is said to have worked wonders with the finances at the Langston Institution. In the month of September, according to the Oklahoma Eagle, Jimmy Taylor was able to save the people of the state $6,453.40.
>
> In support of its contention that Jimmy is a financial wizard, Editor Goodwin made the following statement several weeks ago:
>
> "In the operation of the main dining room for the first month Jimmy shows a bank balance of $6,453.40—with all bills paid and a large amount of groceries still on hand. On this basis, if it holds up for the school year, there should be $58,077.00 on hand at the end of the school year".
>
> We think that The Black Dispatch should discuss the figures given above in order that the new president who takes charge in the next thirty days will be fully apprised as to whether or not his business manager, knows anything at all about the wizardy of figures.
>
> In September of this year there was enrolled at Langston University 725 students. $11.00 out of the eighteen dollars monthly payments goes into the dining room fund. In other words Jimmy Taylor collected the sum of $7,975.00 dining room funds during the month of September. We state the exact and actual amount he collected. This—no less and no more.
>
> Jimmy will have to agree that this is the amount he collected from 725 students paying $11.00 per capita.
>
> We have in that last balance the amount of money that wizard Jimmy used to feed 725 students during the month of September, if we are not as guillible as Editor Goodwin desires us to be we shall now take this sum of money and reduce it to more understandable terms.
>
> Never since we read the 6th chapter of St. Mark have we been able to discover any act of man comparable with the miracles of the Lowly Nazarene until we learned from the Editor of the Oklahoma Eagle about Jimmy Taylor and his "mama" out Langston way. Christ fed five thousand with "five loaves and two fishes". Christ had only twelve baskets of trash left when He finished His job, but Jimmy pulls the same stunt and ends with a bin full of real stuff, and $6,453.40 with which to replentish his supply five times over. It seems somewhat sacreligeous, but truly Christ is a piker when He gets in competition with Jimmy Taylor.
>
> If 725 students must live on $1,521.60 each month, it means that their per capita food cost is slightly less than $2.10 each thirty days. In order that we do not run off into the magic of decimals we will say that the daily three-meal menu costs 7 cents, or 2 and one-third cents per meal.
>
> Of course all of what we are saying is based upon the assertion and declaration of Editor Goodwin that Jimmy Taylor saved $6,453.40 in one month out of a total of amount collected of $7,975.00. And while we are on that point we want to call attention to the fact that Editor Goodwin would have us believe that Jimmy has in the dining room fund at this present moment slightly over $19.000 otherwise he would not say Jimmy would have $58,000 at the end of the year. A good question to ask right here, and which Editor Goodwin should be able to answer in his next ediition. "Was October and November just as profitable to Jimmy Taylor's dining room account as September?" A great deal depends upon what Editor Goodwin says in behalf of "Ambitious Jimmy" and the way his money continues to stack up following the marvelous September report.
> Now to cease being funny we want to point out right here that Jimmy Taylor will not report any such record for October and November. The truth is that when many parents came in and paid their children's bills for the entire semester Jimmy did not have the business sense to see that he could not credit these children's October, November and December payments to his general September balance. Some of these parents paid their children's account for the entire year. Jimmy either knew this or he did not know this. If the young man knew the facts as we have just stated it, he is guilty of having attempted to fool he board of regents and the people of the sate. If Jimmy did not know this to be true, he has gone a long way towards proving Senator Ritzhaupt's assertion that no Negro in Oklahoma is qualified to manage Langston University's business office.
>
> The truth is that we would rather look at the figures Jimmy submits at the end of the semester, to find out whether Langston's dining room department is in the red or in the black, rather than the figures he offered to Ed Goodwin in September, which when reduced to their stark nakedness attempt to show that he is feeding 725 students for two and one-third cents per meal. Of course these figures we have submitted do not offer the stark naked truth, for it should be recalled that those employed in the dining room and kitchen at the University must reduce this sum of $1,521.60 by some $400.00. These people work for salaries and we have sufficiently inquired into this matter to know that if Jimmy is paying $400.00 for dining room salaries he is then feeding 725 students for a sum of around and about $1,100.00 per month. To this must be added the cost of feeding the faculty members who also eat three healthy meals per day.
>
>
> But suppose what Jimmy alleges is true. In other words he supports the theory that the kids can be fed for $2.10 per month. If this is the truth why is the State of Oklahoma demanding that Negro children pay $11.00 per month? Too many Negroes are on relief and mortgaging their property to send their children to Langston University for the state to enforce such an unfair program. Of course we do not believe the state can feed the children for any such meager sum. We simply follow the logical conclusion one would reach if Editor Goodwin and Jimmy Taylor know what they are talking about.
> Of course six months ago we knew Jimmy was in the ed and since that time he has gone down the financia loggan as though he were on skids. JAN 18 1941

But if President Harrison takes over without letting the people know the actual condition of the boarding fund is at time he takes over, he is going to get adverse propaganda rted against him two ways. First he will be charged next y with not being a good business man, and Jimmy will still ry the title of the best administrator ever born; (2nd) The president will have to carry the brunt of having sent home t of students who a good business manager should not have epted as free boarders in the first instance.

6,000 in debt and yet the political buzzards sur- ng Langston University want to get rid of a man s never had a chance and elevate to the presidency who in 18 months converted a $40,000 surplus ac- ted by J. W. Sanford into a $16,000 deficit. Con- thou art a jewel.

It remains to be seen whether the Board of Regents of Oklahoma Colleges will stand for this sort of thing. We always known there was one member who would die by. Dr. Albert Turner found that out in a two-day

OKLAHOMA

Will It Be "President Jimmy?"

While Dr. G. Lamar Harrison is out of the state this week on business the ball started rolling on the Langston campus to make Jimmy Taylor, campaign manager for Dr. Louis Ritzhaupt, president of Langston University. Rumor has it that a petition actually started circulating on the campus of the University and that faculty members were asking regent board members to name Jimmy Taylor president.

The Black Dispatch had nothing to do with President G. Lamar Harrison coming to Oklahoma. Since he has been on the Langston campus we have loaned him our undivided support. We are actually of the opinion that if he had been given a free hand, and had not been tied by the same political influences from which Dr. Albert Turner fled, the new president could make some progress.

But Dr. Harrison has had no such freedom. His hands have been completely tied by the "Special Adjuster", who today has almost entire charge of the institution.

It will be recalled that this publication pointed out, in our issue of December 16, 1939, that Jimmy Taylor was being touted for president and that the report, published in the Oklahoma Eagle, that Jimmy had saved the University $6,453.40 during the previous month of September was false. We observed then that if Jimmy continued as his gait the institution would at the end of the term be in possession of a $58,000 surplus. Instead of the predicted surplus the institution is now $16,000 in debt.

In order that our readers may know what the Black Dispatch said fully one year ago we republish below a portion of an editorial we wrote entitled "Jimmy Taylor, Business Manager":

> And now with the selection of a new president for Langston University we wonder whether or not the board of regents will insist upon the retention of the wonderful business manager it now possesses in the person of Prof. Jimmy Taylor.
>
> Prof. Taylor, who was also an active candidate for the presidency, and who was supported for this important position by the editor of the Oklahoma Eagle, is said to have worked wonders with the finances at the Langston Institution. In the month of September, according to the Oklahoma Eagle, Jimmy Taylor was able to save the people of the state $6,453.40.
>
> In support of its contention that Jimmy is a financial wizard, Editor Goodwin made the following statement several weeks ago:
>
> "In the operation of the main dining room for the first month Jimmy shows a bank balance of $6,453.40—with all bills paid and a large amount of groceries still on hand. On this basis, if it holds up for the school year, there should be $58,077.00 on hand at the end of the school year".
>
> We think that The Black Dispatch should discuss the figures given above in order that the new president who takes charge in the next thirty days will be fully apprised as to whether or not his business manager, knows anything at all about the wizardy of figures.
>
> In September of this year there was enrolled at Langston University 725 students. $11.00 out of the eighteen dollars monthly payments goes into the dining room fund. In other words Jimmy Taylor collected the sum of $7,975.00 during the month of September. We state the exact room funds and actual amount be collected this—no less and no more.

Jimmy will have to agree that this is the amount he collected from 725 students paying $11.00 per capita.

We have in that last balance the amount of money that wizard Jimmy used to feed 725 students during the month of September, if we are not as gullible as Editor Goodwin desires us to be we shall now take this sum of money and reduce it to more understandable terms.

Never since we read the 6th chapter of St. Mark have we been able to discover any act of man comparable with the miracles of the Lowly Nazarene until we learned from the Editor of the Oklahoma Eagle about Jimmy Taylor and his same stunt and ends with a bin full of real stuff, and $6,453.40 of trash left when He finished His job, but Jimmy pulls the somewhat sacreligeous, but truly Christ is a piker when He gets in competition with Jimmy Taylor.

"five loaves and two fishes". Christ had only twelve baskets with which to replentish his supply five times over. It seems that their per capita food cost is slightly less than $2.10 each thirty days. In order that we do not run off into the magic of decimals we will say that the daily three-meal menu costs 7 cents, or 2 and one-third cents per meal.

If 725 students must live on $1,521.60 each month, it means tor of the Oklahoma Eagle

Of course all of what we are saying is based upon the assertion and declaration of Editor Goodwin that Jimmy Taylor saved $6,453.40 in one month out of a total of amount collected of $7,975.00. And while we are on that point we want to call attention to the fact that Editor Goodwin would have us believe that Jimmy has in the dining room fund at this present moment slightly over $19,000 otherwise he would not say Jimmy would have $58,000 at the end of the year. A good question and which Editor Goodwin should be able to answer in his next edition. "Was October and November ber just as profitable to Jimmy Taylor's dining room account as September?" A great deal depends upon what Editor Goodwin says in behalf of "Ambitious Jimmy" and the way his money continues to stack up following the marvelous September report.

Here's what we said on that subject:

> The reason we suggest President Harrison should release these figures now is because we know Oklahoma politics. Senator Ritzhaupt and his cohorts have in the past few months given a great "buildup" to the business capacity of Jimmy Taylor. As the matter stands now he is "supposed" to have done more with the finances at the institution than any other person. We know that he has done no such thing. We know now that more than 200 sudens are on a temporary enrollment list for the 2nd semester, because their board bills are unpaid, and that a large number other than this were placed on a free board list by the said Jimmy Taylor for various and sundry reasons. Some of the usual things have been happening and as a result the "much heralded" $6.500.00 has "gone with the wind".
>
> But if President Harrison takes over without letting the people know the actual condition of the boarding fund is at the time he takes over, he is going to get adverse propaganda started against him two ways. First he will be charged next May with not being a good business man, and Jimmy will still carry the title of the best administrator ever born; (2nd) The new president will have to carry the brunt of having sent home a lot of students who a good business manager should not have accepted as free boarders in the first instance.

Thanks, Mr. President

Last August during the Presidential campaign the AFRO exposed for the first time the situation in 148 colored CCC camps where all the civilian and military posts were held by white persons.

With millions appropriated for a defense program, CCC camps are not as desirable now as they used to be.

JAN 18 1941

Last week President Roosevelt by executive order directed that these 148 camps are to have colored military assistants and colored reserve officers may qualify as commanders.

This leaves only the civilian personnel of one camp superintendent and six foremen who are white.

We are glad the President has taken our suggestions to put colored commanders in colored camps, and we hope that at the earliest date commensurate with good administration he will also replace the white civilian officials with colored persons.

It means for the first time that CCC boys who qualify can get promotions and better paying posts that have been closed to them for several years.

Strangely enough, the man who first brought discrimination in CCC camps to our notice and provided the information that made a crusade possible, hasn't a CCC job or any kind of a job. All he has today is the satisfaction that some 296 new positions have been provided for others.

DEMOCRACY AT LINCOLN U. AIM OF STUDENT COUNCIL

Lincoln University, Pa.- In order to promote democracy on the Lincoln University campus and to remove certain undesirable features from the community life here, the Student Council and a representative student group drafted a questionnaire, Tuesday, as a means of creating a mandate by which necessary reforms may be introduced.

Among the questions which were asked by the students were:

"To what group or groups do you attribute the most responsibility for the unwholesome state of democracy at Lincoln? Should the faculty take an active part in the election of student officers? In your opinion, has the religious program of Lincoln University really met your needs?"

The Negro's Course in the Crisis

By WALTER LIVINGSTON WRIGHT
President, Lincoln University

(From baccalaureate address, June 1, at Lincoln University, Chester County, Pa., founded in 1854, the oldest institution in the United States for the higher education of Negro young men.)

THE world is one. We shall best attain our desire at home in a world that moves toward the same ideals. In a world that denies righteous purposes of life and exalts their opposites, we cannot advance even if we survive. We shall do little to save democracy abroad if we neglect it at home. If we disclaim our interest in its survival elsewhere, we run the risk that in the face of organized might we lose the liberty we have so hardly won.

We, in America, are no longer a new nation as in former years. We inherit traditions and problems that have come down to us through three hundred years. Antagonisms have developed similar to those across the seas. Racially we live in two worlds in America. We breathe the same air and eat the same food, yet the two races are far apart. What shall be done to bridge the gap? There is advice on every hand. Whom shall we follow?

On the white side of the line few give thought to the racial situation. In general they assume the continuance of things as they are. We separate at every possible point and little attention is paid to the life the Negro faces. To us it is a thing apart, while to the Negro it affects his whole existence. He lives largely in a world circumscribed for him by the other race. Inevitably he wants change. How should it be brought about, and how shall its beneficence be assured? Can he assume that the change necessarily means improvement? Things are not satisfactory. The temptation is to assume that any change will be for the better.

From time to time new situations necessitate action. A crusade sweeps over the earth. The sword is red with human blood. The wealth of the world is poured out for implements of war. Men battle on land, sea, and air. We in America sit on the sidelines. We are told on the one part that it is the siren's call luring us to the destruction of the life and ideals that we have built up if we turn aside from our own life busy with the problems that press for solution within our own borders. The nation as a whole, however, moves hesitatingly with slow measured steps into the belief that if we sit by and allow the new way of life to prevail in the rest of the world we shall not be bothered with our vexed problems, that there will be new controls partly from without and perhaps more from within if the Nazi way becomes the dominating, the successful way in the world.

The Negro has his own viewpoints as he tries to see his way through the dimly lighted future. His leaders advocate vitally different policies from which he must choose. Some advocate a general movement with prevailing American sentiment, insisting that the Negro is first of all American, and that the most vital thing for him is that America should retain her freedom of action; that in the emergency the Negro should appeal first as a loyal American, with insistence on fair and equal treatment, but with no threat of disloyalty if these pleas are disregarded.

A second leadership would reverse this order, insisting that justice to the Negro should precede his support of the defense of America, and the nations's danger is his opportunity—that his loyalty should be only to a democracy that gives him his full rights.

A third starts with the premise that, with the possible exception of America and Russia, all governments alike are bad so far as the Negro is concerned, and therefore the present world struggle has little interest for him. Fascism and Nazism are bad, but so is British rule. All badnesses are alike. Imperialisms, British, German or American, differ little. One or the other does not matter so far as the Negro's future is concerned.

On the one side there is the statement from one leader in the public press that this was the opportune time because the government was most vulnerable and needed the Negro and all other citizens; that Negroes in order to secure their rights should embarrass the government in the same manner that the government has embarrassed them; that Negroes should use the same tactics against the government to attain their citizenship rights as organized laborers are using to obtain higher wages.

The other view is expressed by a Negro journal: "In America fourteen million Negroes march to offer their services to America, which despite its imperfections, is still the last outpost to constitutional freedom for all mankind in the civilized world. Throughout the nation a great minority surges forth in search of an opportunity to serve without malice or grudge. All it seeks is a place in the productive schemes of a land long loved."

The student hears all these voices. Which shall he heed? Certainly he should follow neither without earnest effort to get the facts. Are all imperialisms alike? Do British, German, Italian, American control in Africa and the Islands mean the same thing, so that there is no choice? Excluding America, where is he nominally at least a member of the mother country, he is elsewhere a member of a colonial possession with the hope of ultimately gaining self-rule and control in areas historically his, and where his numbers exceed all other groups. With the two hopes ahead of ultimate independence and meanwhile a beneficent rule that will lead through educational and other development to this end, does he really see as much hope under one rule as another.

If there is no difference the world struggle is one he may well pass by. If not, it is surely the part of wisdom to aid the most favorable, British and American principles expressed and exemplified for good or ill in practice are open to his study, as are those of the Nazi and Fascist. Both have dealt and are dealing with minority groups, and their methods are known to all that have the will to investigate.

Turning to the United States, what course is wise? Loyalty and patriotic service with loyal pressure for recognition or this only on condition that certain essential rights under the Constitution are granted before that service is rendered, or thirdly, cooperation with groups at home and abroad which see the Negro's future in an overthrow of existing forms of government, and the nation's present stress a favorable opportunity to bring this about?

The choice lies largely between the first two, and the individual will form his own conclusions either from careful study or emotionally following some appealing leader.

The Negro's ability is being recognized as never before. In literature, science, music, and art the day is past when he attracts surprised attention from his racial origin. With trained minds of both races and a fuller recognition of Christian principles, one may surely hope for progress as the problem becomes more that of the wider relationship of man to man, and the national problem is merged in that of mankind in general where the future existence of all seems to depend on the gradual diminution of hatred, malice, ill will, jealousy and seeking of self.

AUG 2 1941

There are many opportunities existing today for young people who are trained for trades in the needlecrafts. The present trend is back to handwork in dressmaking, millinery and tailoring. These vocational courses at Berean school give the student a thorough background in the theory and practice of the trade. The school buildings are well equipped and have light and airy classrooms. The most modern type of electric sewing machines and other equipment are used in classroom instruction. The Dressmaking and Design courses, of which Mrs. Mable L. Warrick is the director, are taught by college trained faculty members, with the proper emphasis on the vocational side, as well as the theoretical side of the subjects of instruction. Small classes enable individualized instruction. The entire training is planned to develop skill in technical expression and to stimulate creative ability; so that, upon finishing the course, the student is well qualified to enter this large, diversified and remunerative field. These courses are designed to give young women an understanding of the skills and technics, required in the methods of planning, designing, buying, cutting and fitting, color, line, materials, remodeling, draping and dressmaking in the current fashion. This training may be for personal use and finally to enable them to engage in trade dressmaking and design as dressmakers' assistants or to open dressmaking shops of their own, for modern and modish, individualized apparel construction.

The instructors are always in the classroom during instruction periods to help and criticize the students' work. This method of personal instruction and close observation of students' work has proved a saving of time required for training and has resulted in the attainment of greater student proficiency for the fashion industry at Berean School, South College avenue, near North 19th street, Philadelphia.

Seek New President To Succeed Dr. Wright At Lincoln University

186

NEW YORK. — (ANP)— Lincoln university of Pennsylvania is seeking a new president to succeed Dr. Walter L. Wright, who last June submitted his resignation, after 48 years connection with the veteran educational institution.

Dr. Wright's resignation has not been accepted as yet, but Dr. E. P. Roberts, New York physician and chairman of the board of trustees of the university, a few days ago named a five-man committee whose duty it is to find the man who will succeed him.

Those on the committee are: Lewis M. Stevens, Philadelphia lawyer; Dr. William H. Johnson, Princeton, former president of Lincoln; J. Frederick Talcott, New York business man; Dr. Walter G. Alexander, physician of Orange, N. J.; George W. Goodman, Urban League executive secretary, Washington, D. C. The first three are white.

The committee has not held its first meeting but free discussion among Lincoln alumni has been divided between those who believe the time is ripe for a Negro to be named president, and those who think Lincoln will prosper better with a white president. Both factions are in favor of more Negroes being named to the faculty of the institution.

Lincoln has never had a Negro president and its faculty is still largely white. Although an independent organization, it has strong affiliations with the Presbyterian church.

"No names have yet been submitted as candidates for the presidency," Dr. Roberts explained in reply to question, "and the board of trustees has made no decision as to whether the new president should be white or colored. In fact, color is not a consideration, we are interested in getting the best man available for the post, regardless of his race or color."

"I think the committee should meet and decide on the type of man they want; what his training should be, and so on. Then the committee should select that man who best fits their definition of what a Lincoln president should be."

If Dr. Roberts has his way, the next Lincoln president would be "a great educator who can meet other great educators on their own level, wherever they happen to be, whether at Yale or Harvard. I would not get a man because of his ability to raise money, as important as that is; if the educational leadership is of the highest calibre, we shall find it easier to raise money, and we can always employ people just for this function."

While the appointment of Dr. Roberts' committee would indicate that Dr. Wright's resignation will be accepted, there is some sentiment in the board of trustees that Dr. Wright be drafted to remain president until 1943 when he will have completed 50 years in the service of Lincoln and Negro higher education. This sentiment is especially voiced by former President Johnson, it is said. In the meantime, Lincoln opened last week for the new school year, 400 students strong, and with Dr. Wright still filling the president's chair.

Dr. Roberts was graduated from Lincoln in 1891, earned a master's degree later and still later, was honored with a doctor of laws degree. He earned his medical degree from Flower-Fifth Avenue Medical college in 1894.

Group Action Best Approach For Race Ills

MAY 1 - 1941

Anger, Mere Smartness Must Give Way To Collective Thinking

CHEYNEY, PA. — The Pennsylvania State Negro Council held its annual Spring meeting at the Cheyney State Teachers College, here, last Saturday morning.

Dr. Leslie Pinckney Hill president of Cheyney State Teachers College, and of the council, who presided, made an introductory address.

"It is no mere Negro camping, but sober fact, that America can set up for the world no convincing demonstration of a democratic order unless that order included her multiplying millions of black folk. Neither can our ally, England, until she renounces the soul-withering oppression of her African hordes and sets free the fettered consciences of India," Dr. Hill said.

MAY 1 - 1941

DISCRIMINATION HURTS ALL

"It is clear to every open eye, that the whole nation, and not merely one race, must suffer from all the discriminations, prohibitions and denials that may withhold from any citizen the disciplines and functions which the national emergency demands," he continued.

"We shall get nowhere by bitterness and hatred," he cautioned his hearers. "To be merely smart or offensively self-assertive or ill-mannered will stead us not at all. Not even demanding our rights, proper as that may be, will break through the walls about us.

What is needed now is not anger or smartness, but a broad collective wisdom and soberly considered group action. And these, we know now, can be advanced only by a determined, basic spirit of unselfish, even sacrificial cooperation.

COLLECTIVE THINKING

In all the broad areas of our need —health, housing, recreation, equality of educational opportunity, employment, social, political and religious intelligence, participation now in the whole colossal defense program—everywhere from ditch-digging to aviation—in all of this we need tragically not the solo approach, not the action of hasty proprietary impulse, not the personal race to get their first, but strong collective thinking and an unbroken solidarity of understanding and purpose in well-reasoned group action.

MAY 1 - 1941

"On all sides voices come to me asking that we march out with our council now, not only in the interest of the Negro race threatened now with the gravest denial and losses, but also to the end that we may help now immediately and effectively to destroy the horror that is clutching at the very heart of the freedom of the world," he concluded.

The members of the Council unanimously voted to hold their next meeting on Saturday, June 7, morning session from 10 to 12 noon and the afternoon session from 2 to 4 o'clock.

DELEGATES PRESENT

Among those present at the meeting were:

MAY 1 - 1941

HARRISBURG, Pa. — Lincoln University will receive $75,000 from the State during the next biennium, an increase of 50 per cent over that allowed by the previous administration, according to a bill signed by Gov. Arthur James, last week end.

More than $40,000 of the appropriation will be given in scholarships which are secured through Senatorial recommendation and qualifying examinatons. According to Dr. Walter L. Wright, president of Lincoln, the enrolment of students from Pennsylvania has increased more than five times since the State has been allowing funds for scholarships.

The Governor is expected to act this week on appropriations for Berean Training School, Mercy and Douglass Hospitals, all in Philadelphia, and Downingtown Industrial School.

Pa. Council Hits J. C.

A fight against discrimination in defense industries is being launched by the Pennsylvania State Council of Defense which recntly passed a resolution condemning all "discriminatory regulations."

According to Dr. Arnaud C. Marts, president of Bucknell University and executive director of the council, the body was unanimous in its decision to aid colored workers wherever possible and was ready to take "additional steps" to follow up its resolution.

It is believed that the these steps will include the appointment of a co-operative committee to direct and advise on the participation of colored people in the local defense program. Bishop David H. Sims has been mentioned as the one who will be asked to head this committee.

Lincoln University, Poor Man's Institution, Worthy Of State Grant

THE Pennsylvania House of Representatives has passed an appropriation bill of $100,000 for Lincoln University.

MAY 22 1941

Lincoln is a unique university in the State of Pennsylvania. It has given opportunities to men who are not rich to get a college education.

Many men scattered throughout the State and nation acquired their liberal education at Lincoln University. In most instances, where one finds a Lincoln man one will find a worthy citizen.

The Senate should agree to the House Bill and Governor James should sign it without any reductions. This newspaper is aware of the Governor's economy program. It is obvious that no institution desires its appropriation to be cut, but if any cutting is necessary let the ax fall on the million dollar institutions.

Here is one important fact which the Senate and Governor should consider: Practically all of the appropriation granted to Lincoln University is ploughed back into the State in the form of scholarships to worthy students who are unable to meet the high cost of a college education.

Of all the worthy institutions which are supported by State funds, Lincoln University is equally as worthy; and when it is considered what others get, $100,000 is not too much.

Cave-Man Stuff

When appropriations for the state university and colleges were under discussion in the House ways and means committee hearing Wednesday Representative Manning "riz up" and said: "Seventy-five per cent of our boys who enter the state-supported schools would be better off if they never went there. I don't consider it worth a damn. If you are going to educate Tom, Dick and Harry let him get out and run a filling station or something like that. I am opposed to increasing these colleges a damned cent."

The speech of the representative was so quoted in the Columbia dispatches. It is our hope that it was erroneously quoted. We can hardly imagine a man in the legislature of South Carolina, even though he be opposed to increased appropriations for higher education, who would take the bit of discretion and reason from his mouth and let it splutter as recklessly and inaccurately as was said of Mr. Manning.

It may be assumed that the charge he brought against boys in state colleges also referred to those in other institutions for higher education. No doubt the speaker also had in mind the girls of the state who attend college. To say that 75 per cent of these students would "be better off if they never went there" is nonsense.

That many boys and girls go to college who do not profit from the experience is well known, but certainly one is misstating the fact when he says that they number 75 per cent or even more than a small minority of the student bodies.

Speaker Blatt and Representatives Grant and Zerbst had offered the resolution to restore the appropriations for the University, The Citadel, Clemson, Winthrop, the Medical College and the State Negro College. Speaker Blatt, approving the resolution, said that he believed in making it possible for young men and women "to obtain an education at the higher institutions of learning." To the credit of the House it ignored the coarse and unjust protest of Representative Manning and restored the appropriations.

The first rural Negro ministers conference to be conducted under the direction of the Agricultural Extension department will be held at the State A. M. college, Orangeburg, June 3 to June 5.

The conference will be under the direction of H. E. Danielsfi district agent for Negro Agricultural Extension work in South Carolina and M. B. Paul, state home agent.

Training For Negro Youth

EVERY thoughtful educational leader and lay citizen will agree with Principal B. T. Beatty of the South Asheville Elementary School that a junior college in or near Asheville for Negro high-school graduates would mean something tremendous for the race and would be a great asset to the state.

As matters now are, the end of high-school days for the great majority of these students means going out into life unprepared for any vocation. A junior college, although the name of the institution would not matter, would provide training in agriculture, wood-working, in cooking and dress-making, in primary business courses. It would also offer pre-college classes for the few students who wish to enter the professions.

In short, Principal Beatty asks for community support in an enterprise which would increasingly over the years multiply the self-reliance, self-respect, self-sufficiency and life success of the Negroes of Asheville and of this section. It may be difficult to reach the real beginning of such an institution, but the results would bless both races in manifold ways.

Other members of the faculty are: Dr. J. A. McConnell, Theology; James T. McCain, Education; Mrs. Minnie B. Smith, English; W. J. Burgess, Mathematics; Miss Precious Dannelly, Economics; W. M. Moses, Science; W. H. C. Bowen, English, Hazel F. Johnson, French; I. N. Taylor, Science E. C. Conyers, Printing.

The administration has checked all departments with a view to making this one o the best years in the history of the institution. Extra-curricula activities, such as athletics, have not been under-emphasized, and although the draft has called many athletes away, there is left residue of old men sufficient with the new entrants to carry on successfully. Among these are James Armstrong, G. G. Daniels, H. D Dupree, Robert Martin, E. Shiver, and W. Boykin. Coaches M. O. Ramsey and Williams are hopeful.

The Formal Opening of Allen University

AND CORNER STONE LAYING OF THE JOSEPH SIMEON FLIPPER LIBRARY

By Rev. L A. Wells — Sumter S. C.

An address by Dr. J. E. Beard, the successful Presiding Elder of the Edisto District. He said that before the dawn of Civilization Libraries were known. Libraries represent the best hearts and brain of earth. We have gathered here today to lay the Corner Stone of the Library of Allen University. Let us accept the Motto, of one of the first Libraries built in this Country, as a Motto Joseph Simeon Flipper Library: "LIGHT, TRUTH AND WISDOM." Prof. I. M. A. Myers, was presented for an address. He spoke from the subject, "Let Brotherly Love Continue." He said, "There is a better feeling, and more love in the State, since, the coming of Bishop Flipper, than has been for years. The work of the past, is the work of the Pioneers."

The Allenites have contributed $2,000 for the erection of this Library. "We teach the hand to work, the mind to think, and the heart to love." "Let me live in my house, by the side of the road, and be a friend to man." In well chosen words Bishop Flipper was presented by President S. R. Higgins, the large audience cheered, being over-filled with joy, to see, and hear him. The Bishop said, "I guess I am the happiest man on this occasion. You are looking at what you have been thinking, and talking about for quite a while, a Library on the Campus of Allen University."

Joseph Simeon Flipper Library

The Library was thoughtfully and rightfully named Joseph Simeon Flipper, in honor of our great and good Bishop. The Most Worshipful Grand Master, J. S. Stanback beautifully conducted the Masonic ceremony, and laid the Corner Stone of the Library. Mrs. Flipper called the Sisters to meet her, in Chappelle Memorial Building, quite a large number met. She has the sisters of the State well organized, by her wise and thoughtful leadership, they are putting over a great program in the State for our Lord the Church, the School, and the race.

Dr. Higgins Praised

Dr. Higgins and his very kind and amiable wife are doing a great and good work for the School. Never in the history of the School has the President by his labors and Solicitations reported such a large sum of money for the School. The enrollment is larger than in former years, and still they come. Surely the Spirit of the President J. W. Morris rests on President Higgins.

Persuant to the call of our beloved Bishop Flipper, the Presiding Elders, of the State, and most of the trustees, both ministerial and laymen, many of the leading ministers, and host of distinguished friends, and many of the faithful members, men and women, assembled in Chappelle Memorial Building, to witness the reports of the Educational money, by the Presiding Elders. Devotions were very feelingly and appropriately conducted by Dr. Samuel Nance, the esteemed Presiding Elder of the Orangeburg District.

The Bishop's Address

The Bishop's Address was most timely and brimful of information and inspiration. He kindly said, but with emphasis, I want every man to do his best in making his report. He doesn't drive, but leads easily by kindness. The Bishop and his queenly and versatile wife are greatly admired and loved, by both the ministers and laymen of the State.

Reports

The reports for Education and the Library were very good, they surpassed our most sanguine expectation. The things that made us feel happy. Our good Bishop was pleased with the reports, and so expressed himself.

At 2:30 P. M. the ceremonies of the Corner Stone laying took place. The procession from Chappelle Memorial Building was led by the Bishop, followed by the Presiding Elders, Ministers, Trustees, Masons, Laymen, and friends to the platform of the Library. 1. Doxology was sung. 2. Hymn was lined by Dr. T. J. Miles,. Invocation by Dr. B. F. Hilderbrand. Scripture Lesson by Dr. J. L. Benbow. 2. Hymn was lined by Dr. J. S. Coe, Presiding Elder of the Sumter District. Prof. C. G. Garrett, who is known and respected as one among the strongest laymen of the race, and of the A. M. E. Church. He gave a vivid history of Allen University. He stated that, "the School started in Cokesbury in 1882, and in 1886 it was moved to Columbia, S. C. I came here a boy from the country." Prof. Garrett is still a member of the faculty.

Money Bill With Total $13,195,000 Comes Today

Chairman Smith List Figures on Appropriations

Carrying a total of $13,195,026, the general appropriations bill, for the support of the state government for the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1941, will be introduced in the house of representatives of South Carolina today, according to an announcement last night by Winchester Smith, chairman of the ways and means committee.

Chairman Smith said the bill would be approximately $800,000 below current appropriations and amounts which must be included in a deficiency money measure.

Current appropriations totaled $13,171,564 but Smith said that about $525,000 additional would be necessary for schools after earmarked funds failed to bring in anticipated revenue. He figured that other supplemental amounts would aggregate $300,000.

Only the recapitulation sheet of the bill was revealed but Smith told the house last Thursday that it carried "almost" enough revenue. The house gave the committee special permission to introduce the bill today at the opening of the sixth legislative week, although the bills customarily carry a certificate stating that adequate revenue is provided to meet the proposed appropriations.

The budget commission, headed by Governor Maybank, had recommended appropriations totaling $13,939,505.

The ways and means measure asked $80,000 less for the comptroller general's office—due principally to fewer Confederate pensioners—and reductions ranging from 10 per cent up for educational institutions. It proposed small cuts for a wide variety of other governmental functions.

Earmarked funds of the highway and education departments and the few other departments receiving such assistance are not carried in appropriations bills. Actual expenditures of state funds approximates $40,000,000 a year.

The committee recommended $37,000 less for the University of South Carolina, $12,500 less for The Citadel, $37,000 less for Clemson college's collegiate activities, $7,000 less for the medical college, $36,000 less for Winthrop college, $10,000 less for the State Negro college and $15,000 less for the school for the deaf and blind.

It proposed reductions of $51,000 for the public welfare department, $23,00 for the State (mental) hospital, $15,0 for the training (feeble-minded) school, $13,000 for the sanatorium, $5,000 for the Negro Boys' reformatory, $11,000 for the Girls' Industrial school, $9,000 for the board of health, $27,000 for the state treasurer, $14,000 for the forestry commission, $35,000 for Clemson college's public service activities and $10,000 for the civil contingent fund.

Among the few increases were: $2,500 for the governor's office, $470,000 for the superintendent of education, $800 for the schoolbook commission, $600 for the commissioner of agriculture and $500 for the chief game warden.

Allen-Benedict School Hears Talk By Dr. Hancock

(By the Publicity Committee, Benedict-Allen Summer School)

The Allen-Benedict summer school heard an address by Dr. Gordon B. Hancock, professor of sociology at Virginia Union university, Richmond, Va., at the chapel period Thursday. Doctor Hancock is a native of Ninety-six, and a college graduate of Benedict college, Columbia. He has received degrees from Colgate and Harvard universities. Doctor Hancock is among the most widely known Negro publicists in the United States and releases a weekly column through the Associated Negro Press known as "Between the Lines." His address was well received by the summer school students. He was presented to the audience by Dr. Herbert W. Baumgardner of the summer school faculty and formerly editorial writer for the Palmetto Leader. The speaker paid splendid tribute to the late presidents of Benedict, Osborne and Valentine; to the president emeritus, Dr. Clarence B. Antisdel; and to President J. J. Starks, whose memoirs recently came off the press.

Benedict-Allen Do Great Work In This State

Columbia is the home of two of the finest Negro institutions of higher learning in the Southeast. Both Benedict college and Allen university are located here.

Benedict and Allen were both founded in 1870, according to their respective presidents.

Benedict, a Baptist institution, has a student body of 515 which is housed in 18 buildings. The college campus extends over 20 acres. Dr. J. J. Starks is president of the school.

Allen university, an AME sponsored institution has a student body of 400. The campus, which covers an area of two and one-half blocks, is dotted with nine attractive buildings. Dr. S. R. Higgins is president.

For many years these two institutions struggled through various times of tribulation but always emerged victorious in the end and have continued to carry on the great work of higher education among the Negro race in South Carolina and elsewhere.

Negro School Aid Is Asked

Head Of Teachers' Association Urges Support For Teacher Training

ORANGEBURG, Sept. 22.—John P. Burgess, president of the Palmetto State Teachers association, today issued the following statement:

The recent ruling of the State Board of Education in regard to the certification and classification of teachers and the study of plans for future policies definitely lead to the conclusion that negro teacher-training institutions will be charged with the responsibility of giving adequate pre-service training to prospective teachers for the negro public schools of South Carolina.

The State Agricultural and Mechanical college at Orangeburg is the only state supported institution of higher learning for negroes in South Carolina. It is inconceivable that that institution will not be made sufficiently strong by the state of South Carolina to make procurable for its graduates the highest class of certificate that may be issued by the bureau of certification.

In South Carolina there are four private institutions of higher learning for negroes that offer four years of college training. Through the years, these colleges have been making a distinct contribution to the teaching profession in South Carolina. If a sufficient number of teachers are to be secured these colleges must continue to live. The graduates of Allen university and the members of the African Methodist church in South Carolina; the graduates of Benedict college and members of the Baptist church in South Carolina; the graduates of Claflin college and the members of the Methodist church, Atlantic Coast jurisdiction, in South Carolina; the graduates of Morris college and members of the Baptist church in South Carolina should rise at this time and come to the financial assistance of these church colleges so that their work on the under-graduate level will be on a par with that of any other institution. It is generally understood that a lack of financial support prevents the five institutions mentioned above, state and private, from receiving the rating the people of South Carolina would like to see each of them attain and maintain.

There are six negro junior colleges in South Carolina that have made ,and are still making, a decided contribution to the teaching profession. They are liste.. in the 1940-41 South Carolina school directory as follows:

Avery Institute, Congre ational; Bettis Academy, Privat Clinton Junior college, Methodis., Coulter Memorial Academy, Presbyterian; Friendship Junior College, Baptist; Voorhees Normal and Industrial School, Episcopal.

Outstanding educational journals have recently been carrying articles to the effect that the junior colleges have a distinct part to play in the American scheme of education. Because of his work for the past fifteen years, the writer has had the opportunity to observe many teachers at work. Some of the best teaching he has seen in the primary and elementary grades was done by graduates of junior colleges. The same appeal that is herein made to the constitutents of senior colleges is also made to the constituents of these junior colleges. An average of $2.00 a year from the constitutents of these colleges would make such a difference in these schools that the forward looking people of South Carolina, white and negro, would be proud of them.

S. C. State Is Accredited As Class "A"

Plant Valued At Million and Half And 900 Enrolled

DEC 20 1941

ORANGEBURG, S. C.—Information has been received at the office of the president advising that the South Carolina State A. and M. College has been raised to a Class "A" institution by the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools.

This advancement marks the culmination of nine years of progressive leadership by President M. F. Whittaker and a competent corps of professors and instructors.

In 1932, the college was approved for the first time a Class "B" institution by the Southern Association. At that time the faculty numbered 15 masters, 32 bachelors, and 22 persons with diplomas. The physical plant was valued at $1,107,000 and the number of graduates was 42.

In 1941-42 the faculty numbers 7 persons with one or more years above the masters, 18 masters, 41 bachelors and 10 diplomas. The number of graduates in 1941 was 149. The present enrollment is more than 900 and the plant is valued at $1,500,000.

In the matter of curricula improvement, special courses in guidance, teacher training and applied sciences are new features. Applicants are now being admitted on a selective basis and only from state accredited high schools.

Fisk Dean Injured, Wife Killed in Crash

NASHVILLE — (ANP) — While en route to Keetsville, Mo., on Wednesday of last week, Prof. A. A. Taylor, dean of the liberal arts college at Fisk University, was critically injured and his wife instantly killed in an automobile accident near Columbia, Missouri.

Mrs. Taylor's body was shipped to her home, Fowler, Ind., for burial. In the county hospital at Columbia, the dean's condition was reported serious.

Mr. Taylor has been connected with Fisk since 1926, being head of the liberal arts college since 1929.

Negro Kindness Shown To Whiteman Sowed Seed Of Foundation Of Meharry College

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (BM).—The kindness of a Negro to a whiteman sowed the seeds from which Meharry Medical College, one of the largest medical schools for Negroes in America, sprang.

The College which is located near Fisk University in Nashville, Tennessee, today enrols more than half of all Negro medical students in the United States and has more than 2,700 graduates practising as Physicians, Dentists, Pharmacists and Nurses in 47 States as well as several foreign countries.

The College began in 1876, as the Medical Department of the Central Tennesse College which had been established nine years earlier by the Freedman's Aid Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church, says Dr Abraham Flexner, of the Rockefeller Medical Centre who is Chairman of a Committee to raise 2,300,000 dollars as new endowment for the College.

But behind all this lies the incident of the Negro and the white recipient of his aid.

It appears that this white man, Meharry by name, travelling by horse and wagon through south central Illinois, one day found himself mired on a country road.

A Negro, who happened to be passing, aided him in extricating the wagon and provided him with food and shelter for the night.

In bidding his benefactor good-bye, Meharry vowed that some day he would show his gratitude by providing assistance to the Negro race.

A few years later, in 1875, this man conferred with his brothers regarding the possibility of aid to the Freedmen.

As a result of their conference, the brothers pooled their resources, setting aside approximately one half of their combined "fortune" of 40,000 dollars for that purpose.

The funds thus provided by Samuel, Hugh, Alexander, Jesse and David Meharry made the College possible.

Since 1915, Meharry has enjoyed an independent corporate existence.

The coming endowment campaign to be launched among Meharry graduates all over the world has as its immediate objective the raising of 1,700,000 dollars to meet conditions attaching to a grant of the General Education Board of New York.

Of this total, 1,500,000 dollars must be raised by July 1, 1941, to permit the College to qualify for the receipt of the 3,500,000 endowment.

The remaining 200,000 dollars towards the 1,000,000 dollars endowment increase to a grand total of 6,000,000 dollars will be matched dollar for dollar by the General Education Board.

Report Is Given On A&I College

The State Board of Education, in a routine session today, heard the preliminary report of Dean Fred C. Smith of the University of Tennessee on the A&I State College for Negroes, at Nashville.

The report of the University of Tennessee committee, however, which will contain recommendations for the expanded program at the institution, will not be made until the February session of the board, according to Commissioner B. O. Duggan of the Department of Education, who is board chairman.

Dean Smith's report today dealt with committee findings of conditions in various departments, and contained no recommendations.

The board adopted a resolution on the death of James L. Gore, assistant director of the Division of Rehabilitation, Department of Education, in which he was praised as "an efficient and capable" employe, and one who "worked unceasingly in behalf of the handicapped in Tennessee."

In addition to Chairman Duggan, other members of the board attending today's meeting were Ernest Ball, Memphis; Dr. C. Y.

HELP THE NEGRO TO HELP HIMSELF

ONE day, before the Civil War, a prosperous Methodist named Meharry was driving through the South when his carriage got stuck in a muddy country lane. A Negro living near by went to his rescue. When night fell he offered the white man a bed in his cabin. The next morning Meharry left with heartfelt thanks and the vow: "Someday I will do something for you and your people!"

In 1875 Meharry and his four brothers paid for that one night's lodging with half their fortune—$40,000—and established Meharry Medical College in Nashville, Tennessee. Since 1923 this exclusively Negro college has had a Grade A rating from the American Medical Association. Through white man's largess, it has grown and expanded while keeping entirely free from debt. But this year Meharry faces its greatest crisis—the loss of a large annual gift, the college's main source of income. However, the Rockefeller General Education Board has offered to endow the college with $3,500,000 provided Meharry can raise another $2,500,000.

Both Eleanor Roosevelt and Dr. Thomas Parran, sponsors of this fund-raising campaign, have long been concerned over the acute Negro problem in this country. The black race makes up about one tenth of our total population and one half of our public-health problem—they are dying at a rate 82 per cent faster than their white neighbors.

In recent years, however, the Negro has made encouraging advances under the leadership of his own people. For instance, in Fayetteville, Tennessee, a young Meharry graduate recently arrived with a bottle of liniment, gauze, scissors, $1 cash and a diploma. Shortly afterward he had a small hospital, an X-ray machine, and a fluoroscope for diagnostic services never before available to Negroes in that county.

Out of Meharry and other institutions like it are coming these young Negro leaders who have been given some insight into the difficulties they are facing. Gradually, by awakening in their people a sense of civic and social responsibility, by banishing ignorance and superstition, they are teaching them to face and realistically cope with their own problems.

Knoxville College Has Students Of Negro Race From 22 States

Knoxville College, exclusively for Negro students, is one of the unusual colleges of the South. It has no preparatory work, but offers straight four-year college work in fine arts, liberal arts and science.

Dr. John A. Cotton, now starting his second year as acting president, announced the total enrollment for the 1940-41 year was 339, almost exactly the same as the preceding year. This year there were students from 22 states, many of them from the North. The boarding students and the day students who live in Knoxville are about evenly divided.

Music Is Stressed

The faculty is about equally divided between the two races. Half, including the president, is white, and the other half, including the dean, is Negro.

Music is stressed in the curriculum, including both voice and instruments. The singing groups of the college are famous throughout East Tennessee and other parts of the nation where they have gone on tours.

Knoxville College is the leading educational institution of the United Presbyterian Church, a denomination, incidentally, which has not church in Knoxville, except for the chapel on the college campus. Most of the trustees live in Pittsburgh.

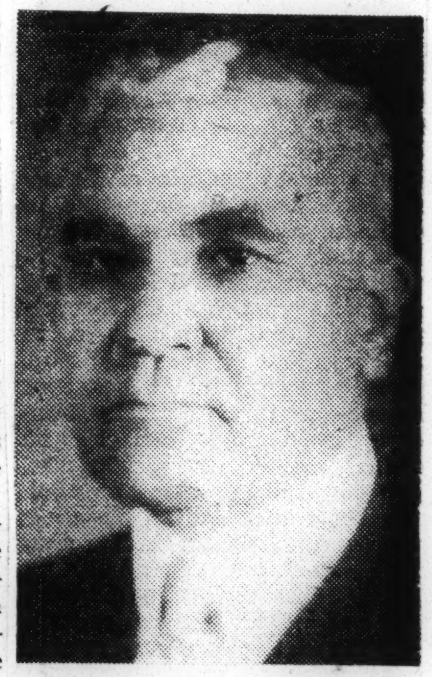
One of the earliest champions of the cause of freedom for the Negro, the college was founded in 1863, before the smoke of battle had cleared away in the Civil War. The institution first was McKee School, located at Nashville. It was decided in 1872 to [illegible] college in Knoxville, and [illegible] stitution opened here in [illegible] ber, 1875, with the Rev. [illegible] Wright as superintendent.

Students May Work

The first location was in East Knoxville. The next year the college was moved to the present location on the outskirts of Knoxville, where the institution has approximately 60 acres in a farm and 20 acres on the campus proper.

Work advantages are provided on the farm and in Knoxville for students who wish to make their own way, but no agricultural subjects are taught in the college courses.

The college is fully accredited, being a member of the Association of American Colleges and of the Southern Association of Colleges for Negro Youth. Many of the graduates go into the teaching profession, some study for the ministry, and a number for the professions. The American Medical Association recognizes the college for required pre-medical college work.



HEADS NEGRO COLLEGE — Dr. John A. Cotton, above, is starting his second year as acting president of Knoxville College, institution for Negroes in Knoxville. He succeeded Dr. J. Kelly Giffen, who died.

Today Knoxville College has a plant valued at $600,000, with 12 buildings, besides the residences of the faculty. Buildings include: An administration building, men's and women's dormitories capable of accommodating 250 to 300 students, two buildings being used for apartments and teacher housing, the MacMillan Memorial Chapel, provided as a memorial to the late pastor of the Second United Presbyterian Church of Pittsburgh, a science building, and a heating plant.

The school also has a large athletic field and takes part in intercollegiate athletics with several other Negro colleges.

ENGLISH, INCLUDING SPELLING, IS BIG HEADACHE TO STATE'S STUDENTS

And Mathematics Is Also Found Hard for Youth to Master, Says University of Tennessee Survey

KNOXVILLE, July 31—The average Tennessee high school student seems to have his biggest headache [illegible] English, certain phases of reading, while natural science and social studies, although not as easy for him as mathematics, give him comparatively little trouble, according to the report of the Tennessee high school testing program for October, 1940, conducted by Joseph E. Avent, of the University of Tennessee.

Fifty high schools throughout Tennessee participated in the tests, 12,466 of which were given 6,097 students in grades 9-12. In the report, which has just been completed by Dr. Avent, comparisons are made between state and national standards on the different tests, and between individual and state averages. Results of the tests, mailed to each high school principal, reveal only the standing of the school to which they are sent, and of its pupils, not of other schools.

Most difficult of all the tests for the average Tennessee high school student were the English tests, of which spelling seemed to cause the most trouble, with vocabulary and English usage bringing in more than the [illegible] of difficulties.

The various phases of the reading tests, which included speed, prose, poetry and paragraph comprehension, word and sentence meaning, and location of information, also caused many of the students to squirm, the report revealed. Students made on sentence meaning the poorest showing of all phases of reading tested.

"Rate of reading is satisfactory in all four high school classes, but directed reading is below the national level in all four grades," Dr. Avent stated. "Poetry comprehension, for some reason, is above national average in grades 10, 11, and 12." However, on word meaning, or the vocabulary of high school students, very low scores were made.

Mathematics continues to hold its stand at the national level, the report [illegible]. Natural science is only slightly below the national average in grades 11 and 12, and above it in grade 10. Mathematics is at the national level in grades 11 and 12; and in grade 10, it stands slightly higher.

"As in 1934, mathematics continued to be well taught," the U-T professor explained. "Possibly the average student in Tennessee gets more mathematics than is typical over the nation."

The general testing program, started in February 1936, now is available to any high school in the state which desires the service. The University selects and distributes the tests; the high schools administer them; and at U-T the tests are scored, and charts prepared for each separate pupil and for each grade. These charts are then returned to the schools.

His grandfather was president of Fisk from 1899 to 1908, and Macfarland's mother, the late Mary Perley Merrill Macfarland, was a member of the Fisk faculty during part of her father's presidency. Advanced Negro Education Is Being Studied NASHVILLE, Feb. 8. (AP)—The state board of education already is planning how best to provide advanced educational facilities to Negroes.

An administration-sponsored bill providing that the state shall offer Negroes facilities equivalent to those of the University of Tennessee has passed the Senate and is pending in the House of the legislature.

At its quarterly meeting yesterday, the board made tentative plans to offer graduate degrees to Negro students next fall through the State Industrial and Agricultural College for Negroes and Meharry Medical College, a privately endowed institution, both in Nashville.

Education Commissioner B. O. Duggan said details of the program, not yet complete, would be worked out by a committee of the board and the university.

Still pending in a Knoxville chancery court is a petition of six Negroes asking that the university be forced to admit them to its graduate schools. Chancellor A. E. Mitchell took the case under advisement after hearing arguments on the state's appeal for a demurrer.

State Plans Degrees for Negroes

Nashville, Tenn., Feb. 7.—(AP): The Tennessee board of education today made plans to offer graduate degrees to negroes next fall for the first time in the state's history.

Commissioner of Education B. O. Duggan said this was in line with a United States supreme court decision on a Missouri suit, holding that states should offer equal educational facilities to negroes and whites. The current session of the Tennessee legislature passed legislation to comply with this ruling.

No details were worked out at the quarterly meeting of the board today, Duggan said, but it was decided that the agricultural and industrial college for negroes, a state owned institution, and Meharry medical college for negroes, privately endowed, both located near Nashville, would offer graduate work beginning next fall. Master of arts and of science degrees along with degrees in medicine, dentistry and pharmacy will be available, he declared.

Previously the state had complied with the equal educational facility decree by awarding out of state scholarships to negroes, the state paying the difference between the University of Tennessee tuition and that in institutions the negroes attended.

Duggan said a committee from the board of education and the University of Tennessee would complete details of the plan.

Endowment At Fisk Hiked By $200,000

Fund Income To Aid Religion Department

The endowment of Fisk University was increased by $200,000 today when a grant of $100,000 was made by an anonymous foundation, and the amount was matched by the General Education Board, Miss L. J. Bowles, chairman of publicity, and other university officials announced.

The income from the original gift, and the similar amount from the General Education Board, will be used in developing the school's Department of Religion, university officials said.

Miss Bowles pointed out that since Fisk University's founding in 1866 by the American Missionary Association, religious education has held an important place in the curriculum. Bennett Hall, now housing the Social Science projects, was erected with the idea of establishing a theological school. However, it was decided that a better way of meeting the religious needs of the Negro communities was through a department of religion which would give thorough training to the undergraduate student body. Special training is being provided for a few particularly able students who may wish to teach religion or enter other fields of special religious work, such as the secretaryships of the YMCA, the YWCA, and kindred organizations.

It was emphasized that the Fisk library, which contains one of the best collections of books in the field of religion, and particularly in the philosophy of religion, to be found in the city, is a great aid to the development of the Department of Religion.

Although the names of the donors of the latest gift were withheld, they were said to have been interested in the development of religious work for Negroes in the progress of Fisk University for the past ten years. The $100,000 gift is among the first granted by the anonymous foundation, which only recently was organized to serve the interests of the Negro and his religious undertakings.

The latest gifts increased the total endowment of the university to $3,080,000. With an endowment of $1,500,000, a campaign was inaugurated in Nashville early in 1937 to raise the figure to $4,500,000 by June 30, 1941. School officials expressed the belief that the figure would be reached before the end of the endowment campaign.

Miss Bowles also announced that Fisk University had been given "favorable consideration" for other grants in the near future, and it was believed that the latest endowment grant would lead soon to an additional gift "which has been pending."

$100,000 FISK U. GRANT ANNOUNCED

Income From Fund To Be Used in Developing Department of Religion

A grant of $100,000 has been made to Fisk University by an anonymous foundation to be placed in the institution's endowment fund, it was announced yesterday.

The income from the gift, which will be matched by a similar amount from the General Education Board of the school, will be used in developing the department of religion, it was said.

School officials announced that in line with the increased income special training of students who may wish to teach religion or do other phases of special religious work will be intensified in the future.

Also, additions will be made to the Fisk Library, which already contains several large collections of books in the field of religion, officials said.

The $200,000 addition increased the total endowment of the university to $3,080,000.

Beginning with an endowment of $1,500,000, a campaign was started here early in 1937 to raise the figure to $4,500,000 by June 1, 1942.

School officials said that additional grants will enable the goal to be reached before the end of the campaign.

Meharry Called Good Business Investment

Dr. Edward L. Turner, president of Meharry Medical College, at the luncheon at the school today, told visiting Chamber of Commerce officials and board members that from the standpoint of good business, Nashville can make no sounder investment than to contribute $100,000 toward the stabilization of the local Negro school.

Outlining the program whereby Meharry plans to obtain $1,700,000 in order to secure General Education Board conditional grants of $3,700,000 for endowment, Dr. Turner declared:

"We are hoping to bring into Nashville about forty-nine times as much money as Nashville will be asked to invest. If the campaign succeeds, and we are able to stabilize Meharry, then we can fairly safely insure the continuation of a budget of over $300,000. This means the steady employment of a large number of individuals whose income will continue to be spent almost entirely within the confines of Nashville. The investment of the relatively small sum asked of Nashville seems to me to be a thoroughly sound venture."

The Chamber of Commerce officials were luncheon guests of the school today as the third visiting civic group in a two-weeks series of similar luncheons which the Negro medical institution has arranged in connection with its current Nashville campaign to raise $100,000. After the luncheon Dr. Turner led the school's guests on a tour of inspection.

"Facing facts very frankly," the Meharry official declared further, "the need for Negro doctors is a general public health problem. It cannot be departmentalized. Here at Meharry, it is our goal to maintain Class A standards throughout, and if the student cannot measure up to those standards, he is not fitted, in our opinion, for the work of a physician."

Dr. Turner praised the work of his Negro colleagues at the school, and called "splendid" the collaboration they have given him. Of the time he has spend at the institution, he declared:

"The four years I have spent here have been the most fascinating of my life. When I first saw Meharry, with its excellent equipment, it seemed to me that if ever there was an opportunity to do a job, Meharry afforded it."

The school president pointed out that there are "no two good ways" to train a physician. "There is only one way—the best way," he emphasized. "That way is to make sure that each individual has the utmost in careful training. The men who are teaching at Meharry are thoroughly prepared to teach, in every department."

Representatives from the Rotary Club will visit the school tomorrow, and Exchange Club officials will be guests Friday. Next week, the school will entertain groups representing the Women's Civic Forum, the Lions Club, Junior Chamber of Commerce, Civitan, and Optimist Club.

The Negro medical school is currently training more than half of all Negro medical students enrolled in American medical colleges.

Meharry Campaign

Meharry Medical College for Negroes, whose splendid plant is here but whose important health work is carried on by its graduates throughout the country, has begun an effort to place its finances on a solid and lasting basis In the past the school has been supported largely by grants-in-aid from special funds, a major contributor being the General Education Board, administrator of the nation's largest foundation for the promotion of education. Looking toward the termination of its periodical grants, the Board has offered to assist in creating for Meharry a permanent endowment, whose income would be for the maintenance of the school.

In this nationwide campaign to secure an endowment of upwards of $5,000,000, Meharry is seeking to secure subscription of at least $100,000 in Nashville. The amount is so reasonable and the value of this school to Nashville so considerable that obtaining the subscription should present no great difficulty. The Tennessean is glad to bespeak for the Meharry campaign the active and cordial participation of all our citizens.

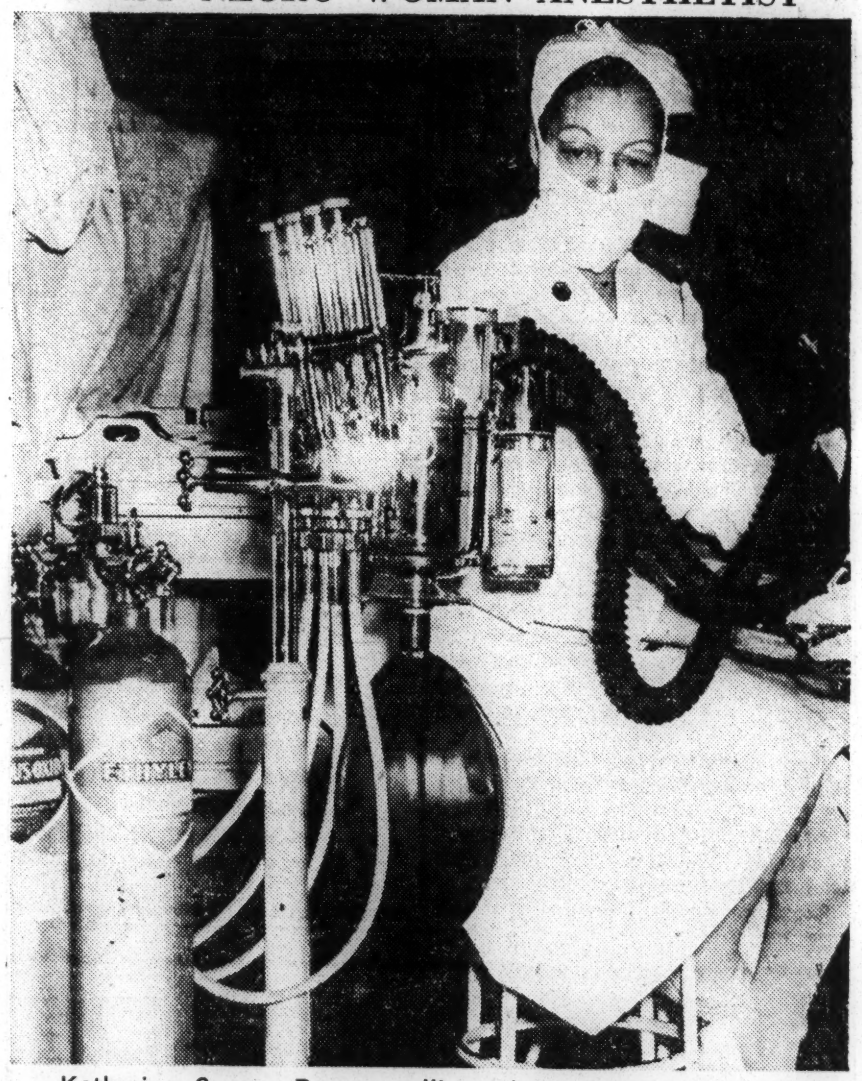
FIRST NEGRO WOMAN ANESTHETIST



Katherine Carson Dawson will graduate from Meharry Medical College next month as the first Negro woman, anesthetist, so far as the college officials have been able to ascertain, in medical history. She is shown here in action during an operation.

Meharry Medical College for Negroes, which makes a habit of being "first" with medical records for the race it trains because of its grade A rating and the virgin field in which it operates, will make a new record next month when it graduates Katherine Carson Dawson, as anesthetist.

As far as Meharry officials can find out, she will be the first Negro anesthetist in medical history.

In the past Negro hospitals and Negro medical schools have relied on the services of white nurses.

The most remarkable thing about her graduation will be the magnitude of the course she has taken. Even top-ranking white medical schools train their anesthetists not more than nine months. Vanderbilt University offers an eight months' course.

Meharry's course is one full year of study and training. Prior to that, the anesthetist completed a four-year registered nurse training course.

She was born in Youngstown, O., but claims Newcastle, Pa., where she graduated from high school, as her home. She came to Meharry in 1936 and was graduated in nursing in May of last year.

Dr. Edward L. Turner, president of the college, urged support for the school's local campaign to raise $100,000. Dr. Turner explained that funds contributed in Nashville would be used to supplement money secured in the college's current national endowment drive.

EDUCATION BOARD GIVES $3,500,000 TO MEHARRY FUND

NEW YORK, July 17—(ANP)—Appropriations totaling $4,650,500 were voted for Negro work last year by the General Education board in connection with its program of Southern education. The $3,500,000 contribution to the endowment fund of Meharry Medical college and another of $2,000,000 to that of Bennett college were the major items in this huge sum. The year's total appropriations by the Board amounted to $6,529,816. White institutions sharing in the Southern education program received $848,810.

These figures were made public in the annual report of the board announced last week by its president, Dr. Raymond B. Fosdick, the 39th such report since the founding of the organization by the late John D. Rockefeller.

Among the more important beneficiaries of last year's activities were the following:

A. U. GETS $50,000

Meharry Medical college, Nashville; The report cited the tremendous growth of this institution in its 64 years of existence during which period 4,420 professionally trained physicians, dentists, pharmacists and nurses have been graduated. The $3,500,000 voted by the board is part of a $5,000,000 endowment fund now being raised for the maintenance of the institution. Another $200,000 was approved for this same purpose to be used to match dollar for dollar that amount above the $5,000,000 that is donated by other sources. Meanwhile, $160,000 was appropriated to meet the current maintenance expense.

Atlanta university: During the year the remaining parcel of land needed to round out the new Atlanta university development was purchased with an appropriation of $50,000 from the board. The first of the group of buildings for Clark college on the site adjacent to Atlanta university is now under construction and will be ready for occupancy this fall.

A final appropriation of $25,000 was voted to the Atlanta School of Social Work toward current expenses pending the successful outcome of the $500,000 endowment campaign initiated by university authorities. The school will receive this appropriation on a four-year descending scale.

$60,000 TO TUSKEGEE

Bennett college, Greensboro, N. C.: To give greater stability to the educational program, trustees of Bennett engaged in an effort to raise $500,000 for an endowment. Toward this sum the board authorized the appropriation of $200,000. Bennett operates under the board of education of the Methodist Episcopal Church and is one of two four-year liberal arts colleges in the United States exclusively for Negro women.

Tuskegee institute: During the year the board voted $60,000, of which $25,000 is for constructing and equipping a building to house the state's administrative staff in vocational agriculture, and $35,000 for equipment of the school of agriculture. These two buildings will bring together the agriculture activities related to the public schools and Negro farmers of the state, and provide adequate space and equipment for satisfactory service. The additional equipment will enable Tuskegee to strengthen its advanced work in agriculture and vocational education to meet the increasing demand from Negro students.

In the field of public education $135,000 were made available for the support of state agents and assistant agents for Negro rural schools. This represents a slight reduction from former annual appropriations. A $1,500 sum made possible a conference of state agents to formulate plans for national defense programs in Negro high and county training schools.

FELLOWSHIPS

TOTAL $70,000

In addition to all this, goodly sums were authorized to meet the current maintenance expenses of several other colleges, to produce films on Negro life, and to support summer work-shops, seminars and conferences for Negro teachers. Also 15 grants in aid were made varying in amounts from $300 to $7,500 and totaling $31,096.

Thirty-five fellowships, including six renewals, were awarded, and amendments to others were made calling for $68,213. For the year 1941 the board voted $70,000 for fellowships.

In his comments, Dr. Fosdick reports:

"Last year it was reported that the General Education board would shortly bring to a close its work in the field of general education. The year 1940 marks the end of this program, although a few further appropriations may be made in order to meet past obligations.

"The closing of the programs in general education and child growth and development leaves intact the existing work of the board in education in Southern states. It was around this area of interest that the board was organized in 1902, and a consistent program in the development of education in both white and colored institutions has been followed for nearly 40 years. In the few years of life that now remains to the board it would seem probable that its fast-vanishing funds would be spent on what has been perhaps its central interest."

Institution Takes Place Among Best

By JAMES H. TURDY, JR.
(Special Correspondent of the Chicago Defender and Memphis District Manager)

MEMPHIS, Tenn.—(Special) LeMoyne College is one of the oldest Educational Institutions in the State of Tennessee. It's $500,000 fireproof buildings are commanding and stands as a monument towards educational progress. The beautiful campus of the college is laden with green grass the entire year and is one city block in width. The block frontage faces Memphis' newest housing project, "The LeMoyne Gardens" a housing project that will vie with others for architectural beauty upon its completion.

The establishing of LeMoyne in Memphis has done much to raise the social status and educational standards of the entire Southland. —The institution has carved a definite niche in the educational program of the South. It is indeed an incentive to the scores of youths graduating from the various high schools of Memphis and the Tri-states. The college serves as a training place for the leaders of tomorrow. Its progress MARCHES on WITH TIME.

The historical background of the beginning of LeMoyne college from its humble frame building in the heart of the industrial area of Beale street to its present day $500,000 structures is a colorful one. It has survived the hardships and today the institution ranks with other outstanding colleges of America.

The first building was erected in the last quarter of the Nineteenth century and classes began soon after. It was in 1869 when Dr. F. Julius LeMoyne of Washington, Pa., a national figure in politics and science and for many years a champion of the Negro Race, wrote to the American Missionary association, stating his desire to make a bequest of $20,000 "for the establishment of an Institution of Learning in the South." Regarding the institution-to-be he stated: "I would not have its benefits and uses confined or restricted to any sex, color or class but as it is especially intended for Freemen and their progeny I would, in granting admission, give them the preference, other things being equal."

Early History

Thus some seventy years ago in a humble frame building in an industrial area near Beale avenue was laid the foundation of an institution which today ranks among the outstanding colleges of America.

Moved from its original site to an attractive residential section on Walker avenue between Neptune and McDowell streets, and now consisting of a modern college plant worth more than $500,000 LeMoyne college currently has an enrollment of approximately more than 400 students from all parts of the United States and is the only college for Negroes within 200 miles of Memphis that has the unconditional "A" rating of the Southern Association of Colleges, district representative of the American Association of Colleges.

No longer numbering her graduates solely in the Tri-States as in the last quarter of the Nineteenth century, LeMoyne is now a National as well as a Sectional Force in Negro education. She lists Alumni organizations in New York, Chicago, Detroit, Cleveland, St. Louis and other Metropolitan centers and points proudly to sons and daughters distinguishing themselves in chosen vocations in the United States, Europe and South America.

LeMoyne has a Bi-Racial faculty, entirely university trained, with several members holding their Ph.D. degrees.

In 1924 LeMoyne became a Junior college under Dr. E. P. Ortman. In 1929 during his first year as president, Dr. Frank Sweeney made the interesting disclosure that there were more Negroes within a hundred-mile radius of Memphis than within any other area of similar size in the world and that in spite of this fact there was not an accredited college for colored people in this area. On the basis of this fact, Dr. Sweeney recommended to the American Missionary association that the school become exclusively a college in order to meet this need. This recommendation was officially approved April 1930.

Extra-Curricular Activities

While LeMoyne is primarily concerned with the academic side of the student's life, it nevertheless feels that certain non-academic enterprises are very vital in the making of a well-rounded individual.

Among the student activities on the campus are debating, athletics, interscholastic oratorical contests, Y.W.C.A., Y.M.C.A., National Advancement association for the Advancement of colored people, Tra-Co-Dram (a dramatic club), the Bi-Phy club (an organization of science students), the Philharmonic society, Glee club, Chorus, Orchestra, Band, Pan-American club and leading Negro sororities and fraternities.

Debating

Between 1932 and 1940 LeMoyne undoubtedly made the greatest achievement in debating of any Negro college in America. From 1932 through 1935 the debate squad made four Mid-Western tours and became the first Negro school to take part in the Mid-West Debate tournament staged annually at the University of Iowa.

In 1935 the LeMoyne College club of Chicago sponsored the team in a debate with Northwestern university in the Windy City. In the spring of 1936 LeMoyne took a "Good-Will Debate Tour" to the West, meeting the University of California, Stanford and other Pacific Coast schools.

After meeting Oxford university of England in December 1936, the team journeyed to the Mid-West and East during the spring of 1937, debating such schools as Western Reserve, City College of New York, New York university, Amherst and Rutgers. One of the greatest debate tours ever undertaken by any debate team was made in 1938 when LeMoyne representatives visited Australia, New Zealand, Tasmania Hawaii, British Columbia and the Western section of the United States. This trip sponsored by the National Student Federation of America has been called "the most ambitious pioneering effort ever made to establish, through the medium of friendly debate, good-will and understanding between two races in two widely separated parts of the world." During this tour the LeMoyne team made 36 debates (winning all decisional contests), 40 broadcasts, 220 addresses and covered more than 30,000 miles.

Fine Art

For the student who is interested in either illustrated or the serious type of painting and drawing, the Department of Fine Art offers an excellent opportunity theory and practice in this field. From the beginners' classes in art as a professional, many be found opportunities for those interested in art to develop their talent. Two of the projects executed by the Art department are a series of mural friezes for the music building and a mural painting on the wall in the faculty lounge.

Music

The Music department of LeMoyne college adheres closely to the general functional pattern of the college as a whole. That is, it seeks to administer, as far as possible, to the musical needs of the environing area. General courses offered include public school music, instruction in voice and piano, music appreciation and general theory. Through a choir, orchestra and glee club for men and women, the department offers opportunity for participation in producing the best music and for listening thereto, with the pertinent by-products of self-expression and the development of a body of critical standards.

The glee clubs act as good-will agencies for the college, appearing frequently on church programs and at affairs featured by various fraternal, civic and social organizations. Through its curricular and extra-curricular activities, the music department of LeMoyne is ever seeking to make good music an active and significant experience in the life of the students and its community every day in every phase of life in which music plays a part.

Athletics And Physical Education

LeMoyne is mindful of the fact that well-trained minds and poorly-developed bodies are very poor combinations. In an effort to have both physical and mental development go hand-in-hand, LeMoyne has as extensive athletic and physical education program as a part of its curriculum. LeMoyne is a member of the Southern Intercollegiate Athletic conference and has varsity teams in football, basketball, track and tennis. In addition there are inter-mural athletic activities carried along with regular physical educational program and directed by the instructor in physical education.

NYA

There are 40 NYA students enrolled at LeMoyne college with some serving as assistants in the chemical laboratory.

Faculty Members Study

At the same time that Meharry has announced the trustees' sanction of appointments for next year, it has released information on the summer activities of six of its regular faculty members.

Engaged in summer graduate study are Drs. M. J. Bent at the University of Minnesota, and W. S. Quinland at the University of Chicago.

Dr. Guerney D. Holloway will study on a fellowship at the University of Chicago and Miss A. A. Anderson will study at the University of Toronto during the next year.

Dr. T. A. LaSaine is serving as guest instructor at the Charleston, S.C. summer school and Dr. J. W. Jones is currently attending the pediatric conference at Saluda, N.C.

G.E.B. Praises Meharry

It is particularly significant at this time that the annual report of the General Education Board, recently released, devotes five pages to the work of Meharry and gives two complete pages of pictures of scenes at the institution. Tracing highlights in the schol's history, the report concludes:

"Eventual capitalization of the General Education Board's annual grant toward maintenance has been recognized by both the board and the college as essential. To that end, during the year the board voted to Meharry Medical College $3,500,000 toward $5,000,000 for endowment and a further $200,000 for endowment payable on a dollar for dollar basis as sums are collected by the college in excess of $5,000,000."

In its annual report just released, the General Education Board has given great praise to the work being done at Meharry Medical College. The report devotes five pages to the work at Meharry and gives two complete pages of pictures showing scenes at the institutions.

The report of the board said in part:

"In Negro education the principal action was the conditional appropriation of a large capital sum for endowment to Meharry Medical College, Nashville, Tenn. This represents what may be termed the final stage in a series of efforts to place this institution on a sound basis as a modern medical school. . . . During its 64 years of existence, 4,420 professionally trained physicians, dentists, pharmacists, and nurses have graduated. Recently the college was given an A rating by the American Medical Association.

. . . During the year the board voted to Meharry Medical College $3,500,000 toward $5,000,000 for endowment and a further $200,000 for endowment payable on a dollar for dollar basis as sums are collected by the College in excess of $5,000,000."

The College has made a very substantial start toward the goal for a new endowment. A vigorous campaign is being waged among alumni and friends of the College to meet the challenge of the General Education Board.

At the last meeting of the Board of Trustees of Meharry it approved the following recommendations of the president for appointments to the staff: Dr. Edward S. Lee, assistant professor of physiology; Dr. A. A. Williams, instructor in anatomy; Dr. V. M. Cambridge, resident and instructor in pediatrics; Dr. J. H. Clark, Resident and instructor in surgery; Dr. G. C. Porter, resident and instructor in obstetrics and gynecology; Dr. J. S. Chandler, resident and instructor in Medicine; Dr. E. P. Crump, Dr. O. S. Gumbs, Dr. T. L. Hughes, Dr. R. N. Joyner, Dr. J. W. Moore, Dr. Dr. W. A. Patterson, Dr. L. R. Patton and Dr. W. W. Schell, all medical internes; and Dr. C. W. Eneas, dental interne.

MEHARRY'S NEW TREATMENT OF CANCER HAILED BY MEDICS

NASHVILLE, Feb. 6—(ANP)—Definite progress in the treatment of cancer through the employment of combined fever and deep X-ray therapy was revealed Friday with the publication of reports on a number of cases treated in the tumor clinic at Meharry Medical college.

FEB 9 - 1941

A "preliminary report" was published in the current issue of the Journal of the Tennessee Medical association as a result of "rather encouraging results in a few hopeless cases."

Tumor Clinic Outstanding

Meharry's tumor clinic is recognized by the American College of Surgeo and is the first such clinic established in Nashville. An inspection of the work being done there in cancer research and treatment is to be made Saturday morning by Dr. Mont S. Reid, white, of the University of Cincinnati, and Dr. Max Cutler, white, director of the Chicago Tumor Clinic, both of whom are members of the National Advisory Cancer council.

FEB 9 - 1941

While the preliminary report deals with cases considered inoperable as well as incurable, it is announced that "further investigations are being conducted as to the use of combined fever and deep X-ray therapy with surgery and biochemistry in earlier stages of malignancy."

Although the fever treatment and deep X-ray therapy, separately and at varied intervals, appear to have been used in cancer treatment previously, the employment of the dual treatment at the same time is something new, it appears. The idea is said to have originated with Dr. Shoulders.

Negro Students To Be Given Graduate Degrees In Tenn.

FEB 9 - 1941

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — (SNS) —Graduate degrees to Negro students will be offered by the Tennessee Board of Education next fall for the first time in the state's history, it was stated Saturday.

Commissioner of Education B. O. Duggan said this was in line with a U. S. Supreme Court decision on the Missouri education suit, "holding that states should offer equal educational facilities to Negroes and whites.

The current session of the Tennessee Legislature has passed legislation to comply with this ruling.

It is presumed that the courses in graduate studies will be offered at Tennessee State A. and I. College here which for some time has contemplated offering the higher degrees.

Gifts For Education

Fish University for negroes in Nashville has just acquired $100,000 from an anonymous donor to which the General education board has added another $100,000, the total to become a part of the institution's endowment fund.

No one begrudges a gift of this kind, but someone needs to be reminded that we have some educational institutions in Alabama which are just now facing financial difficulties and substantial contributions to their endowment funds would be most acceptable.

University Head Advises 'Steering a Middle Course'

The protection of the conscience of the individual, the beauty of forgiveness and hard work were listed by Dr. Thomas E. Jones, president of Fisk University, as important assets to the democracy which exists in the U. S. today, in a talk before about 500 Sunday at First Methodist Church.

Dr. Jones came here in behalf of the Knoxville Ministers' Association and the Interdenominational Ministerial Alliance. His topic was "American Defense and Racial Minorities."

The speaker is in charge of Quaker camps as their director of Civilian Public Service. He took a year's leave in December from Fisk University to supervise this work, which gives the conscientious objectors to conscription an alternative of doing constructive work.

In the camps conscientious objectors work eight hours a day at reforestation, flood control, irrigation, control of soil erosion and other jobs of the CCC type. The objectors, however, pay $30 to $35 a month while in such camps, instead of receiving pay for their work.

Dr. Jones pointed out in his talk here the importance of finding a middle ground between extreme channels of thought.

"On the one hand are revolutionists, and on the other is complacency," he said. "We must steer in a middle course."

He warned against Communism and said, "There are minority groups in this democracy which must be protected—the cross-section of our people will determine the fate of America."

Dr. James D. Hoskins, U-T president, introduced the speaker. Music was furnished by the Knoxville College choir.

SENATE EDUCATION COMMITTEE OFFERS COUPLE OF BILLS

NASHVILLE, Feb. 5—(AP)—Dr. P. A. Lyon, senator from Murfreesboro and chairman of the Senate committee on education, said today his committee would recommend out for passage bills providing a retirement plan for University of Tennessee teachers and another setting up a plan for negro education.

Senator Lyon said no formal meeting of the committee was held, but that he polled the members individually and they agreed to report the measure out favorably.

The annuity retirement plan for U-T teachers authorizes the university to contribute to an annuity fund to which those professors participating also would contribute. The plan is not obligatory upon any teacher.

The other bill would guarantee negroes education facilities "equivalent to that offered by the University of Tennessee" in a manner to be prescribed by the board of education and the commissioner of education. Negro and white students would not attend the same institution.

Sirs:

Your article [Chicago, Jan. 20] regarding the establishment of Meharry Medical College of Nashville and the six great men, five Meharry brothers and old Dr. Hubbard, is one of the most moving human tales I've ever read. In the midst of the grim necessity of being about to set the world right by force of arms comes this inspiring example of warmhearted, honest and courageous men—the Meharrys.

Also, the way in which the article is set forth indicates your staff has a neat regard for and appreciation of the finer contributions to human progress we all so desperately need. Journalistically the "out of the mud" story is something of a classic.

Donation Would Net $7,950 In Ten-Year Period

NASHVILLE, Tenn.—A ten-year plan whereby Meharry Medical College will net a total of $7,950 in connection with its endowment program has been formulated by the National Medical Association, organization of physicians, according to Dr. E. L. Turner, president of Meharry.

In making known the contents of a letter from Dr. William McKinley Thomas, of Leavenworth, Kansas, chairman of the medical association's executive board, Dr. Turner said that the step was taken recently at a board meeting of the association, held in Chicago.

At that time, a plan whereby $500 a year would be donated was advanced by Dr. Thomas, but a subsequent amendment was adopted which provided that $50 a month or a total of $600 a year for ten years be invested to result in a ten-year total of $7,950.

NEED MILLION

In liquidating its assets the General Education Board, which has for many years contributed substantially to the maintenance of Meharry Medical College, proposes to grant the Negro medical school $3,500,000 toward endowment provided that the school itself is able to subscribe $1,500,000 by July 1 of this year. In addition, the board has agreed to match, dollar for dollar, the first $200,000 raised above the $1,500,000 figure.

Jaycees, Retailers Group Guests at Meharry Luncheon

Citing detailed figures which represent the annual local expenditures of Meharry Medical College, Dr. Edward L. Turner, president of the local Negro school, today told officers and board members of two visiting civic bodies that "Meharry believes in dealing with local firms in so far as it is possible to do so."

The Meharry president, addressing officials of the Associated Retailers of Nashville and the Junior Chamber of Commerce, declared at a luncheon at the school:

"Practically all of the materials purchased by the hospital and college represent money spent within the community. Only those items which cannot be purchased locally are obtained outside."

Hubbard Hospital, operated in connection with the school, was maintained last year at a total cost of $125,000, the Meharry official said, contrasting the figure with the 1931-32 cost of $74,222.

"Last year Meharry Medical College and George W. Hubbard Hospital spent in Nashville nearly $30,000 on medical and surgical supplies, approximately $21,000 on food supplies, nearly $12,000 for gas, light, and water, and about $7,000 for coal," Dr. Turner pointed out. "Linen, janitor and laundry supply expenditures, together with hardware and electrical supplies, amounted to $12,000."

While the average cost of maintaining a patient in an American hospital amounted to $5.04 per day in 1939, the school president said, Hubbard Hospital, by means of "very careful supervision" maintained its patients last year at an average daily cost of $3.79 each.

Last year Hubbard patients paid in the aggregate some $34,000 toward maintenance of the hospital, Dr. Turner said, the figure representing 27.2 per cent of the maintenance cost.

"Thus 72.8 per cent of the budget represents free medical care for Nashville Negroes," Dr. Turner pointed out.

The Meharry official said that the patient load at the Negro hospital has more than doubled in the last decade, and that, similarly, hospital costs have risen during the period.

The retailer group and Junior Chamber officials were guests of the school today as the institution closed its two-week period of civic luncheons and inspection tours, arranged in connection with its current Nashville campaign to raise $100,000 toward endowment.

Other civic groups which have been luncheon guests of the school include representatives from the Women's Civic Forum, the Chamber of Commerce, the Nashville Pastors Association, and the Rotary, Exchange, Lions, Civitan and Optimist clubs.

H. H. Miller, Meharry business manager, and George W. Claridge, assistant treasurer, assisted Dr. Turner throughout the series of luncheons.

Negroes Called To Join Fight For Freedom

Declaring that a period of chaos and flux such as that the world is experiencing today, presents a challenge and an opportunity to real men to change fixed outmoded patterns and improve their own status, Walter White of New York City, executive secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, speaking at the sixty-seventh annual commencement at Fisk University this afternoon, called on the

WALTER WHITE

Negroes of this country to join the struggle for freedom now being waged by England with the assistance of the United States.

"The world today faces the destruction of the democratic ideal," he said, adding that out of this struggle, provided the democracies are successful, may come a lessening of the pressure the Negro now suffers. White, a native of Atlanta, Ga., and a fellow of the Guggenheim Memorial Foundation, is a Negro.

The meretricious and wishful thinking in which many have indulged in the past, was mentioned by the speaker as a contributing factor to our present ills. He recalled his own commencement, twenty-five years ago, when, he said, the speakers were rhapsodic over the new era of peace and freedom, which the war was to usher in. It is not possible, in the light of history during the last twenty-five years, to indulge in such fantasy today, he declared.

White attacked the "specious" social and political theories upon which the Nazi world revolution is based. If they are triumphant, he declared, the world of free men everywhere would be destroyed.

The thinking in this country which rejects the employment of skilled Negro labor in defense industries, was attacked by White as worthy of Hitler. Ten per cent of the American population is colored, he declared, and if the defense effort is to be a democratic effort, that 10 per cent must be allowed to function according to their ability, not exclusively as janitors.

He went on to charge that the South of the Ku-Klux Klan and lynching parties is "in the saddle" in Congress, through the work of such groups as the "Crump-McKellar machine."

Although America and England have not been without fault in the past, particularly in their treatment of the Negroes and other minority races, he said, today they are fighting for the ideal of free men all over the world. If the lot of Negroes is bad today, he added, it would be immeasurably worse in a Hitler-dominated world.

Addressing the members of the graduating class in particular, White urged them to seek positions of responsibility and trust as they took their place in the world. He urged them to refuse to be satisfied with personal security and mentioned that many important positions in government and the labor movement should be filled by Negroes who have been trained as leaders. He begged them to be dissatisfied, not as dilettantes or parlor-pinks, but dissatisfied to the extent that they would work to equip themselves to fill bigger jobs than any Negro ever before has held.

Earlier today there had been a student-alumni-faculty baseball game, before the commencement program started at 2:30 p. m.

On Sunday the baccalaureate address was delivered by Dr. Thomas E. Jones, president of Fisk University, who spoke on the subject, "A More Effective Way." Following this service an alumni dinner was held and at 3 p. m. there was a memorial service.

A reception by president and Mrs. Jones was held for commencement guests, faculty and alumni at their home on the Fisk campus from 5:30 to 6:30 o'clock Sunday evening.

Saturday's program included a meeting of the General Alumni Association followed by Senior Class Day exercises and the annual recital of the music department in the evening.

FISK U. FUND NEARS THREE MILLION MARK

Announcement Made at End Of 75th Anniversary Celebration

MAY 23 1941

NASHVILLE, — (ANP) At the conclusion of the five-day celebration of the 75th anniversary of the founding of Fisk university, L. Hollingsworth Wood, vice-chairman of the university's board of trustees announced that $300,000 has been willed to the school for the erection of a building in honor of Erastus Cravath, first Fisk president.

Paul D. Cravath, chairman of the board of trustees at Fisk until his death last July, stipulated in his will that upon the death of his wife, the $300,000 sum be paid the school for the erection of a building in memory of his father, Erastus Cravath.

In addition to this gift, the board of directors of the Congregational and Christian churches have authorized that $125,000, to be known as the American Missionary Association fund, be used for work in religion. This sum will be matched by the General Education board. Mr. Wood also said that an anonymous gift of $100,000 for the establishment of a professorship in the department of religion would be matched by the General Education board. These gifts bring the present Fisk endowment up to $2,993,000.

Announcement of the gifts were made at the convocation service held in Fisk Memorial chapel at which delegates from 72 of the nation's higher institutes of learning were present.

One of the speakers for the occasion was John D. Rockefeller who declined an honorary degree from the university because of his family's policy not to accept gifts from institutions or individuals benefitting from their philanthropies. He said; "I want to make it clear that were I free to accept it, there is no educational institutional of higher learning in the country from which I would be prouder to receive an honorary degree than Fisk".

Others appearing at the convocation ceremonies were: Dr. Frank Pl Graham, president of the University of North Carolina, and member of the National Defense Mediation board; and Chancellor O. C. Carmichael of Vanderbilt university.

The Fisk Jubilee singers sang four selections, one of which, "Ode to Fisk University" was written especially for the occasion by John Work, member of the music department. The university chior also sang one number, Handel's "With Cheerful Notes".

Fisk Exercises Will Begin Saturday

Walter White, of New York City, executive secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, will be the speaker at the sixty-seventh annual commencement of Fisk University next Monday. His subject will be "How Much Democracy Can the Negro Expect?"

The commencement program opens Saturday with a meeting of the executive committee of the General Alumni Association at 9:30 a. m., and ends with commencement exercises at 2:30 p. m. Monday.

Help Meharry

A philosopher once said that the key to happiness may be an instrument as humble as enlightened self-interest.

The campaign for Meharry Medical College, now entering the intensive phase of its effort to raise $100,000 in Nashville, affords persons of this city a noteworthy opportunity to give tangible demonstration of their enlightenment.

The health problems of the Negro are inextricably interwoven with the health problems of all Americans; and nowhere is one part of a major task being attacked more vigorously or ably than in the laboratories, wards and classrooms of Meharry.

Meharry Medical College for Negroes is now seeking endowment in a nation-wide campaign for funds. Nashville, the institution's chief beneficiary, is asked to give $100,000 toward the continuation of its services to this community.

The health of all is the concern of all.

Help Meharry.

Declare Moratorium, He Tells Fisk Grads

NASHVILLE, Tenn., June 5—Before a large audience of students, faculty and visitors, at the commencement exercises of Fisk University here Monday, June 2, Walter White, commencement speaker and executive secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, emphasized the need for the Negro to declare a moratorium on patience.

This commencement marks the seventy-fifth anniversary of the founding of Fisk University, one of the oldest Negro colleges in America.

Urging more militancy, Mr. White declared, "Above all, I beg of you to be dissatisfied. I do not mean dilettante, parlor-pink dissatisfaction. Instead, I mean dissatisfaction with the present status of the Negro and of the world.

"Be dissatisfied enough to equip yourselves to fill jobs, irrespective of whether any Negro has ever filled such jobs before. And then be willing to make any necessary sacrifice to open up opportunity for Negroes to fill those jobs."

"Superintendent of Schools Bass, here in Nashville, recently declared angrily that 'I don't give a damn what Studebaker says,' when he was asked to obey the injunction of Dr. Studebaker that there should be no discrimination in tax-supported training courses for the training of workers in national defense."

Mr. White ended his address with an exortation to the students to meet courageously the challenge of the changing world.

"Eventually white America may wake to the fact that the margin between destruction and survival of the United States may rest with the ten per cent of her population which is Negro," he said.

WHITE SAYS BASS SENT HOT WORDS TO DR. STUDEBAKER

Fisk Commencement Speaker Makes Sensational Charge About Local School Superintendent

(NAACP Press Service)

Before a large audience of students, faculty and visitors, at the commencement exercises of Fisk university here Monday, June 2, Walter White, commencement speaker and executive secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, emphasized the need for the Negro to declare a moratorium on patience.

JUN 7 1941

"Be dissatisfied enough to equip yourselves to fill jobs, irrespective of whether any Negro has ever filled such jobs before. And then be willing to make any necessary sacrifice to open up opportunity for Negroes to fill those jobs."

Blasting discrimination in the national defense program, the speaker stated, "The world has refused to learn anything from the first World War. Since that conflict ended Negro soldiers have been lynched for wearing the uniform of the United States Army which they had worn with bravery and distinction in France. We have seen the resurgence of the Ku Klux Klan which still rides in its determination to keep non-white Americans in a state of serfdom.

"Industrial plants throughout America, to which have been given contracts for more than forty thousand millions of dollars for planes, tanks, guns, shoes and other implements of war, arrogantly say to Negroes, even though we are taxed to pay for these things, 'You cannot earn money by helping to make them!' Here in Nashville the great Vultee plant, to which has been awarded several millions of dollars in contracts, will not let Negroes work whatever their skill.

"Superintendent of Schools Bass, here in Nashville, recently declared angrily that 'I don't give a damn what Studebaker says' when he was asked to obey the injunction of Dr. Studebaker that there should be no discrimination in tax-supported training courses for the training of workers in national defense."

Mr. White ended his address with an exhortation to the students to meet courageously the challenge of the changing world.

"Eventually white America may wake to the fact that the margin between destruction and survival of the United States may rest with the ten per cent of her population which is Negro," he said.

Meharry College, Launched by Man Once Rescued From Mud, Now Faces Problem of Escaping Financial Mire

President Turner Heads Drive to Establish Endowment

By JOHN THOMPSON

More than 100 years ago an earnest young farmer got stuck in the Southern Illinois mud with his wagon and was rescued by a Negro. Today the finest Negro medical school in the world—an outgrowth of that mishap—is stuck in the financial mud and needs a lift to assure its future.

At first glance there is little apparent connection between the two situations. However, the young man who got stuck in 1830 was Hugh Meharry, one of five earnest Methodist Abolitionist brothers in the Middlewest.

FOUNDS COLLEGE

Years later, in 1874 to be exact, he gave $10,000 and persuaded his brothers to give $30,000 more to found a medical school for Negroes in the South to recompense that early service.

George Hubbard, a New Hampshire missionary who came South during the Civil War to evangelize the federal troops, stayed in Nashville to devote himself to education of the newly freed Negroes.

Between 1874 and 1876 he prepared himself medically to take over Meharry and was its dean during the long years it was the medical department of old Central Tennessee College for Negroes. When the college closed in 1915 he became the president of Meharry until failing health forced his resignation in 1921.

HARD TIMES COME

His medical school, which had started so bravely bringing needed education in a virgin field, had fallen on evil times.

The students might be able to sing well and had fine ratings in Biblical studies, but their medical competence was low, chiefly through lack of funds and facilities.

Dr. John J. Mullowney took over and by 1923 had won the school an A rating from the American Medical Association. This was done by endowment increases, faculty improvements and reduction in the number of students.

Dr. Mullowney's final achievement was the splendid $2,250,000 plant opened in 1931 through gifts from the Rockefeller General Education Board, the Rosenwald Fund, George Eastman, Edward Harkness, citizens of Nasville, alumni and faculty.

NEW PRESIDENT

He retired in 1938 to make way for Dr. Edwin Lewis Turner, present president.

The General Education Board had been making a $160,000 annual contribution toward Meharry's operating expenses. The crisis in endowment developed last year when that foundation announced it was preparing to dissolve and could no longer make the contribution after this year.

Foundation executives, however, offered to give $3,500,000 in a final lump sum if the college could find $1,500,000 from other sources for the first $5,000,000 endowment needed to stabilize the school's work. Then it would match $200,000 dollar for dollar to apply for the final amount needed to bring the total endowment up to the required $6,000,000.

TURNER PUSHES DRIVE

Dr. Turner, who originally came here in 1936 just to teach and reorganize certain phases of the work at Meharry, took over the presidency to push through the endowment drive.

A rare spirit is soft-spoken, enthusiastic Dr. Turner. His work at Meharry or wherever else he has been is not just a job to be done well or a humanitarian obligation performed, but a great adventure . . . vocation and avocation in one. His highest praise of an enterprise, into which he flings himself with all the zest of a high school football star, is that "it's thrilling."

At the same time he brings mature judgment, a shrewd knowledge of human nature and effective techniques to his task.

Conditioned by 13 years at the American College in Beirut, Syria, to the belief that "it's not the color of the skin that matters but what there is above the ears and how it is used," he has fitted happily into Meharry's special field of work.

ENLISTS AID

He has been quick to realize that, in the words of U. S. Surgeon-Gen. Thomas Parran, "Negroes, though only one-tenth of the American population, constitute the other half of the public health problem. He has also sold this idea to other white physicians in Nashville and put them to work on Meharry's staff giving the needed quality of instruction that Negro physicians were unable to furnish.

The results include international fame for the caliber of Meharry's work in cancer control and a signal improvement in racial relations in Nashville through "impersonal and universal quality of professional medical standards."

An institution like Meharry, facing race discrimination, has to be doubly careful in its claims of scientific accomplishment. Yet the work of Nashville's Dr. H. S. Shoulders, now connected with the school, and others in the field of combined fever and deep X-ray treatment in far advanced cancer cases has produced marvelous progress in the field.

As for the improvement of racial relations through mutual respect—it is attested by dozens of anecdotes Dr. Turner can report.

This latter development is just pure velvet, anyway, as Dr. Turner conceives his task in other terms.

"The board of trust and I have only one objective in view," he says. "If physicians, dentists or nurses (whether white, black or Chinese) are to get first rate medical training, it has to be given to students with the proper background who can take it."

When Dr. Turner launched his policy of being selective among the students before admitting them to Meharry, he met with scoffs and indignation.

STUCK TO POLICY

Many contended he had no right to deny medical education to any Negro students inspired to take it.

He stuck to his guns, however, and Meharry's usefulness has been doubled.

The policy meant a further curtailment of the student body, but it brought to the school the final justification of its A rating.

Not only is the quality of Meharry graduates now all first rate, but wastage of efforts has been cut to a minimum. Student mortality has dropped from 25 or 30 failures the first year to five or six. It has also improved faculty morale.

Meharry's campaign for $100,000 from Nashville citizens started last week. Already the faculty has pledged more than the combined faculty and alumni in the 1931 campaign, and the alumni have pledged themselves to raise $100,000 as well.

MANY TALKING POINTS

Dr. Turner has several talking points on which he hopes to sell Nashville as a whole to make contributions.

In the first place, the Negro health problem is not a racial problem but one vital to the community as a whole, he explains. That race, living among us has 18 deaths per 1,000, or 82 per cent more than the white race.

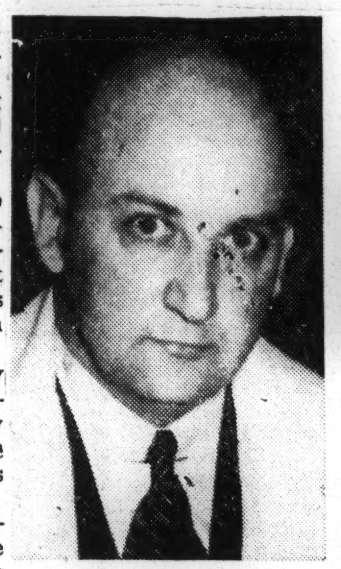
"Until these Negros can enjoy advantages in medical care comparable to those of the whites, they will continue to constitute a menace to the health not only of themselves but of us all," he says.

The reason for the Negro mortality rate is that as a whole the country has a physician for each 784 persons, while the Negroes have only one physician of their race for 2,984 persons.

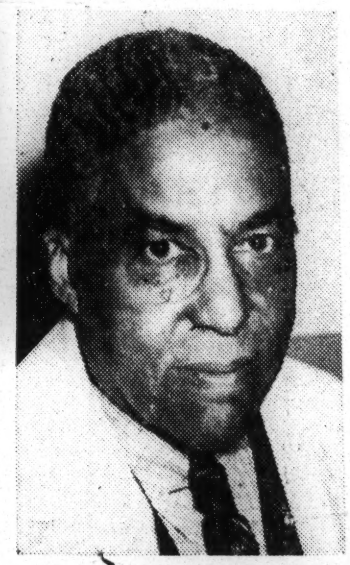
Herein lies the fundamental obstacle to an effective approach to the Negro half of the health problem.

Meharry is equipped to make a big dent in that problem.

Finally, if all other considerations fail, Dr. Turner thinks Nashville should remember that a properly endowed Meharry will continue a $310,000 annual pay roll in Nashville.



Dr. E. L. Turner, present president of Meharry, who has the task of raising $2,300,000 to stabilize the school's future.



Dr. J. H. Hale, only Negro in the world to be chief surgeon at a Grade A hospital. He is one of Meharry's outstanding graduates.

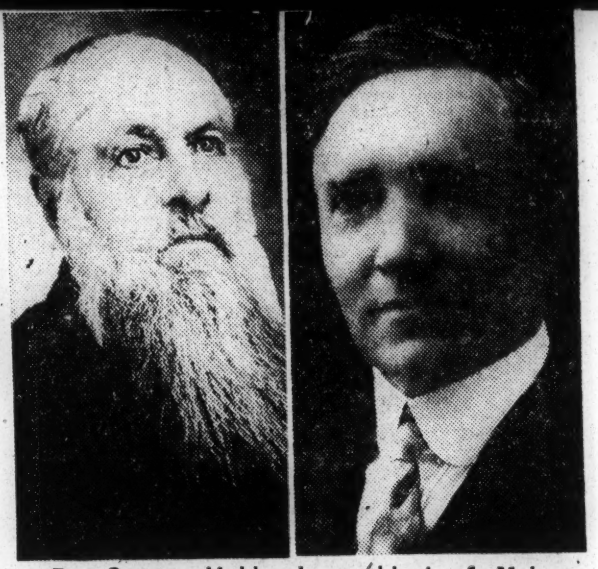
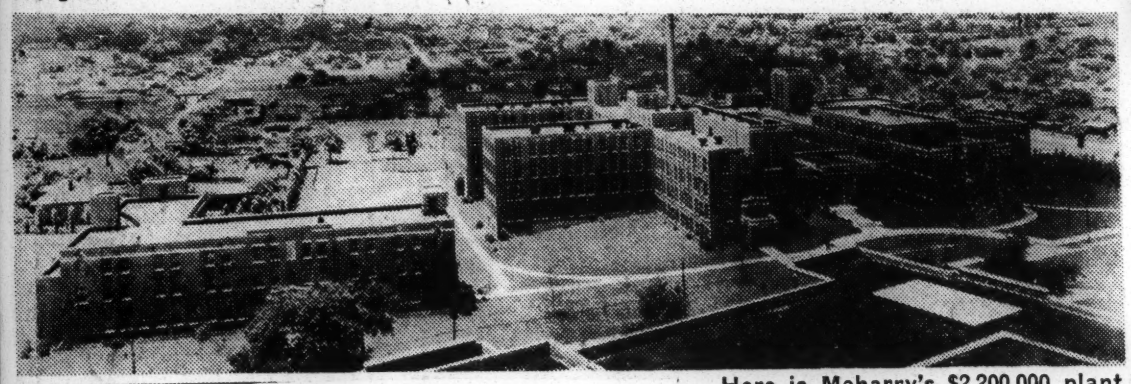
Dr. Alexander, Hugh, Jesse, the Rev. Samuel and David Meharry, the preacher and farmer brothers who pooled $40,000 in 1874 to found the first Negro medical school in the country here in gratitude to the race after Hugh was befriended 30 years earlier by a Negro.



Dr. George Hubbard, president of Meharry for 45 years, and Dr. J. J. Mullowney, second president, who won its Grade A rating in 1923.



Here is Meharry's $2,200,000 plant at Eighteenth Avenue, North, and Harding Street, where more than half the Negro doctors in America have been trained.

Negro Drive Heads For Meharry Named

The Rev. Henry Allen Boyd, manager and secretary-treasurer of the National Baptist Publishing Board, and Enoch T. Brown, assistant recording secretary of the Sunday School Publishing Board, are the Negro leaders chosen to head the Negro division of the local campaign to raise $100,000 toward the endowment of Meharry Medical College, local Negro school, it was announced this morning by Dr. E. L. Turner, president of the institution.

The two chairmen of the Negro division have called a dinner meeting for leading local members of their race, to be held at Meharry next Wednesday evening at 6 o'clock. At that time plans for the completion of the local Negro organization will be formulated.

Meharry Will Graduate 1st Woman Anesthetist

APR 13 1941

Honor Goes To Miss Dandridge Of Youngstown

NASHVILLE, Tenn.—(SNS)—Meharry Medical College for Negroes now engaged in a nationwide drive toward endowment, has the commendable habit of being first in medical matters concerning the race it trains. That is because of its Grade A rating and the fact that it is operating in a virgin field.

Late next month the school will again lead the Negro medical field when it graduates the first Negro woman anesthetist in medical history, Catherine Carson Dandridge Dr. Edward L. Turner, Meharry president, declared this week. "If Miss Dandringe isn't the first Negro woman anesthetist in all medical history, she is certainly the first we have ever heard of, or can discover anywhere in America."

The Meharry official pointed out that in the past Negro hospitals and medical schools have been forced to rely on the services of white nurses as anesthetists. The most remarkable thing about Miss Dandridge's forthcoming graduation, he said, is the extent of the training she has received.

"Top-ranking white medical schools train their anesthetists not more than nine months," Dr. Turner asserted. "Meharry's course is one full year of study and training."

Before entering the last phase of her training at Meharry, Miss Dandridge completed a four-year registered nurse training cohrse.

A native of Youngstown, Ohio, she claims Newcastle, Pennsylvania, as her home, where she lived while attending high school. After graduating she came to Meharry in 1936 and was graduated in nursing in May of last year.

The pioneer Negro medical school which next month will give to the medical world its first Negro women anesthetist is at present engaged in a nationwide effort to raise $1,500,000 by July of this year. Should it succeed in doing so it will receive from the General Education Board of New York, endowment funds amounting to $3,500,000. In addition, the philanthropic foundation will match, dollar for dollar, the first $200,000 which Meharry is able to raise over and above the $1,500,000 figure.

The school is seeking ultimate stablization on a basis of $6,000,000.

$57,075 Reported Contributed for Meharry School

Meharry Medical College's local campaign for $100,000 went well beyond the halfway mark today as contributions totaling $57,075 were reported at a luncheon meeting of campaign workers at the Chamber of Commerce.

T. Barton Baird, general chairman for the local Negro institution's drive, in reporting the totals obtained, said that the Nashville white community so far had contributed $22,075, while the Negro campaign, recently ended, had brought in $35,000, including donations by the Meharry faculty.

"It looks like it's over the top for the Meharry campaign," Baird declared. The campaign chairman said that the local drive, originally slated to end Thursday, would be extended through next Monday, and end with a final report luncheon at the Chamber of Commerce at that time.

Dr. W. S. Leathers, of Vanderbilt University, member of the Meharry Board of Trustees, and the campaign advisory board, who addressed the luncheon gathering today told the campaign workers that while preliminary reports were highly encouraging, "a great responsibility to this community still rests upon us."

Baird's Meharry Drive Is Praised

Praising the leadership of T. Barton Baird, general chairman of Meharry Medical College's drive to raise $100,000 in Nashville, now in the midst of its intensive phase, Alden H. Smith, major in the advance gifts division, said today that "the anticipated success of this drive can be attributed in no small degree to the unselfish efforts which Mr. Baird has given to the conduct of this campaign."

The advance gifts official declared, "Mr. Baird has been an inspiration to the workers in this campaign. At personal sacrifice he has given his energies to this civic cause, and in doing so he has demonstrated his grasp of one of the most vital problems confronting the public—that of public health."

The local drive was launched on May 7 and solicitation will end on May 15 with a closing dinner at the Chamber of Commerce. The Nashville drive is supplementing the Negro medical institution's nation-wide endowment program now under way. The school seeks to obtain $1,500,000 by July 1 in order to obtain from the General Education Board funds amounting to $3,500,000. The foundation has also agreed to match, dollar for dollar, the first $200,000 raised over and above Meharry's quota.

NASHVILLE, Tenn.—New honors have come to Meharry Medical College of this city, the only Grade "A" medical college in the country devoted exclusively to the training of Negroes, it developed Monday with the announcement by Dr. Edward L. Turner, president of the institution, that those of its 1940 graduates achieved the highest mark in Tennessee's licensure examinations, participated by 118 medical graduates of 12 schools in the United States and Canada.

Dr. Turner cited the official reports of Dr. H. W. Qualls, secretary of the Tennessee State Board of Medical Examiners, showing the high rating of 97.2 as having been awarded to the Meharry aspirant. The next highest rating was 91.6.

The written examination for admission to the practice of medicine in Tennessee covered 10 subjects and included 100 individual questions. An average of 75 was required for passing.

Dr. Turner further revealed that plans for active prosecution of the college's general endowment program are well under way, and that friends of the institution hope to be able by July 1, to report that $1,700,000 has been raised for endowment, meeting the conditions attached to General Education Board grants totalling $3,700,000.

Rolfe of the medical faculty of the college is chairman of the campaign among Meharry alumni, of whom there are at present 2,771 practicing as physicians, dentists, nurses and pharmacists in 37 states of the Union.

ALEXANDER, HUGH, JESSE, DAVID & SAMUEL MEHARRY AND OLD DR. HUBBARD
They paid in full for a lodging and a lift.

Out of the Mud

Meharry Medical College of Nashville is rated A by the American Medical Association, and proud of it. It is the only U. S. school of medicine, dentistry and nursing which is exclusively for Negroes. One day, before the Civil War, one of the Meharry brothers was carting grist from the mill to his midwestern farm, when his wagon bogged down in the mud. A Negro living near-by went to his rescue, but night fell on an unbudged wagon. So Meharry accepted the Negro's offer of shelter in his hut. Next morning they freed the wagon. Said the pious farmer to his helper: "I have no money to repay your great kindness. But I hope some day to be able to do something for you and your people." There were five Meharry brothers: Alexander, Hugh, Samuel, Jesse and David—all prosperous farmers or preachers, all pious Methodists, all filled with Abolitionist zeal.

After the Civil War the brothers pooled their resources, gave some $30,000 to the Freedman's Aid Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church, to train Negro physicians. The Society handed over the money to Central Tennessee College (Negro), which turned out its first basement-taught class of five Negro doctors in 1877. Their teacher was lean, lanky George Whipple Hubbard, who came from New Hampshire with the Union Army and a carpetbagful of good Methodist intentions. He was soon joined by a onetime Confederate Army surgeon, J. W. Sneed. Nashville ostracized both white men for years.

Hubbard headed the school for almost 45 years, until his white beard grew down to his knees. When he "resigned" at 80 in 1921, Meharry Medical College was low in prestige and standards, even lower in endowment ($50,000). Meharry's next president, John James Mullowney, also a white man, rejuvenated the college, raised its academic standards (thereby reducing enrollment) and won its shining "A" from the A. M. A. in 1923. The college reached maturity in 1931, when its present modern classrooms and laboratories were opened. The present plant, costing $2,200,000, was the gift of the Rockefeller General Education Board, Rosenwald Fund, George Eastman, Edward S. Harkness, citizens of Nashville, alumni and faculty.

Today Meharry has 277 undergraduates (including 40 women). Students come mostly from Tennessee and Texas, occasionally from Trinidad, Jamaica, Liberia. Over half of the Negro medical students being trained in Class A medical schools in the U. S. are Meharry students, and 2,771 of its graduates are practicing medicine, dentistry and nursing in 37 States. Meharry turns out many a good small-town general practitioner. Typical is the young graduate who in 1932 arrived in Fayetteville, Tenn. with bottles of paregoric and liniment, a roll of gauze, pair of scissors, $1 cash, a diploma. In a short time he established a small hospital, equipped his office with X-ray and fluoroscope, provided a diagnostic service never before available to Negroes in the county.

Last week Meharry College was worried. The Rockefeller General Education Board, now dissolving as its funds are being spent, will no longer make its annual gift of $160,000, which has been Meharry's major source of income. But famed educator Dr. Abraham Flexner announced that, if Meharry raises $2,300,000, the Board will add $3,700,000 to its present $800,000 endowment. Sponsors of Meharry's fund-raising campaign include Wendell Willkie and Eleanor Roosevelt. Meharry's President Edward Lewis Turner would like to meet five more Meharry brothers, this time to help the college out of financial mud.

CRITICISE MEHARRY GROUP FOR HONORING MAYOR OF MEMPHIS

MEMPHIS, Feb. 6—(ANP)—Surprise is being expressed among colored citizens here over the action of the Memphis Meharry Alumni association in extending an invitation to Mayor Chandler of Memphis to address its members. The mayor spoke last Friday at the meeting which was held at LeMoyne College.

Resentment over the invitation to Mayor Chandler to be an honored guest of the alumni association arose because of the mayor's attitude in the persecution of Dr. J. B. Martin, well-known Memphis druggist, whose store has been harassed by police for the past six weeks. Mayor Chandler had been quoted as saying that he approved every action and statement which "Holy Joe" Boyle, the Memphis chief of police, had made regarding Dr. Martin and 19 other leading Negroes who were threatened with expulsion from the city as an aftermath of an attempt to hold a Republican political meeting during the late election. Dr. Martin was president of the Shelby County Republican organization which staged the meeting, defying Boss Edward H. Crump, dictator of democratic political affairs in this city.

Critics of the alumni association aver that it was bad taste to invite Mayor Chandler because the man whom he and his police force is mistreating is a graduate of Meharry College and a member of the alumni. Dr. Martin's two brothers, one a physician and the other a dentist, are also graduates of Meharry and members of the alumni. His son, Dr. Martin, of St. Louis, is likewise a graduate of Meharry. The Memphis Meharry Alumni Association, nevertheless, these critics say, invited the man whose policies and minions insulted Memphis Negro citizens and maltreated one of their fellow graduates, as an honored guest.

He was introduced by L. G. Derthick, assistant superintendent of city schools.

The Meharry official outlined the history and objectives of the Negro medical school which he heads, declaring that a community of interest binds educators and institutional leaders.

Meharry Survey Of Medicos Shows Incomes Between $2,500 - $7,500

Chicago Ill.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Revealing figures in connection with the distribution, income and practice of Negro physicians in the United States have just been made public by President Edward L. Turner of Meharry Medical college, which today is training well over half of all Negro medical students enrolled in Grade "A" medical schools of the country, and has 2,771 practicing alumni scattered through 37 states.

The survey shows that 68 per cent of the graduates are located in towns of 20,000 or less, where the South (including Texas but not Missouri) is concerned. In other sections of the country, however, only about five per cent are located in the smaller towns. Of Meharry's practicing alumni, 1,772 are located in the South, with the remaining 999 distributed through the North, East and West.

The figures also reveal that in Southern metropolitan areas a Negro physician has an average gross income of between $4,000 and $6,000. In small Southern communities, the average falls to about $2,500 to $4,000.

In northern metropolitan areas, where about 95 per cent of Negro physicians are concentrated, the income range from $4,500 to as high as $7,500, all being gross figures, from which the physicians' professional expenses must be deducted.

Of further interest is the fact that the average family income of patients treated by Negro physicians in the South is around $600, while in the North, East and West the average jumps to $850.

Meharry Medical college is now embarked upon a campaign to increase its general endowment by $6,000,000, toward which end the General Education Board of New York had made conditional grants totalling $3,700,000.

The first $3,500,000 from the Board becomes available if the college succeeds in raising $1,500,000 from other sources by July 1, of this year.

Tennessee Plans To Offer Negroes Graduate Degrees

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Feb. 8.—(A.P.)—The Tennessee board of education today made plans to offer graduate degrees to negroes next fall for the first time in the state's history.

Commissioner of Education Duggan said this was in line with a U. S. supreme court decision on a Missouri suit, holding that states should offer equal educational facilities to negroes and whites. The current session of the Tennessee legislature passed legislation to comply with this ruling.

No details were worked out at the quarterly meeting of the board today, Duggan said, but it was decided that the agricultural and industrial college for negroes, a state owned institution, and Meharry medical college for negroes, privately endowed, both located near Nashville, would offer graduate work beginning next fall. Master of arts and of science degrees along with degrees in medicine, dentistry and pharmacy will be available, he declared.

Previously the state had complied with the equal educational facility decree by awarding out of state scholarships to negroes, the state paying the difference between the University of Tennessee tuition and that in institutions the negroes attended.

Fisk Alumni Here Celebrate Diamond Jubilee Of School

APR 5 1941

The Fisk University Alumni Association of Greater New York held one of the many cross-country affairs Thursday evening commemorating the 75th anniversary of its alma mater at the Renaissance Casino. The dance labelled "Diamond Jubilee Ball," was one of conviviality, and much of its success was due to the music of Jimmy Lunceford and his orchestra.

APR 5 - 1941

Mr. Lunceford, who is one of Fisk's "fair-haired" boys and a recipient of four college degrees, forsook all other engagements to be with his fellow schoolmates on a night never to be repeated. The famed bandleader graciously gave his time and service to swell the endowment fund of $1,500,000. The drive for funds will be terminated by June 1941.

The ballroom was tastefully decorated with an overhead restangle trimmed in fringed blue and white crepe paper, suspending from the lights were clusters of balloons.

Nashville Banner

T. Barton Baird, general chairman of the current Meharry Medical College campaign to raise $100,000 in Nashville, in a statement today told the campaign workers of his organization that their "praiseworthy, unselfish efforts will certainly bring to success this effort so deeply worthwhile."

APR 30 1941

General solicitation in the drive to raise funds for the local Grade-A Negro school will begin Monday with a kick-off luncheon, the chairman reported. It will end on May 15 at a final dinner.

"As general chairman of the Meharry campaign, now about to be launched into its most intensive phase, I have been profoundly impressed by the interest and enthusiasm of my fellow-workers," Baird said. "They have attended meeting after meeting, at personal sacrifice of time and effort; they have displayed the keenest understanding of the significance of Meharry's work in this community; and in allying themselves with the cause which it represents they have admirably demonstrated the virtue of civic consciousness at its best."

The Nashville drive for funds is part of a nation-wide endowment effort in which the Negro medical institution, now training more than half of all American Negro medical students, seeks to raise $1,500,000 by July 1. The General Education Board of New York has made conditional grants of $3,500,000, contingent on Meharry's ability to raise the former figure. In addition, the philanthropic foundation will match dollar for dollar the first $200,000 which Meharry succeeds in raising over and above its $1,500,000 quota.

Fisk Celebrates 75th Anniversary April 29-May 4; Musical Activities Led Institution to Present Success

Jubilee Singers Took Spirituals To World

By JOHN THOMPSON

Fisk University, the first Negro liberal arts university in America to achieve the approval of the American Association of Universities, will celebrate its seventy-fifth anniversary April 29-May 4.

The celebration will bring a group of leading educators and philanthropists to the city for lectures and seminar discussions of current social, economic and cultural problems.

MUSIC KEYNOTE

The keynote of the whole celebration, however, will be music and the part the Negro has played in contributing to the music of the world. Everything from jazz and folk songs by the Golden Gate Singers to an oratorio by the Fisk choir and a concert by Roland Hayes, distinguished Negro baritone, will go to make up the program.

This emphasis on music at Fisk has more point than perhaps most Tennesseans realize. Of course, every one knows that the Jubilee Singers from Fisk took the wonder and beauty of Negro spirituals to the outside world and built Jubilee Hall with their concert earnings. What they probably do not know is that without music and the work of the Jubilee Singers there would have been no Fisk, no Negro education in Nashville of liberal arts status.

Beginnings of the institution were confused and pitiful enough. The federal soldiers who had been occupying Nashville moved out of some old hospital barracks and shortly thereafter—January 9, 1866, to be exact—the Negroes moved in to get education.

They came at the invitation of a soldier-educator, Gen. Clinton Fisk. All ages from children who could get schooling nowhere else to hoary patriarchs hoping to learn how to read their Bibles offered themselves as students. Needless to say, the result was chaotic.

SOLD HANDCUFFS

Ironically enough, the first money this school had was from the sale of rusty handcuffs formerly used in the slave markets. It was used for spelling books and Testaments.

Early in the history of this hectic struggle to launch Negro education here, young George White, from Cadiz, N. Y., appeared on the scene. He had an ear for music and as treasurer of the school was only too well aware of its precarious finances.

He began to select the better singers among the students and teach them to sing the classics. They were too recently out of slavery to be interested in singing their spirituals. However, behind closed doors he gradually coaxed this music from them and had the wit to realize that the world would give it audience.

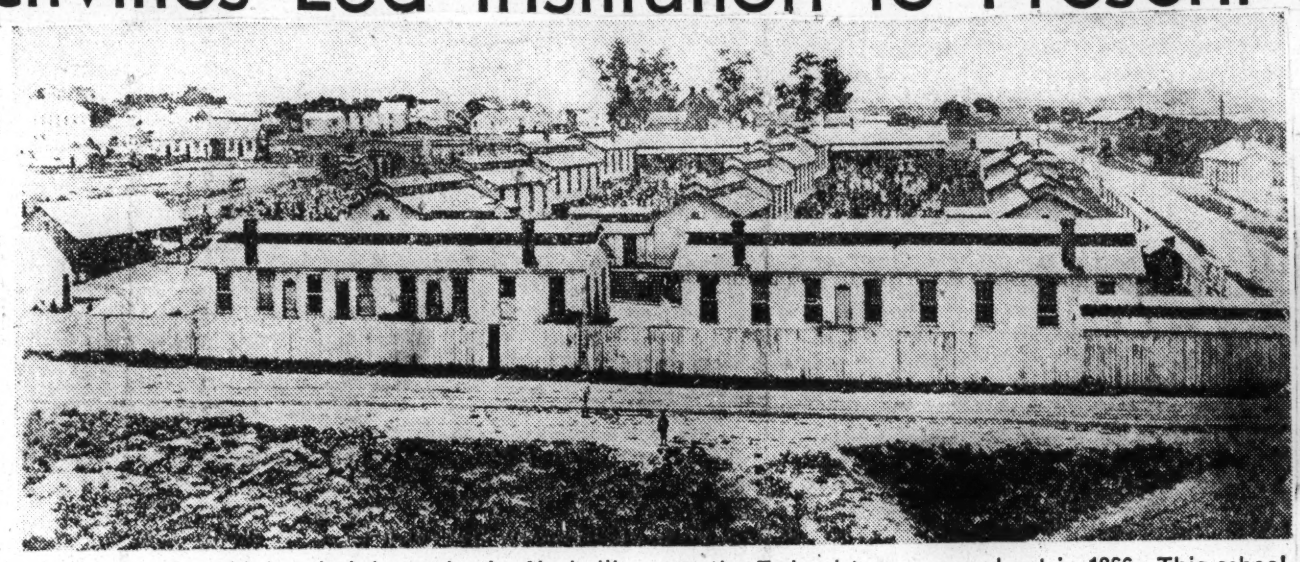
Opposed by trustees as well as parents of the singers, he yet won his way. He took all the school's funds except enough for a few days' provisions, borrowed all else he could, and set out with his singers in 1871.

It must be remembered in those days there were no booking agents to arrange tours and despite the sentimental interest the North had in the Negro, few audiences willing to listen. Of course, no one knew about the marvelous music the Negroes had in their throats.

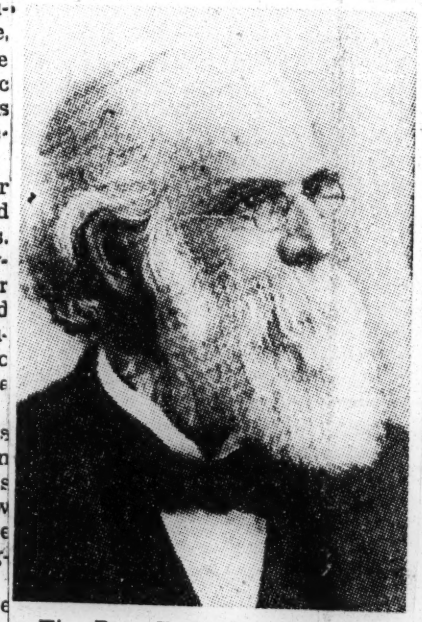
They made $50 at a concert in Cincinnati and although hungry and virtually ragged themselves gave their funds to the sufferers in the great Chicago fire. That brought them a little publicity, and by dint of agonized pleading White got them an audience at Oberlin College.

SINGERS NAMED

He also hit on the name Jubilee Singers for them. A brother of Henry Ward Beecher was at Oberlin and recommended them to his brother, who sponsored them in Brooklyn, N. Y.



Here are the old hospital barracks in Nashville that were opened as a Negro school just as soon as the Federal troops moved out in 1866. This school became Fisk University.



The Rev. E. M. Cravath, Fisk's president from 1875 to 1900.

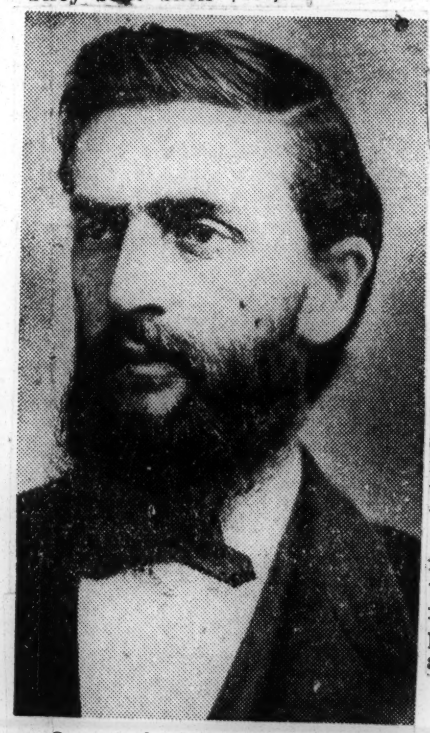
From that point onward their tour was a complete triumph. They sang all over the East at the invitation of governors and at the White House itself. With sell-out houses everywhere, they were soon sending money back to Fisk.

With the first $40,000 they sent, the school bought 25 acres of land at old Fort Gillem and laid out the present campus.

Then they went to Europe, where they appeared in England under the auspices of the Eart of Shaftsbury. The singers made a great hit. Queen Victoria herself had them sing for her and requested "Steal Away to Jesus." Later she had one of her favorite painters, Harvill, paint them.

Holland, Scotland, Germany, Sweden and Russia also heard their work.

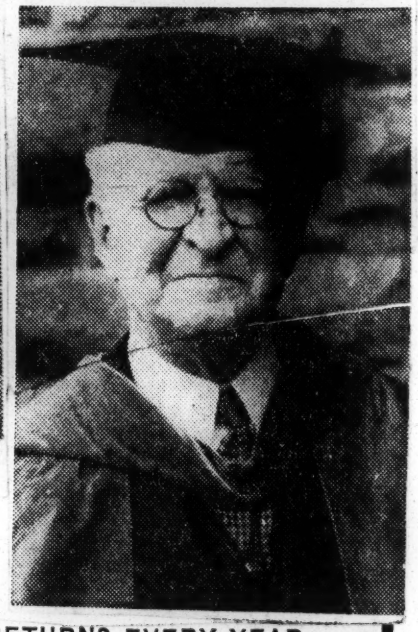
They sent back $200,000 for the erection of Jubilee Hall and other Fisk buildings.



George L. White, organizer of Fisk Jubilee Singers, who took his Negro vocalists on world tours and created financial stability for the university.

Down the years, the Jubilee Singers have remained true to their traditions. They gave, and are still giving, the world the most authentic Negro spirituals. In recent years they packed the Salle Gaveau in Paris with an audience unequalled before them, except by Caruso.

Paul D. Cravath, son of the president, was chairman of the board from 1900 to 1940.



RETURNS EVERY YEAR

Maggie Porter Cole, of Lebanon, a girl of 16 in the original Jubilee Singers, still comes to Fisk every year to open the spring music festival, although her hair is now white and her famous voice cracked.

Music at Fisk has continued to develop. The student choir was started in 1880 by Adam Spence while White was still on the road with the Jubilee group. This choir, while carrying on the tradition of spirituals has also branched out into the finest a cappella works that range from Palestrina masses to modern oratories.

Fisk at first was merely a school for Negroes, but many wanted it to be a normal school. With the funds raised by the singers, it was possible to convert it into a liberal arts college.

Knoxville College Is Member Of Association Of American Colleges

Knoxville College is the leading educational institution of the United Presbyterian church for Negro youth and is located at Knoxville, Tenn. It is sustained by contributions from the various congregations through the Board of American Missions, in addition to income from permanent endowment funds which now amount to approximately $600,000, and by gifts from interested friends.

The college is chartered under the laws of the State of Tennessee and is duly authorized to transact business and confer degrees.

HISTORY

The United Presbyterian church was one of the earliest and most persistent champions of the cause of freedom for the Negro. It was the pioneer among the churches in taking up this cause. Fittingly, before the smoke of battle cleared away, in 1863, it put forth one of the first efforts to give him a suitable education in establishing the "McKee School" in Nashville, so-called from its first principal, Rev. Joseph G. McKee, and maintained very successfully til 1873. Other schools were founded and maintained in various parts of the South. In 1872 after a careful survey of the whole field, Knoxville was selected as the place for a normal school and college, with the design of concentrating effort upon it. Rev. J. P. Wright was chosen superintendent of the school, which opened in September, 1875, in East Knoxville. It was moved to the present location the next year when it was established as a college under the name it now bears. Rev. J. S. McCulloch, D.D., was elected president in August, 1877, and he continued in the office 'til July, 1899. Rev. R. W. McGranahan, D.D., succeeded. Dr. McCulloch, D.D., succeeded Dr. McGranahan in August, 1918, and continued in loch as president in June, 1899, and continued in the office until July, 1918. Rev. J. [illegible] Giffen, office until July, 1936. Dr. Samuel M. Laing took office as president-elect on [illegible]ber 1, 1936.

ACADEMIC RECOGNITION

Knoxville college is a member of the Association of American Colleegs and of the Southern Association of Colleges for Negro Youth.

The Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools of the Southern States recognizes the institution as a standard college with a "B" class rating. The statement of the Southern Association regarding schools of this group is as follows: "Institutions in this class do not yet meet in full one or more of the standards set up by the association for four-year colleges, but the general quality of their work is such as to warrant the admission without condition of their graduates to any institution requiring the bachelor's degree for entrance."

The college is situated on an elevation overlooking the city, but one mile from the heart of the city, easily reached by railway and bus terminals and served by city bus lines.

All these things combine to make the location of Knoxville college, Knoxville, Tenn., an ideal one for an educational institution.

Fisk's Summer Attendance Big

100 Jeans Supervisors And Principals Shared Rural Life Conference

Attendance at the 1941 summer session of Fisk University was the largest in history, Dr. George N. Redd, head of the department of education and director of the session, announced yesterday.

A total of 283 students was enrolled in the graduate and undergraduate departments and in special centers. In addition, 100 Jeans supervisors and principals attended the Rural Life Conference held at the Allen-White High School.

In 1930 the summer session was dropped but it was re-opened in 1935 with special emphasis on graduate work planned to assist principals and teachers of Negro schools to enrich the curriculum and better serve the communities in which they are located. Scholarships are offered to specially chosen teachers and teacher-librarians to enable them to participate in the summer work.

The workshop group from Haynes High School near Nashville spent the summer revising its curriculum to more fully meet the needs of rural Negro high school boys and girls of Davidson County. The planning was done in cooperation with W. C. Dodson, County Superintendent, Carl Brockett, County High School Supervisor, and Dr. James A. Lovelace of the County Health Unit.

Success achieved in the orientation of a core curriculum during the past year at the Monroe County Training School, Amory, Miss., has led the "Seminar for Educational Leaders" to continue study along the same line. The three points of emphasis this summer have been improving home conditions, increasing job opportunities, and managing income.

The Science Interest Group has worked on ways of vitalizing science teaching in the schools mainly through audio-visual aids.

The Social Science Group followed through studies of Housing in Davidson County, Tennessee and Springfield, Mo.; Social and Economic Factors Influencing the High Incidence of Tuberculosis in Hopkinsville, Ky.; and Recreation of Youth in Middleboro, Ky., and Annamanie, Ala.

A third year course was offered for the first time this summer for teacher-librarians who had previously completed the regular two-year course. This practical library training has been particularly valuable in those schools which find it necessary to appoint a member of the teaching staff as part time librarian.

Work taken during the summer leads to the degree of master of arts and is especially needed because of the limited opportunities on graduate levels available to Negro teachers.

Residence Hall for Nurses To Ease Meharry Shortage

Medical School Hopes To Lift Restrictions On Entering Student Nurses This Fall

A residence hall to house 30 graduate nurses, now under construction at Meharry College, will relieve restrictions on entering classes of students in the school of nursing, Edward L. Turner, president of the college, annonnced yesterday.

"For the past four or five years, the census in the hospital has been more than doubled," Dr. Turner said, "necessitating the employment of many more graduate nurses."

For a time, he said, these nurses were housed in the student nurses' home, but the steady increase in the number of graduate nurses reduced the room available for student nurses. As a result, the number of entering student nurses had to be limited.

Meharry's General Education Board has also extended the Endowment Campaign from July 1, 1941 to July 1, 1942, Dr. Turner said.

Commenting on appointments from the last graduating class, the Meharry president said 15 of the graduates have received commissions in the Medical Corps Reserve and are now on a year's deferment to complete their internships.

BOARD'S REPORT

Meanwhile in its annual report on education, the General Education Board paid tribute to the type of work being done by Meharry College.

"In Negro education the principal action of the year was the conditional appropriation of a large capital sum for endowment to Meharry Medical College, Nashville, Tenn.," the report said.

"This represents what may be termed the final stage in a series of efforts to place this institution on a sound basis as a modern medical school."

The report said that formerly when the board was engaged in an active program of medical education, Howard University, Washington, D. C., and Meharry College were given assistance to enable them to take the next steps alone.

As the support of Howard University became assured through federal funds, it did not then require endowment, but bent its effort toward developing facilities and personnel, toward which the board gave assistance. The report added that Howard Medical School was also a part of Howard University.

Meharry, on the other hand, was privately owned and supported, the report said, and had no organic relations with any other institution.

"It was therefore a significant step for Meharry to abandon its old plant and to develop a new one on a site adjacent to Fisk University," the report said.

Meharry developed the new site in 1930, and a large part of the cost of the buildings and the entire cost of the land was provided by the board.

"Proximity and daily association with Fisk University soon brought cooperation in obvious matters" between the two institutions, according to the board's report, "such as library, laboratory and health facilities."

Praising the work of President Turner since he came to head Meharry in 1938, the board said that through the "fine response" the president received in his efforts, the "institution is now, with regard to financial management, teaching and clinical work, in a highly satisfactory condition."

THOUSANDS TRAINED

It was pointed out that during Meharry's 64-year history, it has trained 4,420 professional physicians, dentists, pharmacists, and nurses. The college was recently given an "A" rating by the American Medical Association.

Recognizing that eventual capitalization of its annual grant toward maintenance, the General Education Board during the last year voted to Meharry College $3,500,000 toward $5,000,000 for endowment. It also voted an additional $200,000 for endowment payable on a dollar for dollar basis as sums are collected by the college in excess of $5,000,000.

STAFF APPOINTMENTS

It was announced that at the last meeting of the Meharry board of trustees, the following recommendations by the president for appointments to the staff were approved:

Dr. Edward S. Lee, assistant professor of physiology; Dr. A. A. Williams, instructor in anatomy; Dr. V. M. Cambridge, resident and instructor in pediatrics; Dr. J. H. Clark, resident instructor in surgery; Dr. G. C. Porter, resident instructor in obstetrics and gynecology, and Dr. J. S. Chandler, resident instructor in medicine.

The following medical internes were also appointed: Dr. E. P. Crump, Dr. O. S. Gumbs, Dr. T. L. Hughes, Dr. R. N. Joyner, Dr. J. W. Moore, Dr. W. A. Patterson, Dr. L. R. Patton and Dr. W. W. Schell.

Financial Affairs Of State College Reported Unusual

Commissioner Duggan Assures Fund Of $317,000 Will Be Used For Expansion; Governor Praises President Hale

The sum of $100,000 appropriated to A. and I. State College by the last legislature together with a sum of $317,000 the college has accumulated over a number of years formed the basis of comment by local daily newspapers in a series of stories that began in last Sunday's issues, in which references were made to "discoveries" made by the state's auditors in their "routine" inspection of the account books of the college.

President W. J. Hale who returned last week to the city from his vacation refused to make any comment on the audit or the newspaper stories except to say that when the audit was completed he was confident it would reflect credit on his administration of the affairs of the institution.

Gov. Prentice Cooper, who does not have a very high regard for the sensationalism of newspapers, came to the rescue of President Hale in the midst of the publication of the "suggestive" stories and stated that he was glad that the discussion with regard to the affairs of State College was about a "surplus" and not about a deficit. He congratulated President Hale on his business management of the college at the same time.

There was little disposition among persons here who have followed the work of State College and the administration of President Hale to be alarmed at the school having so large a sum of money to its credit. This was because regularly in the past governors and members of the legislature on visits to the college have always heaped praise upon President Hale's business success in managing the school. Many of these have said that State College outranked any of the other state educational institutions in the matter of keeping down expenses and in not running in debt.

It was inferred by Education Commissioner B. O. Duggan, according to the daily newspaper stories, that the whole amount of money State College had saved over the years would be needed to run the college when it will have to establish a graduate school, as provided by an act of the last legislature.

The newspaper stories, however, carried the hint that the amount of money the college has saved might be put back into the general fund, which would mean that most of it would be allocated to the white colleges of the state.

The newspaper stories appeared to indicate that there was a mystery of some sort connected with the source of the money that had been accumulated. However Commissioner Duggan, in advance of the findings of the auditor, was reported to have said he guessed the money came from fees and donations.

MEHARRY WILL EXPAND ITS DENTAL UNIT

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Sept. 25—Plans that are being formulated call for the development and the expansion of the Dental School of Meharry Medical college. To accomplish these aims, an Administrative Committee for the School of Dentistry has been appointed. This committee will administer the affairs of the Dental School for the coming year and will work out a long-time program. Dr. E. L. Turner, president of the college, will act as chairman and director of the School of Dentistry. Other members are D. H. Turpin, D. D. S.; J. B. Singleton, D. D. S.; R. F. Sandford, D. D. S.; Miss E L. White, D. T. Rolfe, M. D., and S. H. Freeman, M. D.

The committee will revise the curriculum and plan, for the faculty and staff, a program of study and instruction.

The dental faculty will be augmented and improved. A three-point program aims to increase the efficiency of the dental faculty.

(a) Graduate training for certain faculty members.

(b) Training of recent graduates at recognized dental centers.

(c) Addition of well trained dentists to the faculty.

During the coming years, several faculty members will be granted leaves to study on fellowships. This graduate study will be done in a way that will interfere with the teaching program as little as possible. A feature of this program will be the greater participation of the basic science teachers in the teaching program and in the administration of the dental school. Not only will the basic science teachers attend the monthly dental faculty meetings but some basic science teachers will serve on the administrative committee for the Dental School and help in working out the plans for expansion. This expansion program is warranted by the steady increase in student enrollment in the detnal school. During the depression year the enrollment decreased markedly due to the relatively high cost of dental education. However, the great need for dentists, as well as, the better financial status of prospective dental students has caused a substantial increase in applications.

The physical equipment of the Dental School is of the best. The laboratories and operatories have the most modern apparatus that can be secured. The plant is able to take care of a greatly enlarged student body. The expansion program will include not only undergraduate dental education but also graduate dental education. For several years, a postgraduate course has been given and this will be improved to meet the requirements of the dental practitioner more adequately.

Dr. E. S. Lee, formerly instructor in the Department of Physiology has completed a very successful year in the Department of Physiology at Harvard university Medical School. He was Research Fellow of the General Education Board.

During his period of study, Dr. Lee was able to complete work on a problem: "The Effect of Thyroxine on the Sensitivity of the Nictitating Membrane in the Cat". This will be published shortly Doctor Lee has been appointed to the post of assistant professor of Physiology.

Miss M. L. Holloway, who acted as Dean of the Nursing School during 1939-40, has finished a year of study at the University of Toronto, School of Nursing. At the end of the year's work, she made an observation tour of several nursing schools, including those of the Toronto General Hospital Yale university and the New York Hospital. Miss Holloway has beer appointed superintendent of Nurses in the School of Nursing.

Miss A. A. Anderson, assistant night supervisor of the George W. Hubbard hospital, has begun a year of study at the University of Toronto School of Nursing She graduated in 1937 and has worked on the staff ever since.

AIMS AT $6,000,000

The current endowment program of the college, which enrolls more than half of all Negro medical students in this country, aims at an eventual addition of $6,000,000 to ...ting general endowment of slightly more than $800,000.

Toward this goal, the General Education Board of New York made conditional grants totalling $3,700,000. As soon as the college secures from other sources the sum of $1,500,000, the board will release to its endowment $3,500,000, bringing that fund up to $5,000,000, as represented in new money. The condition attaching to this commitment is that the $1,500,000 must be raised by July 1. In addition, the board will match, dollar for dollar, the first $200,000 raised by the college toward its $1,000,000 additional and final objective.

NASHVILLE, Tenn.—Dr. W. E. B. DuBois of Atlanta university and Dr. M. O. Bousfield, director for Negro health of the Julius Rosenwald Fund, are Negro members of a growing list of national sponsors for the $2,300,000 on behalf of Meharry Medical college of Nashville, it was revealed today by Charles Nelson, president of the colleges board of trustees.

Dr. Abraham Flexner of New York is national chairman of the campaign to bring the general endowment fund of the institution to $6,000,000.

The national sponsoring group, which is still in process of organization, includes, in addition to those mentioned above:

Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, Surgeon-General Thomas Parran of the United States Public Health service; Walter S. Gifford, American Telephone and Telegraph company; President Isaiah Bowman, John Hopkins university; President John Gabbert Bowman, University of Pittsburgh; Chancellor O. C. Carmichael, Vanderbilt university; President Ray Lyman Wilbur, Leland Stanford university; Mrs. Beatrice Blackmar Gould, the Ladies' Home Journal; Dr. Alexis Carrel, and Dr. Victor G. Heiser, internationally-known medical authority and writer; Mark Ethridge, publisher of the Louisville (Ky.) Courier-Journal; Bishop H. Lester Smith, of the Methodist church; Dr. John Stewart Bryan, Dr. Albert Einstein, Dr. Harvey J. Burkhart, Rochester, N. Y.; Dr. Douglas Southall Freeman, editor of the Richmond (Va.), News-Leader; Dr. W. S. Leathers, dean of the School of Medicine at Vanderbilt university; Dr. James H. Means and L. Hollingsworth Wood of New York City.

Immedeiate objectives of the coming campaign on behalf of the school which enrolls nearly 60 per cent of all Negro medical students in the United States are the raising of $1,500,000 to qualify for receipt of $3,500,000 toward general endowment from the General Education Board of New York, and $200,000 additional, to be matched as raised by the board.

A&I Surplus Will Be Used For Expansion

Gov. Prentice Cooper today said that an expansion of the educational program for Negroes would result from the discovery of a large surplus at A&I State College, and told his press conference that President W. J. Hale, head of the institution, was to be "congratulated" upon his administration, where a $317,500 surplus exists after Hale had turned back to the state the $100,000 appropriated for the college at the end of the fiscal year. year.

Governor Cooper said he was "pleased that the discussion over, A&I is about a surplus, rather than a deficit," and that the matter was "unique to say the least." He said that if there had been anything irregular in the creation of the surplus he was confident it was an "honest mistake."

He said he would abide by the recommendations of Budget Director W. M. Duncan and Atty. Gen. Roy H. Beeler as to the disposition of the surplus, but declared that A&I would continue to receive sufficient funds to maintain its former status as an institution of learning for Negroes.

Budget Director Duncan said that the $100,000 turned back by President Hale would go into the State's general fund, and become a part of the state's $1,171,000 surplus.

Governor Cooper said there probably were certain technical details to be worked out regarding the surplus before final disposition could be made of the money.

Previously Education Commissioner B. O. Duggan had said that the reserve fund would be spent on A&I in "one way or another."

U-T To Seek $1,200,000 As Annual Budget

Executive Committee Of Trustees Works On Details; Budget For Last Two Years Was Only $750,000

By STEVE HUMPHREY
Journal Staff Correspondent

NASHVILLE, Jan. 8—The University of Tennessee is planning to ask the General Assembly for an annual appropriation of $1,200,000, it was learned here tonight.

The figure is tentative, and details were not available, but it has been known for some time that President James D. Hoskins and the Board of Trustees were preparing to set their sights above the $1,000,000 mark.

The annual appropriation for the last two years has been $750,000, although the request two years ago was considerably in excess of this amount.

Details of the budget are being left now to the Executive Committee of the trustees, headed by James A. Fowler of Knoxville. Other members are Williston Cox and Councilman Cary F. Spence, of Knoxville; Paul J Kruesi, Chattanooga, and Clyde B. Austin, Greeneville.

The State Board of Education, meeting here today, also was understood to have gone over a plan whereby the Legislature will be asked to appropriate $170,000 for the Tennessee Agricultural and Industrial College for Negroes at Nashville. Two years ago $100,000 annually was appropriated for this institution, headed by W. J. Hall.

Since that appropriation was passed, however, six Negro youths have demanded—and been refused—admission to the University of Tennessee at Knoxville. Their suit for a writ of mandamus still is pending in Chancery Court at Knoxville, and the record is cluttered with technical moves.

It is understood that $60,000 of the proposed appropriation for the Negro school here would be used to give graduate courses, thus offering Negroes an opportunity to take university work at the college.

SUM OF $200,000 ADDED TO FISK'S ENDOWMENT FUND

FEB 7 1941

Gift Of $100,000 By One Donor Matched By Gen. Education Board; Aids Religious Study

A grant to Fisk University of $100,000 has been made by an anonymous foundation toward the endowment funds of the institution, it was announced today by University officials. The income from this gift which will be matched by a similar amount from the General Education Board, will be used in developing the Department of Religion.

Since the founding of the University in 1866 by the American Missionary Association, religious education has held an important place in the curriculum. Bennett Hall, now housing the Social Science work was erected with the idea of establishing a theological school. However, it found that a better way of meeting the religious needs of the Negro communities was through a department of religion which would give thorough training to the undergraduate student body. Special training is being provided for a few particularly able students who may wish to teach religion or do other phases of special religious work such as the secretaryships of the Y. M. C. A., the Y. W. C. A. and kindred organizations.

The Fisk Library contains one of the best collections of books in the field of religion, and particularly in the philosophy of religion, to be found in the city.

Through the interest of the donors in Fisk University as one of the leading educational institutions of the country, they have contributed toward its support over a period of ten years.

Meharry Reveals Statistics On Negro Physicians

JAN 30 1941

NASHVILLE, Tenn.—(C)—President Edward L. Turner of Meharry Medical College has just revealed the school's statistics concerning the income and practice of Negro physicians in this country. Meharry trains well over half of all Negro medical students in A colleges in the U. S. and has 2701 alumni practicing in 37 states.

Figures of the Meharry service show that 68 per cent of its graduates are located in towns of more than 20,000 and these are southern towns. The remaining 32 percent are distributed through the East, North and West.

As to their income, well, those in the southern metropolitans make it on the comfortable average sum of $5,000 annually. In smaller places doctors are less well off, and get $2,000 less. In the northern areas, where about 95 percent of our doctors are huddled together incomes which reach the high of $7,500.

Plan Degrees For Negroes

NASHVILLE, Feb. 7 (AP)—The Tennessee Board of Education today made plans to offer graduate degrees to Negroes next fall for the first time in the state's history.

Commissioner of Education B. O. Duggan said this was in line with a U. S. Supreme Court decision on a Missouri suit, holding that states should offer equal educational facilities to Negroes and whites. Administration-sponsored legislation to comply with this ruling has passed the State Senate and is pending in the House.

No details were worked out at the quarterly meeting of the board today, Duggan said, but it was decided that the Agricultural and Industrial College for Negroes, a state-owned institution, and Meharry Medical College for Negroes, privately endowed, both located near Nashville, would offer graduate work beginning next fall. Master of arts and science degrees along with degrees in medicine, dentistry and pharmacy will be available, he declared.

Previously the state had complied with the equal educational facility decree by awarding out of state scholarships to Negroes, the state paying the difference between the University of Tennessee tuition and that in institutions the Negroes attended.

Duggan said a committee from the Board of Education and the University of Tennessee would complete details of the plan.

At Knoxville, Chancellor A. E. Mitchell has under advisement a petition of six Negroes asking that the University of Tennessee admit them as graduate students. The state has presented its arguments for a demurrer to the bill.

Negro College Head Unable to Come Here

Dr. Edward L. Turner, president of Meharry Medical college, Nashville, was unable to attend the meeting of the alumni association and the Mountain City Medical and George W. Hubbard Dental societies, in Walden hospital Monday night.

Word was received by Dr. P. A. Stephens, president of the medical group, that Dr. Turner was necessarily detained in Nashville. C. L. Graeser, of the pre-campaign administrative staff, outlined the school's program to raise $2,500,000 to qualify for a gift of $3,500,000 offered by the general education board of New York City, for an endowment fund for the school.

Chattanooga alumni and friends have been assigned a quota of $2,500, which they expect to raise before the campaign gets started in the spring of this year..

Dr. E. L. Bishop, of the sanitation and health department of TVA, was among the invited speakers. Dr. W. A. Thompson, physician, and Dr. A. H. Logan, president of the Hubbard Dental society, represented the local alumni on the program.

All but three Negro physicians in the city are alumni of Meharry, and all dentists except one are former students.

NEGRO GROUPS TO HEAR MEHARRY COLLEGE HEAD

Members of the Mountain City Medical and George W. Hubbard societies will meet tonight with a group of interested persons to hear Dr. Edward L. Turner, president of Meharry Medical college, Nashville, and other speakers outline the school's plan to raise $2,500,000 to supplement a conditional gift by the general education board of $3,500,000 as an endowment fund for the institution.

The meeting is to be held at Walden hospital, East Eighth street at Douglas, at 7:30 p.m., and will be addressed also by C. L. Graeser, of the western division of the campaign administrative staff. Graeser was here last week in conference with Dr. P. A. Stephens and Dr. Andrew H. Logan, presidents of the medical and dental societies, respectively, and returned yesterday from Atlanta, where he has been engaged in similar work.

He stated, "The drive proper will not be launched, very likely, until May, or after the close of the present session of school. However, we are making an advance effort to assure the existence of the largest all-Negro medical school in the country—Meharry."

He named among the supporters of the movement during the organization period and those "who realize the necessity for training Negro physicians, dentists, pharmacists and nurses," Dr. Albert Einstein, Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, Drs. O. C. Carmichael and James Rowland Angell.

A program, composed of local talent, will be given at tonight's meeting. Dr. Stephens will preside.

Detroit Woman Only Survivor Of First Fisk Jubilee Singers

OCT 1 1 1941

By A. J. ALLISON

I wish to thank the Rev. Mr. Glenn T. Settle, the Wings Over Jordan artists and staff, and the Columbia Network on behalf of the thousands of Fiskites and friends for the opportunity to appear on this program. This program is an honor and in celebration of Jubilee Day. Jubilee Day is celebrated each year, October 6, in commemoration of the Going Forth of the Original Fisk Jubilee Singers on October 6, 1871. This program is appropriately in the honor of the sole surviving original Fisk Jubilee singer in the person of Mrs. Maggie Porter Cole, who now lives in Detroit, Mich.

I visited her a few days ago and she was still reliving those days of her triumphs here and abroad as soprano soloist with the Fisk and her people. Though much wasted in body, she is still beautiful, with a glowing smile, and undaunted spirit, and with an ever increasing faith and trust in God. Fiskites and friends are there with her this morning as she listens in on this program with her room filled with the roma of fresh-cut flowers which are sent to her every day.

We bow in honor to her. We also honor,, on this program, the succeeding groups of Fisk Jubilee Singers and the present Fisk Jubilee Singers led by Mrs. James A. Myers, and again thank and pay honor to "Wings Over Jordan" for continuing and keeping before the American public, one of the Negro's greatest contributions—the Negro Spiritual.

REPRESENTS A SPIRIT

Jubilee Day is not just another day on our College calendar. It represents a spirit. By the sons and daughters of Fisk it is called the Fisk spirit, but in truth it is the spirit of America. For here was a group of eleven black students not only with zeal and determination to get an education themselves, but willing to lay a foundation and build a great spirit from within, and suffered physical pain, rebuffs and sacrifices in order that others might have light and live a more abundant life.

On October 6, 1871, the Original Fisk Jubilee Singers left Nashville to save their school. Four years later they returned triumphantly and built the $150,000.00 Jubilee Hall on Fisk campus. They had many discouragements and set-backs, but once having set forth in the name of their school and for the sake of their race and for the test of their America, there was no turning back. George L. White, their director and true friend, has already made a place for himself in history; not only as a great teacher, but as a great American.

It has been his spirit multiplied thousands of times by the imprint made on students who have come to Fisk from all over the U. S. and foreign countries and has made the name of Fisk and its students gain, not only nation-wide respect, but international acclaim. George L. White used a fertile brain and a good heart to help make a people not to break their spirits. His example of courage and resourcefulness, of honesty and fair-play has been the mark of every Fisk man and Fisk woman down through all the years.

HAD TO LIFT MIND

OCT 1 1 1941

George L. White, and scores of other white Americans, came South immediately after the Civil War. The Negroes' bodies had been freed from the shackles of slavery, but he and others like him, knew that more important still was that the mind and spirit of the Negro had to be freed and lifted up, if the Negro was to take his rightful place in American life. He had not only worked out an American Way of Life on paper, but he had determined in his own heart that a pure democracy could exist only where men's minds and spirits were free, where every man was given, not only the opportunity, but encouraged to live up to the extent of his capabilities and be permitted the fullest expression of his powers.

The spirit of our democracy, and its effect on the world, is suffering now, because we do not have more white Americans who will permit the Spirit of Christianity and fair play to prevail upon them and motivate their lives in relation to others who are less privileged. If that was true, Negroes would actually be included in American life and institutions and not just merely annexed or just considered an after-thought.

NO MENTION OF NEGRO

A popular magazine with a large national circulation recently carried a series of pictures of different individuals in our national life as representative Americans who were making their contributions to American Unity. Immigrants for the most part, a fine thing for up morale within our borders. But no mention or pictures of the Negro worker or home builder was carried! Now that omission might be a compliment to the Negro's patriotism, all right, wouldn't it be a fine thing to acknowledge this publicly? The disheartening thing about it is that the only group that recognizes or praises the loyalty and patriotism of the Negro American is the Negro himself.

A nation isn't necessarily strong because it is feared from without. It is strong if it has and can maintain internal unity. A nation is shot through with character just as an individual. Remember, America, it is what you ARE and DO that counts and not what you merely say. It is lamentable that the Negro of proven patriotism through all the wars this country has fought, has now to fight for an opportunity to fight if and when our country is attacked.

I remember telling an interracial group of youths more than 20 years ago that white people then had the opportunity of their lifetime in fair-dealing with the Negro, because he had not then become affected even by injustices at home or beckonings from abroad. However, there seems to be the prevailing thought among the rank and file of Negroes at present, that here and now is America's one great chance and maybe the last, to live up to the definitions of democracy, that of square-dealing to the Negro on every front of our civil life. It simply means the spirit of fair-play, which appeal was so urgently made by our President, Franklin Delano Roosevelt recently to individual captains of industry, employers of labor and the Federal Civil Service.

O America! White America!! Black America!! We call upon you now unequivocally, to declare and sincerely act upon a spirit of unity within our borders. Out of a spirit of humanitarianism, for the preservation of our Civilization, for the sake of our country and for the future and security of all peoples, in the name of God, we call upon America, black mothers suffered, too, and we of this present generation are ready and able to do it all over again for our country and our children's children.

A. J. ALLISON, Fisk alumnus, paid tribute to Mrs. Maggie Porter Cole, only living survivor of the original Fisk Jubilee Singers, in a radio address last Sunday morning on the "Wings Over Jordan" radio hour over station WGAR, Cleveland.

State Surprised To Find $317,500 School Surplus

OCT 1 1941

Tenn. State President Is Praised by Governor Cooper

NASHVILLE—(ANP)—Budget Director W. M. Duggan, in an incomplete audit of accounts of State Agricultural and Industrial College for Negroes here, reported that the school had a surplus of $317,500. This fund was discovered by the state auditors in a routine check of the institution's financial structure made at the request of Education Commissioner B. O. Duggan.

Gov. Cooper declared, "President W. J Hale is to be congratulated on accumulation of this fine surplus. I am pleased that the discussion over A. and I. is about a surplus and not a deficit." The chief executive said he did not know what disposition would be made of the excess amount, but he intimated that he would like to see it spent in expansion of the school. Financial disposition of the fund, however, which has been set up as a special account in the state treasury, would have to await the auditor's findings as to the source of the money.

In addition to the accumulated surplus, it was said that $100,000 appropriated for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1941, had not been expended and was returned to the state treasury, together with approximately $25,000 which had been impounded from the previous fiscal year's appropriation.

President Hale declined to comment on the findings of the auditors other than to say "The audit will speak for itself when it is completed and I feel that our record will be excellent."

In the meantime, Commissioner Duggan disclosed plans of the state board of education to expand the institution to the standards of the Univesity of Tennessee in both undergraduate and graduate work for Negroes.

Race Physicians Plan $7,950 Aid To Meharry

MAR 8 1941

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Mar. 6—A ten-year plan whereby Meharry Medical College will net a total of $7,950 in connection with its endowment program, has been formulated by the National Medical Association, according to Dr. E. L. Turner, president of Meharry.

MAR 8 1941

In making known the contents of a letter from Dr. William McKinley Thomas, of Leavenworth, Kans., chairman of the Medical Association's executive board, Dr. Turner said that the step was takent recently at a board meeting of the association, held in Chicago. At that time a plan whereby $500 a year would be donated, was advanced by Dr. Thomas, but a subsequent amendment was adopted which provided that $500 a month or a total of $600 a year for ten years be invested to result in a ten-year total of $7,950.

Fisk Given $300,000 For Erection Of Building

NASHVILLE BANNER MAY 3 1941

As a suitable climax to the celebration of the seventy-fifth anniversary of the founding of Fisk University, which has been commemorated by a five-day program, L. Hollingsworth Wood, vice-chairman of the university's board of trustees, announced today that $300,000 has been willed to the school for the erection of a building in honor of the memory of Erastus Milo Cravath, first president of the institution.

In addition, Mr. Wood announced that the board of directors of the Congregational and Christian Churches had authorized the gift of $125,000, to be known as the American Missionary Association fund, for addition to the present endowment for work in religion. The amount, Mr. Wood said, will be matched by the General Education Board. The original $125,000 will be paid to the school between January 1, 1945, or earlier, and January 1, 1950.

Paul D. Cravath, chairman of the board of trustees at Fisk until his death last July, stipulated in his will that upon the death of his wife, the $300,000 sum be paid the school for the erection of a building in memory of his father, Fisk's first president. The building is to be named for Erastus Milo Cravath.

Mr. Wood also said that an anonymous gift of $100,000 for the establishment of a professorship in the department of religion would be matched by the General Education Board.

The present Fisk endowment, with the addition of the most recent gifts, stands at $2,993,000, he said.

NASHVILLE TENN.

While the robed and hooded delegates of seventy-five of the nation's institutions of higher learning listened, a world-renowned philanthropist and two of America's leading educators today paid tribute to the historic past of Fisk University and predicted for it a more brilliant future.

The occasion was the convocation service in Fisk Memorial Chapel, highlight of the Negro

"irrespective of the boundaries of race or creed, are ready not only to die for liberty, for truth and for the right, but, what is often much harder, to live and work for their establishment."

MAY 3 1941

Dr. Graham, after extending congratulations from his university, said that "Fisk represents liberty in a world imperiled today." He said Fisk stood for the right and freedom of a minority people and that the work of the college is "interconnected" with the work of a great people in a great region. The North Carolina University president emphasized that there "cannot be a great Negro people without a great Fisk; there cannot be a great South without a great Negro people proud of its sense of dignity and the brotherhood of man; and there can't be a great nation without a more prosperous or more noble South."

Dr. Graham said that the cause of the Negro, "which is our most realistic test of religion and democracy," is the cause of the South and of America."

The university president called not only for all-out aid to the British people now but "may be follow through to an organized peace after this terrible war so that we can have a family of nations." He added that there is more at stake for human freedom in every square mile of the British Isles than in any other similar number of square miles on earth, and made a concluding request that "our prayers go out to the island home of our American civil liberties and our democracy around the world."

Chancellor Carmichael said that, "Among the great epics of American history is the advance of the Negro race in the last seventy-five years, and Fisk has played a great role in this advance." He declared that the Negro institution, with no is in an advantageous position to connection with church or state, serve the cause of liberalism, which is so needed in the world today.

Fisk's famous Jubilee Singers sang four numbers on the convocation program, including a special song for the occasion and three spirituals.

The special song, "Ode to Fisk University," was written especially for the seventy-fifth anniversary celebration, and was presented first. It was pointed out during the program that the words of the song were "an overture" to the work of the Negro institution and the principles upon which it was founded.

The university choir also sang one song, one of Handel's famous hymns, "With Cheerful Notes."

'King David' Play Big Hit At Fisk Here

By ALVIN S. WIGGERS

The powerful symphonic psalm, "King David," which has had critics by the ears for several years, was performed at Fisk University Saturday night under the very able direction of Harold Schmidt. The unique work was given a stunning presentation.

Arthur Honegger, the composer, was born in France of Swiss parentage in 1892, studied Richard Strauss scores and other complicated ones for six years and burst forth as a vigorous composer of great originality. "King David," is a vivid score steeped in the poignancy of a racial heart-cry. That is from an encyclopedia.

The excellent narrator was William J. Faulkner, and between solos and choruses he told the story of the shepherd lad who slew Goliath and of the characters like Saul, Absalom, Bathsheba, and Solomon, who figure in his life.

Most of the music is cacophanous to a degree, and some of the choral outbursts and trumpet duets would no doubt be better appreciated if performed less lustily. The final chorus was the most melodious part of the work. Consecutive seconds and ninths, and simple chords with unrelated notes cluttering them up are generally the simple stock in trade of composers who strive to be "different." All these tricks were much in evidence, but the impact of the work as a whole is tremendous.

Catherine VanBuren's high soprano compassed the difficult intervals, and she held to her pitch in spite of the tendency of the women's chorus to sag. Louise Burge has a rich contralto, and she held her own regardless of the accompaniments which are often at sixes and sevens with the voice.

Luther King, whom we have heard in recital, has a good, clear tenor, and he sang well. William Allen and Robert N. Hemingway did yeoman service at two pianos, as did Arthur R. Croley at the organ. The large chorus sang the difficult parts exceedingly well, the Witch of Endor scene and the Song of the Angels being outstanding. Cymbals and a tambourine added much to the atmosphere.

Official, Musician at Fisk Program

C. E. Haydock, treasurer of the board of trustees of Fisk University, and Dr. W. F. G. Swann, director of the Bartol Laboratories of the Franklin Institute and noted musician, paused for greetings at the door of Fisk Memorial Chapel last night before attending "Swing Low Sweet Chariot," a musical drama based on the history of the school. Dr. Swann, who lectured Wednesday at the University's 75th anniversary celebration, will give a violincello recital this afternoon at 4:15 o'clock.

Fisk Students Tell History Of School in Dramatic Episodes

'Swing Low, Sweet Chariot' Carries On Celebration; Lectures, Seminars Set Today

By JOHN THOMPSON

Fisk University last night carried forward its 75th anniversary celebration with "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot," a series of dramatic scenes by the Stagecrafters and musical numbers by the Fisk Jubilee Singers telling the history of the school.

The dozen scenes were connected by narrators in the person of Winetta Gates and John Ross, head of the Fisk drama department and author of the piece.

DR. JONES HONORED

The product was in honor of President and Mrs. Thomas Elsa Jones. Dr. Jones, in the audience, saw himself depicted on the stage during one scene by a student, Calvin Scott.

Working under extreme production difficulties without scenery and curtain, the Fisk actors effectively conveyed the dramatic sense of the story in word and gesture, though their work would have been even more effective with stronger lighting in some scenes.

Special praise should go to Juanita Rudolph for authentic costuming of the characters depicting the original Jubilee Singers. In a number of scenes they reproduced exactly the effect of the vast painting of the original group done at [illegible]mmand of Queen Victoria, hung behind the stage.

[illegible]icularly effective acting jobs executed by Val Dora Turner as Queen Victoria, Dana Marie Tuck as America Robinson and Arthur Edmonds as George White, as well as Marshall LaNier in several parts.

SINGERS PARTICIPATED

The Jubilee Singers under the direction of Mrs. James A. Myers blended their voices exquisitely in a number of spirituals, though their program lacked variety of interpretation.

It also was surprising to hear an Irish lament and Stephen Foster's "Way Down Upon the Swanee River" interpolated into the program, in view of the vast amount of authentic Fisk music available.

The production as a whole, which told how the first Jubilee Singers literally sang the university into existence and took the message of the Negro spirituals to the world, was creditable, though the first portion of narration seemed too long to be effective.

Today the educational side of the celebration will continue with lectures and seminars.

LECTURE TODAY

Dr. Louis Wirth of the University of Chicago, will lecture on "Education for Collective Survival: The Jews," at 10 a. m. at the joint meeting of the Social Science Institution and Rural Education Council.

"A Problem in Acculturation: A Case Study of the Higher Education of Negroes," will be presented at the same meeting by Dr. Horace Mann Bond, president of the Fort Valley College of Georgia.

Dr. Ruth Benedict, professor of anthropology at Columbus University, will speak on "Transmitting Our Democratic Heritage in the Schools."

Edwin R. Embree, president of the Julius Rosenwald Fund, will present a summary of education and the cultural process.

At the same hour Dr. Benjamin Mays, president of Morehouse College, will lead a discussion of the present status of religion among educated Negroes at the religious department's seminar.

Dr. Bronislaw Malinowski, professor of anthropology at Yale University and at the University of London, will lecture at 2:30 o'clock on "Magic: Ancient and Modern."

TO PRESENT RECITAL

Dr. W. F. G. Swann, director of the Bartol Laboratories of the Franklin Institute who lectured Wednesday, at 4:15 o'clock will present a violincello recital with William Allen of the Fisk music faculty at the piano.

Tonight, the program will be devoted to a discussion of Negro writers, with Dr. W. E. B. DuBois of Atlanta University treating writers from the days of "Phillis the Blessed," who was a contemporary of George Washington, through the Nineteenth Century.

Sterling Brown of Howard University, who was a commentator on the Negro folk music program that opened the celebration Tuesday night, will discuss Twentieth Century writers.

Louise Burge will complete the evening program with a group of songs by Negro composers. William Allen will accompany her.

Visiting representatives of schools throughout the country and local delegates and friends prepared this afternoon to hear the James Hardy Dillard Lecture in Education, which was to be delivered in midafternoon by Dr. William Heard Kilpatrick, professor of education, emeritus, at Columbia University. Dr. Kilpatrick, who was discussion leader of a seminar on education this morning, was to speak on the topic, "Seventy-five Years Advance in American Education."

At this morning's seminar, Dr. Kilpatrick discussed with attending students and school leaders freedom, individual differences, and democracy in education. He outlined the influence culture has on the individual, and a lengthy discussion was held on the causes of the collapse of freedom in the European totalitarian states, in view of the tremendous gains made in freedom during the past century.

A conference on employment, which began Wednesday, was continued this morning at the Little Theater on the Fisk campus, with Dr. Percy P. Creuzot, president of the National Negro Insurance Association, leading the discussion.

Held simultaneously was a seminar sponsored by the department of religion, in which Dr. Benjamin Mays, president of Morehouse College, and Fred L. Brownlee, acting president of LeMoyne College, were the speakers. They discussed the present status of religion in the Negro college.

The Social Science Institute and Rural Education Council concluded a two-day session this morning, and Dr. Edwin R. Embree, of Chicago, president of the Julius Rosenwald Fund, summarized the work of the conference.

Late this afternoon, John W. Work, assistant professor of music theory at Fisk, will be commentator at a program in the Memorial Chapel which will emphasize "Folk Lore in the Fisk Community."

Students at the school formed a long waiting line in the administration building this morning hoping to get tickets to tonight's concert by Roland Hayes, tenor. He will be accompanied by Reginald Boardman at the piano.

The day's activities will be climaxed by a reception and formal dance at Jubilee Hall for official delegates, special guests, trustees, faculty, alumni, and members of the senior class.

Those in charge of arrangements worked today preparing for tomorrow's convocation service, highlight of the anniversary celebration, which will feature addresses by John D. Rockefeller, Jr., Dr. Frank P. Graham, president of the University of North Carolina, music by the Fisk Jubilee singers, and the presentation of official delegates, with response by Chancellor O. C. Carmichael of Vanderbilt University.

Dr. Graham, after extending congratulations from his university, said that "Fisk represents liberty in a world imperiled today." He said Fisk stood for the right and freedom of a minority people and that the work of the college is "interconnected" with the work of a great people in a great region. The North Carolina University president emphasized that there "cannot be a great Negro people without a great Fisk; there cannot be a great South without a great Negro people proud of its sense of dignity and the brotherhood of man; and there can't be a great nation without a more prosperous or more noble South."

Dr. Graham said that the cause of the Negro, "which is our most realistic test of religion and democracy," is the cause of the South and of America."

The university president called not only for all-out aid to the British people now but "may be follow through to an organized peace after this terrible war so that we can have a family of nations." He added that there is more at stake for human freedom in every square mile of the British Isles than in any other similar number of square miles on earth, and made a concluding request that "our prayers go out to the island home of our American civil liberties and our democracy around the world."

Chancellor Carmichael said that, "Among the great epics of American history is the advance of the Negro race in the last seventy-five years, and Fisk has played a great role in this advance." ORIGINAL FISK BELLRINGER—An interesting feature of Fisk University's seventy-fifth anniversary celebration today was the appearance on the campus of the institution's original bellringer, Charles H. Brown, 85, of St. Louis, Mo., who is shown at left with President Thomas Elsa Jones, as he rang the big bell at 10 o'clock calling students to classes. At upper right (close-up, inset), Brown is shown being given a hand at the bellringing by President Jones. After leaving Fisk at the end of his junior year, Brown taught at Charleston, Ind., for a time, but is now a half-day teacher in the St. Louis school system. He is a native of Murfreesboro, and said he was formerly a slave in the home of a Confederate soldier, on Hillsboro Road, before entering Fisk in 1866.

Annual Meet Of School's Administrators Clears Deck For Year 1941

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — In their annual meeting Friday, the Fisk university trustees appointed Dr. Frederick D. Patterson, president of Tuskegee institute, and Bernard Fensterwald of Nashville to the board.

Dr. Thomas Elsa Jones, president of Fisk, who was granted a year's leave of absence during this academic term of the school, is to resume his administrative functions. Although his leave has not yet expired, he will spend more time in directing the affairs of the institution than had been possible in the past, Vice Chairman Wood announced. MAY 10 1941

One of the significant actions taken by the trustees was that no member of the teaching staff can be dismissed without an examination of the charges by a committee of five faculty members appointed by the faculty. Although his announcement was not officially given out, it emanated from a source close to the administration.

Chairman Wood announced that greater efforts will be expended in the future toward bringing Fisk closer to the national defense program. A faculty committee on national defense is already at work with a view to offering needed assistance to the federal government.

The board, it was learned, deliberated at length on a strongly worded resolution submitted by the alumni, calling for active participation by Fisk university in the present national emergency program.

Fisk Students Win Applause In 'King David'

MAY 5 - 1941

By SYDNEY DALTON

Nashville Banner

The last of the week's musical events at Fisk University, marking the seventy-fifth anniversary, was a memorable performance of "King David," by the distinguished French modernist, Arthur Honegger. The work was new to Nashville audiences and proved to be of a quite different character from the generality of oratorios. The composer, as a matter of fact, calls it a "Symphonic Psalm." He makes use of a mixed chorus, three soloists—soprano, contralto and tenor—and a narrator. The accompaniment was supplied by two pianos, organ, trumpets and several percussion instruments. MAY 5 - 1941

With a chorus of about ninety voices, Harold C. Schmidt gave a remarkably forceful and finished performance of the choral sections. The work is difficult to sing, with its contrapuntal intricacies, its modern idiom and frequent use of modal and atonal effects, but the group sang with surety and fine tone at all times.

The musical sections of the composition are linked with frequent short passages delivered by a narrator. These were presented with clear diction and keen understanding by William J. Faulkner. The soprano solos were sung by Catherine Van Buren; Louise Burge was the contralto, and Luther King sang the tenor numbers. They were all done with conviction, though there were many passages that were anything but grateful for the solo voice. MAY 5 - 19

The chief beauties and the most striking effects of Honegger's noteworthy score are to be found in the chorus and instrumental writing. It is to be hoped that it will be heard again here.

With Arthur R. Croley at the organ and William Allen and Robert Hemingway at the pianos, the accompaniments were excellently done.

Graham Hall Asks Aid for Meharry

MAY 5 1941

T. Graham Hall, president of the Nashville Chamber of Commerce, urging public support of Meharry Medical College's current drive to raise $100,000 in Nashville, said this morning that the local Negro institution "has done work of such incalculable benefit to Nashville that the dollars it now asks can never pay for its services."

Hall, a member of the Meharry executive board of trustees and also a member of the local campaign advisory committee, declared this morning: MAY 5 1941

"Meharry Medical College, located right here in Nashville, is known throughout the medical world as the outstanding institution of its kind. Its study of the problem of cancer is attracting nationwide attention, and the results which it has obtained through the use of the fever cabinet combined with deep X-rays therapy have been amazing. I feel that Nashville will not fail to show its appreciation of a medical school so outstanding, not only in relation to the problem of Negro health but as concerns the general welfare as well—for the two problems are in reality one."

In commending the school's local drive the Chamber of Commerce official pointed to the fact that 103 of the 350 Meharry graduates now practicing in Tennessee are giving medical service in Nashville. "Thus Nashville itself is the school's chief beneficiary," Hall commented. MAY 5 1941

A kick-off luncheon Wednesday at the Chamber of Commerce will inaugurate the local drive for funds.

The Nashville campaign is supplementing a nation-wide endowment drive in which the Grade-A medical school is seeking funds with which to match conditional grants offered by the General Education Board.

Fisk Audience Told of Nazis' Mysticism

Highlighting the third day's activities at the seventy-fifth anniversary celebration on the campus of Fisk University was the lecture this afternoon of Dr. Bronislaw Malinowski, who told his audience at Fisk Memorial Chapel that "the wholesale corruption of spirit and intelligence which we find in the mysticism of modern Nazi, Fascist, or so-called Communist creeds are infinitely more pervading, ruthless and brutal than the worst superstitions of primitive man."

Dr. Malinowski, a noted anthropologist and visiting professor from Yale University, spoke on the subject, "Magic: Ancient and Modern." He was introduced by Dr. Robert E. Park, professor of sociology at Fisk University.

Dr. Edwin R. Embree, president of the Julius Rosenwald Fund, this morning served as chairman of the Social Science Institute and Rural Education Council Seminars held in the Social Science Building on the campus

The Rosenwald Fund president, who is a former vice-president of the Rockefeller Foundation, summarized this morning's discussions with a talk on "Education and the Cultural Process." Author of three books on racial relations, the latest of which is "Indians of the Americas," Dr. Embree received his doctorate at the University of Hawaii for research done on the Pacific peoples. He outlined the work of the Rosenwald Fund and told of its specific interest in the Council of Rural Education, the principal work of which is being done in the South.

Also speaking at the Institute this morning were Dr. Louis Worth, professor of sociology, University of Chicago, who treated the topic, "Education for Collective Survival: The Jews"; Dr. Horace Mann Bond, president of Fort Valley State College, who spoke on "A Problem in Acculturation: A Case Study of the Higher Education of Negroes," and Dr. Ruth Benedict, professor of anthropology, Columbia University, who led a discussion on "Transmitting Our Democratic Heritage in the Schools."

A religious seminar on "The Present Status of Religion Among Educated Negroes" also was conducted this morning, with Dr. Benjamin Mays, president of Morehouse College, as leader. The seminar was held in Fisk Memorial Chapel.

In the chapel, Dr. William Francis Gray Swann was to give a cello recital later this afternoon, accompanied by William Allen at the piano.

"An Evening With Negro Writers" will be the theme of tonight's sessions in the chapel. Dr. A. A. Taylor, dean of the school, will preside. Sterling Brown, associate professor of English, Howard University, and Dr. William E. Burghardt DuBois, professor of sociology, Atlanta University, will lecture. Louise Burge, contralto, will present compositions by Negro writers.

The day's program will culminate with a dramatic presentation, "Mary Tudor," by the Fisk Stagecrafters in the Little Theater on the campus.

Musical Items Features of Fisk Program

By SYDNEY DALTON

This week Fisk University is celebrating its seventy-fifth anniversary, and the program of events includes several musical items of more than usual interest. The first of these was given Tuesday evening when the Golden Gate Male Quartet, with Joshua White and his guitar, participated in a program of Negro Folk music.

By way of explanation and illustrative comment, Alan Lomax, assistant in the department of American Folk Song in the Library of Congress, talked on the origin and development of Negro songs, taking as his main theme Reels and Work Songs.

He was followed by Sterling Brown, associate professor of English at Howard University, who dealt with Blues and Ballads. Both speakers were well informed and provided a colorful and illuminating background for the musical illustrations.

A few of these were in the form of recordings, but most of them were given by the quartet. The Golden Gate singers are uniquely adept in Negro music. They know it and have the spirit of it as few other organizations have. Not only are their voices of excellent quality, but they possess the unerring rhythmic sense of their race, and apparently have considerable creative ability in their field.

They sang examples of work songs, blues, ballads and spirituals to the evident delight of the audience. Joshua White's guitar accompaniments were remarkably skillful and appropriate.

The next musical program will be a 'cello recital by Dr. W. F. G. Swann on Thursday afternoon at 4:15 o'clock. Dr. Swann is also booked for an address in the science department.

Swann Address Will Highlight Fisk Program

The address of Dr. William Francis Gray Swann, director of the Bartol Research Foundation, Franklin Institute, Swarthmore, Pa., noted scientist and musician, on "Science in Our Civilization," this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock in Fisk Memorial Chapel, was listed as the highlight of today's program in the seventy-fifth anniversary celebration at Fisk University.

Another feature of the day's program will be the story of Fisk University as interpreted by the Fisk Jubilee Singers and the Fisk Stagecrafters tonight at 8:15 o'clock in Fisk Memorial Chapel when twelve episodes dealing with the history of the institution will be presented. There will be student commentators for each episode, and the title of the presentation is "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot." This program is dedicated to President and Mrs. Thomas Elsa Jones. It was written by John M. Ross, instructor in dramatics at Fisk, who will also be one of the commentators.

From the standpoint of visiting representatives of leading educational institutions, however, the high spots in the day's activities were the Employment Conference, the seminars on science and literature and the Social Science Institute and Rural Education Council, which began this morning. The program of the council on rural education will continue tomorrow morning.

The principal speakers at the seminars were Dr. Swann and Dr. Perry Miller, of Harvard University. The principal speakers at the employment conference were Dr. J. E. Walker, president of the National Negro Business League, and Dr. Percy P. Creuzot, president of the general alumni association of Fisk.

The address of Dr. Bronislaw Malinowski, of Yale University and the London School of Economics, highlighted the social science institute. He discussed "Interracial Education in Africa." Other speakers included Sterling Brown, of Howard University; Dr. Margaret Mead, of the American Museum of Natural History; Dr. Robert Redfield, of the University of Chicago, and Dr. H. Scudder Mekeel, of the University of Wisconsin.

Dr. Swann and Dr. Malinowski will also appear on Thursday's program, the former giving a violincello recital at 4:15 o'clock, and the latter a public address at 2:30 o'clock on "Magic: Ancient and Modern." Both events will be in Fisk Memorial Chapel.

Friday the board of trustees will hold its annual meeting, with Mrs. Vera Cravath Gibbs of New York, daughter of the late Chairman Paul Cravath, presiding.

The introductory feature of the anniversary program was a dinner last night in Jubilee Hall for members of the board, faculty, and friends, at which Mrs. Gibbs and President Jones spoke. L. Hollingsworth Wood of New York, vice-chairman of the board, presided as master of ceremonies, and the program of Negro folk music, in Memorial Chapel, by the Golden Gate Singers, with Joshua White, guitarist. Commentators for the program were Alan Lomax, assistant in charge of the archive of American Folk Song, Library of Congress, and Sterling Brown, of Howard University.

Visiting dignitaries and delegates of more than 75 colleges and universities to Fisk University's 75th anniversary celebration will begin assembling here today for opening event tonight on the six-day program.

Opening event will be a welcoming dinner at Jubilee Hall, at which President Thomas Elsa Jones will speak. Presiding will be L. Hollingsworth Wood of New York, vice-chairman of the board of trustees.

Chief guest of honor will be Mrs. Vera Cravath Gibbs of New York, board chairman, who is granddaughter of the university's first president and daughter of the former board chairman.

Music and seminars on educational and social problems will feature the program for the rest of the week.

The music will get off to a start at 8:15 o'clock tonight with a program of Negro folk music by the Golden Gate Singers of New York and Joshua White with his guitar.

In addition to spirituals, which will be further emphasized as Fisk's specialty in later events on the program, the singers will render work ballads, blues and jazz numbers to illustrate the Negro's contribution to American music.

Alan Lomax, in charge of the folk song department at the Library of Congress, and Sterling Brown, Negro writer of Howard University in Washington, will be commentators on tonight's program, explaining the origin of each type of music exemplified.

NOTED AUTHORITIES

Among the noted authorities to speak at Fisk during the week are Dr. W. F. G. Swann, director of the Bartol Laboratories of the Franklin Institute; Dr. Bronislaw Malinowski of Yale University and the London School of Economics; Dr. Margaret Mead of the American Museum of Natural History; Dr. W. Lloyd Warner, Dr. Louis Wirth and Dr. Robert Redfield of the University of Chicago; Dr. H. Scudder Mekeel. University of Wisconsin; John D. Rockefeller, Jr. long a patron of Fisk; Dr. William Heard Kilpatrick, Columbia University; Dr. W. E. B. DuBois, Negro, Atlanta University, and Edwin Embree, president of the Julius Rosenwald Fund.

Roland Hayes, noted Negro singer, will appear in concert Friday night, while the Fisk Jubilee Singers and the student university choir will appear on a number of programs during the week.

PROGRAM OF MUSIC

The program of Negro folk music by the Golden Gate Singers at Fisk University tonight will demonstrate effectively that Negro and white music equally have borrowed from each other in creating America's folk heritage.

That is the dictum of Alan Lomax, who is in charge of the folk song archives of the Library of Congress and who will be a commentator on tonight's program. Lomax arrived in Nashville yesterday.

The Library of Congress has more than 20,000 American folk songs recorded in the field in the past seven years. Two-thirds of this recording was done by Lomax and his father, with particular stress on Negro songs because "Negro singing seems to defy notation."

One of the finest Negro folk songs in the whole collection, he said, was recorded in the Tennessee state prison here in 1933 from the singing of a Negro convict, Allen Prothero, who since has died.

Fisk Given $300,000 For Erection Of Building

As a suitable climax to the celebration of the seventy-fifth anniversary of the founding of Fisk University, which has been commemorated by a five-day program, L. Hollingsworth Wood, vice-chairman of the university's board of trustees, announced today that $300,000 has been willed to the school for the erection of a building in honor of the memory of Erastus Milo Cravath, first president of the institution.

In addition, Mr. Wood announced that the board of directors of the Congregational and Christian Churches had authorized the gift of $125,000, to be known as the American Missionary Association fund, for addition to the present endowment for work in religion. The amount, Mr. Wood said, will be matched by the General Education Board. The original $125,000 will be paid to the school between January 1, 1945, or earlier, and January 1, 1950.

Paul D. Cravath, chairman of the board of trustees at Fisk until his death last July, stipulated in his will that upon the death of his wife, the $300,000 sum be paid the school for the erection of a building in memory of his father, Fisk's first president. The building is to be named for Erastus Milo Cravath.

Mr. Wood also said that an anonymous gift of $100,000 for the establishment of a professorship in the department of religion would be matched by the General Education Board.

The present Fisk endowment, with the addition of the most recent gifts, stands at $2,993,000, he said.

Roland Hayes Song Recital Draws Praise

Nashville Banner

By SYDNEY DALTON

The audience that filled Memorial Chapel at Fisk University on Friday evening for a song recital by Roland Hayes listened to the most beautiful singing that has been heard in this city for a long time. It was the very essence of song interpretation—which, at its best, is the highest and most refined art of vocalism.

For those who delight in the flamboyant operatic aria, in the tricks of technique and the superficial appeal of the ballad, there was little satisfaction in a program made up of two early seventeenth century arias by Monteverdi, Handel's "Where e'er You Walk," Mozart's "Quando Miro," ten gems from Schumann's cycle "Dichterliebe" and a group of African and Afro-American songs and folk songs. For the musician, and for those who appreciate the beauties and niceties of great interpretation, it was, on the other hand, a rare experience.

I once heard Hayes say: "To me, the most beautiful song ever composed is the one I happen to be singing at the moment." In that remark is revealed the constant search for beauty in every note and every phrase that is always apparent in his singing. His voice is neither large nor strikingly beautiful in rich coloring. But he has it so thoroughly under control that it seems to float quietly into every nook and corner of an auditorium and, fulfilling the demands of text and music, take on a thousand shades of color and meaning.

With these virtues he combines flawless diction. He seems to take each syllable, whether it be English, German or Italian, form it correctly with just the right vowel shadings, wrap it up in an appropriately beautiful tone and send it forth to the listener.

The singer was admirably supported by Reginald Boardman at the piano, playing the accompaniments that fitted perfectly into the Hays style.

Rockefeller Still Strong

upon which it was drawn that it was "good as gold," Mr. Rockefeller only smiled, but made no comment.

MAY 2 - 1941

Advised that President Roosevelt had ordered a speedup in defense industries with a twenty-four-hour schedule for tool plants, he still had "no comment."

He was met at Union Station by President Thomas Elsa Jones of Fisk, Chancellor O. C. Carmichael of Vanderbilt University, Dr. E. L. Turner, president of Meharry Medical College, and L. Hollingsworth Wood, vice-chairman of the Fisk Board of Trustees.

This afternoon Mr. Rockefeller will be escorted on a tour of Fisk, Meharry, A&I State College, Vanderbilt, Peabody, and Scarritt College, and this evening will be among the guests at an informal dinner at Belle Meade Country Club, at which Chancellor Carmichael will be host.

In his communication to Publisher Arthur H. Sulzberger of the Times, Mr. Rockefeller not only advocated use of convoys in seeing that war materials and foodstuffs were delivered to Great Britain, but also urged the elimination from the defense program of all Nazi and Communist fifth-columnists, whom he blamed for some recent disputes between industry and labor.

MAY 2 - 1941

He expressed the belief that the President would take "prompt and effective action" as soon as he received assurance of general public support. Although he hates war, Mr. Rockefeller said the issue here is freedom against slavery, and stated his firm conviction "reached in anguish of spirit," that it would be better to die fighting Hitlerism than to live in a world dominated by it, and that all Americans should stand by the British Empire "to the limit and at any cost."

"The magnificent tenacity and unparalleled courage of the English nation must be reinforced by our fullest aid," he wrote. "Every hour is precious. We must act today. God grant that as those who come after us read the history of this fateful hour they may have occasion to give humble thanks for the stand this day taken by all those who proudly call themselves Americans."

MAY 2 - 1941

Mr. Rockefeller's only unmarried son, Winthrop, is in training having volunteered under the Selective Service Act, and is now with the Twenty-sixth Infantry, at Plattsburg. Another son, Nelson A. Rockefeller, is an official of the Council of National Defense as coordinator of commercial and cultural relations among the American Republics. Three other sons, Laurence S., David, and John D. III, are all registered for selective service.

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., who is to participate in the convocation program tomorrow at Fisk University in connection with the institution's seventy-fifth anniversary celebration, arrived in Nashville this afternoon at 1:15 o'clock. He was accompanied by his son, John D. Rockefeller, III.

Asked about his letter to the publisher of the New York Times recently, in which he advocated "immediate action to see that American war materials and foodstuffs," are "laid down at Britain's door," he said: "I haven't changed my mind about it."

Mr. Rockefeller said he had written the letter "because I had something to say."

MAY 2 - 1941

The philanthropist also advocated labor and industry getting together to bar strikes, lockouts, and stoppages of all kinds for the duration, and called on citizens generally to unite solidly behind President Roosevelt in any measures that may be necessary to help Britain win.

ROLAND HAYES AND FISK JUBILEE SINGERS—The famous Georgia-born Negro tenor, Roland Hayes, is shown (middle row, center) as he talked with the Fisk Jubilee Singers Friday afternoon after putting them through a rehearsal of the song, "Ode to Fisk University" which they sang Saturday morning. Hayes, who worked his way through the university and later studied music there, arrived in Nashville Thursday to attend the anniversary exercises at Fisk. "The Negro spiritual must be understood and presented with its original feeling," the singer said, "if it is to convey the depth of meaning which it had for my people. It came from their souls and expressed the highest emotion—their religion. People have made a fuss about leaving the dialect off in spirituals. That is nothing compared with losing the true feeling behind the songs." Shown at Hayes' left is Mrs. James A. Myers, director of the Fisk Jubilee Singers.

Year of Jubilee

It was music that made Fisk University what it is, a leading U.S. Negro institution. Last week Fisk let music ring, and swell the breeze, in celebration of its 75th anniversary.

Fisk's beginning, soon after the Civil War, was in a Federal hospital barracks in Nashville, Tenn. Thither, at the invitation of General Clinton Fisk, trooped Negroes of all ages, to get their schooling. They didn't get much until the school's treasurer, George White (white), formed a chorus, named it the Jubilee Singers, took them on a barnstorming tour of the North. Mr. White sent back $40,000 to buy a campus. The Singers went abroad, sang before Queen Victoria, who requested Steal Away to Jesus. That tour netted $200,000, which bought Jubilee Hall, other Fisk buildings.

MAY 12 1941

The Jubilee Singers, now 100% male, have never sung hotcha, keep their spirituals pure and dignified. But last week in Fisk Memorial Chapel, to the dismay of die-hards, Negroes stomped, slapped their thighs, plunk-a-plunked banjos and guitars, sang blues and "sinful songs." Fisk's music director, white, German-descended, Harvard-trained Harold Schmidt, 31, had resolved that Fisk's celebration should sound of whatever is Negro. The five-day program included such commercially successful performers as guitar-playing Joshua White, work-song singer, and the gospel-swinging Golden Gate Quartet. To show what his university choir could do with serious, non-Negro music, Harold Schmidt put on Swiss Arthur Honegger's choral work, King David. Fisk jubileers and their guests greeted the festival with everything from foot-tapping to wild applause.

YOU ARE STILL in the swim, traducers to the contrary notwithstanding.

As long as you have Mr. Rockefeller and Mr Ford on your side, look to the future. A few days ago a silly statement made by some noisy gentlemen about the attitude colored workers should take as to Mr. Ford was called to his attention.

He is said to have remarked: "I give workers work; talkers work us both."

Now you have Mr. Rockefeller, who left all behind him in New York and journeyed to Nashville to attend the seventy-fifth anniversary of Fisk. In Nashville a reporter asked him about a letter he had written to a New York editor calling for ALL help to England.

"Not now," he said "I am in Nashville on a personal matter and nothing else is on my mind."

Nothing on the mind bearing one of the great names of history except YOU. The reporter failed to ask him about Fisk, about men and women who establisned it.

President Jones of Fisk ought to feel proud. Mr. Rockefeller said he came to Nashville not only because of the achievements and the work of Fisk but also because "of its great president."

With him was his son, John D. Rockefeller III. He might have said to him: "Come along with me and I will show you one of the great universities of the world"

Nashville politicians took a back seat when Mr. Rockefeller showed up. A dinner was given for him, but only humanitarians and philanthropists got in.

Boom At Jarvis As Oil Is Discovered On Campus

FEB3 1941

Black Gold Flows From Well Bordering 874-Acre Ground

FEB3 1941

HAWKINS, Texas—(SNS)—Jarvis Christian College, one of the largest colored schools in the southwest, located three miles east of Hawkins, has suddenly found itself in a position of wealth following the discovery of oil on the very border and rim of its large acreage and campus.

Already an institution of learning that has exerted a great influence among the race it serves, the college now finds itself in a position to do still greater things for the advancement and education of the colored people.

Jarvis Christian College was founded in 1910 under the leadership of the Christian Women's Board of Missions who felt the need of an institution in which young Negro boys and girls could receive industrial education.

GIVE 456 ACRES

The audible expression of this desire was heard by Mrs. Ida V. Jarvis who became interested immediately. She and her husband, Major J. J. Jarvis, gave 456 acres of land to be used specifically for the education of Negroes.

It was natural for Major and Mrs. Jarvis to become interested in fostering a movement for the benefit of the Negro. Coming to this country from North Carolina, both Mrs. Ida and the Major had been raised among the Negroes as small children. Their parents were large plantation owners and owned many slaves. As children the two college benefactors were practically raised by Negro women and developed a tender part in their hearts for the race.

When Major and Mrs. Jarvis moved from their plantations in North Carolina, they settled in Coultman.

He was a leader throughout his life in all educational movements, for whites as well as blacks.

Since the Negroes were set free during the Civil War Major Jarvis thought and contended earnestly that inasmuch as they had been made citizens under the constitution, the only way to make good citizens of them was by the three fold education of the head, the hand and heart. He lived to realize the dream of years in the school's opening.

Shortly after the original gift of land was made, Professor T. B. Frost was elected superintendent of the proposed new school and began his pioneer work of clearing the ground and erecting a building. School opened on January 1, 1912, with seven pupils and one instructor.

In 1914, feeling the need of a president for the institution, Mrs. Jarvis contacted Professor J. N. Ervin of Johnson City, Tennessee, regarding the work and development of the school. He accepted the presidency of the college in August, 1914.

HAS 874 1-2 ACRES

The white Christian Churches of Texas and adjoining states became interested in the welfare of Jarvis Christian College after becoming acquainted with its program through the efforts of President Ervin, and in 1929, a Texas Trusteee Board was organized consisting of prominent members of the Christian Churches. The local administration functions under the direction of the United Christian Missionary Society.

As the college began to take on growth more land was purchased from time to time until today the institution owns 874 1-2 acres, almost twice the amount of the original gift of 456 acres. A great part of the land is under cultivation from which the majority of the food supply used by the school is obtained. An ample area is used for pasture and the wooded sections furnish much of the lumber for building purposes.

Jarvis Christian Institute became Jarvis Christian College in 1927 when it was accredited by the State Department of Education of Texas.

On October 9, 1935, Jarvis was visited by a devastating fire which really proved to be a blessing in disguise. After the fire an intensive building program was launched from which later arose and academic building, dining hall and a 12-cottage unit for the young men.

NOW HAVE 22 BUILDINGS

Today there are twenty-two buildings in all, spread over a beautiful campus of one hundred acres covered with large forest trees. The buildings are commodious and modern, and equipped with electric lights, sewage, hot and cold running water, and other conveniences to provide for comfortable, healthful living for the students and faculty.

Senior college work was begun during the 1937-38 session at which time the junior work was added. The first senior college degrees were awarded in May, 1939.

President Ervin was stricken in March 1938 with a stroke from which he never recovered. He passed in August 1938, and in this same month the duties of the presidency were assumed by Peter C. Washington of East St. Louis, Illinois.

The affairs of the college are considered and looked after by a number of campus organizations and committees. The health committee has arranged plans whereby all students may be helped with medical attention at a small cost and a regular physician is maintained by the school.

ERECT STONE SEATS

The campus committee looks after the beautification of the grounds. Trees have been planted, drains perfected and the campus is kept clean at all times. The State Highway Department has planted roses along the highway in front of the college and erected stone seats.

FEB3 1941

The education committee has sponsored the formation of various types of campus clubs which make the students more appreciative of the work of certain departments of the school.

The aim of the present administration is to make Jarvis a model institution in every respect as it strives toward the threefold development of the student as outlined in the beginning by Major Jarvis, and with its newly found wealth the college will be able to realize its fondest dreams, and those of its founders.

Reelection Spikes Rumor Of Retirement

MARSHALL, Tex.—(ANP)— The re-election of M. W. Dogan for the 46th consecutive year as president of Wiley College has spiked a rumor of the president's supposed retirement at the end of his 45th year. The board of trustees acted upon a recommendation by M. S. Davage, secretary of Methodist Educational Institutions for Negroes, in a recent meeting to re-elect President Dogan.

AUG 30 1941

Immediately following his reappointment, Dr. Dogan submitted a tentative program outlining his plans for further development and expansion of the institution. Major needs of the institution are extensive repairs and adequate maintenance on the boys' dormitory until funds could be raised for its replacement; paving of streets bounding college grounds; increasing present endowment of $620,000 to $1,000,000 by launching a supplementary campaign; starting a building program to include home economics, science hall; new dormitories for men and women; teachers' cottages and stadium. The teachers have already subscribed and paid $1,000 toward building the cottages and stadium. Minor needs included funds for scholarships, student aid, and library books.

He announced gifts for scholarships during the past session from G. E. D. Beicher and L. C. Thomas, Houston, $25. each; Chicago Wiley Club, $40; A. E. Walker, president, Universal Life Insurance Company, Memphis, $50; Rev. F. W. Logan, $205 for the Alice Dunn Logan scholarship fund; Laymen's Association of the Texas conference, $25. Other projects sponsored by Wiley clubs and alumni association are the Log Cabin Community Little theatre and a gymnasium.

Rate Paul Quinn As 1st Class Senior College

WACO, Texas — President J. W. Yancy II, announced this week that Paul Quinn college, Waco, Texas, has been given class "A" rating as a standard four year college by the state department of education of Texas. Paul Quinn is also recognized as a standard four year college by the state department of education of the following states: Arkansas, Oklahoma, Georgia, Tennessee, North Carolina, Kentucky, Louisiana and Missouri.

This rating was given after the visit of E. H. Hereford, college examiner, state department of education, to the campus February 26. The establishment of a home economics department was the last requirement laid down by the state department of education which the college had to meet in order to receive this rating.

This department was installed this year, and the dedication was held February 26. Making his report to the state board of examiners, March 7, Mr. Hereford stated, "I recommend that the provisionel rating of this institution be removed and that it now be recognized as a senior college of the first class for Negroes."

The long road to receiving "A" rating for this institution as a four year standard college has been accomplished. This long and arduous task was stade by Dr. A. S. Jackson, former president of the college.

The death of Dr. John R. Hawkins, financial secretary of the A.M.E. church caused Dr. Jackson to go to Washington, D. C., to fill the position of financial secretary. Prof. J. W. Yancy, II succeeded Dr. Jackson as president of Paul Quinn college, and started out at once to meet the final requests made by the state department of education.

President Lancy states that the next goal of the college is to receive recognition by the Southern association for accrediting colleges and secondard schools, the highest regional accrediting agency in this section of the country. This is President Yancy's second year as head of Paul Quinn.

This year, the college has one of the largest enrollments in the history of the institution. From the number of applications which have been received for the present summer school, indications are that this session will be one of the best in many years.

Bishop G. B. Young is the presiding prelate of the state of Texas, which is konwn as the Tenth Episcopal district. He is also chancellor of the college. It is under his wise guidance and financial management that Paul Quinn college is kept financially solvent and is able to carry on to these newly attained heights.

THE HAMPTON TRADITION; AN ERROR CORRECTED

There is no institution of learning in this country with a higher, holier tradition than Hampton institute. Although such education as I have received has been of the liberal arts type, my admiration and veneration for the Hampton tradition have grown steadily through the years; and so it has come about that I am thoroughly interested in, and deeply concerned with, the fortunes of Hampton and Tuskegee.

For verily I believe that from these schools must emanate certain ideals and influences without which the Negro may perish from this continent. The Negro minister had his day; the Negro physician had his day; the Negro teacher is having his day; tomorrow the Negro artisan and business man will have his day. Because of the economic crisis that faces this nation in general and the Negro race in paritcular, within recent years I have become intensely allergic to anything that smacks of "intellectual aristocracy."

Hence, several weeks ago in an article to the Associated Negro Press entitled "A DEPLORABLE DEPARTURE", I criticised what appeared to me to be a departure by Hampton from its great tradition, towards the ideal of intellectual aristocracy. The article was inspired by newspaper accounts that 200 students had been advised not to return to Hampton this fall, and by a conversation I had with one of the students so advised. I erroneously assumed that the news account plus the conversation warranted the conclusion that Hampton was making a "deplorable departure."

I was honestly criticising Hampton not as one of its enemies but as one of its staunchest friends. The article in question was not in any sense an attempt to disparage the vigorous administration of Dr. MacLean and the fine task he is performing in Hampton's reorganization. It grieved me to believe that in this fine reorganization plan, a glorious tradition was about to be sacrificed. And thus in a misunderstanding I vigorously criticised a policy I thought inimical to the cause of education among Negroes everywhere.

In a letter of recent date Dr. MacLean has been kind enough to disabuse my mind of the erroneous conclusion that the Hampton ideal was now one of intellectual aristocracy. My impression gleaned from the news account and my conversation with one of the dismissed students were as erroneous as my criticism proved to be.

Dr. MacLeans letter to me was heartening and reads in part thus: "Our position is briefly this, we are looking in our student body for a combination of qualities, a pattern of vocational interest, of basic natural skill, combined with a drive that will guarantee that a student will get all he is able to get from his life and work and study at Hampton; and, with a set attitude which include far more than concern with personal success and aggrandizement. We want him when he issues from here, to be well-prepared to earn his living, to live a happy and successful home life and do as good a job for his community and his folks as he can do. . . . We do not ask that he be an intellectual, although it does not hurt in any field to have brains. We are interested in the best mechanics, bricklayers, machinists, welders, farmers, carpenters, accountants, salesmen, clerks, stenographers, nutritionists, homemakers and the like."

This letter from Dr. MacLean clearly refutes the conclusion that Hampton is leaving its first traditions for the field of intellectual aristocracy and I am tremendously glad that I was wrong; for it would be a calamity for Hampton to deviate from the faith of the fathers in such fundamental way as intimated in by previous release. This fine statement from Dr. MacLean is a declaration of educational faith that we are happy to publish even though it was provoked by an erroneous conclusion on our part. The truth is what we are after and not personal prestige; and we are glad to get it from Dr. MacLean himself, and I am sure that in its publication the Negro race will rejoice to know that Hampton still stands for those fundamentals without which nations and races cannot be great and civilizations cannot be splendid. Hampton is rightly the mother of the vocational ideal in American education and it is heartening to know that under Dr. MacLean Hampton is going to carry on true to the Armstrong tradition. Long live Hampton!

Saint Paul's School Makes Foward Step

NOV 1 5 1941

IN keeping with the general trend in education the trustees of the St. Paul Normal and Industrial School, Lawrenceville, Virginia, adopted a program last week for the extension of the school's usefulness. The school is now offering courses in 15 trades or industries with a high school academic accompaniment, and two years beyond high school for those who plan to teach. Under the new program all the courses will be raised to a four-year college level leading to the bachelor of science degree. The trustees voted also to amend the charter so as to change the name of the school to St. Paul's Polytechnic Institute.

This change of name is indicative of the emphasis which St. Paul's will hereafter place upon vocational education. A thorough training of students in such trades as carpentry, automobile mechanics, masonry, painting and interior decorating, plumbing, steamfitting, electrical work and certain phases of engineering is proposed. For girls it is proposed to broaden the courses in home economics, cosmetology and secretarial science, and continue the teacher-training work to the four-year undergraduate level.

The trustees and administrators of the school have carefully considered the course which St. Paul's should take and have made their decision with full knowledge of all the difficulties involved in carrying out a program of expansion for a private educational institution with scant endowment. In the face of the rapid advances being made in the State supported system of education there is no longer any place for the private high school or junior college. There is a very definite opportunity, however, for St. Paul's to convert its excellent plant and facilities to the task of filling a wide gap in the vocational education structure, which lags far behind the academic, in the State's program.

MY DAY: Girls Prepare For Many Vocations

By Eleanor Roosevelt.

FEB 26 1941

WASHINGTON, Monday.—Flying from Washington to Richmond, Va., yesterday morning was very pleasant. It gave me time before I left to see my grandbaby for a little while, and to have a very leisurely breakfast all by myself for the first time that I can remember this winter in Washington.

The baby is at the stage where everything goes straight into his mouth. Whether it is the beads around his neck, the spoons of the table, or the newspaper which he grabs out of my hand. I discovered when little Johnny Boettiger was his age, that newsprint was evidently harmless, so I do not worry any more when I see it being chewed to a pulp.

The car met me in Richmond and it took only three-quarters of an hour to reach Virginia State College. The plant has been greatly improved in the last few years through the use of various government setups. I ate a very delicious lunch cooked and served by the home economic girls and can vouch for the fact that this course is well given. The head of the department told me that when they are through it, the girls are prepared for 17 vocations.

Most of these young Negro people, however, take teaching positions. I feel sure that they are gradually raising the standard of living among their own people in the state of Virginia. There was no convenient return plane, so I drove back in three hours and 20 minutes and arrived here in time for supper. Our house guests, Mr. Alexander Woollcott and his secretary, Mr. Hennessey, arrived in the afternoon and were settled in their rooms, prepared to meet all the rigors of daily acting in "The Man Who Came to Dinner."

Mrs. Florence Kerr, of WPA, came to supper and also my old friends, Mr. and Mrs. Grosvenor Allen, of Oneida, N. Y., and their daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Kerr, whom they are visiting down here. Mrs. Allen broke a knee last year and has had a lot of trouble with them, and so she is on her way to Tucson, Ariz., to convalesce. However, she has lost none of her old spirit and remarked to me in parting that she is coming back to take up all the things she has been longing to do during her period of inactivity.

Parley Lauds Negro Job Training Plan

By the Associated Press

Hampton, Va., Feb. 12.—The national defense program of vocational education training for Negroes was praised in a resolution passed at the closing of the fifteenth biennial Hampton Institute Builders' Conference today.

The three-day meeting keyed to the theme of "defense construction and the Negro" closed with a panel discussion led by representatives of Virginia States College, Tuskegee Institute, South Carolina State College, Arkansas A. M. and N. College and Hampton Institute on the subject of "trade and industrial training and the national defense."

Studying the results of the first eight months of the United States Office of Education's vocational education program in defense trades the 200 delegates to the conference and National Builders' Association convention voted that:

1. The conference commends the recent actions of the Government as they relate to national defense training in our schools.

2. The enrollment in Negro schools will not swell to the desired level until Negro youth sees that the Government is taking specific action to give them equal opportunities for employment upon receiving their training as skilled mechanics.

3. The schools are in a position, with respect to equipment and personnel, to cooperate further in any expansion of the program which the Government might see fit to inaugurate.

4. The program has succeeded in stimulating an interest in practical education upon both Negro and white and has been a positive force in the development of sound national morale.

A Virginia Juvenile

Editor of The Times-Dispatch:

Sir,—While the avowed intention of European dictators is the destruction of civilization, the reorganization and reconstruction of the world, two momentous events have come to the people of Richmond and the State of Virginia, which should cause the celebration of a jubilee by all classes, creeds, colors and races.

First is the completion and dedication of the new Medical College of Virginia, the most wonderful and imposing structure of its kind ever erected in this State, or in the entire South. If we would know something of its vastness, its beautiful architectural pattern, its history in part, its inestimable service to the sick, afflicted, the dying, we have only to read the splendid editorial in "The Norfolk Virginian-Pilot," published in The Times-Dispatch December 7, 1940, under the headline, "Richmond's New Hospital."

Second, is the wonderful gift of the central unit of the Belgian Pavilion at the World's Fair, New York, to the Virginia University, Richmond. It is no doubt the most outstanding contribution ever made at one time to this worthy Negro institution of learning, which still needs financial assistance. Of course, the university officials have accepted the gift with due appreciation. Yet "The Times-Dispatch," December 8, is to be congratulated for its appeal for "widespread support from members of both races, not only in Virginia, but throughout the United States, for it symbolizes the sort of interracial cooperation and international good will which is so sorely needed in these troublous times."

Not only so, but the editorial goes further and practically thanks in behalf of the Negro race, all those interested in making possible the contribution, in language, spirit and sentiment which could not be equalled by editorials of the combined Negro press.

M'LEAN STARTS STUDENT QUIZ

Patterned After Minnesota University

President Malcolm S. MacLean of Hampton Institute has announced that a survey of Hampton graduates and former students has been begun by the institute's committee on research and publication.

Patterned after the survey conducted at the University of Minnesota in 1938 by Dr. MacLean, the survey is described as the most complete study of its type ever to be attempted by a Negro college.

An illustrated questionnaire booklet will be sent to more than 2,500 former students, covering such topics as job activities, points of view, home and family life, opinions, family relationships, socio-civic afafirs, newspaper and magazine reading, enjoyment of motion pictures and radio programs, life satisfactions and philosophy toward life, and leisure time activities.

In a letter to former students to be questioned explaining the purpose of the study and soliciting their cooperation, Dr. MacLean said that "only by drawing upon the experiences of you who have attended Hampton can we build here a program that will prepare our present student body and the students of the future for the life that they must face in your communities."

Dr. MacLean said that the data obtained from the survey would be an important help to school officials in organizing Hampton's future program.

EXPAND ARTS AT INSTITUTE

Will Remodel Old Science Building

Hampton Institute, for the past 73 years a proponent of "learning by doing," will carry its basic philosophy into the wide new area of fine arts next year, according to an announcement by Dr. Malcolm S. MacLean, president of the institute.

The present "Old Science building" on the campus will be completely modernized and converted into an arts center and an addition built to house a theater workshop. The new arts center will house courses in ceramics, architecture, painting, sculpture, and other graphic arts. It also will be the activity center for speech and radio work, dramatics, the dance, and vocal and instrumental music. Over $16,000 will be spent in converting the building to meet a pressing need of Negro youth, he said.

Plans have been prepared by the institute's department of building construction and work will be begun this semester. The plans include a small auditorium and a fully equipped stage on which experimental work will be done in scenery, lighting, costumes, and the other phases of stagecraft. This stage will serve as an auxiliary to the larger one in Ogden hall.

A radio broadcasting station, a unit in the chain of intercollegiate broadcasting system stations, is included in the new plans.

Viktor E. Lowenfeld, Austrian refugee painter who came to Hampton last year, Helen L. Kendall, and George F. Ketcham Jr., are preparing curricula for next year's art courses. A kiln for the teaching of pottery has already been ordered, and many innovations will be added.

F. Irene Sauders, Charles H. Flax, Ernest Hays, Benjamin Jones, Paige I. Lancaster and Julian H. Lipscombe are planning new and greater functions for the music department. William H. Moses Jr., Negro architect, who won the State of Virginia competition for the World's fair exhibit, will head up the activities in the field of architecture.

The entire classroom space on campus will be reallocated during the coming semester, and the division of business, which is now in the building to be modernized, has been assigned new quarters.

Negro Women Seek $5,000

Launch Dollar Drive For Belgian Bldg.

Negro women of Richmond and Virginia have launched an intensive drive in support of the campaign to bring the Belgian Friendship Building complete from the New York World's Fair to Virginia Union University, it was announced today. The undertaking has been titled the Women's Dollar Movement and has a total of $5,000 as its goal. In the general campaign the city and State have been asked for a minimum of $50,000.

The women's movement is sponsored by the Woman's Baptist Missionary and Educational Association of Virginia, which is effectively organized throughout the State. Every member has been called on for a personal contribution of $1 and a pledge to contact five or more other women for contributions of the same amount. Every contributor, it was said, will be privileged to have her name inscribed on a handsome scroll to be placed in the foyer of the Belgian Friendship Building when it is reconstructed here. While the sponsorship is Baptist, there no denominational lines in the campaign, which is essentially an undertaking to promote Negro education and stimulate interracial co-operation and understanding.

Contributions will be received by the association's president, Mrs. W. T. Johnson, 2504 Brook Road, Richmond, who will report them to Dr. William J. Clark, president of Virginia Union.

The women's campaign, said Mrs. Johnson, is by no means restricted to Virginia and will be extended vigorously into other states as soon as it gains momentum here. "Women," she said, are always willing to take a leading part in worthy movements, and we must all do our part in this."

Other officers Of Body Named

Other officers of the Woman's Baptist Missionary and Educational Association of Virginia are Mrs. Ada E. Buford, recording secretary, Danville; Mrs. Amanda J. Rowland, corresponding and literary secretary, Lexington, and Mrs. Julia B. Willis, treasurer, Portsmouth. The executive board consists of Mrs. Mary V. Binga, chairman, Miss Lucy A. Peters and Mrs. A. W. Brown, all of Richmond, and district secretaries are: Northern—Mrs. M. S. Farrar, chairman, Charlottesville; Southwestern—Mrs. M. C. Rux, chairman, Keysville; Central — Mrs. Phillis Sharks, chairman, and Mrs. Emma Winn, honorary chairman, Richmond; Eastern District, Tidewater Convention—Mrs. Nannie B. Ellis, chairman, Norfolk; Mrs. E. E. Smith, superintendent of the junior department, Richmond, and Miss Esther Rose, president, Norfolk.

Students of Virginia Union, as well as faculty members and alumni, also are conducting a strenuous campaign for funds. As part of the student activity, the choir of Virginia Union, recognized as one of the ablest of its kind in the South, will be presented in public concert at the Mosque Sunday at 3 o'clock in a rendition of Mendelssohn's oratorio "Elijah." The title role in the first part will be essayed by Willie Thomas Jones, outstanding young Richmond baritone who, as a junior at Virginia Union has been heard in a number of public recitals and radio broadcasts, and in the second part by Leonard Napper, a Virginia Union freshman from Columbus, Ohio.

All proceeds from the concert will be devoted to the Belgian Friendship Building fund.

Hampton Head Says Teachers On The Spot

Addresses N. C. Hampton Alumni At Raleigh School

MAR 22 1941

Staff Correspondence

RALEIGH, N. C.—Dr. Malcolm S. MacLean, president of Hampton Institute said here last Saturday that the national education situation presents a crucial problem and that all teachers are on the spot.

"There is increased pressure from taxpayers to decrease expenses," he said, "and a clamor against the unreality of things we teach."

MAR 22 1941

Dr. MacLean spoke to alumni and others at the Crosby-Garfield School at the annual meeeting of the Hampton Alumni Clubs of North Carolina. He was accompanied by Mrs. McLean, Don Davis, Sr., Collis Davis, C. S. Isham, of the Institute.

ALUMNI REPORT

A morning session of the meeting was held on the campus of St. Augustine's College and was open only to alumni of the institution. Reports from chapters of the state showed $536 raised for the scholarship fund.

Officers of the state organization all reelected are: Miss Marie McIver, president; Neal McLean, vice-president; Mrs. J. L. Tilley, secretary; J. J. Henderson, assistant secretary; and F. W. Roland, treasurer. M. H. Crockett is president of the local chapter.

REALISTIC EDUCATION

"The CCC, NYA, WPA, have already developed a tremendous, powerful, realistic education outside of the school. If we had been realistic, there would have been no need for these agencies," asserted the distinguished educator.

MAR 22 1941

Displaying a keen insight into the problems of education as related to the total national defense and welfare of the commonwealth, the speaker made an urgent plea for a movement toward reality in education. He emphasized the need for skilled workers, relating experiences at Hampton and Nwport News where it is virtually impossible to find an unemployed skilled worker.

"The development in secondary and higher education of a personal and guidance system," was seen as the solution to the dilema. "Without a better selection we cannot go on doing a better job in higher education."

Dr. MacLean assailed the practice of education which he says does too much clinical work. He described educators as a bunch of repairmen looking for what's wrong and "fixing it up."

Asking for more consideration of the peronal needs of students he advised the teachers to take the point of view of a "talent scout." And then, he said, there must be more exploration of placement so that each individual may be placed into the vocation which he is trained for."

NEW HAMPTON PLANS

He discussed plans being carried out at Hampton in the reeorganization of the school of agriculture. The work will lead towards a master's degree with from six months to a year of interneship of the institution.

Other plans call for cooperative action with other institutions, whereby, there may be an exchange of students offering opportunity for specialization beyond the work offered at the institution awarding the degree. At present a Hampton student is receiving advanced training at Tuskegee in weaving and a Tuskegee student is at Hampton for advanced work in the folk dance.

Claude F. Gaddy, superintendent of Raleigh Schools welcomed the visitor on behalf of the schools of the city. Mrs. Clara D. Mann, supervisor of Craven County Schools responded to the welcome. Don Davis, Sr., bursar of Hampton presented the speaker.

Isadore Oglesby, director of the Men's Glee Club of N. C. College lead in the group singing of spirituals.

Other brief remarks were made by Dr. N. H. Harris, Shaw University; J. W. Mitchell, state farm agent; N. C. Newbold, director of the N. C. Division of Negro Education.

J. J. Henderson, Durham read resolutions.

M. H. Crockett, president of the Raleigh chapter made introductory remarks and Miss Marie McIver presided.

Blind Hampton Girl Student Wins Hearts Of Virginia School Campus

HAMPTON INSTITUTE, Va.—A brilliant, personable young lady of 14, blind since the age of two, has become the belle of the campus at the Hampton Institute summer session.

Last week the classes of the recently formed division for the handicapped in the Hampton Institute summer school presented a portable radio to Annalena Baldon in appreciation of the inspiration she has brought to Hampton.

Miss Baldon assists Mrs. Bessie B. Emanuel, adviser to the handicapped in the course in materials and methods for the blind. She teaches beginners how to write and read Braille characters.

Miss Baldon received all of her formal schooling at the New York Institute for the Education of the Blind. This institute, in June 1941, presented her with a certificate for proficiency in English Braille Grade Two, which is usually mastered by students of hgih school age. She is also a good typist.

Except for her blindness, a handicap which she has successfully subordinated by her personality, Annalena is much like any normal American girl. She swims, rows and enjoys horseback riding. She sings unusually well, enjoys listening to the radio and going to the movies, and her spare time at home is often spent in knitting.

Of her work she says, "I like to go to school, but I don't love it; most of all, I like to have some one read Ellery Queen's stories to me."

This young girl meets people and carries on conversation with an ease that is amazing. Being widely read, her cultural background is good and is reflected in her speech and in her manner. Her ambition is to be a teacher of the blind.

Singers Tour 68 Years to Aid Hampton

By the Associated Press

Hampton, Va., July 31.—A tour by Negro singers, started 68 years ago to "sing up" a building at Hampton Institute, is still under way with the original repertoire essentially unchanged.

Hampton, alma mater of Booker T. Washington, founder of Tuskegee, and many other Negro leaders, was a struggling institution badly in need of funds when the original band of singers set out to raise money for "Virginia Hall."

For two and a half years, the student-singers toured the North, singing and studying as they went. Their receipts provided the money to erect the building, but the Hampton tours went on.

Successors to that first band have been heard in many parts of the world, singing some of America's best-loved folk music. Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt heard the initial concert of the 1941 tour at Hyde Park, N. Y.

Because of the popularity of its songs and the continuous demands for appearances, the group of singers finally was changed to a quartet of graduates who could be kept on the road most of the year.

Each year the quartet gives 300 or more programs in schools, colleges, universities, churches and private drawing rooms. It also sings on radio programs and makes phonograph records. It is forced to decline many of its invitations because of inability to be several different places at the same time.

Several score modern buildings now dot the campus on the banks of Hampton Roads where the singers' first efforts resulted in the erection of Virginia Hall.

Trustees Reverse Action

Full-Time Head Proposal Is Turned Down

LYNCHBURG, Va. — Reversing its decision of a month ago by a vote of 23 to 20 to name a full-time president, the board of trustees of Virginia Theological Seminary and College at its much publicized special meeting at Diamond Hill Baptist Church here July 29 voted to retain Dr. W. H. R. Powell as part-time president and named a special committee to work with him on the institution's future program.

The meeting lasted a full eight hours and was punctuated with heated discussions, but the final decision was apparently satisfactory to all.

COMMITTEE PERSONNEL

Those named on the special committee were: Drs. C. C. Scott, chairman, Richmond; C. C. Harvey, Danville; A. L. James, Roanoke; T. J. King, Pittsburgh, Pa.; W. E. Lee, Roanoke; J. A. Shelton, Lynchburg; R. H. Bowling, Norfolk.

The duty of this committee is to arrange for the fall opening of the school, in conjunction with Dr. Powell, and adjust the alleged debt on the president's salary account.

NO SALARY ARRANGEMENT

As to the exact compensation for his services, both past and future, Dr. Powell asked the committee for time to consult the records. However, he assured them that due to his continued love for the institution and its work, "neither the board nor the school's supporters need have any fear of his maintaining a Shylock attitude or being over-exacting."

When the committee met following the adjournment of the special meeting, it was informed that President Powell had never demanded a back salary account of $12,600. Certain board members, it was revealed, had made that deduction at the July meeting.

CITED CONVENTION ACTION

At that meeting, Dr. Powell in denying charges of inefficiency, lack of executive abilty and misuse of college funds, called the board's attention to the action of the Baptist State Convention in voting him a salary of $150 a month as full-time president, although he had offered his services without compensation.

Published reports of this meeting did not carry the statement that Dr. Powell had at any time demanded an accounting or presented a bill for salary due, although some board members interpreted news stories on the meeting as such.

43 MEMBERS PRESENT

Out of the total membership of 57 of the board of trustees, 47 were present. Dr. W. E. Lee, Roanoke, chairman, presided. The Rev. C. C. Harvey of Danville is secretary.

Following a wide canvass on the situation, it was brought out that the board was unanimous in believing that full-time president was the ideal but after the financial problems of the institution were analyzed, the present policy of a part-time president was considered the best that could be done.

Letters and telegrams from interested Baptists from Virginia, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Massachusetts, and the District of Columbia, favoring the retention of Dr. Powell were read.

COMMITTEE MAPS FUND CAMPAIGN

At the meeting of the special committee it was also decided that an immediate campaign to raise at least $2,000 for repairs to the heating system, fire escapes and lighting system of the school would be inaugurated.

OCT 13 1941

Dr. MacLean's letter to me heartening and reads in part thus: "Our position is briefly this, we are looking in our student body for a combination of qualities, a pattern of vocational interest, of basic natural skill, combined with a drive that will guarantee that a student will get all he is able to get from his life and work and study at Hampton; and with a set of attitudes which include far more than concern with personal success and aggrandizement. We want him when he issues from here, to be well-prepared to earn his living, to live a happy and successful home life and do as good a job for his community and his folks as he can do. —We do not ask that he be an intellectual, although, it does not hurt in any field to have brains. We are interested in the best mechanics, Bricklayers, Machinists, welders, farmers, carpenters, accountants, salesmen, clerks, stenographers, nutritionists, homemakers and the like."

OCT 13 1941

This letter from Dr. MacLean clearly refutes the conclusion that Hampton is leaving its first traditions for the field of intellectual aristocracy and I am tremendously glad that I was wrong; for it would be a calmity for Hampton to deviate from the faith of the fathers in such fundamental way as intimated in my previous release. This fine statement from Dr. MacLean is a declaration of educational faith that we are happy to publish even though it was provoked by an erraneous conclusion on our part. The truth is what we are after and not personal erroneous conclusion on our part. The truth is what we are after and not personal prestige. and we are glad to get it from Dr. MacLean himself, and I am sure that in its publication the Negro race will rejoice to know that Hampton still stands for these fundamentals without which nations and races cannot be great and civilization cannot be splendid Hampton is rightly the mother of the vocational ideal in American education and it is heartening to know that under Dr. MacLean Hampton is going to carry on true to the Armstrong tradition. Long live Hampton!

ST. PAUL NORMAL & INDUSTRIAL BOARD OF TRUSTEES AUTHORIZE TRAINING ON COLLEGE LEVEL

NOV 23 1941

Name Of School Changed To St. Paul Polytechnic Institute

Acting largely upon the recommendations of J. T. Thornton, executive vice principal, the Board of Trustees of the St. Paul Normal and Industrial School, in a special meeting held November 4, unanimously voted to raise the work of the school to a four-year undergraduate level, granting the bachelor of science degree. Authority was given to proceed at once with plans and preparations for the inauguration of the new program.

In adopting the advanced training the administration has been authorized to raise the work in the teacher-training division to the four year level by adding the junior and senior college years. Students completing this work will be awarded the bachelor of science degree in education.

The school at present offers training in 15 trades or industries. While all of these courses will gradually be placed on the college level the plan for the 1942-1943 school year is to advance the work to four years of technical training in the following skills carpentry, automobile mechanics, masonry, painting and interior decorating, tailoring, engineering-plumbing and steamfitting, home economics, cosmetology; and secretarial science.

General Educational Trends Necessitate Advancement

The board of trustees and the administration of St. Paul's School have recognized for some time the rapidly moving trend toward higher standards on the part of educational agencies generally. They have carefully studied and weighed the question of advancing the training of the work at St. Paul. Extensive investigation was begun in 1939, as the school was then faced with the problem of raising the teacher-training work to meet the present requirements of the State Board of Education or probably discontinuing such training. The latter course was agreed upon, with the understanding that special provisions be made to improve the work of the industrial division, emphasizing training specifically designed to equip young men and women for employment as artisans in their chosen trades. In this connection Mr. J T. Thornton, formerly director of industries at the school for 13 years, and more recently vice principal of the R. T. Cole Junior Vocational High School, Kansas City, Mo., was asked by the board to return to the school in an executive capacity to revamp the work of the trade division.

A study of the curriculum of other technical schools and a keen cognizance of the lack of technical training on the part of Negro Youth and the resultant lack of skilled employment prompted Mr. Thornton to present his findings to the board and urge technical training on the college level.

Physical Plant to be Improved

The advanced program will necessitate physical expansion as well as curricular and staff expansion. Funds have been provided for a new dining hall and kitchen, an addition to the trade buildings, and the remodeling and renovating of other buildings. A model dairy barn will be erected and will form the first unit of a future agriculture group.

New Objective Prompts Change of Name

NOV 23 1941

The new objective in technical training prompted a change of name of this 53 year old institution, and the St. Paul Normal and Industrial School will hereafter be known as The St. Paul Polytechnic institute.

Robert L. Vann Memorial Tower To Be Erected On Campus Of Va. Union Univ.

MAR 22 1941

$60,000 Tower of the Belgian World Fair Pavilion Will Memorialize Outstanding Graduate — National Committee Formed.

MAR 22 1941

RICHMOND, Va., Mar. 20—Virginia Union University has set in motion plans to honor the memory of one of its most distinguished graduates by naming the $60,000 tower of the Belgian World Fair Pavilion, the Robert L. Vann Memorial Tower, and to re-erect it on the campus here.

This is part of an unusual and significant project, involving a gift of more than $750,000, including the Belgian Pavilion itself, dedicated to International friendship, interracial goodwill and Negro education.

The Memorial Tower will be equipped with amplifiers and dedicated to the development of the best in Negro music. No such Memorial has so far been erected anywhere in the world to honor the memory of a Negro leader.

The Belgian Pavilion was originally constructed so that it might be returned to Belgium and set up as a university. This original purpose will be followed by Virginia Union where it will be set up to extend the university's services.

The project is being sponsored by Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, the Belgian ambassador, Count Van Der Straten-Ponthoz, and Gov. James H. Price of Virginia, as honorary chairmen.

MAR 22 1941

MRS. ROOSEVELT'S ENDORSEMENT

Mrs. Roosevelt accepted partial leadership in the project in the following letter:

"I am very much interested in the offer made by His Excellency, the Belgian Ambassador, to present the spacious and handsome Belgian World's Fair Building to the United States to be used as an addition to Virginia Union University for Negroes at Richmond.

"The proposal to dedicate the artistic Belgian Tower to the best in Negro music as a memorial to that illustrious member of the Negro race, Mr. Robert L. Vann of Pittsburgh, seems to be very appropriate.

"I am very glad to endorse this most interesting and constructive project.

MAR 22 1941

"Very sincerely yours,
ELEANOR ROOSEVELT."

As a Sponsoring Committe to raise $25,000—the amount needed to level the Tower at New York, transport it to Richmond and re-erect it as a part of the complete project—a group of representative colored citizens, representing every section and interest in the country, has been appointed.

TOWER FUND COMMITTEE

The names of other committee members are to come, but the committee so far accepting this responsibility follows:

Emmett J. Scott, 1711 S street, N. W., Washington, D. C., chairman.

A NATIONAL CONTRIBUTION

It is desired that the Tower shall be a national contribution of the colored people of the United States in whose behalf Mr. Vann labored for so many years as attorney, publicist, orator, newspaper publisher and political leader.

Programs to raise the money required are already being formulated and put into action.

As might be expected, reports from Pittsburgh indicate rapid progress in the advancement of a drive there to raise a substantial portion of the Fund. Emulating a college set-up, one hundred workers there have volunteered to raise $50 each, a total of $5,000, although the sum may easily exceed that.

MAR 22 1941

Dr. W. Roderick Brown, tuberculosis specialist, is president of Pittsburgh's college fund-raising set-up and Henry C. Parker, Jr., executive secretary of the Centre Avenue branch of the YMCA is campaign chairman.

Richmond University Raises Fund To Move Belgian Building

RICHMOND, Va. (ANP)—As a concrete gesture of good will and friendship between the two schools, University of Richmond students are conducting a concerted drive for funds to support the movement to bring the $700,000 Belgian Friendship building from the New York World's Fair to Virginia Union University.

The campaign was organized under the direction of the Student Government association, assisted by the presidents of the four classes and representatives of each of the 11 social fraternities on the campus.

Edgar G. Garber, president of the association, in commenting on the plan to raise funds to assist in bringing the building to the campus of Virginia Union, said, "It is a gesture of racial, religious and educational cooperation existing between the two schools."

He brings to his present post a wide background of experiences in all phases of activity connected with the uplifting of the race.

Hampton President Reveals Plan for Selecting Students

MAR 8 - 1941

Dr. Malcolm S. MacLean, president of Hampton Institute, told the Downtown Association Friday, that "The school is making another pioneering move in the direction of more careful selection and guidance of students, more efficient planning of courses of study, and more effective use of teaching staffs and plants.

MAR 8 - 1941

"Hampton Institute is now also demonstrating in its trade school that America's 13,000,000 Negroes constitute virtually untapped human resources for man power and skilled workers for national defense," he said.

In keeping with the school's latest program, Miss Lucille Salisbury, special counsellor in pre-college guidance, has within the past week interviewed many young men and women at Hotel Theresa with the hope that they will be able to win scholarships on the work-and-pay plan being sponsored by Hampton.

MAR 8 - 1941

According to Miss Salisbury, her work will take her into all of the southern States and the mid-west and by the time school reopens in the Fall she expects to have about 400 deserving students matriculate at Hampton.

Congressman Pays Tribute To Hampton

Closes History Week Annual Celebration

MAR 1 1941

HAMPTON INSTITUTE, Va.—A fervent plea that we never become ashamed of our identity, and high praise for Hampton Institute's contribution to the glorious history of the Negro race, featured the closing address of Negro History Week celebration here Sunday, February 16, by Congressman Arthur W. Mitchell of Chicago.

"I think we know too little about ourselves," said the speaker, "and I think one reason why we know too little about ourselves is that there are too many of us who are somewhat ashamed of the fact that we are Negroes.

"I am going to insist upon the fact that you must not be ashamed of your identity. You must make no apology for the fact that you are a Negro. You had nothing to do with your color. God made you, as He made all mankind. I want the Negroes of America to stand up and be proud of the fact that they are members of the Negro race."

TRIBUTE TO HAMPTON

In his tribute to the institution, the Chicago solon said: "If I were asked to name the spot that has made the largest single contribution to Negro history in America, I think I would without hesitation, name Hampton Institute.

"There are other sections of the country and other states, towns and cities that have made valuable and large contributions, but when we think of what this school has done in the way of helping the Negro find himself in a difficult situation; when we think of the men and women who have been prepared at this spot, and have been sent out into the world with a vision to help humanity, to render real service to mankind, we have to say, if we want to be fair, that Hampton is the one spot that has made, perhaps, the most lasting contribution to Negro history in America."

The celebration opened, Sunday, February 6, with an address by Lester B. Granger, assistant executive secretary of the National Urban League.

FOUNDER OF HAMPTON INSTITUTE HONORED

HAMPTON, Va., Feb. 2. (AP)—President Malcolm S. MacLean today paid tribute to Samuel Chapman Armstrong, who founded Hampton Institute 73 years ago, as a man of "long-range vision."

Speaking at exercises commemorating the founding of the negro college here, Dr. MacLean told an audience composed of the institute's board of trustees, students, faculty members and visitors, that Armstrong's ideas on education were so far ahead of his time that they seemed to be taken from "the most recent document of the Progressive Education Association."

The new president of Hampton said that he "pored over the yellowed, quaintly illustrated and quaintly phrased but vigorous and far-seeing reports" to find in the founder's own words authority for his own moves in the reorganization of the institute.

Outlining his future course of administrative action at Hampton along the lines laid down by Armstrong, Dr. MacLean concurred with the founder in the statement that the institute should "send men and women rather than scholars out into the world."

Fenn Resigns Agricultural Post As Hampton Reshapes Policy To Meets Modern Needs

JAN 18 1941

Students and Alumni Represented On Reorganization Committee; Sale Of Shellbanks Farm Hastened Action

(Reprinted from Last Week's Late Edition)

By SAMUEL A. HAYNES

HAMPTON INSTITUTE, Va.—Dr. Malcolm S. MacLean, president, announced Tuesday afternoon, that a program "designed to reorganize the school's agricultural department to more adequately meet today's needs" has been instituted by a committee representing students, faculty, alumni and administration.

JAN 18 1941

Donald Fisher Fenn, assistant professor and director of the agricultural department, has resigned from the Institute staff. His post will not be filled until the institute can determine what exact steps the organization will follow.

Mr. Fenn came to Hampton Institue in 1920 and was apopinted agricultural director in 1926.

Elden S. Mobery, a teacher in the agricultural department, has been selected operating chairman of the department by the agricultural student body and faculty. He will be in charge of all details of management until the course has bene completely mapped out.

Merle S. Klick was elected to head a planning committee to decide what the future curriculum, teaching methods, and policy will be.

Co-chairman of this committee will be a student selected by the Ag student body.

Precipitated by the recent sale to the government of 778 acre Shellbank Farm, this modernization program will move Hampton Institute into many new fields of Negro agricultural activity.

Dr. MacLean has this week conferred with the United States Secretary of Agriculture, Claude R. Wickett, and with outstanding Negro agricultural leaders in an effort to obtain constructive council and thought on what the Agricultural department could best do for Negroes. He is contacting many Negro colege presidents to determine what future the Negro has in agriculture.

John B. Pierce, field agent for the agricultural department who has been at Hampton for twenty years, made it possible for Dr. MacLean to discuss the school's program with key government officials.

Mr. Pierce told the Journal and Guide: "The contemplated changes will put the agricultural department in a position to function in a larger and more timely way in meeting student needs and will prove of more service to Negro farmers of the South."

Dr. McGuinn's Honor Roll Citation

RICHMOND, Va. — The Richmond Times-Dispatch, in naming Dr. Henry J. McGuinn, Virginia Union University social scientist, to the Virginia Honor Roll for 1940, published, last Sunday, the following citation of his career and achievements:

Henry Jared McGuinn, director of the division of social science at Virginia Union University, is the Negro member of the Housing Authority of Richmond. He was appointed to the authority by Mayor Ambler on October 5, in recognition of the excellent work he had done as a leader of the housing movement in the city. He has since taken an important part in the planning of two housing projects for Richmond.

EFFECTIVE SPEAKER

Dr. McGuinn was one of the most effective speakers for the public housing program during the two-year campaign that led to the establishment of a housing authority in Richmond. He was one of a panel of speakers chosen to present the case for housing in Richmond at an open forum at which Nathan Straus, administrator of the United States Housing Authority, discussed the part his agency was playing in rehousing dwellers in American slums. Looking back over the trail of their long campaign, after victory had been won, members of the Citizens' Housing Committee decided that their open-forum meeting was one of the most important steps they had taken, and one that had counted most heavily toward their final victory. Dr. McGuinn continued to take an active part in the housing campaign, until the final approval of the Thompson housing resolution by City Council.

HUMANTARIAN

Henry J. McGuinn's interest in public housing has been in part the product of his interesting career as a social scientist; in part, also, it is the result of a natural interest of the humanitarian in how "the other half lives."

Dr. McGuinn's academic qualifications are of the highest. He took the degree of bachelor of arts at Virginia Union University and went to Columbia University to take the degrees of master of arts and doctor of philosophy. At Columbia, Dr. McGuinn studied sociology (he took his doctorate in this field) under Dr. Franklin Giddings, and later did research work in New Yor' City. In 1926-27 he was research assistant for the Institute of Social and Religious Research, in New York City, for which he made a study of commercial and public recreational facilities for Negroes, which was published in T. J. Woofter's "Negro Problems in the City."

During the summer of 1929, he was field worker on a study conducted by the Virginia Agricultural Station into the status of Negro farmers in seven Virginia counties. More recently in 1936, he served as Virginia director of a survey of the training and employment of white-collar class and skilled Negro workers.

SELF-MADE

Dr. McGuinn "worked his way through school," up to the highest academic degree obtainable at a university at which that degree was the highest significance. Because of their demonstrative value, his academic achievements and his practical work as a social scientist, have given him a position of importance in the movement for better interracial cooperation in Virginia.

Hampton Institute Founder Is Praised As 'Man of Vision'

Armstrong's Ideas Far Ahead of Time, President MacLean Declares

Hampton, Feb. 2.—(AP)—President Malcolm S. MacLean today paid tribute to Samuel Chapman Armstrong, who founded Hampton Institute 73 years ago, as a man of "long-range vision."

Speaking at exercises commemorating the founding of the Negro college here, Dr. MacLean told an audience composed of the institute's board of trustees, students, faculty members and visitors, that Armstrong's ideas on education were so far ahead of his time that they seemed to be taken from "the most recent document of the progressive education association."

The new president of Hampton said that he "pored over the yellowed, quaintly illustrated and quaintly phrased but vigorous and far-seeing reports" to find in the founder's own words authority for his own moves in the reorganization of the institute.

Outlining his future course of administrative action at Hampton along the lines laid down by Armstrong, Dr. MacLean concurred with the founder in the statement that the institute should "send men and women rather than scholars out into the world."

He agreed, too, with Armstrong's belief in co-operation between Hampton and other schools, and announced that a joint workshop in higher education would be stationed at Hampton next summer in conjunction with Tuskegee, Fisk and Atlanta.

Stressing Hampton's emphasis on education for women as well as men, the speaker quoted Armstrong's words that "woman's influence is more subtle and far-reaching than man's. . . . Mentally, the sexes appear about even."

This, Dr. MacLean said, was "a startling statement for its time before even women's rights were acknowledged."

HAMPTON, Va., Feb. 8.—(UP)—Hampton institute will be host to some 200 outstanding negro builders from 20 states at the 15th Hampton Builders' conference Feb 10-12 to study the "subject of discrimination in national defense housing," it was announced today.

Claude Monsees, executive assistant to the co-ordinator of defense housing in Washington, will state the government's attitude on the question Wednesday. Other topics to be discussed included "Defense construction and the negro," "Employment of negro craftsmen on national defense construction projects," "Trade and industrial training and the national defense," and "Problems of the practical builder," the announcement said.

PICK MORRIS AS TRUSTEE OF INSTITUTE

N. Y. City Council President Selected For Post

Newbold Morris, president of the council of the city of New York, was elected to the board of trustees of Hampton institute at its meeting yesterday at Hampton.

Morris, second in command of the largest city in the world, has had a noteworthy career in government. His recent address at the November conference on the "Participation of the Negro in National Defense" at Hampton institute was featured by the statement that "I would be proud to meet an enemy anywhere, any time, in the defense of our country, and if a United States army officer, who happens to be a Negro, issues orders to me, I will follow him, even into battle." Other highlights of this address were his references to the three enemies of America—the totalitarian powers, the "fifth column," and prejudice.

Morris joins a liberal board of trustees, which during the past 73 years has included some of America's outstanding figures in business, education, government, and religion. Two former Presidents, Garfield and Taft, have been on the Hampton board.

The new trustee is reputed to be one of the most outstanding young career men in government today. He attended the Groton school, graduated from Yale in 1925, and received his law degree from the same university in 1928. He served as assistant corporation counsel of New York in 1932, was elected to the city council in 1935, and became its president in 1937. He is the great-grandson of Ambrose Kingsland, a former mayor of New York.

The current members of the board of trustees of Hampton institute are Arthur Curtiss James of New York city, chairman emeritus; J. Henry Scattergood, Philadelphia, chairman; William Jay Schieffelin, New York city; Frank W. Darling, Hampton; W. Cameron Forbes, Boston; Chester B. Emerson, Cleveland; Henry Wilder Foote, Belmont, Mass.; Daniel W. Armstrong, New York city; John W. Hanes, New York city; Dwight P. Robinson, Philadelphia;

COLLEGE GROUP CONVENES HERE

Speaker Attacks 'Jim Crow' Policies

"Negroes should stand up for their right as American citizens," said Mrs. Janie Porte Barrett, founder of the Virginia Industrial School for Girls at Peake, in an address to the delegates of the first annual southeastern sectional conference of the National Association of College Women, which was held at Hampton institute yesterday.

"When faced with Jim Crow policies, you should let your feelings be known to whoever is directly responsible," she continued. Mrs. Barrett was one of two keynote speakers during the morning session of the conference.

In welcoming the delegates, Mrs. Malcolm S. MacLean, wife of the president of Hampton institute, presented the theme of the conference, "Guidance of Youth in Our National Crisis," and stated that "the purpose of college life is to fit young people for the communities in which they will make their homes."

Dr. O. M. Fisher, Reidsville, N. C., physician, stressed in her discussion of "Youth and Its Problems of Health," that children should be trained to adhere to the fundamental principles of health in their early age. Dr. Fisher asserted that the health program of the schools should be so planned to continue this health training.

T. Lucille Salisbury, counsellor for pre-college guidance at Hampton institute, discussed the problems of the "Educational Counselling of Youth" at the conference luncheon. She was appointed to head a special study on the guidance of youth in high schools and colleges by Regional Director Amanda E. Peele.

More than 50 delegate, from the states of Virginia and North Carolina heard other talks by Mrs. William M. Whitehead, Mrs. W. M. Cooper, Mrs. S. B. Thompson, and Mrs. J. S. Higginbotham, president of the Hampton Roads branch of the N A. C. W. Dr. Flemmie P. Kittrell, dean of women at Hampton institute, also spoke.

Mrs. Roosevelt Sees Negro's Lot Improving

First Lady Is Speaker at Virginia State College for Negroes

Petersburg, Feb. 23.—(AP)—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt asserted today it was obvious that Negroes had not been given equal opportunity in the arms, in the nation's industrial program, or in education, but expressed belief "there is going to be increased opportunity because of the increased number of jobs that are being created."

The First Lady spoke at the Virginia State College for Negroes before an audience which included the student body and Negro educators from throughout the State. Her address followed a luncheon and an inspection of several buildings at the institution.

Discussing the place of youth in the national defense program, Mrs. Roosevelt emphasized the importance of educational training and urged young people to prove their willingness to accept responsibility not only in the present but also in the democracy of the future.

The nation's immediate and urgent need is to build up its military forces and merchant marine in order to be prepared for "any eventuality," she said, adding that America is at peace in a warring world only "by the grace of God."

"We hope that we may never have to actually use our Army and Navy in war, but we also know we must be prepared for anything that may happen. That is why youth subjects itself to the Selective Draft."

V. U. U. Gets $28,173 in Drive For $50,000 for Building

A total of $28,173 has been contributed to the $50,000 fund to bring the complete Belgian Friendship Building to Virginia Union University from the New York World's Fair, it was announced last night by the campaign chairman, Egbert Leigh 3d.

Classification of the contributions was reported as follows:

Richmond—white, $7,673; Negroes, $4,500. Elsewhere—white, $14,000; Negroes, $2,000. Though the campaign is centered in Richmond, outside contributions have exceeded those of the city by approximately $4,000. As a result, Mr. Leigh and his associates, all of whom are volunteer workers, will press the drive today with renewed vigor. The effort is focused on achieving the goal by January 31 because of time limitations imposed on dismantling the huge structure, a work reported already well progressed.

One section of the building containing an auditorium and library has been assured Virginia Union by funds already available. If the acquisition of the complete $700,000 building, a gift of the Belgian government, is realized in the current campaign one of the first steps to enlarge the student training program at the university will be the planning of vocational courses, for which there is declared to be an urgent need. Federal, State and city agencies will co-operate in this plan, it was said. The National Defense Council and the National Youth Administration are reported definitely interested in the project and have indicated a willingness to assist in its establishment.

All Baptist churches in Richmond are supporting the undertaking in an endeavor to promote Negro education and interracial good will. Churches of other denominations also are assisting actively. The Baptist movement is under the direction of a special committee composed of the Rev. Wade H. Bryant, Dr. T. Rupert Coleman and the Rev. Charles A. Maddry, with Dr. Theodore F. Adams serving as a member of the general campaign executive committee.

Mr. Leigh declared that the campaign has made highly gratifying progress since the lapse caused by the Christmas holidays and that he is looking to its ultimate success with confidence.

$10,500 Raised For Va. Union

Workers for Belgian Building to Meet

Workers in the Virginia Union University campaign to raise $50,000 for its Belgian Friendship Building have been called to meet with the campaign executive committee at a luncheon Wednesday at 1 o'clock at the Commonwealth Club, it was announced today by Chairman Egbert Leigh, III. At this meeting reports will be tabulated on the progress of the campaign, which at the moment has $10,500 in hand.

The reports, it is expected, will be concerned almost entirely with the movement in Richmond, including the activity of a number of churches on behalf of the enterprise. While alumni of Virginia Union are carrying the campaign into thirty-seven States and United States possessions, reports from this source are still scattered and it may be several weeks before Dr. William J. Clark, president of the university, has them complete.

The $50,000 will permit the moving of the $700,000 Belgian Friendship Building from the New York World's Fair in its entirety and reconstruction on the Virginia Union campus, providing facilities which will increase the student training capacity from 660 to approximately 1,000 and permit the introduction of vocational courses. While the first unit of the building, containing a handsome auditorium and huge library, has been assured Virginia Union by funds already available, acquisition of the second unit depends on the success of the $50,000 campaign. It is this section which contains the classrooms, laboratories and offices for which Virginia Union has a pressing and immediate need.

Mr. Leigh said today that on the basis of unofficial information the campaign is meeting encouraging public response, especially from those interested in interracial co-operation and alert to the present importance of advancing Negro education.

$100,000 Additional Funds May Be Given for Pavilion

The General Education Board, a Rockefeller benefaction, has indicated that it will give another $100,000 toward the establishment of the great Belgian Friendship Building at Virginia Union University provided the people of Richmond and Virginia contribute $50,000. This was learned last night from leaders of the $50,000 campaign which is now in full swing here under the chairmanship of Egbert Leigh 3d.

The General Education Board recently released $100,000 toward the enterprise, one of the greatest ever undertaken in Richmond for the advancement of Negro education and the promotion of interracial relations. This amount had been earmarked for a library at Virginia Union contingent upon the university raising a stipulated amount in support. Approximately $20,000 was obtained by Virginia Union toward the project.

Recently the university, bidding against considerable competition, obtained from the Belgian government the gift of its $700,000 pavilion which was a notable feature for two years at the New York World's Fair. Having been originally designed for educational use in Belgium, one section of the building was found admirably suited as a library for Virginia Union, supplying in addition a handsome auditorium and facilities for a badly needed gymnasium.

Three Dollars for One

The grant of the General Education Board is making possible the shipment and reconstruction of the library-auditorium unit here. Alone, this unit will be an auxiliary to the existing establishment. Acquisition of the second unit, however, would provide sufficient classroom, laboratory and office space to increase the university's student training capacity 50 per cent. It is to obtain the complete structure, including a 165-foot tower, that the campaign for $50,000 has been launched, stimulated by the General Education Board's contingent offer.

Dr. T. D. King of the American Baptist Home Mission Society, New York, who is serving as financial director of the campaign, pointed out that realization of the offer will mean that for every dollar contributed by Richmond and Virginia three additional dollars will be brought into the State to establish an educational unit that should care for most of the university's needs during the next generation.

Negro College Graduates

(Clifton Forge Daily Review)

The six Negro colleges of Virginia in the next few days will graduate 448 men and women with degrees won by four years or more of college work, according to a survey just completed by the Commission in Interracial Co-operation. The degrees to be conferred will be bachelor of arts, 102; bachelor of science, 320; master of arts, 10; master of science, 9; bachelor of divinity, 5; bachelor of theology, 2.

During the year these six colleges enrolled 1,368 men and 1,470 women, a total of 2,838. In 1926 a Government survey of Negro college enrollment in the State showed 1,729. Thus the current figure represents a gain of 120 per cent in the intervening 15 years.

Virginia State College at Ettrick is the largest Negro institution in the State with an enrollment of 1,092 and 177 graduates this year. The next largest is Hampton Institute with 925 enrolled and 156 graduates. Third largest is Virginia Union University, Richmond, with 671 enrolled and 107 graduates. The others are Bishop Payne Divinity School, Petersburg; St. Paul Normal, Lawrenceville, and Virginia Theological Seminary, Lynchburg.

The Negro race is making strides in education and is due commendation for this fact.

Hampton Institute Sells Farm to War Department for $155,000

HAMPTON, Va.—The sale of the 770-acre farm at Hampton Institute, known as Shellbanks, to the War Department for $155,000, as a national defense measure in the expansion of Langley Field, was announced last week by Dr. Malcolm S. MacLean, president of the school.

The addition of this property will make Langley Field one of the largest military air bases in the world.

Hampton's capital outlay on the property and buildings was said to have been $225,000. There are at present eleven farm buildings on the site, including a brick dormitory for agriculture students.

To Buy Tabb Farm

Dr. MacLean announced also that the institute will purchase the seventy-three acre Tabb Farm, which adjoins the campus, to take care of the school of agriculture. This will be converted into a model farm and new buildings will be erected immediately, he said. The former farm was four and a half miles from the campus.

Tentative plans of the War Department call for the immediate construction of a cantonment area at Shellbanks. The Twenty-first Aviation Engineers, 2,200 men, and the First Chemical Company will immediately take over the property.

Work Underway

Work has already begun on standard mobilization frame buildings for the men. A seventy-acre plot in the northeast corner of the farm may be used to extend the runways of the field.

The farm, situated on Back River, was originally a plantation of 350 acres and was a gift to the school from Mrs. Mary Hemenway of Boston in 1878. Gifts by others increased the acreage to 872. Other sales were made to Langley Field several years ago when that airport was undergoing modernization changes.

Hampton Gets $7,500 Grant For Expansion

HAMPTON INSTITUTE—The General Education Board, a philanthropic organization founded by John D. Rockefeller in 1902, has granted Hampton Institute $7,500 to assist the institute in setting up one of the most extensive student personnel and guidance systems in any Negro institution of higher learning, it was announced yesterday by Dr. Malcolm S. MacLean, president of Hampton Institute.

This appropriation will aid Hampton in securing a highly trained co-ordinator of personnel and guidance, and provide for help in setting up a statistical service, doing test scoring, analysis and evaluation of some of the program for a period of two years. Hampton Institute will assume the ongoing expenses of the system at the end of this period.

"It is our considered opinion that only by a fully integrated personnel system ranging from selection of students through continuous four-year diagnostic study and vocational, educational, and personal guidance to placement and follow-up in the field after graduation, can Hampton accomplish the development of effective eduaction of Negro youth," says Dr. MacLean.

Can Avoid Wastage

"Only in this way," he continues, "can Hampton avoid the wastage of misplaced effort in wrong directions, replacing abstraction and unreality of its edutional processes with reality, working towards adequate placement of its graduates in the fields in which they are trained, and developing a curricular program that will accomplish these ends."

In his announcement of the new guidance program, Dr. MacLean continued: "We assume that only by the development of such a system can we train modern personally balanced, well adjusted, and competent teachers and community leaders and educate these in the methods and procedure of diagnostic study of case histories, cumulative records, and able teaching in the elementary and secondary school.

"It is clear that, while we know in general that Negroes have many identical skills and abilities, academic, musical, artistic, manipulative, financial, and social with the whites, nevertheless scientific evidences as gathered by the use of well-known techniques established in some white colleges is at present almost entirely lacking."

Dr. MacLean announced that Dean of Instruction R. O'Hara Lanier, Dr. Flemmie P. Kittrell, dean of women; the new co-ordinator, and he, will supervise the new program and will move immediately toward a consolidation of the six existing and different record-keeping offices on campus and begin a personnel and guidance service that, they hope, may serve as a model and guide to other Negro higher institutions.

The General Education Board grant also provides that able young men and women from Hampton and other colleges will be trained to become personnel co-ordinators in other institutions and that, in the meantime, the program will do a thorough job in instructing future undergraduate teachers in personnel methods. It will further help vastly in bringing about a distribution of the Hampton student body to those areas of occupational training which are most in line with their basic, measured interests and abilities.

The United States Employment Service, says Dr. MacLean, has suggested that, as soon as Hampton has set up an adequate personnel service, it may use this system as a laboratory in the revision and checking of all diagnostic measurements in the vocational training field.

Negro To Supervise Belgian Building Assembly At Union

APR 26 1941 Savannah Journal-Savannah, Ga.

By SIMEON BOOKER, JR.

RICHMOND, Va — (ANP) — Here's a story that the metropolitan newspapers overlooked somehow or other.

Prof. Charles T. Russell, Virginia Union's superintendent of buildings and grounds, will supervise the actual construction of the Belgian World's Fair building on the Union campus here. The famous Belgian architect, Dr. Van Kuyck, will make advisory trips here at various times but the Negro architect will be on hand 24 hours a day.

APR 26 1941

Architectural work is nothing new to Prof. Russell. He was the first Negro certified architect in the state passing the exams more than 20 years ago. He has designed and supervised constructions of the buildings on the Union campus. At Tuskegee under Dr. Booker T. Washington, Prof. Russell was the head of the construction department and was very close friend of the educator.

APR 26 1941

Prof. Russell has been at Virgini Union since 1907. He is member of both the Virginia Society of Architects and the Professional Engineers, Architects, and Land and Surveyors association.

The beautiful $700,000 structure orginally designed as a one building college is now being dismantled and the material shipped to the Union campus here. Almost 50 trucks have arrived already but according to Architect Russell, the actual construction will not begin until about the middle of May.

The drive to secure funds for the re-erection of the Belgium building is progressing in all sections of the country. Friends of the school are being urged to aid in the bringing of the landmark to the historic Union campus.

Hits South's Wastage Of Human Resources

Savannah Journal Savannah, Ga.

HAMPTON INSTITUTE, Va.—(SNS)—Stating that "the whole American process of handling its Negro problem is a fundamental violation of both democracy and intellectual freedom," Dr. Malcolm S. MacLean, president of Hampton Institute, told 200 professors and college deans in New York last week that "this system is an enormous wastage of human resources, a wastage that no nation, certainly no democracy, can afford."

MAY 10 1941

NEW YORK—Stating that "the whole American process of handling its Negro problem is a fundamental violation of both democracy and intellectual freedom," Dr. Malcolm S. McLean, president of Hampton Institute, told 200 professors and college deans recently that "this system is an enormous wastage of human resources, a wastage that no nation, certainly no democracy, can afford."

Speakisg under the auspices of the American Committee on Democracy and Intellectual Freedom at the Columbia University Men's Faculty Club Dr. MacLean told his audience what he had learned of "Negro Higher Education" in his first eight months as president of Hampton Institute.

With these fresh impressions of an old campaigner in a new field of action and the research and daily exploration of the general field of Negro higher education as his background, the Hampton president declared that the South was the Number One Economic Problem of the nation, because "it has wasted many of its physical resources and spent so much energy 'keeping the Negro in his place' instead of managing and developing both its physical and human resources, both white and Negro."

The dam that holds the Negro back today is made up of many masses of materials, he said. First is that attitudinal complex of prejudice and fear arising from the "high visibility" of a dark skin in a largely light colored world of human animals.

Exposes Fantasies

Blasting the "strange beliefs and fantasies" that have arisen because of the differences in pigmentation among humans, Dr. MacLean said that the whole body of research on the Negro by scholars of both races, winds up with these conclusions in regard to mental ability:

"That experimentation to date has neither demonstrated that there are any inherent mental differences between American Negroes and American whites, that Negroes of very superior intelligence emerge when environmental conditions are propitious, that differences in intelligence are a matter of individual rather than rarial differences, and that any program looking towards the development of the American Negro must be based on the assumption that the race is fully capable in mental ability, of assuming a position of equality is the social order."

Negro colleges, even now, do more cooperative planning and working together than do the white, he continued, and "if they continue this trend, they will lead rather than follow the white institutions of higher education."

One statement that evoked much comment was his plea for a "two-way flow" of teaching personnel. Dr. MacLean feels that, because of the extraordinary contribution that many Negroes have to make to Northern white college and university students, these colleges would profit greatly by employing Negro professors. "I can visualize totalitarian administrators cringing in horror from such a proposal, but in democracy it makes the most obvious common sense."

He further suggested that the Negro colleges invite more white teachers to take leave of absence to lecture and give classes, and that the white universities and colleges reciprocate.

Better Break for the Negroes Partly Urged by Hampton Head

Dayton, Ohio

APR 28 1941

Malcolm MacLean as an orator is something like a bee. Almost every sentence carries a sting that he developed early as a copy editor for The Minneapolis Tribune and later sharpened as director of the University of Minnesota's General College. Since last September the gray-haired, handsome educator has headed Hampton Institute in Virginia, which resembles General College in that both stress vocational schooling for students who aren't likely to have much use for pure academics, but differs in that Hampton is Negro. It has turned out such great figures as the educator Booker T. Washington and the soprano Dorothy Maynor.

At Hampton, MacLean has busied himself exploring the Negro field, visiting more than a score of other schools, and boning up on research. In New York last week he unburdened himself of a few first impressions in a stinging speech at a dinner given him by the American Committee for Democracy and Intellectual Freedom, sounding board of 60-odd liberal leaders in education. Some of his opinions:

¶ "While we make no bones about our fondness for black, brown, and white horses, dogs, cats, or birds, we do wrap up in the same kind of differences in pigmentation among humans all kinds of strange beliefs and fantasies."

¶ Research shows that the nation's 13,000,000 Negroes are inherently no less intelligent than whites; given proper environment, they produce their share of geniuses. What cut down Negro IQ's and expose the race to syphilis, tuberculosis, and pneumonia are poverty, poor diet, and "rotten living conditions," which in turn are "largely attributable to the stupidities of fear, prejudice, and superstition."

APR 28 1941

¶ Negroes have taken the lead from whites in national and regional cooperation among colleges, as a "democratic retreat from the rivalry, jealousy, and wasteful competition between dear old Siwash and dear old Hogwash."

¶ As one step toward interracial understanding, Negro and white colleges should work out a "two-way flow" of personnel, with more Negro teachers lecturing at white schools and more whites at Negro schools.

St. Paul School to Give Degree; Name Changed

NOV 3 1941

LAWRENCEVILLE, Va. — The board of trustees of the St. Paul Normal and Industrial School in a special meeting on Tuesday unanimously voted to raise the work of the school to a four-year undergraduate level, granting the bachelor of science degree.

It was also voted, in view of the emphasis put on technical training, to change the name of the fifty-three-year-old institution to St. Paul Polytechnic Institute. At present fifteen trades are offered at the school.

Courses Affected in '42

While all of the trade courses will gradually be placed on the college level, the plan for 1942-43 is to advance the work to four years in carpentry, automobile mechanics, masonry, painting and interior decorating, tailoring, engineering, home economics, cosmetology and secretarial science.

The administration has also been authorized to raise the work in the teacher-training division to the four-year level by adding the junior and senior college years.

Plant to Be Improved

The changes in the trade curriculum were recommend by J. T. Thornton, executive vice-principal of the school, as the result of a two-year study of other technical schools and the need of the youth of today.

NOV 15 1941

Funds have been provided for a new dining hall and kitchen, an addition to the trade buildings and the remodeling and renovating of other buildings. A model dairy barn will be erected and will form the first unit of a future agriculture group.

TO GIVE TALK AT INSTITUTE

Augusta Savage, Negro sculptor whose recent work, "Lift Every Voice and Sing," was a featured work at the New York fair, will speak in Ogden hall, Hampton institute, on "Art in Everyday Life" at 8:15 Tuesday night.

Miss Savage has won scholarships which have permitted her to study first in this country and then in France and Germany for four years. Some of her pieces of sculpture have been exhibited in leading European and American galleries. She is president of the first art gallery in America devoted to the exhibition and sale of the works of Negro artists.

With little formal education, she left Green Cove Springs, Fla., in 1920 for New York to study art and arrived there with $4.60 to her name. Today her works have become known internationally, and her most recent piece of sculpture, which stood in front of the Contemporary Arts building at the New York World's Fair, has brought her added recognition.

She has been aided in her work and study by the Carnegie foundation, the Rosenwald fund, by Cooper union and Fontainbleau, France.

The seventh child in a family of 14, the young sculptress' first efforts in art began with modeling in native clay at the mud-pie age. That her art will endure for many years is a fact attested by most critics.

Unionites Deplore Circulation of "Cowardly" Letter

RICHMOND—Apropos the current nationwide controversy over the appointment of Dr. J. M. Ellison as executive vice-president of the Virginia Union University students at the school have joined the discussions with an unqualified endorsement of the professor and have also flayed in no uncertain terms the circulation of an anonymous letter to former students of the school in an effort to void the appointment.

This was the major development of the week in a controversy which may array the leading educators of the country on opposite sides. These leaders, including well known professors and administrators in the field of Negro education, have been expressing their sentiments in public utterances and in private conversations.

In an open statement released through the Student Senate, spokesmen for the student body, students of Virginia Union University this week condemned as "vicious and slanderous," an unsigned letter which is being circulated among approximately 3,000 alumni of the school branding Dr Ellison as incapable of performing the duties placed upon him by his recent promotion to the post of executive vice-president of the University.

STATEMENT

APR 26 1941

Taking their stand, after consideration of all of the issues involved, the students made the following statements:

"(1) We feel that the said letter was intended to reflect upon the ability of the Board of Trustees which has so ably served Union down through the years.

"(2) We feel that it is a reflection upon the alumni of Virginia Union University that one of its members should take such an underhand means (libel through U. S. mails) to defame the character of a person who has so nobly and capably served our school.

APR 26 1941

"(3) In so far as the attitudes and opinions of the students are brought in, we feel that the statement does not reflect the attitudes or opinions of the better thinking students of our institution.

RECOGNIZES PROMOTION

The conclusion of the statement issued by the students reads as follows: "We are glad to acknowledge and recognize the promotion of Dr. Ellison because we feel that his faithfulness, diligence, and efficiency in serving the institution warrants such recognition.

"We deplore the underhand tactics of the individual who wrote the letter because the attack is not a true picture of the situation of Dr. Ellison's achievements. The cowardliness of printing such a record of epithets without signing one's name is inexcusable."

APR 26 1941

The statement was signed by William F. Richardson, senior, of Richmond, president of the Student Government Association.

GRADUATING STUDENTS TO HEAR DR. LEE

213 to Receive Diplomas at Hampton Institute

Dr. J. R. E. Lee, president of Florida Agricultural and Mechanical college, will be the principal speaker at the Hampton institute commencement exercises May 28. The title of his address will be "America's Bases of Permanent Defense."

Now in its 73rd yar, Hampton institute will award diplomas and degrees to 213 graduates.

Dr. Lee became president of Florida A. & M. in 1924 after many years of experience in the field of education. Under his leadership, the college has grown to an institution of more than 48 buildings on a campus of aproximately 400 acres.

He received his bachelor of arts degree from Bishop college in Texas in 1889. Since then he has taken further study at the University of Chicago, University of Wisconsin University of Minnesota, and Cornell, and was awarded an honorary M. A. by his alma mater in 1903 and an LL.D. by both Wilberforce and Howard universities in 1918 and 1937, respectively.

The first Negro ever to teach at Bishop college, he soon became heads of the mathematics department at Tuskegee institute and then supervisor of mathematics and state educational agent for Benedict college, Columbia, S. C.

Tuskegee recalled Dr. Lee to direct its academic department, and during this time he was closely associated with Hampton institute's most famous alumnus, Dr. Booker T. Washington, and assisted him in working out many projects.

President Lee later became principal of Lincoln high school in Kansas City, Mo., and instituted a program in secondary education that increased the enrollment from 300 to 600 and the faculty from 17 to 30. He then became field secretary of the National Urban league and, unable to stay out of the teaching profession very long, was made president of Florida A. & M. in 1924.

Dr. Lee is a member of the National Education association, American Association of School Administrators, and the American Teachers association.

DETT BRINGS BENNETT CHOIR TO INSTITUTE

Dr. R. Nathaniel Dett, Negro composer, pianist, and conductor, will bring his Bennett college choir to Hampton institute tonight for a recital in Ogden hall at 8:15.

Dr. Dett, four years director of music at Bennett college, a girls' school in Greensboro, N. C., will appear at the institute under the auspices of the Hampton Roads branch of the National Association of College Women.

The youngest of three brothers, Dr. Dett was born of educated parents in Drummondville, Ontario. As a boy, he used to follow his two older brothers to the home of the local music teacher, a Mrs. Marshall, organist of the First Presbyterian church, and listen while their lessons were in progress. Finally, attracted by his obvious interest, Mrs. Marshall gave the young music lover free lessons. But he often taxed her patienece by changing his studies "to make them sound better," as he explains it.

Enthused by the playing and singing of the late Gerald Tyler, for many years director of music, Sumner high school, St. Louis, but who was then a student at Oberlin. Dett entered the Oberlin conservatory where he graduated in 1908. It was here that he was the first of his race to receive a bachelor of music degree in original composition.

For three years Dett was director of music at Lane college, Jackson, Tenn., where he wrote "Magnolia," his first piano suite, and for the following years became director of music, Lincoln institute, Jefferson City, Mo. While at this institution he composed his "In the Bottoms" suite which contains the famous Juba dance.

In 1931, he accepted the position as head of the music department at Hampton institute. It was here that he wrote "Listen to the Lambs" to supply the need of the Hampton A Cappella choir. It is of interest to add at this point that the soprano, Miss Dorothy Maynor, was eight years a member of this choir under Dett, and sang the solo part of "Listen to the Lambs" on the European and American tours of that organization.

He has written in all forms for the piano, solo voice, violin, choir, and orchestra. Perhaps his best known works are in choral form, some of which were recently sung by the Bennett choir on a coast-to-coast program of a broadcasting system.

While on sabbatical leave from Hampton and studying at Harvard university, Dett won the Frances Boote music prize and the Bowdoin literary award and medal.

During the summer of 1929, Dett studied in Paris under Madame Nadia Boulanger. His latest work is "The Ordering of Moses," an oratorio for orchestra, chorus and four solo voices. This work had its premiere at the Cincinnati festival of music, May, 1937. Both text and music are of his creation.

Say Circular Unworthy Of Consideration

MAY 10 1941

Mrs. McQuinn Defended; Use of Name Condemned

RICHMOND — The executive committee of the Virginia Union University Alumni Association has condemned the recent anonymously circulated communication addressed to the board of trustees of the university as being "entirely unworthy of consideration," it was announced by the committee after its annual meeting which was held last week here at the university.

The committee also expressed confidence in the executive committee of the trustee board and pledged the full-hearted support of the entire alumni to the new administration of the school and to the board of trustees in its operation of the institution.

EXPRESS CONFIDENCE

The group, in no uncertain terms, condemned the use of the name of Mrs. H. J. McGuinn by the senders of the letter, and not only expressed confidence in Mrs. McGuinn, but stated categorically that she had nothing to do with the composition or the sending out of the scurrilous communication.

MAY 10 1941

This letter, which was reported in the Journal and Guide in a recent issue, was sent to all former students of Virginia Union University and purported to give reasons why Dr. J. M. Ellison (since that time elevated to the presidency of the university) was not qualified to fill that post.

The letter was simply signed "An Alumnus," and asked that the receiver send his protest against Dr. Ellison to Mrs. McGuinn, who is secretary of the national alumni association.

REGISTER PROTEST

A storm of protest was registered by friends of Dr. Ellison and subsequently, upon the retirement of Dr. W. J. Clark as president of Virginia Union University, the trustees of the school unanimously selected Dr. Ellison for the post. He will assume full charge on June 15.

MAY 10 1941

Members of the Alumni's executive board who attended the Richmond session were: the Rev. C. L. Franklin of New York City, Dr. J. W. Pierce of Suffolk, Dr. Theodore George of Washington, D. C., G. W. C. Brown of Norfolk, Dr. E. E. Bassett, Mrs. M. J. McGuinn, Mrs. Clarissa V. Dillard, the Rev. C. S. McCall and Wiley A. Hall of Richmond.

Decorating Open Field For Negroes, Says Prof

FEB 1 1941

Courier

HAMPTON INSTITUTE, Va., Jan. 30—Negroes should explore the interior decorating and furniture trades more fully, said Roy Williams, head of the furniture trades department of Hampton Institute, before a large audience in the Mount Pleasant School, Henderson, N. C., today.

Stressing its wide opportunities, Mr. Williams went on to show that decorating offers the Negro an opportunity to teach, to know a trade that brings large financial rewards or to run a personal business at a profit.

There are many unexplored avenues in this trade that pay dividends to the skilled Negro, the Hampton Institute teacher said. First is upholstering, which is in greatest demand. Another is the understanding of fine cabinet work and the knowledge of the uses and beauty of period designs.

Mr. Williams told his audience that proper understanding and use of color and the harmonization of furnishings to fit a personality, is becoming more in favor every day as a factor in health and mental poise.

SALE SEEN AS DEFENSE MOVE

Historic Tract Will Be Used To Expand Langley Field

JAN 4 194

HAMPTON INSTITUTE, VA.—Dr. Malcolm S. MacLean, president of Hampton Institute last Monday announced the sale of the school's 770 acre farm, "Shellbanks," to the War Department, as a national defense measure in the expansion of Langley Field.

The addition of these adjoining 770 acres will make Langley Field one of the largest military airbases in the world.

"Shellbanks," or the Hemenway Farm, as it is officially known, has an interesting history. Once a famed plantation of 350 acres, situated on the beautiful Back River of Hampton, it was given to Hampton Institute in 1878 by Mrs. Mary Hemenway of Boston. It has since been added to by many gifts from friends of Hampton Institute.

Mrs. Lydia Maria Child left a legacy which brought in the adjoining plantation "Canebrake," and gifts of Miss Ellen F. Mason of Boston and others brought the total acreage of "Shellbanks" to 852 acres at the beginning of the century. Other sales were made to Langley Field several years ago when that airport was undergoing modernization changes.

The plantation "Shellbanks" once played host to George Washington. Today it again jumps into the national spotlight as a vital factor in the drive for national defense.

The sale price was $155,000. Hampton Institute's capital outlay on the property and buildings has been $225,000.

There are at present 11 farm buildings on the property, including a brick dormitory for Hampton Institute agriculture students.

Dr. MacLean announces that the Institute will purchase the 73 acre "Tabb Farm," directly across the county road from its present campus or "Whipple Farm" to take care of the school of agriculture. This property lies between the Hampton city line and the Chamberlin Country Club and adjoins the school. The former farm was 4½ miles from the campus. "Tabb Farm" will be converted into a model farm for students of scientific agriculture and new buildings will be erected immediately.

Tentative plans of the War Department call for the immediate construction of a cantonment area at "Shellbanks." The 21st Aviation Engineers, 2200 men and the First Chemical Company, decontamination, will immediately take over the property. Work has already begun on standard mobilization lumber frame buildings for the men. A 70 acre plot in the northeast corner of the farm may be used to extend the runways of the field.

Dairy and farm equipment is already being moved. First used for wheat farming, "Shellbanks" later developed into a stock and dairy farm with corn and hay crops—as a means for more efficient training of its students.

HAMPTON INSTITUTE, Jan. 14.—Representative Negro builders from the entire Eastern seaboard section of the United States have been invited to attend the fifteenth Hampton Builders' Conference at Hampton Institute, Hampton, on Feb. 10, 11 and 12.

The conference will revolve primarily around the problems of the Negro mechanic, journeyman, carpenter, builder, contractor, engineer and architect as they affect the construction industry in the national defense program.

The first Hampton Builders' Conference was held in January, 1923. A direct outcome of this meeting was the organization of the National Builders Association, which still holds its meetings in conjunction with the Hampton Builders' Conference.

FEB 8 1941

HAMPTON INSTITUTE, Va.—Newbold Morris, president of the council of the City of New York, was elected to the Board of Trustees of Hampton Institute at its meeting on Saturday, Feburary 1, at Hampton.

Henry Scattergood, Philadelphia, chairman; William Jay Schieffelin, New York City; Frank W. Darling, Hampton, Va; W. Cameron Forbes, Boston; Chester B. TRANSITION AT HAMPTON

JAN 1 8 1941

SINCE THE INAUGURATION of Dr. Malcolm S. MacLean as president of Hampton Institute a few months ago, several important announcements have come out of the famous Virginia institution. The first of these was on the conference among white and colored leaders from all parts of the country on how to integrate the Negro into the defense program of our government, at which time some plain talking was done by Hon. Newbold Morris, president of the City Council of New York, and several other speakers.

Since that time announcements have been made of the sale of the school farm to the U. S. Army for an addition to Langley Field, the No. 1 military airport of the East; and later of the resignation of Donald Fenn as head of the Department of Agriculture at Hampton. Mr. Fenn is a white man and it is to be hoped that Dr. MacLean will see the wisdom of promoting one of his Negro assistants, perhaps Gideon [illegible] Smith to head this department. Such a move would be evidence of the new president's sincerity in giving qualified Negroes, graduates and other promotions without regards to race or color.

Unfortunately, however, Dr. MacLean has made one appointment which does not seem to indicate that his policy will be any difference from that of his immediate predecessors. We refer to the naming of David Apter as assistant to the president in charge of public relations. Mr. Apter is an experienced newspaperman but he is of the white race, and we cannot see the wisdom of appointing a white man to such a position in a Negro school when many qualified Negroes are available for such a post. A few months before Dr. MacLean came to Hampton, the Southern Workman, long the official organ of Hampton Institute was suspended and its editor, Isaac Fisher, a Negro, was fired because of a shortage of funds. Mr. Fisher also served as director of public relations at Hampton.

Evidently the financial condition at Hampton has improved but this fact doesn't seem to help the faithful Negro members of the faculty. Dr. MacLean has a splendid opportunity to take the leadership in the fight for real economic democracy for the Negro, and we sincerely hope that he will grasp this opportunity by appointing more Negroes to head departments in the institution of which he is the head.

Hampton Asks That Trade Students Be Allowed To Work With Builders For Month

FEB 15 1941

Staff Correspondence

HAMPTON INSTITUTE, Va. — President Malcolm S. MacLean called upon delegates to the 15th Hampton Builders' Conference at the annual banquet Monday night for help and advice in building a better trade school at Hampton Institute and invited them to take students on their jobs as internes for a period of a month or more.

A. A. Alexander, nationall known contractor from Des Moines, Iowa, and W. H. Aiken of Atlanta, Ga., contractor, indicted several Negro schools which refused to permit Negro contractors to build their dormitories, libraries, and other buildings.

SPEAKERS FEB 15 1941

Other speakers included Edwin S. Lewis, executive secretary of the Baltimore Urban League, who recommended interneships for students to study trade unionism and labor organization; H. Whittimore Brown of Concord, Mass., organizer of the builders conference in 1923; and C. D. Smith who was engineer for the Aberdeen Gardens Project.

The Tuesday morning sessison was featured by an address on "The Relationship of Unions to Building Trades Craftsmen," by Mr. Lewis. He reviewed the struggles in Baltimore leading to recognition of Negro skilled mechanics by unions and contractors and getting them placed on defense projects.

The speaker pointed out that there are 200 organized skilled Negro mechanics in Baltimore, 81 of whom are employed on five housing projects. There are 131 Negro carpenters at work at Fort Meade earning $95 per week.

MAY GET TUSKEGEE JOB

Mr. Alexander pointed out that the government reserved the right to award contracts by geographical location. A recent investigation by him in Washington revealed that of 1,900 large and small contracting firms, listed for government contracts, only ninety of them have as yet received any consideration.

He said it was his understanding that if the government established separate military camps for Negroes, Negro contractors will be considered for the jobs. This is particularly true with regard to the construction of an aviation center for the race at Tuskegee.

The discussion leaders pointed out that leadership holds the key to the solution of discrimination against Negro skilled mechanics.

TO ATLANTA IN 1942

P. V. Jewell, dean of the mechanical industries, at South Carolina State A. and M. College, Orangeburg, S. C., presided and A. A. Alexander substituted as discussion leader for Frederick Messiah of Philadelphia. Howard B. Woodson, Washington engineer, summarized the morning session in the absence of Dr. J. A. Jackson.

From their humble beginning in 1883, Negro managed building and loan associations have grown to the point where today over $3,500,000 is invested in 48 Negro managed building and loan associations. These associations have resources ranging from $3,000 to almost $500,000. Six are members of the Federal Home Loan Bank.

Hampton Man Tells of Research with Mosquito

JAN 4 - 1941

HAMPTON INSTITUTE, Va.—Next summer when the annoying mosquitoes draw near to taste your blood, you probably will not recall that the females—as in many other kinds of animals (man not excepted)—are the more deadly of the species, for only the females bite, so far as mosquito experts know now.

Nor, will you be cheered to learn that though male mosquitoes have better vision than females, both sexes have the ability to see many colors, including the ultraviolet rays of light which are invisible to human eyes. Maybe that's why you can't hide in the dark.

Attracted by Warmth

In a series of experiments on chemical forces and factors that serve to attract mosquitoes, whether the insects like it or not, Dr. Kenneth Crooks, professor of biology at Hampton Institute, has made some curious observations on the pesky winged insects that spoil your moonlit summer evenings.

He found that most mosquitoes do not bit when and if the temperature is much below 50 degree Fahrenheit, but that they are attracted to warmth when they are at such low temperatures.

Prefer Dim Lights

Mosquitoes also were found to be attracted by humidity or moisture when in dry places and from bright lights to dim lights. The mosquitoes used in Dr. Crooks's experiments were clearly color blind to red, but could see yellow, blue, green and ultraviolet.

When given a chance to select the color they preferred, female mosquitoes always choose the various shades of blue rather than black or any other color. So choose your dress accordingly.

As for their attraction to chemicals, mosquitoes were not specially interested in any of nearly seventy common organic and inorganic chemicals tried, nor did they seem to bother about body odor, fresh blood, or perspiration.

Addresses Scientists

At the meetings of the Entomological Society of America in Philadelphia on December 28, Professor Crooks told the other scientists that though many other dangerous insects such as peach moth, Japanese beetle and many kinds of locusts can be controlled by traps using chemical baits or lights of special colors, mosquitoes refuse to be attracted to light or bait in sufficient number for traps to be used successfully as controls.

So we poor laymen must still depend on the conventional methods of mosquito control and learn to swat 'em better.

Hampton Institute Activities Shown In Pictorial Graph

JAN 4 1941

HAMPTON INSTITUTE, Va.—An interesting 16-page pictorial pamphlet—"Hampton Today"—which dramatizes, in pictures, a story of the many activities of Hampton Institute, has been published by the school to commemorate the inauguration of Dr. Malcolm S. MacLean as its sixth president.

EMPLOYMENT FIGURES

One of the features of "Hampton Today" is a vivid pictograph of the employment percentages of Hampton Institute graduates in the last five years. Designed by William H. Moses, Jr. of the Institute faculty, it shows that 84.2 per cent of all graduates of the college were known to be placed in employment after graduation. These figures are unusually high. The pictograph breaks down the percentages into the various schools and shows that the School of Nursing, which has now been transferred to the Dixie Hospital, placed 90 per cent of its graduates, the School of Agriculture 89.1 per cent, and the 5 year degree course in trades 87.5 per cent.

The booklet lists Booker T. Washington, one of the school's first graduates, and Dorothy Maynor among famous graduates.

In a special message on page two, Dr. MacLean states that "at Hampton Institute, we are living a fuller and richer life than I have seen on any campus in America," and extends a welcome and invitation to visit the campus and classes.

Shake-Up in Ag. School at Hampton

JAN 18 1941

HAMPTON INSTITUTE, Va.—Dr. Malcolm S. MacLean, president of Hampton Institute, has announced that a program designed to reorganize the school's agricultural department to more adequately meet today's needs, has been instituted by a committee representing students, faculty, alumni and administration.

Donald Fisher Fenn, associate professor and director of the division of agriculture, has resigned, effective at the end of the academic year. His post will not be filled until Hampton can determine the exact steps reorganization will follow. Mr. Fenn came to Hampton in 1920 and was appointed director in 1926.

Moberg in Charge

Eldon S. Moberg, white, associate professor of dairying, has been elected operating chairman of the division by the agriculture student body and faculty. He will be in charge of all details of management until Hampton's future course in this field has been completely mapped out.

Merle S. Klinck, professor of agricultural engineering, was elected to head a planning commission, to decide what the future curriculum, teaching methods and policies will be. He will also work with representatives of the student body, faculty and administration in planning the new agricultural plant of the Tabb farm.

Precipitated by the recent sale of one of the institute's farms, the 770 acre Shellbanks, this modernization program will move Hampton into many new fields for agriculturists. Dr. MacLean last week conferred with the U.S. Secretary of Agriculture, Claude R. Wickert, and with outstanding specialists in agriculture.

More Service Planned

John B. Pierce, field agent for the Department of Agriculture, who has been stationed at Hampton Institute for 20 years, arranged Dr. MacLean's conferences with key government officials.

Mr. Pierce says that the contemplated changes "will put the department in a position to function in a larger and more timely way in meeting the needs of students and will prove of more service to the farmers of the South."

Founder's Day Program Hears Address By Dr. G. Lake Imes

"The South respected and admired Booker T. Washington but it loved Dr. Robert Russa Moten," declared Dr. G. Lake Imes, for 25 years associated with Tuskegee Institute, Sunday night as he delivered the Founder's Day address of the Philadelphia branch of the Hampton Alumni Association at Mutchmore Baptist Church, 1728 Montgomery avenue.

Dr. Imes spoke on "Booker T. Washington and Robert R. Moton—Hampton's Great Contribution to America."

God endowed Dr. Washington "with a mind that has not been equalled in America," Dr. Imes said, as he pointed out the contributions of the founder of Tuskegee, not only whites get along without Negroes, as pointed out at the Atlanta Exposition.

CONSIDERED A GENIUS

White people looked on Dr. Washington as a genius, as unique, but to a great extent he aved them, they considered him too 'smart,' Dr. Imes said.

Southern people, therefore, did not love him as much as they respected him. But, when Dr. Moton succeeded Booker T. in 191 , he found a way to make the South love him.

"Among other things, Major Moton never let the South down; he never said anything away from the South which he did not say in the South, and he always gave the impression that he was willing to return South and work things out there together," Dr. Imes said.

Dr. Moton also contributed greatly by conserving and expanding the plant and program started by Dr. Washington, and brought the institute from a "glorified high school," to a college, according to the speaker.

MARKED 73rd YEAR

The Founder's Day program marked the 73rd anniversary of Hampton Institute, and similar services were held in different parts of the country.

Roy L. Cordery presided here, with Mrs. Ethel L. Banks, chairman of the program committee. The Rev. Evandon T. Lewis gave welcome remarks; Miss Bertha Wilson read the "Armstrong Memorandum," the last words written by General Samuel Chapman Armstrong, founder of Hampton; James C. Burley sang Malotte's "The Lord's Prayer; Preston H. King, president of the local Hamptonites, told of the local program. The Mutchmore Baptist choir, under Mrs. Elizabeth Conley, furnished the music.

"Learn By Doing" is New Program of McLean, Wants Gabbing Cut Out

"Learning in the open field of experience, in real situations, under expert guidance and instruction, not in the classroom with a piece of chalk and a great deal of gab," was declared as the purpose of the new administration at Hampton Institute by its recently elected President Malcolm McLean last Sunday afternoon.

Dr. McLean, who was the guest speaker on the New York Hampton Founder's Day program at the Church of the Master, 122nd Street and Morningside Ave., spoke on "Hampton Moves Forward." He emphasized the need of co-operation among all those who had the welfare of the institute at heart,—administration, faculty, student body and alumni.

"We are beginning to develop a personnel system whereby we can study everything about everybody who comes to Hampton. You can't know what to teach, how and when, until you know whom you are teaching," he declared.

FEB 1 194

Important problems now facing theadministration at Hampton, Dr. McLean said, include the raising of a scholarship endowment fund of $16,000 by June; a placement bureau for Hampton graduates through which desirable jobs will be found for individuals with trained hands and minds, and an interested, alert and co-operative alumni throughout the country.

In addition, Dr. McLean lamented the existence of intra-racial prejudices on the part of student organizationsand groups on the campus. He said that Southern students discriminated against students from the North; boys discriminated against girls, and discrimination by American students against students "from the islands and Africa," was rampant.

Plans for the reorganization of agriculture at Hampton was made possible by the sale of Shelby Farm to the Federal Government, he said, and the reorganization of the individual schools, total co-operative planning by all are among the development plans now being pushed forward to make Hampton "a great institution in the field of agriculture," Dr. McLean asserted.

Dr. McLean was introduced by Lester B .Granger, assistant executive secretary, National Urban League. Other participants in the program were: the Rev. James Robinson, pastor of the Church of the Master, and Chauncey Northern, Northern Choral Club; Miss Lorraine Booker, Mrs. Frauline Alford and the Hampton Quartette, which rendered musical selections. Mrs. Alford gave a dramatic reading.

Woman's Belgian Building Fund Gift Reaches $25,000

A $14,000 personal contribution to the Belgian Friendship Building campaign fund, augmenting a previous contribution of $11,000, was announced today from New York by S. E. Hening of the American Baptist Home Mission Society, who is treasurer of the board of Virginia Union University.

The $25,000 has been given by an annonymous donor—a woman of New Jersey—interested in the advancement of Negro education. The $11,000 gift was announced several weeks ago. When informed of the pressing need for more and immediate donations if the building in its entirety is to be obtained for the university here, the benefactor carried her total gift to $25,000, already paid in full.

Such a gift has proved a vigorous stimulant to the campaign, in which Richmond and Virginia have been asked to raise $50,000. Under the chairmanship of Egbert Leigh III, the drive is reported continuing steadily toward its goal. The Baptist churches of the city and State, with the co-operation of other denominations, are giving energetic support to the movement. The alumni of Virginia Union, assisted by the undergraduates and faculty, are working actively for the fund.

Mayor Ambler will speak on behalf of the Belgian Friendship Building next Sunday at 4 P. M. at a public meeting in the First African Baptist Church. He will be presented by Mrs. Alice Pollard Stryker. Special music for the occasion will be provided by the Westwood Junior Quartet and the Harmonizing Four, well known to radio andiences. Preparations are being made at the church for a large attendance, both white and Negro.

On the succeeding Sunday at 9:30 A. M., Governor Price will be heard in a national broadcast endorsing the campaign on the "Wings Over Jordan" program, a regular feature of the CBS network. This event will be rebroadcast over the system of the British Broadcasting Corporation.

Large truck caravans almost daily are bringing additional building material here from the New York World's Fair grounds and actual breaking of ground for reconstruction of the $700,000 Belgian Pavilion is scheduled for April. The exact date has not yet been determined.

SEEK CHANGE IN NSS ACT

Going on record in favor of an amendment to the national social security act which will include domestic laborers and agricultural workers within the benefits of social security, the North Carolina Regional Hampton institute alumni conference closed its annual meeting at Raleigh, N. C., recently

The conference, which attracted 150 delegates from 11 Hampton institute alumni chapters in North Carolina, also asked the national alumni organization to go on record favoring such an amendment to the social security act.

Dr. Malcolm S. MacLean, president of Hampton institute, told the delegates of the many changes that are taking place in the present reorganization of Hampton institute and spoke extensively on the need today of making education practical.

Other speakers were: N. C. Newbold, supervisor of Negro schools for North Carolina, Claude T. Gaddy, superintendent of schools for the city of Raleigh, Don A. Davis, J. W. Mitchell and Dr. Nelson Harris.

The convention also went on record to encourage and actively support the "internship program" for the development of Hampton students and endorsed the new program of the institute.

MacLean Makes 2 Appointments

Dr. Malcolm S. MacLean, president of Hampton institute, announced yesterday the appointment of two teaching fellows, Jessie Dixon Moore and James Albert Allen, in the English department and division of agriculture, respectively.

The woman, who will teach English and do further study in preparation for her master's degree, graduated from Hampton in 1940 and has since been doing substitute teaching in the public schools of Norfolk.

Allen, a specialist in agricultural education, is teaching this subject and supervising students' agricultural projects. A graduate of Hampton in 1923, he also will take further studies in agriculture.

The woman, who is a second generation Hampton graduate — her father having graduated in 1910—was salutatorian of the 1936 class of the Booker T. Washington high school in Norfolk. She majored in English and social studies in the school of secondary education at Hampton and is interested in continuing her career as a teacher in the secondary schools. While at Hampton, she was active in the Negro History society, the Junior Negro Business league, the YWCA, and was a student adviser in 1939.

Since Allen's graduation in 1923 he has served four years in Frederick and Cambridge, Md., as a teacher of agriculture in the high schools; six and a half years at the York County Training school at Yorktown, and most recently spent six and a half years at the Christiansburg Industrial institute at Cambria, Va., where he taught vocational agriculture and was manager of the 169-acre farm at the school. Allen's home is in Yorktown and he is married and has two children.

Mrs. Roosevelt Endorses Drive For Belgian Building Tower

APR 5 - 1941

Friends of Union Seek To Raise $100,000 For R. L. Vann Memorial Tower

RICHMOND — Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt has endorsed the effort now being made by friends of Virginia Union University to secure the Belgian Tower, which was a part of the Belgian Building at the New York World's Fair, now being re-erected on the university's campus here.

Funds now on hand are sufficient to finance the removal and erection of the building without the tower and an effort is being made to raise $100,000 to add the tower to the building when it is completed here.

Mrs. Roosevelt's endorsement stated:

"I am very much interested in the offer made by His Excellency, the Belgian Ambassador, to present the spacious and handsome Belgian World's Fair Buiding to the United States to be used as an addition to Virginia Union University for Negroes at Richmond.

"The proposal to dedicate the artistic Belgian Tower to the best in Negro music as a memorial to that illustrious member of the Negro race, Mr. Robert L. Vann, of Pittsburgh, seems to be very appropriate.

"I am very glad to endorse this most interesting and constructive project."

A MEMORIAL TO VANN

The tower which will be named "The Robert L. Vann Memorial Tower," will be equipped with amplifiers and dedicated to the development of the best in Negro music. No such memorial has so far been erected anywhere in the world to the memory of a colored person.

APR 5 - 1941

Mr. Vann, an alumnus of the university, was editor of The Pittsburgh Courier and had also served as an assistant United States Attorney General.

The remainder of the Belgian Building, as erected here, will serve as a library for the university and will also include a large auditorium and executive offices.

SPONSORS NAMED

APR 5 - 1941

The whole project is sponsored by Mrs. Roosevelt, the Belgian Ambassador at Washington and the Honorable James Hubert Price, Governor of the State of Virginia, as honorary chairmenn.

It is desired by friends of the university that the tower shall be a national contribution of the colored people of the United States in whose behalf Mr. Vann labored for so many years as attorney, publicist, orator, newspaper publisher, and political leader.

A campaign of solicitation is being formulated whereby, through meetings, and other campaign efforts, full opportunities will be given all who wish to share in bringing the Memorial Tower project to realization.

Hampton Institute Opens Vocational Spring Courses

Hampton Institute, one of several Negro colleges which have instituted courses designed to prepare workers for national defense work, will open its spring term of evening vocational classes on Monday.

These courses, inaugurated in July, 1940, at Hampton have the six divisions of the institute working at full speed to train men for national defense work and the courses have graduated 451 men in such fields as automobile mechanics, bricklaying, drafting and blueprint reading, electrical maintenance, forging, machine shop operations, pipefitting, sheet metal, paint spraying, woodworking and carpentry.

Two hundred additional students completed the course yesterday and a new group is to begin training immediately.

Among those who have taken refresher courses are Navy Yard and shipyard employes from Portsmouth, Norfolk and Newport News; regular army and CCC men, as well as private citizens in other fields who are anxious to obtain the necessary training for defense industries.

In addition to these industrial courses offered in the evening, Hampton Institute is co-operating with the NYA and WPA in a program of daytime training in the building trades. These government agencies have already sent five classes to Hampton Institute for this type of training.

Additional plans for a pre-college course offering a general mechanical background for fifty CCC enrollees, who will be sent from the Third Corps Area, have recently been completed. Extensive plans to co-operate with the United States Army in the training of enlisted men at the rate of 100 every eight weeks have already been mapped out, and the first group of soldiers will arrive on the Hampton campus April 14

Negro University Gets Belgian Fair Pavilion

APR 16 1941

The structure, which is to be re-erected on the university grounds, was valued at $400,000. Speakers estimated that the cost of transporting, rebuilding and equipping it would add another $400,000. Of this amount, $100,000 is to be met by an appropriation of the Baptist Education Board. Another $20,000 has been obtained by a campaign in Richmond, leaving $280,000 to be raised.

The Rev. Theodore F. Adams, president of the board of trustees of the university, presided at the dinner. About fifty persons were present.

Alumni Ask Hampton to Resume Music Emphasis

HAMPTON, Va.—Re-establishment of a department of music at Hampton Institute was urged by the alumni association, last week, during its two-day biennial reunion here at which Dr. Albert O. Reid ('03), Baltimore dentist, was elected president.

The group, which declared full endorsement of Hampton's new administration, led by President Malcolm S. MacLean and Dean R. O'Hara Lanier, also proposed a health and recreation center, courses in adult education, a rigid system for the selection of new students and more emphasis on athletics.

NEW HEAD OF VA. UNION

TEN YEARS AGO, few graduates and friends of Virginia Union University would have dreamed that a Negro would be elected to succeed President William J. Clark upon his retirement. Yet so improved have inter-racial relations become in the past decade that the election of Dr. John M. Ellison to the presidency of this famous Richmond, Va. college attracted very little attention outside the Old Dominion.

JUL 10 1941

Virginia Union is one of the schools founded by the American Baptist Home Mission Society of New York and until a few years ago was supported largely by that organization. But in the past few years Negro alumni and friends have been added to the trustee board, as well as replacing whites on the faculty. Dr. Ellison, who has been on the Union faculty for some years, was recently elected executive vice president, and last week was promoted to the presidency to succeed Dr. Clark. The new president has charge of the campaign to raise $700,000 for the re-erection of the Belgium building of the New York World's Fair on the Richmond campus.

The action of the trustees in electing Dr. Ellison head of Union is but another bit of evidence of the changing times and that we as a race are becoming of age. In the future our private educational instittuions will survive or fail as we support them, financially as well as morally.

Dr. Malcolm S. MacLean President Hampton Institute, Hampton, Virginia, Does Not Represent The Negroes Views

Immediately following the President's executive order, against discrimination on our national defense program, on the grounds of race or color; Dr. MacLean speaking for the Negro without his knowledge or consent, issued a statement saying that the race thanked the President for doing his plain and sworn duty under his oath of office; in which he did not express the race's views in the premises, because the Negroes did not thank the President for giving them their right to work, which he had been withholding from them since the beginning of our national defense work. In this statement, it matters not how well President MacLean may have wanted to serve the Negro; and we believe he meant everything that a Christian brother could mean, for his fellow brother in Christ; he did not represent the pulse of the Negroes' heart. Dr. MacLean could not represent the Negroes' mind or heart because he did not know either. The manly patriotic Negro does not thank President Roosevelt, for speaking out for him to have his Constitutional rights, after he had been keeping him out of them from the beginning of the war. The President only acted after an overwhelming public sentiment had compelled him to do so, and deserves no thanks for his action under pressure that he could no longer resist.

Dr. MacLean though our friend, and brother in Christ; did not speak our views or express our sentiment when he said, the Negroes thanked the President for his generous policy. The American Negro like the vanquished American Indian, does not accept any promise the white man makes him, touching his rights, privileges and opportunities, except with a grain of salt and a definite qualification. He has been ruthlessly deprived of his Constitutional rights by the white man so long, in the teeth of the law; that he feels like the "show me man from Missouri." The Negro will not accept promises any more for performance. The Negro appreciates Dr. MacLean's services and know that he means well; he is in love with his work; but he must understand that Negroes have but little confidence in the public servant, who has often deceived his people. The Negro understands that the American white man means democracy for white folks and everything else except democracy for black folks. The President's conversation with Negro leaders before he issued his executive order carried an implied threat; and the Negro does not thank any man for giving him his property rights. He knows to do so, is a confession of an inferiority complex on his part, and the acknowledgement of a superiority complex on the part of the giver. He refuses to so compromise his rights and privileges abjectly, and thank the abridger for returning to him his property rights, freedom of speech and press, or the opportunity to work and fight for his country when it is attacked by a foreign foe.

White folks have had one hundred per cent of the national defense work since its beginning, and none of them have thanked the President for opening the gates wide that they might make money for their support doing work on our national defense program. Since this is true, there is no reason why Negroes should thank the President for extending to them the same opportunities and privileges to work, he has extended to white citizens without restrictions. If any body owes any thanks in this situation, the President owes it to Negro citizens for not extending to them the same privileges and opportunities that he has extended all along to white citizens. The Negro wants no special dispensation or favors, all he wants, is equal opportunities in common with other citizens. He is loyal and willing to make any sacrifice for his country that any other citizen is willing to make, without regard to race or color; but demands in return the same pay and consideration for services well rendered. It would have been an ugly situation had the President permitted the Negroes to "March" on Washington demanding more jobs that they had long been entitled to. It would have made a bad impression the world round, for the Axis powers to publish to the world that 13,000,000 American citizens were beginning a "March" on Washington, to demand opportunity to earn bread of the President; and that the "March" was the beginning of a revolution to overthrow the Government to keep from starving. The "March" was a petition to the government for an equality of opportunities to earn a living. The Constitution provides the right of petition for every American citizen when he has a grievance. Many Negroes think that the leaders of the movement should but possibly they did the wisest not have called the movement off; thing and the only thing that would to national unity.

MY DAY: Hampton Activities Depicted in Movie

By Eleanor Roosevelt.

HYDE PARK, Friday—We drove most of the way yesterday morning from Boston to Hyde Park in the rain. Nevertheless, it was a pleasant and easy drive. I think we would have made very good time, except for the fact that we suddenly found ourselves in the midst of a procession of Army trucks.

They drive most deliberately, leaving plenty of space between each truck for those who want to pass and have to get in behind them. But even at that, it did slow us up a bit. However, we reached home by 12:40 and I owe Mrs. Morgenthau and Miss Thompson a compliment, for in spite of going to bed late, they were up and ready to leave Boston at the early hour we had planned.

Our luncheon guests were three young people from New Jersey and a young school teacher, whom Congressman Geyer had asked me to see. She turned out to be a very charming girl from Los Angeles, who had come east to spend a few short hours with her fiance, who is on a merchant ship now bound for South America. She is finishing her stay in this part of the country with a little sight-seeing in New York city.

I took these young people over to see the library and then, at 4:30, guests began to arrive at my mother-in-law's house, where the Hampton Quartette sang for us. They showed, for the first time, a movie which they had made under a grant from the Harmon Foundation. This movie depicts activities in Hampton Institute in many different fields, and ends with a most inspiring picture of all the boys and girls marching with their faces turned upwards, reminding us of their march forward into the future.

The statistics for employment of Hampton graduates are most impressive. The total employment in all the fields listed was 87 per cent, which would compare favorably with the graduates of any college for white people. The quartette presented me with a book of records which they have just made of Negro spirituals. I am looking forward to playing them very soon on the phonograph.

It was pleasant to arrive home yesterday and to find everything so well in order and smiling faces to greet us. I talked to the President in Washington and he seems to have more of our children gathered in that spot for the moment than I can get together anywhere else. I am quite sorry that they cannot all come here for the weekend, but I shall at least see some of them next week.

I am off today on a trip to dedicate a new NYA resident center in Auburn, New York.

Hyde Park To See First Showing Of Hampton Film

HAMPTON INSTITUTE, VA.—The premiere showing of a unique new educational picture in color, entitled "Hampton Institute—Its Program of Education for Life'" will be held in the home of President and Mrs. Roosevelt at Hyde Park this afternoon (Thursday).

The 45-minute film story, in colorful kodachrome, vividly portrays the unique story of how this college for Negroes in Tidewater, Virginia, serves America in a time of crisis by training a new generation for living in a democracy. The famed Hampton Institute Quartet will sing the musical accompaniment to the film as commentator sketches the background of the story of Hampton as it unfolds before the audience's eye.

Following the appearance at Hyde Park on Thursday, the Hampton Institute Quartet, with Charles Flax and Lorenzo White, of the Hampton Institute staff, will take the film on a summer's tour throughout the East.

The film is produced by the Harmon Foundation and directed and photographed by Mr. and Mrs. Ray Garner, who in 1940 were honored as photographers of the best short 16 mm. film of the year.

Hampton Institute Announces It Will Limit Enrollment Of Students Entering This Fall

HAMPTON INSTITUTE, Va.—A new vital education that combines the best of the traditional program of "learning by doing" at Hampton Institute, with the most progressive teaching concepts in America today is being prepared for students entering this Tidewater Virginia college for Negroes this fall.

For the past year, the administration, faculty, staff and student body have joined in a searching, cooperative study of the part Hampton must play in today's world.

To this end, President Malcolm S. McLean announced that Hampton would search the nation for the best, most able student body and faculty. Enrollment at the school will be limited to those entering students who show definite "talents' in some specific field. Academic ability is not the only criteria as those young people must have definite shop skills, traits of leadership or artistic inclinations.

Staff changes have brought in talented, able teachers in the sciences agriculture, trades and general studies.

A new study and work plan has been inaugurated for Hampton under-graduates who need financial aid. This plan enables the student to work on campus for half a day and partake in regular academic life the rest of the day, over a two year period. Only those students with special skills will be admitted to the study and work plan. The first semester at Hampton begins on Wednesday, September 24, though the students and work plan students arrive on Sept. 15th, other new students on September 22nd.

The Division of Agriculture has been entirely reorganized and new curricula in floraculture and landscape gardening have been added to the courses in agricultural education, engineering, agronomy, animal husbandry and horticulture.

More than ever before the Division of Business will concentrate on the preparation of young people as small businessmen and will do extensive work in the field of cooperatives. Courses in accounting, merchandising and secretarial training are also offered.

The Division of Education trains teachers and teacher-librarians for secondary schools and teachers, critic teachers, supervisors and principals for elementary schools. Education students may major in English, Library Sciences, Mathematics, Physical Education. Science and Social Studies.

Dean of Instruction, R. O'Hara Lanier, has been appointed Acting Director of the new Division of General Studies which will prepare individualized programs for those students who have special skills in the Fine Arts, Languages, Natural Sciences or Social Studies.

Among the fields of concentration in the Division of Home Economics are Art and Interior Designing, Clothing and Textiles, Family Life and Nursery School Education, Foods and Nutrition, General Home Economics Teaching, Institutional Management and Economics of the Household.

The Division of Trades and Industries, which supervises the Civilian Pilot Training Program at Hampton, has added a Department of Architecture to its courses of study. The Trade School offers a three year program in these 13 trades: Automobile Mechanics, Brickmasonry and Plastering Cabinetmaking, Carpentry, Electricity, Forging and Welding, Machine Shop Practice, Painting and Decorating, Plumbing and Heating, Printing, Sheet Metal and Roofing, Tailoring and Dry Cleaning and Upholstering.

The Division also offers a degree course in Building Construction, Building Trades Education and Industrial Arts and Trade Education.

By STAFF CORRESPONDENT

PETERSBURG—Although Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt delivered her address before a throng of 2,000 at the auditorium of Virginia State College on Sunday, she voiced most of her views on problems of colored people at a meeting before 150 faculty members and students earlier in the day.

At this meeting she answered questions and talked informally.

"It is obvious that colored people have not been given equal opportunity in the army, industrial program and education, but there will be a change in conditions," she said.

She declared that there are more jobs being created than white people will be able to fill, and said that discriminatory practices are being broken down gradually in the army and elsewhere.

MAR 1 1941

Commenting on establishment of an air corps unit at Tuskegee, she gave it her blessing, and said that its success probably would pave the way for more air training in the army.

Colored people face about the same problem that women faced in getting economic recognition, Mrs. Roosevelt declared.

"All citizens should accept a share of the responsibility for preserving democracy," Mrs. Roosevelt stated, "but I would not contradict those who insist that America has no democracy."

Despite imperfections in the system of government, she said, all should be willing to fight, live and die for the ideal as other peoples have done.

Speaking on "The Place of Youth in the Defense Program," she said no country is more dependent upon all its people than America. She urged support for Britain also although conceding that the British form of democracy is far from ideal.

Democracy cannot stand still, she declared, and added that America is the only nation where young people are allowed to think for themselves.

The speaker asserted that health, jobs and education were important factors in a long range program for defense of America. She noted that tuberculosis is on the increase and said that more health facilities should be provided for all people.

Some of her friends, Mrs. Roosevelt stated, insist that too much attention is given to social legislation, but she held that it is a patriotic duty to pay taxes to provide for any program that builds up America's defense.

More social and economic adjustments must come within the next few years she asserted.

Increase Opportunities

The speaker declared that opportunities for education and physical training must be increased, and those who are able to pay most should be required to do so, and that equality of opportunity must be denied none.

No individual, she said, must be allowed to feel that his future and that of his children is hopeless. Girls and boys alike must be given physical training, Mrs. Roosevelt said, because the welfare of the n[illegible] depends upon the vigor of both sexes.

MAR 1 1941

The speaker said that she was not urging bigger athletic teams, but rather physical training to include all young people.

Mrs. Roosevelt was introduced by Dr. John M. Gandy, president of the college, who said simply:

"Ladies and gentlemen, I have the honor to present the First Lady of the Land."

The a cappella choir sang before and after Dr. Gandy's presentation, and at the close of Mrs. Roosevelt's address. The closing song was "God Bless America," with James Young, sophomore, taking the solo part.

The choir was directed by J. Harold Montague, head of the college music department. The invocation and benediction were delivered by the Rev. E. S. F. Davies, director of religious activities at the college.

VA's JIM CROW LAW IGNORED

PETERSBURG, Va.—Save for a group with Governor James H. Price occupying an entire row, few white people were admitted to the Virginia State College auditorium to hear Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt on Sunday.

The few hundred outside the governor's party were scattered throughout the audience, with no semblance of segregation.

Last week President John M. Gandy said that lack of space to reserve sections for white people and comply with the State's segregation law made it impossible to open the doors to both races.

Must Be Prepared, Mrs. Roosevelt Tells Negro Educators

FEB 25 1941

Petersburg, Va., Feb. 24 (AP).—Asserting that America is at peace in a warring world only "by the grace of God," Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt said yesterday that the Nation's immediate and urgent need is to build up its military forces and merchant marine in order to be prepared for "any eventuality."

"We hope that we may never have to actually use our Army and Navy in war," the First Lady said in a talk at the Virginia State College for Negroes, "but we also know we must be prepared for anything that may happen. That is why youth subjects itself to selective draft."

Mrs. Roosevelt's audience included the institution's student body and colored educators from throughout the State. Her talk followed an inspection of several buildings on the campus and a luncheon prepared by members of the home management class.

First Lady Arrives with White House Chauffeur. Wears Velvet and Orchids. Praises Luncheon Served by Students

By RAPHAEL HARRIS

PETERSBURG, Va. — Accompanied by only a White House chauffeur, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt motored from Washington to Virginia State College, where she spoke and was guest at luncheon on Sunday.

Mrs. Roosevelt arrived at 12:10, with State Trooper Bates escorting her auto to the campus. She was greeted first by William R. Simms, director of publicity at the college, and President John M. Gandy arrived on the scene minutes ahead of the schedule.

She ate heartily and apparently enjoyed her meal.

The luncheon hostess was Mrs. M. E. V. Hunter, head of the home economics department. Seated at the table in the home management building were Mrs. Hunter, Dr. and Mrs. John M. Gandy, Dr. Edna M. Colson of the education department, and Dean Dorothy Miller.

Student hostesses were Misses Marian Calendar and Edith Smith. The waitresses were Misses Elizabeth Durham and Irene Ferguson.

Mrs. Roosevelt said that the food was good, and inquired about the academic rating of the girls who served her. During the meal she discussed handicaps suffered by minority peoples, but made no special reference to the colored group.

Menu

Here is the menu:

Fresh fruit cocktail, halibut filet with olive sauce, bread sticks, radish and cucumber relish, chicken a la king in pattie shells, buttered rice, glazed carrots, brussels sprouts, Virginia ham, hot rolls, tomato salad on hearts of lettuce, ice-cream roses, plain cake, mints, nuts, demi tasse and ginger ale.

Visit Is Crowded

For four hours, from noon when Mrs. Roosevelt arrived on the campus, until her departure at 4 p.m., for a return trip to the capital, the First Lady was kept busy.

Long before the hour of her arrival, crowds were assembled to get a glimpse of the wife of the nation's chief executive.

It was in the smaller conference talk that the real Mrs. Roosevelt was seen. Here was exhibited her aim for fairness and justice for all. Her ease of mingling also left a lasting impression upon those who met her.

Wears Black Velvet

The party, consisting of Mrs. Roosevelt, Dr. John Gandy and Dr. Edna Colson, entered the auditorium where the main speech was made, from the stage entrance.

Mrs. Roosevelt wore a black velvet dress, trimmed in metallic buttons and her favorite flower, the purple orchid. A black cloth hat with a lone grey and black feather at the back, fitted very snugly to the head. Her shoes were low-heeled, black suede ties.

Her coat was of Hudson seal. A medium size black bag was carried in her hand.

When she left the auditorium she met and shook hands with Governor and Mrs. Price, after which she entered her car for the return to Washington.

Among those who heard her address were:

Dr. and Mrs. J. Alvin Russell of St. Paul Institute, Mr. and Mrs. Winston Douglass of Norfolk, Miss Elizabeth Spivey of Newport News, Mrs. Sudie Joyner, Emporia; and Miss Pearl Nelson, Lawrenceville.

From Richmond: Messrs. and Mesdames J. L. Nixon, Oscar A. Morton, Floyd Overby, D. C. Deans, Jr., Robert A. Cole, L. J. Jeffries, B. T. Bradshaw, J. W. Riley, B. F. Kersey, 3rd, Dr. and Mrs. Henry McGuinn;

Dr. and Mrs. W. H. Hughes, Mrs. Carrie Foreman, Mrs. Percy Wilson, Misses Regina Wilson, Miss Ada Thompson;

Miss Harriet Wilson, Ethel Harris, Miss Katherine Johnson, Mesdames E. S. Roane, I. A. Jackson, Fred Brown, George White and Grace Green.

Job Booklet Is Issued At Hampton Va.

MAR 22 1941

NEW YORK, N. Y.—Thousands of copies of a booklet entitled "You and Your Job," prepared by Dean R. O'Hara Lanier of Hampton institute, are being distributed this week by the National Urban league in connection with its ninth Vocational Opportunity campaign. The booklets are being circulated among young people through the public schools and to other interested persons through Urban league branch offices.

Pointing out that a principal fault of boys and girls today is their failure to plan for the best use of their skills, intellect and personality, the pamphlet advises them to stop fooling themselves into believing they are what they are not, and to seek the advice of counselors, vocational guidance workers, occupational therapists and psychologists before they settle upon what type of work they are to enter.

Workmen Dismantle Belgium Exhibit at New York World's Fair

Virginia Union University Seeks to Bring Building to Campus Here

Baptist Group Indorses Drive To Get Building for V.U.U.

The Joint Committee on Negro Ministerial Education has indorsed the campaign to bring the $700,000 Belgian Friendship Building in its entirety from the New York World's Fair Grounds to Virginia Union University, it was announced last night by Dr. Theodore Adams, pastor of First Baptist Church and a member of the campaign's executive committee. Composed of representatives of the Northern Baptist Convention, the Southern Baptist Convention, the National Baptist Convention, Inc., and the National Baptist Convention of America, the joint committee's indorsement carries the support of the Baptist denomination throughout the United States.

The indorsement was in the form of a resolution adopted at a meeting of the committee last week at the First Baptist Church, which, in part, stated that "we are deeply interested in and heartily indorse" the transfer of the building to Virginia Union by the Belgian ambassador as a gift from his government and regard it "an expression of international friendship and interracial good will." The resolution continued that "we earnestly express the hope that sufficient money will be contributed to make it possible to accept the generous offer in full and re-erect the entire building on the Richmond campus."

$50,000 Is Goal

Funds already are in hand to move one unit of the building, containing a library, auditorium and gymnasium. The current campaign, in which Virginia's goal is $50,000, is to acquire the second unit, which would complete the building and increase the university's student training capacity 50 per cent.

The joint committee, said Dr. Adams, has appointed a special subcommittee on the campaign and expects to express its approval "in such tangible manner as may be possible in our several constituencies."

Campaign Chairman Egbert G. Leigh has emphasized that Richmond and Virginia are being asked to contribute only about 5 per cent of the $1,000,000 value of the project, which includes the building, its dismantling, shipment, reconstruction here and equipment. The work of dismantling already is well progressed and because of the necessary time limitations on moving the structure, every effort is being made to press the campaign to a successful conclusion in the next few weeks.

Negro Educators Hear Mrs. Roosevelt

PETERSBURG, Feb. 24 (AP).—Asserting that America is at peace in a warring world only "by the grace of God," Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt said yesterday that the nation's immediate and urgent need is to build up its military forces and merchant marine in order to be prepared for "any eventuality."

Discussing the place of youth in the national defense program, Mrs. Roosevelt stressed the importance of educational training and urged young people to prove their willingness to accept responsibility not only in the present but also in the democracy of the future.

Emmett Scott Bewails South's Position In Seat Of Government

Educator Asks If It Is Fair to Permit Sections Which Restrict Vote, to Dominate Congress and Other Federal Bureaus.

FEB 1 194

By EMMETT J. SCOTT

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30—In his keynote address at Hampton Institute, Virginia, opening the Conference on the Participation of the Negro in National Defense, November 25 last, Newbold Morris, president of the Council of the City of New York, pointedly emphasized a fact not usually and clearly understood.

He rejected the notion that "the dignity which marks the American citizen apart from his brothers who live in countries where the word freedom is unknown" requires that he shall be regarded as asking favors when he demands full recognition of this essential dignity, and, at the same time, full and free opportunity to share in all of the blessings and privileges of his citizenship.

With respect to national unity, he declared that it is to be achieved, not by tyranny and oppression of minority groups, but by assuring to them the same privileges, rights and opportunities as to majority groups.

THE AMERICAN CONCEPT

Acceptance of this concept of our Americanism would serve to cure many of the difficulties which now plague and annoy our government and our general citizenship as we prepare for threatened emergencies.

Garner

And yet, how easily we could overcome these trying conditions and situations if only there should prevail a united purpose to work together socially, governmentally, and co-operatively for the larger good of all elements of our population.

Pittsburgh, Pa.

TOLERANCE AND UNDERSTANDING NEEDED

Respect, tolerance and mutual understanding are still elements necessary to bring about these ideals of democracy.

Bigotry and intolerance, class and race-conscious prejudices must be subordinated. The so-called fighting champions of democracy are called upon to enlarge their horizons of vision, and recognize the immutable fact that justice and freedom and liberty are terms of mockery if they do not include the well-being of the humblest individual of our nation along with the more fortunate and privileged by reason of their wealth, or the color of their skin.

A controlled suffrage in a section where the percentage of the vote to the population is negligibly small in comparison with the rest of the country is bound to raise the question: "What Is Representative Democracy In America?"

THE SOUTH CONTROLS THE GOVERNMENT

Is it representative democracy for the South to control the government of the United States in filling the office of Vice-President for eight years as was true when Mr. Garner served from 1933 to 1941 When the Speakership was filled during the same period by incumbents from Alabama and Texas? When the chairmen of the most powerful committees of the Congress, in the Senate and the House, are representatives of South Carolina, Virginia, North Carolina, Mississippi, Georgia, Alabama, Kentucky, Texas and Tennessee?

Are these observations invidious? Let us see. A study of the recent election returns just completed indicates that while Northern, Eastern and Western States polled a percentage of 53.4 of its population vote, taking Illinois as the highest, the others ranging from this figure down through the 50's, and the 40's South Carolina only turned out 5.2 per cent; Mississippi, 8 per cent; Georgia, 10 per cent; Arkansas, 10.3 per cent; Alabama, 10.4 per cent; Virginia, 12.9 per cent; Louisiana, 15.7 per cent; Texas, 16.2 per cent; Tennessee, 17.9 per cent; North Carolina, 23.3 per cent, and Florida, the highest, 25.7 per cent.

NEGRO B. & L. GROWTH CITED

Largest of Associations in Hampton

The story of the origin and growth of Negro managed building and loan associations in the United States is told for the first time in the recently published volume, "Negro Managed Building and Loan Associations of the United States," by Samuel A. Rosenberg, associate professor of accounting at Hampton institute.

From their humble beginning in 1883, Negro managed building and loan associations have grown to the point where today more than $3,500,000 is invested in 48 Negro managed building and loan associations. These associations have resources ranging from $3,000 to almost $500,000. Six are members of the federal home loan bank.

The genesis of Negro managed building and loan associations was due to the honest desire on the part of Negroes to secure better housing and to own homes, says Rosenberg. In Virginia in the 1880's it was almost impossible for Negroes to finance the building of a home, he declared. During the same period in Philadelphia, the slums were the designated dwelling places for Negroes who rented houses. It seemed that the landlords had agreed among themselves that the worst the city had to offer was good enough for the Negroes, according to the professor.

This pressure resulted in a desire to obtain better homes. The solution proved to be the building and loan association. This organization alone was suited to people of small incomes and especially to Negroes, since their income has been and still is very small, he added.

The largest of these associations in the United States today is the People's Building and Loan association of Hampton. Similar organizations are now flourishing in 1[illegible] states. In Pennsylvania alone there are 22 buildings and loan associations managed by Negroes.

Rosenberg says that the future of Negro managed associations is tied up with the future of the economic status of the Negroes. The author has included 20 charts and a directory of existing and defunct associations.

HAMPTON INST. TO GO IN FOR THE FINE ARTS

Dr. MacLean Tells Plans To Establish 2 New Study Centers

MAR 1 1941

HAMPTON INSTITUTE, Va.—Hampton Institute, for the past 73 years an outstanding proponent of "learning by doing," will carry its basic philosophy into the wide new area of fine arts next year, according to an announcement by Dr. Malcolm S. MacLean, president of the institute.

The present Old Science building on the campus will be completely modernized and converted into an Arts center and an addition built to house a theatre workshop. The new Arts center will house courses in ceramics, architecture, painting, sculpture, and other graphic arts. It will also be the activity center for speech and radio work, dramatics, the dance, and vocal and instrumental music. Over $16,000 will be spent in converting the building to meet a pressing need of Negro youth.

Plans have been prepared by the institute's department of building construction and work will be begun this semester. The plans include a small auditorium and a fully equipped stage on which experimental work will be done in scenery, lighting, costumes, and the other phases of stagecraft. This stage will serve as an auxiliary to the larger one in Ogden hall.

A radio broadcasting station, a unit in the chain of the Intercollegiate Broadcasting System stations, is included in the new plans.

HAMPTON BOYS APPLY FOR AIR SCHOLARSHIPS

JAN 18 1941

HAMPTON INSTITUTE, Va., Jan. 16—Philip F. Lee of Ware Neck, Gloucester County, Va., and Roscoe D. Draper of Haverford, Pa., two Hampton Institute C. A. A. students who are now taking a refresher and teacher-training air course at Tuskegee, have applied for the valuable Air Youth of America scholarships, recently announced by that organization, headed by Winthrop Rockefeller.

In recognition of the importance of youth in the development of the national aviation program, scholarships for training in aviation totaling in value $4,000 will be awarded to the three young men who are judged to show outstanding promise of achievement in this field.

These scholarships are the first of a long range educational program by which Air Youth hopes to make the best in aviation training available to qualified youth who would not otherwise be able to advance their aeronautical education.

If Lee and Draper win, they will have the choice of attending one of three famous aeronautical schools. One of the scholarships is at the Boeing School of Aeronautics in Oakland, California; the second at the Casey Jones School of Aeronautics, Newark, New Jersey; and the third at the Spartan School of Aeronautics, Tulsa, Oklahoma.

Democracy at its Worst

By DR. GORDON B. HANCOCK
Virginia Union University

JUN 24 1941

IT IS BOTH dangerous and distressing to see the plight in which the democracies find themselves. That rugged individualism from which democracy stands unfits the citizens for the sacrifices that critical times demand. There are those in this country today more bent on making profits out of the world's miseries than in seeing righteousness prevail. At its best democracy is a great danger. In times of peace the democratic ideology is inspiring and full of promise; but in times of war it is full of dangers and detriments.

DR. HANCOCK

In other words democracy is at its best in times of peace; but in times of crisis it cannot meet the needs of the fast changing emergencies. Democracy has never functioned in any emergency, for invariably dictatorial powers must be delegated to some powerful personality who can accomplish the desired ends. During the first world war Wilson was as real a dictator as Hitler is today. So in this second world war Roosevelt is being clothed with dictatorial powers not because we like it so well, but because it is the only answer to the threat of nazism and fascism.

Our country can conscript men for the army; it can levy taxes to support the nation's program, it can commandeer the various utilities and force communities to evacuate their interests and make room for cantonments. Today we have thousands and thousands of persons made homeless by the government's edict that certain areas must be taken over by the government for military purposes.

COLOR BLIND

It is the field of free speech where we seem to be color blind. In times of peace free speech is an asset. Critical times demand that we have the truth. "The truth shall make you free." This is one of the principles of Jesus that is generally accepted by men everywhere. The best way to know th truth is through free speech. Consequently we in democracies, swear by the free spech principle. This is as it should be. Except in times of emergency. Knowing the full truth is not always essential to survive! It is quite possible to know the truth by more subtle means.

JUN 21 1941

There is a time to speak freely and a time to hold our peace. Thre is a time to speak ourselves and a time to let somebody better prepared speak for us. There is a time when the individual's right of free speech must give way before the larger right of the nation for survival. So let there be free speech by all means; but when free speech jeopardizes our nation, it is time that free speech were sacrificed for the common good.

FIGHTING FOR LIFE

This country is fighting for its life and for any person under the pretext of free speech to hamper it, is exceedingly dangerous. What does it profit our nation if it sends its sons to the front and levies taxes to prosecute the work of defense if its efforts are to be nullified by "tweedledee" democrats and "tweedle-dum" republicans? It is better to sacrifice free speech for the moment and recover it when our victory is won than to use free speech to defeat our nation when free speech will be forever hereafter impossible!

The men who will not sacrifice free speech temporarily for the safety of his nation is an enemy of his nation regardless of the affiliations which he claims. The activities of Lindbergh and Wheeler and Hugh Johnson and John Lewis just show democracy at its worst. Lindbergh left New York a "flying fool" and returned a world hero and a colonel. It seems that if given a fair chance, he is going to wind up where he began. His sun already has set in the dusk of dishonor. Inasmuch as Lindbergh seems arrayed against his nation, it is well for the nation to see him in his true light not only as a Hitler worshipper but as a Negro-hater and Negro baiter. This counter-Roosevelt group and their tactics show democracy at its worst.

Tower Stone Laid By Masons

Past Grand Master of Order in Virginia Pays Beautiful Tribute to Late Courier Editor.

By JAMES EDMUND BOYACK
(Special to The Pittsburgh Courier)

JUN 21 1941

RICHMOND, Va., June 19 —Declaring that Belgium has stood in the forefront among the nations of the world in its achievements in all the arts of peace, progress and civilization, Prof. I. W. Taylor, Past Grand Master of the Most Worshipful Grand Lodge of Virginia, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, on June 9, presided over the solemn Masonic rites which marked the cornerstone-laying ceremonies of the Belgian Friendship Building and the Robert L. Vann Memorial Tower at Virginia Union University, here, before 5,000 persons.

The Masonic dignitary was assisted by William C. Dudley, Most Worshipful Grand Master; C. V. Wilson, Right Worshipful Grand Secretary; Dr. W. L. Ransome, Grand Chaplain, and other officers of the lodge.

"This building, like Solomon's Temple, is an expression of the ideals, traditions and aspirations of the Belgian people," Mr. Taylor pointed out. "Although beautiful in architecture, splendid in design and rich in adornment, nevertheless, it represents their suffering of yesterday and today . . . and their hopes for tomorrow.

"In its beauty, it is symbolic of their patience in their suffering, in its stateliness it is representative of their loyalty to the principles of justice and liberty. In its ornamentation it is emblematic of friendship and equality.

Mr. Taylor stated that "it is no less significant that this college, loyal to its own teachings and ever ready to recognize merit, should name the 145-foot tower of this magnificent edifice in the memory of Robert L. Vann, one of its most illustrious sons.

"He was one who so exemplified in his life, the principles of brotherhood and truth, as to merit the acclaim and honor not only of his own people, but of the entire nation. This was the Robert L. Vann whose sacred memory we all now revere.

"Today the Ethiopian people are being exploited," Mr. Taylor declared. "They are a people suffering both from discrimination and disparagement. They are a race which is constantly fighting for equality of opportunity and for freedom in the pursuit of happiness. This is, therefore, a gift from sufferer to sufferer. It is significant, therefore, that this magnificent building should be presented to Virginia Union University, an institution of higher learning and cultural development of the Negro, which seeks to inculcate into its votaries the ideals and precepts of virtue, manliness and liberty.

"And so today, as we, the Grand Lodge of the Jurisdiction of Virginia lay these cornerstones by spreading the cement which shall unite the building into a common mass, may we not hope that by doing so we may cause to be spread the cement of brotherly love and effection which shall unite the nations of the world into a Federation of Nations; into one common society of friends and brothers, among whom injustice and tyranny shall nevermore arise . . . but that men of whatever nationality or hue, shall all be brothers.

The Belgian Friendship Building is a gift of the Belgian government in exile to Virginia Union University. Under a sponsoring committee composing Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, His Excellency, Count van der Straten-Ponthoz, Belgian Ambassador to the United States, and Hon. James Hubert Price, Governor of Virginia, more than $200,000 of the goal of $325,000 has already been raised to demolish the buildings at the World's Fair and transfer them to Richmond.

Emmett J. Scott, former secretary of Howard University, and eminent publicist, is the chairman of the national committee of colored leaders from all walks of life, now raising $325,000 to erect the Robert L. Vann Memorial Tower.

Hampton Institute Revises Its Curricula, Adds New Division, Raises Entrance Requirements

HAMPTON INSTITUTE, Va.—The first indication of the thorough revision of curricula Hampton Institute was seen this week when the 73-year-old institution in Tidewater, Va., released its sparkling new catalog for 1941-42, which presents for the first time the new story of Hampton under the leadership of President Malcolm S. MacLean.

Appearing in a new typographic dress and including 16 pages of pictures, the catolog shows that the entire instructional organization has been studied and shifted to better fit the needs of students of today.

Entrance requirements have been considerably raised, President Malcolm has announced and the Institute anticipates a consirderable drop in enrollment due to rigorous qualifications that have been set as standards for all entering students. The executive council of the school composed of President MacLean, Vice President Robert Ogden Purves, Dean of Instruction R. O'hara Lanier, and Dean of Women Flemmie P. Kittrell, determined this policy after recognizing that there are (1) able high school graduates who should be encouraged to enter college, and (2) many high school graduates who would be better served if they went immediately to work rather than continuing their education.

The new Personnel and Guidance system that is being set up at Hampton under a General Education grant, will have as one of its prime purposes the hunting out and encouragement in every way of those youngsters who show special talents in leadership, shop skills, and art, as well as academic superiority, while eliminating all those who, by the most modern testing and studying, fall into the number two group.

Hampton Institute in the future, the Executive Council announces, will not only be rigorous on its acceptances but will refuse to continue the education at Hampton of any student who is shown to be not profiting by it.

The trades offered at Hampton Institute are: (1) Automobile Mechanics; (2) Brickmasonry and Plastering; (3) Cabinetmaking; (4) Carpentry; (5) Electricity; (6) Forging and Welding; (7) Machine Shop Practice; (8) Painting and Decorating; (9) Plumbing and Heating; (10) Printing; (11) Sheet Metal and Roofing; (12) Tailoring and Dry Cleaning, and (13) Upholtsering.

In the preface of the catalog, President MacLean says: "The business of Hampton Institute is the higher education of a selected body of able young men and women. They must be bona fide graduates from accredited high schools to gain admission.

"Once they are here, it is our job through the personnel department, the staff of teachers, and the administration to see that we know them as fully as we can. With this knowledge it is our task to help them select that course o fstudies which is most in line with their basic interests, with the things that they want to do and can do in the work of the world. These basic interests may mean a course in the Division of Agriculture, the Division of Home Economics, of Education, of Business, or of Trades and Industries, or, finally, in the Division of General Studies. Within each of these broad areas there are several combinations of courses that can be made which, with continued care in planning and with satisfactory work on the part of the student, can train any able young man or woman to get, hold on to, and grow in, a satisfying and useful job in his adult life.

Hampton's Philosophy

"It is, therefore, the philosophy of Hampton Institute that each student is a special problem to be solved not at once but over the entire period of his college course. We will make, therefore, any adjustment, any combination of courses and programs that may best satisfy the needs of any student and we will modify the course as new knowledge indicates a change is necessary.

"Hampton Institute knows that men and women are not, however, just workers, just job-holders. It knows that each student in his own way has a personality which can grow and develop and be personally satisfying to him and pleasant, attractive to other people or which can degenerate and make him unhappy and unattractive to others. We are concerned, therefore, with the students' personalities and with their enrichment through the religious life of the campus, through participation in music and art, through reading, exercise in physical education and in music and art, through reading, to distinguished artists and musicians, ministers, politicians, economists and social workers.

"We know, too, that students are members of families and that, in the course of time after graduation, they will be establishing new families of their own. We know that a very great part of life's deepest satisfaction or miseries can and do come from a well ordered or a badly managed home and family life. We look upon it, therefore, as our responsibility, insofar as the Institute is able, to train both young men and young women to understand more fully their present relationships to father and mother, brothers and sisters and to see clearly how to build in the future a deeply enriched and satisfying home and family life of their own.

"A further and final important part of Hampton Institute's point of view in education is that young people are apprenticed in citizenship; that they are now and will be increasingly responsible members of the democracy of the United States; and that it is, therefore, the responsibility of Hampton Institute to make this apprenticeship in citizenship as effective training as it can be made so that, after graduation, each may take his part in the service of his community in the solution of political, social and economic problems. With this end in view, we work towards the fullest cooperation also with such organizations as National Urban League, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, the various state and regional interracial commissions, and all other bona fide activities aimed at the improvement of the position of the Negro in American democracy.

"We work, therefore, unceasingly to make the whole operation of Hampton Institute a democratic ones in order that each student may here get practice in assuming the responsibilities of democracy through participation in student organization, in administration, in planning for the further progress and improvement of the entire Institute and each part of it, and in actual participation in serving the community that surrounds Hampton Institute in all the ways by which such service can be rendered.

"It is clear to us, therefore, that while training for a job is important and basic, nevertheless, a man or woman cannot be an efficient worker unless he is living a personally satisfying and socially useful life as a person, as a member of a family, and as a servant of his community."

Hampton's New Regime Hits 200 Students

By B. T. GILLESPIE
Staff Correspondent

HAMPTON, Va. — Approximately two hundred students of Hampton Institute during the last regular term will not be re-admitted this fall, the AFRO learned unofficially this week.

Although Dr. MacLean, president of the school, could not be reached for a statement, it was pointed out by a spokesman that the wholesale dismissals were provoked largely by the belief that the dismissed students do not fit into the program of the new administration and that they will be granted recommendations to other schools.

A few weeks ago, Dr. MacLean told the AFRO that he is combing the country for the youngest and best faculty possible, adding that he is also seeking the best brains and conduct in a student body.

Large Enrollment Expected

Despite the number of reported dismissals which it has been pointed out might be padded somewhat, Hampton is expecting the largest enrollment in its history this fall.

The summer school enrollment is the largest in many years, and Miss Lucile Salisbury of Norfolk is currently touring the country contacting the best students for the fall term.

Hampton Institute Students Hold Mass Meeting to Discuss Opportunities In Field of Business

JAN 11 1941

Hampton, Institute, Va.—As a follow-up of the recent Conference on the Participation of the Negro in National Defense, the Hampton Institute school of business has just held a one-day conference in the Bemis Laboratory Auditorium on the theme, "Training the College Student to Meet Situations and Problems in the Business World." The program was arranged by a committee of students, consisting of W. F. Brower, Walter Dozier, and Thomas Gardner. Miss Mildred Curtis acted as chairman of the conference. Over 150 members of the student body, faculty, and administration were in attendance.

Discussion leaders in the morning session included Charles H. Welch, professor of accounting at Hampton Institute, who spoke on "How can a college man or woman get into Government service?"; P. Bernard Young, Sr., editor, Norfolk Journal and Guide, whose topic was "Business in newspaper work;" Samuel A. Haynes, manager of the Newport News office of the Journal and Guide, who talked on the subject of advertising; Isaac Johnson, a successful merchant of Hampton, whose subject was "Retail Merchandising;" Samuel A. Rosenberg, professor of accounting, Hampton Institute, who spoke on the possibilities in the field of cooperatives; and Don A. Davis, Sr., Bursar at Hampton Institute, who discussed institutional accounting and the integrating of Negroes into white businesses through the use of Negro buying power.

The afternoon was given over to a consideration of the opportunites that await quailifed college students in the fields of government service, advertising and other phases of newspaper work and in retail merchandising, and of the ways in which efficiency can be increased.

The Committee on Findings, whose report was endorsed by the conference, included Walter Dozier, Thomas Gardner, Frank Brower, Inez Gatewood, Ruth Fields, and Stuart L. Whiting of the faculty. The committee recommended that Negro students should avail themselves of opportunities offered to qualify for civil service appointments; that the possibilities in the field of advertising should be carefully looked into; that the intelligent use of buying power be employed to create openings for the Negro in retail businesses; that membership in civic organizations is an important factor in business success; and that the newspaper offers a fertile field for exploration.

Even Among Mosquitoes Females Are Tricksters

HAMPTON INSTITUTE, Va.—Next summer, when the annoying mosquitoes draw near to taste your blood, you probably will recall that the females—as in many other kinds of animals (man not excepted)—are the more deadly of the species, for only the females bite, so far as mosquito experts know now.

Nor, will you be cheered to learn that though male mosquitos have better visior. than females, both sexes have the ability to see many colors, including the ultraviolet rays of light which are invisible to human eyes. Maybe that's why you can't hide in the dark.

In a series of experiments on chemical forces and factors that [illegible] to attract mosquitoes whether the insects like it or not, Dr. Kenneth Crooks, professor of biology at Hampton institute has made some curious observations on the pesky winged insects that spoil your moonlight summer evenings.

He found that most mosquitoes do not bite when and if the temperature is much below 50 degrees F but that they are attracted to warmth when they are at such low temperatures. Mosquitoes also were found to be attracted by humidity or moisture when in dry places and from bright lights to dim lights.

The mosquitoes used in Dr. Crooks' experiments were nearly colorblind to red, but could see yellow, blue, green and ultraviolet. When given a chance to select the color they preferred, female mosquitoes always choose the various shades of blue rather than black or any other color. So choose your dress accordingly.

As for their attraction to chemicals, mosquitoes were not specially interested in any of nearly 70 common organic and inorganic chemicals tried, nor did they seem to bother about body odor, fresh blood or perspiration.

At the meeting of the Entomological Society of America in Philadelphia on Saturday, Dec. 28, Professor Crooks told other scientists, who spent their Christmas holidays hearing and telling of new discoveries in science, that though many other dangerous insects such as peach moth, Japanese beetle and many kinds of locusts can be controlled by traps using chemical baits or lights of special colors, mosquitoes refuse to be attracted to light or bait in sufficient number for traps to be used successfully as controls.

So we poor laymen must still depend on the conventional methods of mosquito control and learn to swat 'em better.

Henderson Made Dean Of Union U.

JAN 25 1941

RICHMOND, Va.—The most radical change yet made by Dr. J. M. Ellison, newly elected president of Virginia Union university, in the organization of the staff was in the announcement Wednesday of the creation of the position of dean of the college and the appointment of Prof. Thomas H. Henderson to this post.

As dean, Henderson will direct the personnel and the curriculum. He will be chairman of the committee of departmental directors and also director of admissions. Henderson will have general supervision of scholastic requirements and records.

Many of these duties have been carried by Dr. J. W. Barco, vice president of Virginia Union university, who will now divide his time between administrative duties and instruction in the school of religion.

Henderson, born in Newport News, Va., was graduated from Wayland academy in 1925. He received the bachelor of science degree from Virginia Union university in 1929 and the degree of master of arts from the University of Chicago in 1938. He is at present completing the residence requirements for the degree of doctor of philosophy at the University of Chicago.

Hampton's New Program

The public will watch with keen interest the progress of Hampton Institute under a new administration. Hampton has been criticized in the past for the segregation that it has tolerated in the school-supported Dixie Hospital and the jim crow wage scale for teachers and workers. A series of AFRO articles, titled "What's Wrong with Hampton?" gave the facts without passion or bias.

JAN 4 - 1941

Today we have a new president (white), a colored dean of instruction, colored dean of women, colored director of the summer school, and colored bursar. These are competent people and, according to reports, far from being "yes men" or reactionaries.

For Hampton to present a clean slate to colored America it must: (1) wipe out segregation at Dixie Hospital; (2) abandon its jim crow salary scale; (3) get rid of all anti-colored workers and administrators; (4) bring in an adequate number of colored employees, not only as cooks, janitors, and laundry workers, but also as heads of departments and teachers; and (5) break loose from the influence of Hampton City, which, as has been pointed out before, has had much to say in formulating the policies of the school.

To the same degree that the public has criticized Hampton, it must also be prompt to praise the seaside institute when it is able to demonstrate that a change of administration is no smoke screen to conceal the real issues.

Higher Education Should Be Redesigned, Says Dr. McLean

HAMPTON INSTITUTE. — Higher education is still in the "Topsy" stage with 650 colleges and universities forcing 1,200,000 "through a hopper which has just grown, and which needs to be re-designed to fit the actual needs of youth in a complex, changing world," said Dr. Malcolm S. MacLean, new president of Hampton institute and former head of the General college at the University of Minnesota, at a luncheon at the Down Town Association in New York city on Speaking at a meeting of the Hampton Association of New York, under the auspices of John W. Hanes, Newbold Morris and Dr. William J. Schieffelin, Dr. MacLean said the American college has gone through three phases of development, and now faces a fourth. After the period of establishment and the period of raising standards of teaching and study, he said, the post-war development of higher education has been "the period of the Big Splurge," with much excellent work, but with most of the emphasis on expansion of plants and enrollment.

"In the face of the talk about unemployment, the Topsy-like growth of the past two decades leaves another development which is now necessitated by the national welfare, and may be forced by lower budgets; namely, another pioneering move in the direction of more careful selection and guidance of students, more efficient planning of courses of study, and more effective use of teaching staffs and plants."

Hampton institute, he said, is now working out such a development, and is also demonstrating in its Trade school that America's 13,000,000 Negroes constitute virtually untapped human resources for man power and skilled workers for national defense.

1940 IS EVENTFUL YEAR FOR VIRGINIA UNIVERSITY

JAN 12 1941

RICHMOND, Va., Jan. 9—Historic Virginia Union university, old in traditions and in service to the race, views 1940 and its series of outstanding events as a definite link in a chain of years that have carried her far in her march of progress. In recent years, she has been increasingly in the limelight in national affairs. Further, there has been a phenomenal increase in enrollment and, correspondingly, in her efforts to serve. These facts were destined to place the school in the foremost rank of national educational institutions. In view of these facts, the past year was most eventful in her history.

The gift of the Belgian World's Fair Pavillion to the school last November is regarded as a far-reaching gesture of international good-will. The only Negro school among thirty - one institutions seeking the building, Virginia Union was extremely fortunate at being favored by the Belgian officials.

With funds for the transporting of the central unit of the building already secured and a drive in progress to obtain the entire pavilion, Virginia Union looks forward to a new era in its history. The building is expected to increase the present capacity of the university 50% and to provide space for additional expansion; i. e. the institution of new courses.

Scene of History-Making Confab

At a time when the nation was confronted with serious problems both externally and internally, youth of the nation met at the school in March in the first annual Student Conference of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. The first call for delegates brought applicants from both white and Negro college students throughout the East, South, North, and Mid-West.

JAN 12 1941

Taking "Resources for Democracy in Youth" as their theme, the students, aided in their task by outstanding national leaders, sought a clear perspective of the role they would play in combating those forces that threaten their security and freedom.

Last December, the college chapter of NAACP launched a movement to have established at the school both Civil Aeronautics Corp and the Reserve Officers' Training Corps. A petition has been signed and sent to the government with this end in view.

President J. J. Clark, of the university, says: "In view of the present national crisis, I believe that such units would render a valuable service. If the students want them, we shall try to get them."

JAN 12 1941

In December, the university also played host to the twenty-eighth annual meet of the Colored Intercollegiate Athletic Association.

Other Honors

In 1940, the Panthers basketball outfit brought honors to the school with the capturing of the CIAA championship for the year; for outstanding performances. In like manner, the Union Players, dramatic group, won top honors in the Negro Intercollegiate Dramatic Torunament for the year.

Baptists Appoint Committee To Aid in Securing Pavilion

The Rev. Wade Bryant of Barton Heights Baptist Church, Dr. T. Ruppert Coleman, pastor of Ginter Park Baptist Church, and the Rev. Charles A. Maddry, pastor of Leigh Street Baptist Church, have been appointed special committee of the Baptist Pastors' Conference of Richmond to assist in the $50,000 campaign to bring the $700,000 Belgian Friendship Building in its entirety from the New York World's Fair to Virginia Union University, it was announced last night. Dr. Theodore F. Adams, pastor of First Baptist Church, is serving on the campaign's executive committee.

The special committee will assist promotion of the campaign in every Baptist Church in the city. All are pledged to active participation and every Baptist minister is making a personal donation to the movement, which is regarded one of the most important ever undertaken here for the advancement of Negro education and inter-racial co-operation. A number of churches of other denominations also are aiding the drive.

Direct appeals on behalf of the campaign have been made from Richmond pulpits. Many of these will be repeated during the course of the drive.

"While we have as yet only scattered reports from churches," said Dr. Adams, "these have given us every reason to be greatly encouraged at the progress of the movement and the response of the public."

Though one unit of the building is assured Pirginia Union from a fund already in hand, acquisition of the second unit depends on the success of the campaign which, because of time limitations, must be pressed to conclusion within the next few weeks. It is the second section which will provide the university with classrooms, laboratories and offices sufficient to expand its student training 50 per cent, introduction of vocational training.

With the Belgian ambassador to the United States, Count van der Straten-Ponthoz, and Governor Price as honorary co-chairman, the campaign has spread to national proportions. Egbert Leigh 3d is chairman of the central movement here, assisted by an executive committee composed of Dr. and Mrs. Adams, Thomas C. Boushall, Tennant Bryan, Mrs. Richard W. Carrington, John B. Cary, Mrs. Henry Decker, the Rev. Churchill Gibson, T. Austin Moore, Dr. Garnett Ryland, Peachy Ryland, Dr. William J. Clark, Dr. Donald Daniel, the Rev. Harold Seever, Robert Marsh, Mrs. Benjamin H. Va. Seminary Makes Plans To Raise $20,000 June 1st

Over $10,000 Raised in 90 Days in 1940—Conference Makes Plans to Raise Balance Needed.

RICHMOND, Va., Jan. 9—The Virginia Seminary Debt Clearing campaign boomed with interest at the Inter-State Directors Conference here when Dr. M. C. Allen, chairman of the special committee on handling the seminary's debts and who is the general director of the campaign, reported that the Seminary's creditors had accepted a part payment on their accounts and extended the time for the balance of about $20,000 until June 1, 1941.

The conference was held at the Fifth Street Baptist Church, Dr. C. C. Scott, pastor.

Dr. A L. James of Roanoke, Va., chairman of the committee on plans, under whose auspices the conference was held, called the meeting to order at 10:45 a. m. and after Rev. W. L. Hamilton of Norfolk, Va., conducted the devotionals, the chairman asked Rev. W. W. Roberts of Petersburg, Va., to serve as secretary of the confeernce.

Chairman James stated that the purpose of the conference was to have a report from the special committee on the disposition made of the $10,000 raised on the 25th of November and to work out plans for the second part of the campaign to end at the annual session of the Virginia Baptist State convention about the first of May.

Dr. M. C. Allen of Baltimore, Md., was presented to make the report for the special committee and to present plans for the drive. The report showed that $8,000 had been paid on debts, about $1,500 turned over to the Seminary for operating expenses, and $500 used for refunds on the advances by trustees to bind contracts with the creditors and for the campaign expenses, leaving a balance of about $20,000 to be raised by June 1, 1941. Dr Allen presented letters from the creditors accepting payments on their accounts and extending the time for the balance due until June 1st.

Chairman James highly commended the committee for its work and said, "The Trustee Board of Virginia Seminary and the Vriginia Baptist State convention are not only pleased with the leadership, business policies and judgment of Dr. M. C. Allen, who served in the capacity of chairman of the special committee and director of the campaign that had raised in 90 days $10,000 and who had taken the lead in getting the creditors to settle $152,000 debt for $28,000, but they are proud of him."

On a motion to approve the report with thanks, Dr. C. P. Madison of Norfolk, Va., president of the Virginia Baptist State Convention, Dr. G. A. Crawley of Baltimore, Md, president of the Maryland Baptist State Convention; Dr. W. J. Winston, president of Northern university, Long Branch, N. J. and Dr. A. A. Galvin of Newport News, Va., also spoke commendably of the fine accomplishments of Dr. Allen and the special committee. The report was unanimously approved.

Dr Allen presented detailed plans to raise the $20,000, which were in general:

(1) That each participating State shall have a State Director and that each State be divided into districts with each district organizations head director of a district;

(2) Each State district and church organization is alloted a definite amount to raise by May 1st;

(3) Each of the State organizations, Women's State Convention, Sunday School State Convention and the B.Y.P.U. State Convention be requested to cooperate with the Virginia Baptist State Convention in its drive to raise $20,000 by May 1st, with the understanding that each organization would be given full credit at their annual session for the amount sent up to the parent body;

(4) The months of January and February are to be used for organizational and inspirational purposes. The campaign committee shall organize a speaker's bureau and conduct mass meetings thruout the participating States of Virginia, Maryland, Pennsylvania, New York, New Jersey, West Virginia, Ohio and the District of Columbia.

Hampton Head Defends Minnesota Commissioner

JAN 25 1941

JAN 23 1941

ST. PAUL, Minn.—Dr. Malcomb S. McLean, president of Hampton institute offered to speak in behalf of Dr. John Rockwell, suspended commissioner of Minnesota's education board, Monday, Jan. 13. In a telegram addressed to the president of Minnesota's State Board of Education he said:

"Permit me to urge you and your board to consider fully Dr. John Rockwell's merit as an educator. I have worked and taught with him at Minnesota and Northwestern, served with him with national committees and conferences. We who know him best, assure you he is one of the ablest school men in America, highly trained, sound in judgement, and a passionate advocate of the best possible education for all children in this democracy. Minnesota is fortunate to have him and should retain him. Democracy is on trial in Minnesota as elsewhere in this time of world tension. Let not your board adopt Hitler's methods of blind, ruthlessness and prejudiced decision, and especially of race discrimination. I shall be glad to appear if necessary before your board on such date as you may name, to testify in Dr. Rockwell's behalf."

Dr. Rockwell was suspended from office about a month ago after he had entertained Negro guests in his home to discuss a strike of workers in the Strutwear factory here.

It has been rumored that Rockwell's ouster was the result of a political controversy and the Negro guests angle a mere sham for his enemies to accomplish their purpose.

Governor Stassen has been asked by leading citizens to intercede in the educator's behalf but has declared he would keep "hands-off" in the situation. Nevertheless he did send his executive secretary, Richard Purcell, to a hearing on the charges held on December 26.

At the hearing Rockwell was cross-examined by Mr. Evans, assistant attorney general. He asked, "Were colored people at your home where benefit tickets were sold for Strutwear strikers?"

Rockwell answered, "What if they were? I do not draw the color line. We employ Negroes and Indians in the Department of Education and I am proud of it. As a state official you should be ashamed of yourself if you imply that we should draw the color line."

Rockwell was roundly cheered by the audience.

Study Growth Of Race Owned Building And Loan Association

FEB 1 1941

HAMPTON INST., Va. — The amazing story of the origin and growth of Negro managed building and loan associations in the United States is told for the first time in the recently published volume, "Negro Managed Building and Loan Associations in the United States" by Samuel A. Rosenberg, associate professor of accounting at Hampton Institute.

From their humble beginning in 1883, Negro-managed building and loan associations have grown to the point where today over $3,500,000 is invested in 48 Negro managed building and loan associations. These associations have resources ranging from $3000 to almost $500,000. Six are members of the Federal Home Loan Bank.

The genesis of Negro-managed building and loan associations was due to the honest desire on the part of Negroes to secure better housing and to own homes, says Mr. Rosenberg. In Virginia in the 1880's it was almost impossible for Negroes to finance the building of a home. During the same period in Philadelphia, Pa., the slums were the designated dwelling places for Negroes who rented houses. It seemed that the landlords had agreed among themselves that the worst the city had to offer was good enough for the Negroes.

This pressure resulted in a desire to secure better homes. The solution proved to be the building and loan association. This organization alone was suited to people of small incomes and especially to Negroes, since their income has been and still is very small.

The largest of these associations in the United States today is the People's Building and Loan Association of Hampton, Virginia. Similar organizations are now flourishing in 13 States. In Pennsylvania alone there are 22 buildings and loan associations managed by Negroes.

Mr. Rosenberg says that the future of Negro managed associations is tied up with the future of the economic status of the Negroes. The author has included 20 charts and a directory of existing and defunct associations.

Women Help On Building

The Negro Baptist church women of Virginia are organizing an intensive campaign in support of the movement to bring the $700,000 Belgian Friendship Building from the New York World's Fair to Virginia Union University, it was announced today by the university's president, Dr. William J. Clark. Women's groups are being formed in virtually all the Negro Baptist churches. Each member will be pledged to contribute a dollar to the State's $50,000 fund.

So large is the membership of the church women, said Dr. Clark, that the results of this undertaking are expected to run substantially into the thousands, though no accurate estimate can be made until the movement takes form on a large scale. The undertaking is being initiated in Richmond and will be expanded, according to the plan, over most of Virginia.

Though the Belgian Friendship Building campaign is centered in Richmond, the city and State are running behind the contributions reported nationally, according to the campaign treasurer, G. Jeter Jones, of the First and Merchants' National Bank.

A total of $50,000 has been assigned the State. The national drive is aiming for a minimum of $100,000 in public contributions, the total probably to be augmented by the gift of a life amount by an educational foundation.

The appraised value of the building, together with the cost of its dismantling, shipment, reconstruction and equipment, makes the project a $1,000,000 enterprise, said Dr. Clark, toward which the public is asked to subscribe approximately 10 per cent. for its realization. Only about 5 per cent. is being asked of Richmond and Virginia, of which amount an appreciable part is being raised by the alumni, students and faculty of Virginia Union, energetically supported by all Baptist churches.estimated that that the complete building increase Virginia Union's S. E. Va. Seminary Makes Plans To Raise $20,000 June 1st

Over $10,000 Raised in 90 Days in 1940—Conference Makes Plans to Raise Balance Needed.

RICHMOND, Va., Jan. 9—The Virginia Seminary Debt Clearing campaign boomed with interest at the Inter-State Directors Conference here when Dr. M. C. Allen, chairman of the special committee on handling the seminary's debts and who is the general director committee and director of the campaign, reported that the paign that had raised in 90 days Seminary's creditors had accepted $10,000 and who had taken the a part payment on their accounts lead in getting the creditors to and extended the time for the bal- settle $152,000 debt for $28,000, but ance of about $20,000 until June they are proud of him."
1, 1941.

The conference was held at the Fifth Street Baptist Church, Dr. C. C. Scott, pastor.

Dr. A L. James of Roanoke, Va., chairman of the committee on plans, under whose auspices the conference was held, called the meeting to order at 10:45 a. m. and after Rev. W. L. Hamilton of Norfolk, Va., conducted the devotionals, the chairman asked Rev. W. W. Roberts of Petersburg, Va., to serve as secretary of the conference.

Chairman James stated that the purpose of the conference was to have a report from the special committee on the disposition made of the $10,000 raised on the 25th of November and to work out plans for the second part of the campaign to end at the annual session of the Virginia Baptist State convention about the first of May.

Dr. M. C. Allen of Baltimore, Md., was presented to make the report for the special committee and to present plans for the drive. The report showed that $8,000 had been paid on debts, about $1,500 turned over to the Seminary for operating expenses, and $500 used for refunds on the advances by trustees to bind contracts with the creditors and for the campaign expenses, leaving a balance of about $20,000 to be raised by June 1, 1941. Dr Allen presented letters from the creditors accepting payments on their accounts and extending the time for the balance due until June 1st.

Chairman James highly commended the committee for its work and said, "The Trustee Board of Virginia Seminary and the Virginia Baptist State convention are not only pleased with the leadership, business policies and judgment of Dr. M. C. Allen, who served in the capacity of chairman of the special committee on handling the seminary's debts, but we are proud of him."

On a motion to approve the report with thanks, Dr. C. P. Madison of Norfolk, Va., president of the Virginia Baptist State Convention, Dr. G. A. Crawley of Baltimore, Md, president of the Maryland Baptist State Convention; Dr. W. J. Winston, president of Northern university, Long Branch, N. J. and Dr. A. A. Galvin of Newport News, Va., also spoke commendably of the fine accomplishments of Dr. Allen and the special committee. The report was unanimously approved.

Dr Allen presented detailed plans to raise the $20,000, which were in general:

(1) That each participating State shall have a State Director and that each State be divided into districts with each district organizations head director of a district;

(2) Each State district and church organization is alloted a definite amount to raise by May 1st;

(3) Each of the State organizations, Women's State Convention, Sunday School State Convention and the B.Y.P.U. State Convention be requested to cooperate with the Virginia Baptist State Convention in its drive to raise $20,000 by May 1st, with the understanding that each organization would be given full credit at their annual session for the amount sent up to the parent body;

(4) The months of January and February are to be used for organizational and inspirational purposes. The campaign committee shall organize a speaker's bureau and conduct mass meetings throughout the participating States of Virginia, Maryland, Pennsylvania, New York, New Jersey, West Virginia, Ohio and the District of Columbia.

Hampton Head Defends Minnesota Commissioner

JAN 25 1941

JAN 25 1941

ST. PAUL, Minn.—Dr. Malcomb S. McLean, president of Hampton institute offered to speak in behalf of Dr. John Rockwell, suspended commissioner of Minnesota's education board, Monday, Jan. 13. In a telegram addressed to the president of Minnesota's State Board of Education he said:

"Permit me to urge you and your board to consider fully Dr. John Rockwell's merit as an educator. I have worked and taught with him at Minnesota and Northwestern, served with him with national committees and conferences. We who know him best, assure you he is one of the ablest school men in America, highly trained, sound in judgement, and a passionate advocate of the best possible education for all children in this democracy. Minnesota is fortunate to have him and should retain him. Democracy is on trial in Minnesota as elsewhere in this time of world tension. Let not your board adopt Hitler's methods of blind, ruthlessness and prejudiced decision, and especially of race discrimination. I shall be glad to appear if necessary before your board on such date as you may name, to testify in Dr. Rockwell's behalf."

Dr. Rockwell was suspended from office about a month ago after he had entertained Negro guests in his home to discuss a strike of workers in the Strutwear factory here.

It has been rumored that Rockwell's ouster was the result of a political controversy and the Negro guests angle a mere sham for his enemies to accomplish their purpose.

Governor Stassen has been asked by leading citizens to intercede in the educator's behalf but has declared he would keep "hands-off" in the situation. Nevertheless he did send his executive secretary, Richard Purcell, to a hearing on the charges held on December 26.

At the hearing Rockwell was cross-examined by Mr. Edd Evans, assistant attorney general. He asked, "Were colored people your home where benefit tickets were sold for Strutwear strikers?" Rockwell answered, "What if they were? I do not draw the color line. We employ Negroes and Indians in the Department of Education and I am proud of it. As a state official you should be ashamed of yourself if you imply that we should draw the color line."

Rockwell was roundly cheered by the audience.

Study Growth Of Race Owned Building And Loan Association

FEB 1 1941

HAMPTON INST., Va. — The amazing story of the origin and growth of Negro managed building and loan associations in the United States is told for the first time in the recently published volume, "Negro Managed Building and Loan Associations in the United States" by Samuel A. Rosenberg, associate professor of accounting at Hampton Institute.

From their humble beginning in 1883, Negro-managed building and loan associations have grown to the point where today over $3,500,000 is invested in 48 Negro managed building and loan associations. These associations have resources ranging from $3000 to almost $500,000. Six are members of the Federal Home Loan Bank.

The genesis of Negro-managed building and loan associations was due to the honest desire on the part of Negroes to secure better housing and to own homes, says Mr. Rosenberg. In Virginia in the 1880's it was almost impossible for Negroes to finance the building of a home. During the same period in Philadelphia, Pa., the slums were the designated dwelling places for Negroes who rented houses. It seemed that the landlords had agreed among themselves that the worst the city had to offer was good enough for the Negroes. This pressure resulted in a desire to secure better homes. Their solution proved to be the building and loan association. This organization alone was suited to people of small incomes and especially to Negroes, since their income has been and still is very small.

The largest of these associations in the United States today is the People's Building and Loan Association of Hampton, Virginia. Similar organizations are now flourishing in 13 States. In Pennsylvania alone there are 22 buildings and loan associations managed by Negroes.

Mr. Rosenberg says that the future of Negro managed associations is tied up with the future of the economic status of the Negroes. The author has included 20 charts and a directory of existing and defunct associations.

Women Help On Building

The Negro Baptist church women of Virginia are organizing an intensive campaign in support of the movement to bring the $700,000 Belgian Friendship Building from the New York World's Fair to Virginia Union University, it was announced today by the university's president, Dr. William J. Clark. Women's groups are being formed in virtually all the Negro Baptist churches. Each member will be pledged to contribute a dollar to the State's $50,000 fund.

So large is the membership of the church women, said Dr. Clark, that the results of this undertaking are expected to run substantially into the thousands, though no accurate estimate can be made until the movement takes form on a large scale. The undertaking is being initiated in Richmond and will be expanded, according to the plan, over most of Virginia.

Though the Belgian Friendship Building campaign is centered in Richmond, the city and State are running behind the contributions reported nationally, according to S. E. Hening, of the Mission Society of the Americaning will be supported by all Baptist churches, estimated that the complete building of the Virginia Union's New York and treasurer of the university's board, has reported that in recognition of the advance- ing's importance to the advancement of Negro education, the Virginia, of which amount an appreciable part is being raised by Southern Baptists have officially the alumni, students and faculty endorsed the movement. It is of Virginia Union, energetically the project a $1,000,000 enterprise, said Dr. Clark, toward which the public is asked to subscribe approximately 10 per cent. for its realization. Only about 5 per cent. is being asked of Richmond and Virginia counties.

Though the Belgian Friendship Building campaign is centered in Richmond, the city and State are running behind the contributions reported nationally, according to campaign treasurer, G. Jeter Jones, of the First and Merchants' National Bank.

A total of $50,000 has been assigned the State. The national drive is aiming for a minimum of $100,000 in public contributions, the total probably to be augmented by the gift of a life amount by an educational foundation.

The appraised value of the building, together with the cost of its dismantling, shipment, reconstruction and equipment, makes

Virginia Union Expands Work

Belgian Building of World's Fair Being Erected on Negro Campus

By DR. WILLIAM J. CLARK, President, Virginia Union University

RICHMOND, Va., June 14—The cornerstone laying ceremonies of the Belgian Friendship Building and the Robert L. Vann Memorial Tower on our campus last week, was a historic milestone in the progress of Negro education in America.

The new buildings permit us to increase our student body by nearly 50 per cent to 1,000, enabling us to absorb a substantial waiting list, and will mark an increase of 350 per cent for the decade, 1931-41.

As we look forward to the completion of these edifices in December, we pause to review our institution as an educational force; to visualize the future, and glance back over the road we have traveled since 1865 when Virginia Union University was established by the consolidation of Wayland Seminary and the National Theological Seminary, Washington, D. C., and the Richmond Theological Seminary.

The first building used in Richmond was the famous Lumpkin's Jail, often called the "old slave pen," which was leased by Dr. Nathaniel Colver for three years at $1,000 annually in July, 1867.

The Belgian Friendship Building will be divided into four parts: a library providing space for 94,000 books with two reading galleries and auditorium space for 2,000 persons, a science laboratory, a gymnasium and the Vann Memorial Tower from which the Virginia Union University Chimes will broadcast.

Valued at $725,000, it is a gift of the Belgian government in exile and was originally designed for scholastic use in that country. To defray the cost of its transfer from New York's World's Fair grounds to the campus and erection, more than $200,000 of our goal of $325,000 has already been raised under the chairmanship of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Graduates Are in All Walks

Since the turn of the century our institution has played a leading role in developing and stimulating Negro leadership. Today, as this group of our citizenry faces both a national emergency and the nation's call to arms, leadership and resourcefulness in the race is more urgently needed than ever before.

Our graduates are to be found in all walks of life, but especially in education, the church and in the professions. They have also provided vitally needed guidance in social service and community development. Among our alumni are 6 college presidents, 62 deans, professors and school principals, 1,331 teachers, 750 ministers, 21 missionaries, 26 lawyers, 9 librarians, 89 physicians, dentists, and pharmacists, and many others.

From the beginning, the spirit of service has been inculcated into our students, so that they have gone forth to help others, as they endeavor to climb to higher spiritual, cultural and economic levels.

We develop our students especially to serve their own people and the communities in which they live, in almost every phase of human relations.

Emphasis has always been placed on the dignity of all useful work.

Fundamentally, we believe that an intelligent, scientific understanding of social problems must be the basis of social progress.

LAYSTONE FOR VANN TOWER AT VA. UNION

Notables Witness Impressive Ceremonies for Imposing Memorial, Library Building—Gift of Belgian Nation.

By CHESTER L. WASHINGTON

RICHMOND, Va., June 12.—Declaring that the beautiful Belgian Pavillion, which includes the imposng Robert L. Vann Memorial Tower, was the gift of a Colonial Empire to a Negro University, the gift of a Catholic country to a Baptist school, the symbol of human understanding and good-will and the negation of racial prejudices of hatred and of violence, Dr. Jan Albert Goris, special delegate of the Belgian Embassy, struck the keynote of the impressive cornerstone laying ceremonies of the Belgian Friendship Building before a distinguished audience of nearly 5,000 here Monday afternoon.

With Mrs. Robert L. Vann personally laying the cornerstone of the Robert L. Vann Memorial Tower and Dr. W. J. Clark placing the cornerstone for the library, under the direction of the Grand Lodge A. F. and A. M. of Virginia, the occasion was one of the most significant and progressive events in the entire history of the Virginia Union University and of Negro Education.

GREETING FROM THE CONGO

In addition Dr. Goris commended the Negroes for the vital contribution he had made to European and American life in loyalty, poetry and music. He also brought "the most affectionate salute of the 12 million Negroes of the Belgian Congo whose army took a brilliant part in the Ethiopian campaign and who recaptured the town of Bambela and Assosa" and who will be proud to know that the Belgian government has given its World's Fair Pavillion to the Negroes of America.

Another scholarly address was made by Dr. Douglas S. Freeman, editor-in-chief of the Richmond News Leader and Professor of Journalism at Columbia University, who traced the phenomenal growth of Virginia Union University from lowly Lumpkins jail where slaves were taught to its present imposing and lofty place in Negro education.

MANY DIGNITARIES PRESENT

Other participants on the program were Dr. W. J. Clark, president of the university; Dr. W. T. Johnston and Dr. Henry J. McGuinn who presided.

Included in the audience of State and city dignitaries, educators, churchmen, notables from every section of the country, alumni and citizens were the following: Dr. J. M. Gandy, president, Virginia State college; Dr. F. D. Bluford, president, A. and T. college; Mr. and Mrs. Hobson Reynolds of Philadelphia; Dr. J. [illegible] Simpson, Dr. J. W. Barco, vice-president; Dr. J. M. Ellison, president-elect; Dr. T. F. Adams, Dr. C. L. Franklin, Wiley [illegible], Tennant Bryan, Luther Foster, Egbert Leigh, C. P. HAMPTON INSTITUTE

The announcement by the executive council of Hampton institute that sweeping revisions in the school's curriculum and teaching staff have been effected, should be good news to all individuals interested in the cause of Negro education.

With a president as competent and sincere as Dr. Malcolm S. MacLean is, Hampton will in a short while take its rightful place among the leading institutions of the land. In recent years the educational program of this school had been greatly retarded by the previous administration heads who had neither social vision nor sound educational philosophy. As a result, the institution was slowly sinking into the mud of obscurity from which it has been fortunately rescued by its present head.

Dr. MacLean has a very fine history as an educator. It was wholly on this account that his appointment to the presidency by the Hampton trustees was hailed with genuine enthusiasm by the general public. He is the first real professional educator Hampton has had in its 73 years of existence. Under so able a leadership as that which President MacLean is providing, Hampton bids fair to scale hitherto unknown heights. Dr. MacLean has the respect and confidence of the academic world.

Belgian Calls Pavilion The "Gift Of A Colonial Empire To A Negro Univ."

JUN 21 1941

EDITOR'S NOTE: Because of its international significance, the following speech, delivered by Dr. Jan Albert Goris of the Belgian Embassy on the occasion of the cornerstone laying of the Belgian Pavilion including the Robert L. Vann Memorial Tower on the Virginia Union campus last Monday, is published herewith. The speech, stenographically recorded by C. L. Washington of The Pittsburgh Courier staff, follows:

MR. CHAIRMAN, LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:

I have not come to Richmond to boast about Belgian generosity. In an address over the radio on April 27, His Honor Governor James H. Price struck the right note and rendered unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's when he said, "Through a combination of misfortune and generosity on the part of the Belgians, Virginians have fallen heir to this perfect example of Belgian craftsmanship."

We presented the Belgian Pavilion to you; you tendered us the most friendly, the most heartfelt hospitality. This Belgian Friendship building is an exile just like many Belgians are; like them, it has found a second fatherland. It is proper and fitting that, having exchanged material and immaterial gifts, we should know each other better; we should study each other's culture and character.

Let me tell you some facts about ourselves, the Belgians, and do not consider it as if I were taking undue liberties if I venture to tell you something about yourselves, or rather about the way we see you; the way we understand you.

The Belgians are a small people of 8,500,000 in number. They are divided into two racial groups: the Flemish race, which lives in the northern part of the country and has the same origin as the Dutch, the Wallons who live in the southern part and who are of French language and descent. Although from time to time they quarrel a little, they like each other a great deal; they feel alike; they think alike, and they want the same things: to stay together and to avoid being absorbed either by Holland or by France, and certainly not by Germany. They stated this ideal several times. While suffering foreign domination for centuries, they kept their faith in themselves. The Spanish occupied Belgium, the Austrians did, the French did, the Dutch did and now, for the second time, the Germans do.

It was quite a feat to keep the national personality alive during these trials. Their resistance against the successive occupants absorbed a good deal of the national energy, but the Belgians are a most stubborn people; although politically enslaved, they succeeded in bringing their message to humanity. Who were our spokesmen and what did they have to say? They were the primitive Flemish painters, those glories of the human race: Van Eyck, Van der Goes, Memling, Bouts, Van der Weyden, Gerard David; they were the highlights of the Renaissance art, the powerful Rubens, a world in himself, a Northern Michael Angelo, his pupil Van Dyck gave the Anglo-Saxon world the first charming expression of its graceful appearance. Belgian genius spoke through its musicians who influenced all Europe.

In the field of technique Belgium may boast of having built the first railroad on continental Europe, between Brussels and Malines; it may pride itself of the most progressive social legislation in the world.

It was in Africa, under the guidance of King Leopold II and there it created an empire 80 times as large as its own territory, representing two-thirds of the U.S., located in a region that was usually caled Darkest Africa and that had been avoided by the Great Powers.

We have succeeded in transforming this tropical land into an outpost of civilization on the African Continent.

We have delivered from fear, from poverty, from sickness and from superstition a population of about twelve million colored people. They will be proud to hear that the Belgian Pavilion finally will be rebuilt for the benefit of a Negro community.

I bring you the salute of the Belgians in Belgium, who suffer and fight every day, every hour, the injustice of Nazi occupation. I bring you the salute of the Belgians outside of Belgium who fight alongside the Allies, on land, in the air, and on the seven seas. But above all, I bring you the most affectionate salute of the twelve million Negroes of Belgian Congo whose army took a brilliant part in the Ethiopian campaign and who recaptured the towns of Gambela and Assowa.

In Belgium, people are fervently listening day after day to the British broadcasts and the famous secret newspaper, "La Libre Belgique," published during the World War, has recently appeared. The spirit of resistance is inspired by the motto of William Orange, the greatest statesman the Netherlands (Belgium and Holland together) produced in the sixteenth century: "Il ne faut pas esperer pour entreprendre ni reussir pour perseverer."

Enterprise can do without hope. Perseverance can endure without success.

All this means that Belgium, who received in 1837, and on the very eve of the invasion, assurances from Germany that the independence and integrity of the country would be respected, and whose protest against the invasion was called "insolent, shameless and stupid" by the Germans, has not failed in the defense of human dignity, of democracy and civilization.

I told you who we are, let me tell you now how we see you.

Every European who travels through the United States is impressed by what is commonly called the racial problem. It is not for him to find a solution to this internal American question, but he would be utterly blind if he did not notice the powerful contribution the Negro spirit is making to American culture.

It certainly does not imply any exaggeration to compare the noblest utterances of Abraham Lincoln to that moving plea your great educator, Booker T. Washington, made at the Atlanta Exposition in 1895. In the course of human history few words have been spoken which had a nobler sound, a more powerful appeal to the very best in the human heart and mind. You followed his advice, you did "cast down your bucket where you are" and a wonderful fountain of spontaneous poetry, a marvelous stream of rhythm and song came to the surface, and refreshed with his cool waters the face of the American earth.

Among artists and authors, two voices coming from America have been clearly heard in Europe: the voice of Walt Whitman, chaotic but prophetic and so utterly charming by times, and the voice of the American Negro. As a rule, Europeans did not expect from the United States an answer to the vital questions that dominate our minds and haunt our existence. We were not accustomed to look westward to find a solution to our religious and to our spiritual problems, but when Europe heard all a sudden the mystical expression of Negro faith and hope, it listened again to America. What did we hear? We heard you singing about life and death; we saw you had gotten hold of the most essential truths about human relations and about God.

We heard the voices of children, of old men, of wise and pious people. We heard you and we were profoundly moved.

It is the privilege of the simple-hearted, of the children, to rediscover the world, to take away the trimmings, to give it back its first appearance, to shape it in its original purity like it was on the seventh day of Genesis. You have done so. You restored a profound meaning to a confused and sophisticated world. In the realm of the poetry and music, you have brought back into existence some of the essential facts of life and death.

If such is our experience in Europe, no wonder this miracle of youth made itself felt in American literature, in American art. I do not exaggerate when I say that for many Europeans some of the outstanding fruits of the American culture are due to your profound and wonderful influence.

When we hear America singing, we distinguish the deep basso of Whitman's solemn verse and the moving, deeply emotional music of the millions and millions of anonymous voices saying plain old truths with exceptional grandeur.

We heard your message and I am sure you will hear ours. In these terrible times it comes to you from an oppressed, from an enslaved country. For you, these words have a meaning as they have for us who were under German domination from 1914 to 1918. Our message is plain and clear. It tells you not to surrender the spirit even when the body is crushed. It is the Christian message, the same for Baptists and for Catholics alike, it is the belief in eternal justice; it is the conviction that life is to be dominated by God Almighty.

You called this building the Belgian Friendship Building. We are very grateful to you for this, but something more should be said. When people ask you what is the meaning of this name, you should tell them it is the gift of a poor crushed people, fighting for its independence to a great peaceful republic, it is the gift of a government in exile to a prosperous united and great country. It is the gift of a colonial empire to a Negro university; it is the gift of a Catholic country to a Baptist school; it is the symbol of human understanding and goodwill; it is the negation of racial prejudice, of hatred and of violence.

Ministers Begin 28th Annual Session At Institute June 23

Hampton institute will hold its 28th annual ministers' conference the week beginning June 23, according to an announcement made by Camille A. Chazeaud, acting chaplain at the institute.

One of the oldest institutions of its kind for Negro ministers, this meeting annually attracts over 400 clergymen from all over the country. Open to Christian ministers of all denominations, the theme of this summer's conference, says Chaplain Chazeaud, will be "The Church in a Time Like This."

Bishop Alexander Preston Shaw of Baltimore has been asked to deliver the opening sermon for the conference, and several other specialists have been obtained as discussion and group leaders.

An unusual feature of this year's conference will be a speech clinic, administered by Robert J. Sailstad, speech specialist from the University of Minnesota. The course for choir directors, which proved popular last year, will be continued on a larger scale.

Rev. Oscar F. Blackwelder, D. D., pastor of the Lutheran Church of the Reformation, Washington, and Rev. Arthur W. Hewitt, D. D., pastor of the Northfield, Vt., Methodist church, will deliver lectures on "Preaching" and "The Blessed Privileges of the Rural Ministry," respectively. Dr. Hewitt, a rural minister, was five years a representative in the Vermont legislature and is official State poet of Vermont. He is the author several "best sellers" on the rural ministry, among which are "Steeples Among the Hills," and "Highland Shepherds," published recently.

The conference will extensively study "The Old Testament, Its Message for Our Day," "The Message of New Testament—Christianity for a Time Like This," "Worship," "Church Administration," "The Christian Basis of Democracy" and "Scouting."

Mr. Chazeaud announces that this year's conference will lay great emphasis upon seminar discussions which will follow most of the lectures.

Hampton Institute President Deplores Intolerance

MAY 1 - 1941

Dr. Malcolm S. McLean of Hampton Institute stated in an address before the Amercian Committee for Democracy and Intellectual Freedom which met in New York last week that "nearly the whole American process of handling its Negro Problem is a violation of both tents of the committee. He further stated, "It is an enormous wastage of human resources that no democracy can afford."

Speaking before 100 instructors, professors and college deans at Columbia University Men's Faculty Club, Mr. McLean pleaded for equality for all men for the good of democracy. If there is one thing that will ruin this democraciy it will be our failure to stamp out any semblance of hatred, suspicion and oppression.

Negro Principals, Supervisors Will Again Be Offered Clinic

Principals and supervisors of Negro schools will again be offered the "Clinic of Administration and Supervision" at the Hampton institute summer school this year, according to an announcement by William M. Cooper, director.

This clinic is an innovation in graduate study for Negro teachers and was a success during its first term last summer, officials said. It, says Cooper, is one of a series of new services that are offered teachers by Hampton institute summer sessions. Included are special courses and workshops on the graduate level that serve the needs of many phases of education. Last year 17 principals and four supervisors attended this clinic, which was commended by the General Education board as a "valuable service" to educators.

There are three main purposes for this clinic. The first is to enable principals and supervisors to work on the urgent problems they face on their jobs. The second purpose is to secure a sympathetic understanding of each other and lay the foundation for cooperative efforts. The third purpose is to enable the students in the clinic to become acquainted with the latest developments in school administration and supervision through intimate contacts with the experts who will come as consultants and with the latest materials and publications available.

In general, the clinic's idea is to provide principals and supervisors with favorable opportunities for bringing their educational work down to earth and away from worthless theory and traditions, Cooper said. Dr. Roy E. Bigelow of Nashville, Tenn., who has had extensive experience as a principal and superintendent, will direct the clinic. He will be assisted by H. Theodore Tatum, principal of the Roosevelt High school in Gary, Ind.; Miss Eva C. Mitchell, supervisor of elementary education at Hampton institute, and Miss Bessie R. Jones, director of education at Bennett college.

Dr. Bertram W. Doyle, sociologist and authority on race relations, Dr. Flemmie P. Kittrell, Dr. Malcolm S. MacLean, and other educators will be invited to participate and serve as consultants as needs arise.

The clinic of administration and supervision provides principals and supervisors of schools with opportunities to work under expert guidance on the most urgent problems confronting tthem in their respective school communities. Each student is expected to work on a definite individual problem and to cooperate with others in the laboratory in the solution of similar problems.

Glowing reports of achievement have come from students in last year's clinic, says Mr. Cooper, who reports that the summer school office has received communications from superintendents of schools and officials of various boards of education, mentioning the great increase in efficiency of the principals and supervisors who have attended the clinic.

The clinic works in this manner: while students are required to spend a minimum of two hours per day in the clinic, they usually spend from four to six hours because of the interest they have in carrying their problems through to successful solutions. Each morning there is a period for visiting consultants to make a presentation on some phase of the work demanding special attention. There are also periods for group and individual conferences as well as for independent individual work on individual problems. New materials are collected and placed in a special library so that they are easily accessible, and a librarian-clerk is present to assist in the securing of these materials with the minimum of effort. At the end of the session these reports are all typed so that the student carries home a copy with him and leaves a copy for reference at Hampton institute which will be used in following up the work of that student during the following winter session by extension workers.

The principals and supervisors, who will attend this clinic, will be recommended by their local superintendent and state supervisor as promising persons. Each will bring with him a definite problem also approved by the local superintendent or supervisor so that the group will be highly selected as to persons and problems.

Hampton To Be Used for Educational Experiment...

HAMPTON INSTITUTE, Va.—Hampton Institute has been selected by the commission on teacher education of the American Council on Education as one of the test colleges in an experimental study on teacher education, it was announced last week.

Dr. Charles Leslie Cushman, field coordinator for the commission, headed up a one-day program Friday, April 18, in which the entire faculty of the school participated. Dr. Cushman is also working with Ohio State University, the Claremont Colleges in California, Stanford University, Prairie View College, and Tuskegee Institute.

In a comprehensive series of meetings with the instructional staffs of the Institute, Dr. Cushman reviewed the aims and objectives of Hampton, and the reorganization and study work being conducted by the education group, the Personnel and Guidance Committee and Curriculum Committee.

In speaking of the major problems of institutions of higher learning, Dr. Cushman said that there is a need for a continuous program of guidance; that programs of general education must be thoroughly reexamined; that students need to be very much closer to community life than ever before; that colleges must work much more closely with public schools; and that teachers must be given a better understanding of children than they have had heretofore.

Hampton Granted $7,500 For Student Guidance Program

APR 26 1941

HAMPTON — (ANP) — Hampton Institute has received a $7,500 grant from the General Education Board, a Rockefeller philharmonic organization, to assist it in setting up an extensive student personnel and guidance program, Dr. Malcolm S. MacLean, president of the school announced last week.

APR 26 1941

The sort of service which the grant will make available is one advocated by Dr. MacLean ever since his coming to Hampton.

The appropriation will enable Hampton to obtain a trained coordinator of personnel and guidance and in addition to set up a statistical service, doing test scoring analysis and evaluation of some of the program for a period of two years.

Provisions are made for the training of Hampton students in personnel work so that they might become personnel coordinators in other institutions.

Omitted Ingredient

DEAN O. O'Hara Lanier, of Hampton Institute, started an admirable piece of advice to the senior class of the Institute with the following striking sentence: "For most of you the immediate problem is to find a job." Quite true.

MAY 3 1 1941

We should like to say directly, and perhaps a little bluntly, what Dean Lanier said with softness and indirection in the course of his excellent piece.

We should like to say that one of the things which is keeping a good many young poeple these days from finding a job, or from holding a job better after one is found, is the almost entire lack of an elemental virtue, namely, common politeness.

There is nothing so lacking in the culture of a large percentage of present-day college and high school graduates as the good old homely virtue: good manners.

There is as much difference between the manner of approach, salutation, conversation, and deference to age, position, or rank, demonstrated by many of the present-day college and high school graduates and by persons who came out of the average school twenty years ago as there is between chalk and cheese.

MAY 3 1 1941

Something has happened to the sophisticated children. That is, to a large percentage of them. There are, of course, numerous exceptions. We do not know whether it is their training in the schools, or their training at home. What we mean, of course, is their lack of training in the simple arts of courtesy, good manners, politeness, civility. We hope the schools and colleges will put a course in good manners in the curriculum from now on.

Hampton's MacLean Comes Thru

The shortest speech delivered at the inauguration of President Malcolm S. MacLean of Hampton Institute eight months ago was made by him.

Those who looked for a complete statement of his philosophy and program were disappointed.

Dr. MacLean, however, has made good use of his first months at Hampton, and the address expected at the inauguration was delivered recently in New York at the dinner of the American Committee on Democracy and Intellectual Freedom.

MAY 31 1941

Three points which he made are significant. He called upon colored colleges to choose students in whom creative intelligence can be developed.

He urged white colleges to learn something from the colored race by employing colored professors.

He warned the nation that its policy of racial separation will not work; that it is a fundamental violation of democracy and intellectual freedom, and wastes human resources no democracy can afford.

No such forthright utterance has come out of Hampton for some time. It was worth waiting eight months for.

From Lumpkin's Jail Onward

This is a great day in the annals of Virginia Union University. Its friends will gather this afternoon to witness something more impressive even than the laying of the cornerstone of the new "Belgian building." They will see in the ceremonies another step toward the establishment of the institution on a footing of adequate plant and ample endowment. Much remains to be done—so much that the reconstruction of the building that housed the Belgian display in New York can be regarded as scarcely more than a hopeful beginning. This almost certainly will be the view of those who generously have assumed responsibility for the direction of the school's finances. Those friends who know the story of the advance of the institution from Lumpkin's Jail will thank GOD and take heart.

Are there any who remember Lumpkin's Jail? That place of bitter memory for hundreds of Negroes was on the north side of Broad and on the west bank of Shockoe Creek, not far from the old C. & O. station. As early as 1852 and probably for some years before that time, one ROBERT LUMPKIN, a slave trader, had his establishment there. One building was his home and office, another a boarding-house for those who came to buy and sell, a third structure was for docile slaves. The "jail," as its name indicated, was for those Negroes who rebelled at the prospect of being "sold South."

It was by chance and not by contrasting design that Rev. NATHANIEL COLVER in July, 1867, leased Lumpkin's Jail as the site of the school he was opening for Negro preachers. Even though the choice of that location was accidental, what could have symbolized more completely the new status of the Negro—and the new duty of America in training him?

From Lumpkin's Jail in 1870, the school was moved to the United States Hotel on the southwest corner of Nineteenth and Main. That large hostelry, erected in 1818, became the home of the Richmond Theological Seminary, from which developed Virginia Union University on a new site in 1899 and with a broader—there could not be—a higher ideal of educational service.

Many are the names associated with the onward advance from Lumpkin's Jail. A great company of witnesses today will attend in spirit the hope-inspiring exercises. If, of all that company, we could name one only to honor; or if we could think today of one only who smiled unseen upon the ceremonies, should we not name Rev. CHARLES H. COREY? From 1868 to his death in 1899, he carried in his great heart and on his brave shoulders the burden of that school. More than any other he made possible the onward move from Lumpkin's Jail, via Nineteenth and Main, to the site where now is to rise a noble new structure. Being dead, he yet speaketh.

Merger With Va. State Not Accepted

DEC 27 1941

To Be Independent, Local College; Must Raise $7,000

NORFOLK—Although the proposal that Norfolk Unit of Virginia Union University, merger with Virginia State College, Ettricks, Va., was not accepted by Dr. Dabney S. Lancaster, state superintendent of public instruction, the local advisory board of the Norfolk college last week worked out an alternative plan which would make the college a municipally-owned, independent college with emphasis on technical training.

Norfolk Unit, founded six years ago as a branch of Virginia Union University, Richmond, has grown rapidly and its advisory board has found it necessary to sever the connection with the Baptist school in Richmond, for financial reasons, and, with the approval of the parent college officials in Richmond, has sought to merge the school with State College in order to avail themselves of state funds for technical training. This type of training is regarded as of prime importance to the youths of the city who attend the college.

ALTERNATE PLAN

DEC 27 1941

A special committee of the local advisory board conferred with state officials on the matter on several occasions. However, it was finally notified that the proposal was not acceptable.

Under the new arrangement, Norfolk Unit will become an independent community owned and operated college as soon as $7,000 can be raised to liquidate the indebtedness of the school. This sum includes $1,900 due on the mortgage. These matters must be cleared up before the city can take over the college.

TO LAUNCH DRIVE

It was agreed by both the advisory board and the city commission that this plan was the best one the college could pursue.

Officials of the college have announced that a drive for the $7,000 would be launched on January 5. It is hoped that the money can be raised immediately so as to facilitate the transfer to the city.

Members of the special committee which conferred with state officials in the matter were: Dr. H. G. Parker, director of public welfare and chairman of the city commission on higher education; Dr. W. T. Hodges, chairman of the executive committee of Norfolk Unit; and G. W. C. Brown, business manager of the Unit.

EXPLAINS REASONS

Mr. Brown, who has directed the business end of the college since it was founded, explained the reasons which made a change desirable in a special statement prepared for the Journal and Guide. These reasons, set out by the executive committee of the local advisory board, are stated by Mr. Brown, as follows:

DEC 27 1941

First—Virginia Union University in Richmond has never been in a position to give any financial aid to the local college. Its great contribution was permitting the use of its name and the privilege enjoyed of having the credits of the Unit's transfer students accepted without question anywhere.

"Second—the Unit had demonstrated its value to the community so convincingly that its student body's growth exceeded anyone's expectation. This large influx of students called for increased facilities, which in turn meant finding new sources of revenue.

CITY INTERESTED

"Third—the coming of the emergency reemphasized the need of specialized training in trades and vocations so as to prepare our boys and men for work in the Navy Yard, Naval Base, and in other industrial plans so vital to the war. This expansion called for additional revenue.

DEC 27 1941

"Fourth—the City Administration has shown its interest in the school for many years. Last year the city manager recommended to the city council that some property adjacent to the school be purchased for the use of the college for vocations. The city attorney ruled this aid was illegal as the city could help financially only non-sectarian institutions, offering industrial or technical courses.

ONE OBSTACLE

"All of the above reasons added up to one significant fact: The school had to find ways of getting aid from the federal government, the state, or the city.

DEC 27 1941

"The new plan would mean a junior college owned and operated by this community. One possible obstacle stands in the path of the independent college—the present indebtedness of the school. This sum now stands at $7,000 which includes $1,900 due on the mortgage.

If this sum is raised, no difficulty will be experienced in meeting the state's requirements for accreditment. A special committee has been directed to draw up the charter for the new institution and make other arrangements for early consummation of the plan.

Hampton First Negro College to be Official Examining Center for Council On Education

DEC 27 1941

HAMPTON INSTITUTE, Va.—Hampton Institute has been selected as the only Negro college to be an official examining center for the 1942 national teacher examinations of the American Council on Education.

As a result of this move and stimulated by the salary equalization movement in Virginia, 125 persons have availed themselves of facilities of the new Hampton Institute workshop courses for Negro teachers in Norfolk and Newport News, Va., according to W. M. Cooper, director of summer and extension study at the college.

Interest of teachers in the Peninsula area centers on Hampton as an examining center because the Virginia State Teachers' Association has recently gone on record favoring individual improvement of all persons in the teaching profession.

In the extension workshop courses, first of their kind to be sponsored to Hampton Institute, teachers are given a chance to work on their personal and professional problems, rather than to have to follow traditional courses generally unrelated to their jobs.

Thirty-two teachers are enrolled in the workshop at Norfolk, which directs its attention on child guidance problems. Theme of this group is "Guidance as a Method of Education." In the laboratory phase of their work, teachers in the Norfolk workshop use the classrooms, homes of the children, and the surrounding community.

Chief aim of the Norfolk workshop is to "work out needs of the teachers in relation to the children they teach," says Mrs. Volena G. Higginbotham, of the Hampton Institute extension division. "All the problems of individual child guidance vary," she points out, "and they are problems which we hope to work out here and now."

The Newport News workshop, which has 93 teachers enrolled, centers its activities around preparation of the teacher. Its program has been developed out of the needs of the teachers as indicated by the teacher examination; given has been followed by diagnostic at the beginning of the course.

Preliminary examination work analyses and individual and group programs for enabling the teachers to bring themselves up to required national standards in education. Dr. Joseph C. Trainor, of the Hampton Institute division of education is director of activities of the Newport News extension workshop.

DEC 27 1941

Examinations January 2—3

Dr. Trainor has also been named examiner at Hampton Institute for the 1942 national teacher examinations. According to him the examinations, which will be given on January 2 and 3, are intended primarily to help teachers with applications for postions.

Progressive leaders of education however, have devised another use for them. As a measuring device to reveal weaknesses and deficiencies in teachers, the national teacher examinations not only serve a dual purpose, Dr. Trainor states, but they have proved an effective means of determining teacher needs and methods of improvement.

Moreover, he says that the workshop experience will help teachers to a great extent in effecting the necessary improvement indicated by the examinations.

Specialists visit the workshops weekly to lecture, counsel, and guide the teachers in their efforts to find the answers to their problems and to help them work out plans for improving their work. Group and individual conferences are arranged; and the latest materials for study are made easily accessible, so that teachers may use their time to maximum advantage.

INSTITUTE, W. Va.—(SNS)—In conformity with the aims of the Land Grant College, the West Virginia State College comes to the fore with a plan to help national defense and the present and surely demand for skilled mechanical labor in American industry.

President John W. Davis revealed recently the decision of the college to do something concrete for the student finishing his education so that he can secure immediate and permanent gainful employment.

"Plans are being made," said President Davis, "to discard the traditional high school in order to build a modern technical and vocational high school with adequate shops and equipment. This will be the only job preparing laboratory school in West Virginia for Negro youth."

Emphasis will be put on teaching of skills for jobs, such as the fields of aircraft, machine tools, automotive electricity, building construction, metal work, home science, secretarial and salesmanship work and the like, rather than training the students for college. However, completion of the courses outlined will enable the pupil to have acquired sufficient foundation for specialized college entrance.

This program will find no competition in West Virginia for the proposed trade and vocational training center will be unique in the state and will enable Negro parents to give their children the advantages of the highly marketable training already established

Youth Ahead of College Prexies --John W. Davis

By B. T. GILLESPIE
Staff Correspondent

BLUEFIELD, W.Va.—"Today's youth have run just a little ahead of the present-day college president," Dr. John W. Davis, president of West Virginia State College, Institute, told members of the Association of Business Officers in Colored Schools at a dinner meeting last week.

Lashing out at present-day text books, Dr. Davis told the group at Bluefield State Teachers' College, "If you ever intend to educate a race, you can't depend upon textbooks," and told his hearers that in the future "we must have a new type of college heads."

Out-going President Talks

The conference, held Thursday through Saturday, was welcomed at the opening session by Dr. H. L. Dickason, president of the host college. Following the election of officers, the body voted to hold its next session in May, 1942, at Bennett College, Greensboro, North Carolina.

Don A. Davis, bursar at Hampton Institute, Hampton, Va., was elected president of the body, succeeding L. H. Foster, Sr., treasurer and business manager at Virginia State College, Petersburg, Va., who was principal speaker at the opening session on Thursday.

Finances Chief Concern

Chief concern of the conference was the fixing of budgets, student aid, old age security, operation and maintenance of plants and the insurance program of a modern institution, Dr. T. L. Hungate of New York, being among speakers on this general theme.

Questioning whether colleges were keeping "within the law" as regards students who take part in athletic contests, he said, "I hope some of the business officers present will put on boots, walk heavy and tell us college presidents what we can and cannot do with athletics."

Other speakers included Jackson Davis, associate director of the General Education Board; Harold Goldthorpe, American Council on Education; T. E. Posey, department of economics, West Virginia State College; James B. Cephas of Virginia State College; Harold F. Logan, Wiley College, Texas, and Mrs. C. C. Gosdston of West Virginia State.

Succeeds Dr. M. S. Davage

Served Fifteen Years As Dean Of Institution

MAR 20 1941

James P. Brawley, for fifteen years dean at Clark University Wednesday was elected president of the Methodist institution to succeed Dr. Matthew S. Davage, whose resignation was accepted during the same meeting of the board of trustees.

Dr. Davage, whose headquarters is now at Nashville, resigned Clark's presidency, to accept the position as secretary of Negro education of the newly combined Methodist Church.

SERVED AS ACTING HEAD

During the past six months Dean Brawley has been serving as acting president of Clark and his election Wednesday was with full and enthusiastic approval of both faculty members and students, it was revealed.

MAR 20 1941

An unusual and striking chain of events behind Dean Brawley's ascendency to Clark's presidency. Dr. Davage was president of Samuel Huston college, Austin, Texas when Dean Brawley was a student there. Later Dean Brawley followed Dr. Davage to Holly Springs Institute where Dr. Davage served as president and Dean Brawley was an instructor.

Dr. Davage was elected president of Clark University and Dean Brawley in 1925 came to Atlanta as an instructor of the South Atlanta school. The following year, 1926, he was named dean, a position he has held continuously since, with the exception of 1939 when he was given a leave of absence to complete residence requirements for a doctor of philosophy degree at Northwestern University, Evanston.

MASTER'S FROM USC

Beside having graduated at Samuel Huston college, Dean Brawley did graduate work at the University of Southern California where he was awarded the master of arts degree and since coming to Clark has pursued studies leading to the Ph. D degree.

He is a native of Lockhart, Texas.

MAR 20 1941

Since coming to Clark College, he has been an active figure both locally and nationally in educational circles. He headed a commission which made an extensive study of Negro educational institutions of the Methodist Church.

Did Wonderful Work For Clark In Dean's Role

MAR 29 1941

By ERIC ROBERTS

ATLANTA, Ga. — Trustees and officials of Clark College, one of the foremost Negro schools of the Methodist connection, announced here Wednesday that James Philip Brawley, dean of the college since 1926, has been elevated to the presidency of the college.

He succeeds Dr. Matthew Simpson Davage, veteran figure in higher Methodist circles, who, for the past six months, has served in the dual role of secretary of Negro education for the Methodist Church Board and president of Clark College.

Dr. Davage is now stationed at Nashville, Tenn. and during his absence Mr. Brawley has served Clark as administrative dean.

The rise of President Brawley touches story book lore and dates back to the days when Dr. Davage was president at Samuel Houston College, Austin, Texas, and the former a student there.

When Dr. Davage moved to Rust College, Holly Springs, Miss., he appointed Mr. Brawley a faculty member.

MAR 29 1941

Indelibly impressed, Dr. Davage chose to retain Mr. Brawley on the faculty when he moved to Clark in 1924. The next year, 1925, Mr. Brawley came to Clark as instructor in education and religious education.

A CLARK RENAISSANCE

The Clark year 1925 was marked by an influx of interesting and singular personalities to the Clark faculty and student body as well. Mr. Brawley, a football player of note in college days, assisted Head Coach Samuel B. Taylor that season, quite the best team Clark had ever boasted prior to that time.

In 1926, Mr. Brawley succeeded Dr. G. Whitte Jordan as dean of Clark College, and from this chair installed new methods and new vigor that lofted Clark banners of scholarship and curricula to unprecedented heights.

A native of Lockhart, Texas, President Brawley received the A. B. degree at Samuel Houston College, Austin, Texas, in 1920. He studied at the University of Southern California and in 1925 was awarded the M.A. degree for work consummated at Northwestern University, Evanston, Ill.

He has completed residence requirements for the degree of doctor of philosophy from the same school, and is listed as a 1941 candidate.

MAR 29 1941

WIDESPREAD ACTIVITY

President Brawley served as educational adviser to Negro schools of the Methodist board of education from 1926 to 1940, inclusive. He is a past president of National Body of Negro Deans and Registrars, is well known sectionally and nationally in educational circles and qualifies splendidly for the new post.

In 1929 he married Miss Georgia L. Williams of a prominent and pioneer Atlanta family and she, since 1929, has been an instructor in English at Clark. She holds the M.A. degree from the University of Iowa.

President Brawley is a member of Alpha Phi Alpha and one of the foremost men of letters in the field of Christian education for young Negro men and women.

President Grant Tells of Work of Negro Association

BY DOUGLAS HALL

"During our administration we have not had the hearty co-operation of the majority of the members of the executive committee, but we plodded along giving the best that was in us for the interest of the teachers of Georgia." Thus were the words that struck fire as James L. Grant, president of the colored teachers and Education Association, delivered his annual address to the teachers.

President Grant told how the association had endeavored to assist the Augustans in persuading the board of education to purchase a plant for a public high school. 'We made honest and sincere pleas for graduate studies for Negroes in the state, better and well equipped school buildings, transportation, participation in the national defense program, social security for teachers and in fact equalization in and promises of co-operation in helping to solve these problems."

The president praised "Citizen's Day" as was sponsored by the Georgia Education Association. "We must teach the young men and women of our race that we are turning out of school today, that there is power in the ballot."

"The total income of monies during our administration was $3,028.11. Disbursements, $1,928.09; cash balance on hand, April 1, 1941, $46.02."

In closing, the retiring official thanked the state officials, teachers, and the officers of all educational organizations. He pledged the incoming administration his sincere co-operation.

"I say to the teachers of Georgia that your job is a big one. The future of boys and girls who are entrusted to your care must be trained and helped. It must and can be done Teach them that the greatest gift of real life is not purchased with silver and gold, but lies in real values."

DR. A. S. CLARK, HEAD OF GILLESPIE INSTITUTE, TO RETIRE IN SEPTEMBER

RETIRING EDUCATOR WILL REMAIN CHURCH OFFICIAL; DR. L. S. BROWN TO HEAD SCHOOL AND HOSPITAL.

Dr. A. S. Clark, organizer and superintendent of Gillespie Institute, one of the seven Negro schools in Georgia accredited by the Southen Association, announced today he will retire as head of the hospital and school divisions of the institution on September 1.

Gillespie, with a present estimated value of $217,000, has a student body of 404, and eighteen faculty members. It was organized by Dr. Clark in 1902, with him, his wife, and one assistant as the only teachers. Twenty eight pupils were enrolled the first year, with classes conducted in the three wooden buildings, one of which was also the superintendent's residence.

In 1904, an administration building, a frame structure, was built, and in 1906 the boys' dormitory was added, and was remodeled last year. The girls' dormitory was constructed in 1929, Dr. Clark stated and the superintendent's residence was built in 1924. The new administration building, auditorium, and a twenty fve bed hospital was constructed in 1937.

"Sometime during the years," Dr. Clark and his wife added, "a log cabin was built on the grounds with part of the logs for the building being brought from Oakfield. This building housed the vocational work, and still stands on the site."

"The school seeks to teach boys and girls the dignity of labor," Dr. Clark remarked, and manuel training, agriculture, home economics, and music courses form part of the school program, with students being prepared along the lines of defense. The institution is a three fold plant, church, school, and hospital.

"The purpose of the school," Dr. Clark stated, "is to make better citizens, men and women, with worthwhile characters, who believe in the great principles of our nation, and who honor God above all things else."

When questioned along this line. Dr. Clark added, "As far as I know personally I do not recall any of the boys or the girls who have, after finishing our school, obtained a police record."

Hundreds of graduates have finished at Gillespie Institute, which has a four year high school course, and is accredited by the State of Georgia in Group 1, and by the Southern Association.

Dr. Clark received his MA degree from Lincoln University in Pennsylvania, and has several other degrees to his credit.

Dr. L. S. Brown, MA, will succeed Dr. Clark as executive of the school and hospital in September. Dr. Brown was formerly principal of the Harbinson Institute in Irmo, S. C. and is now attending the Atlanta University Graduate School.

Dr. Clark will continue his residence at Gillespie and will remain head of the church section of the institution, and asert when ever needed in the administration of the institution as a whole.

Hospital Head Appointed President Of Dillard U.

Dr. Albert W. Dent Leaves Flint-Goodridge to Head Louisiana College—May Be Succeeded By Young Business Man.

NEW ORLEANS, La., June 5.—In recognition of remarkable talent exhibited in the past and splendid service rendered as superintendent of Flint-Goodridge hospital, the board of trustees of Dillard university Saturday named Albert W. Dent as the new president of the university. Mr. Dent, a graduate of Morehouse college, Atlanta, first came to New Orleans in 1932 to accept the position of superintendent of Flint-Goodridge hospital. His institution of the group hospitalization plan for low salaried families is one of achievements at the hospital which has received nation-wide commendation. Flint-Goodridge hospital during his administration as superintendent, has depicted remarkable growth and is now rated highly by hospital boards in America.

Mr. Dent is the fourth person who will direct the activities of the university during the six years that Dillard has been established. Dr. W. W. Alexander was acting president for the first year that the school was opened; he was succeeded by Dr. William Stuart Nelson, who resigned to accept a position as dean of the school of religion, Howard university. Rudolph Moses, acting dean in charge, has headed the university during the past year.

Dent is nationally known, being a fellow of the American College of Hospital Administrators, chairman of the National Conference of Hospital Administrators, and a member of the board of the Southern Commission on Interracial Cooperation. He has also served as a member of the executive committee of the New Orleans Council of Social Agencies for six years and is a member of the board of the Dryades street branch, Young Men's Christian Association.

Simultaneous with an anouncement that Albert W. Dent, superintendent of Flint-Goodridge hospital, has been chosen as the new president of Dillard university, public interest was aroused as to whom would be appointed as the new superintendent of the hospital. It is believed by many that George McDemmond, aggressive young business man, who has been appointed in the capacity of field agent and public relations man at the hospital during the last four and one half years, may be named for the position.

Albert W. Dent Heads Dillard University

Former Sunday School Congress Supporter Elected to the Presidency of One of the South's Leading Schools.

NEW ORLEANS, La., June 5—Albert W. Dent, for nine years superintendent of Flint-Goodridge Hospital and for six years business manager of the University, was elected the second president of Dillard University at a meeting of the Board of Trustees last Saturday. He will succeed Rudolph Moses. He will succeed Rudolph Mocharge since the resignation of Wm. Stuart Nelson almost a year ago.

President-elect Dent is a graduate of Morehouse College, Atlanta, and came to New Orleans in February, 1932, to assume the superintendency of the then newly-opened Flint-Goodridge Hospital. With the opening of the University on Gentilly Road in 1935 he was appointed business manager of the University in addition to his duties at the hospital. Prior to his coming to New Orleans, the president-elect served as branch office auditor for the Atlanta Life Insurance Company, and as vice-president of a real estate and construction company in Houston, Texas. In 1923 he was recalled to his alma mater to organize the alumni of the school and to direct an endowment campaign for the raising of three hundred thousand dollars to match a like sum offered by the General Education Board. It was about the time of the successful completion of this campaign that he was asked to assume the post at Flint-Goodridge.

Under Mr. Dent's supervision Flint-Goodridge has attracted national attention particularly for its program in professional education, its public health activities and the penny-a-day group hospitalization insurance plan. He is a fellow of the American College of Hospital Administrators, chairman of the National Conference of Hospital Administrators, and a member of the Board of Directors of the Southern Commission on Interracial Cooperation. He has just completed six years as a member of the executive committee of the New Orleans Council of Social Agencies, and is a member of the Board of Directors of the Dryades Y. M. C. A.

In addition to the election of the president, the board heard reports from the administrative officers of the University and hospital indicating that the whole University had enjoyed one of the best years in the history of the institution. The board also adopted resolutions praising the services rendered to the institution by Dr. Thomas F. Holgate, dean emeritus of Northwestern University, who retired from membership on the board after more than eleven years of association. Resolutions were also adopted commending the services of John H. Fletcher, attorney of Chattanooga, Tennessee, and Dr. Merrill J. Holmes of Chicago, Illinois, both of whom retired from the board recently.

Gifts totaling $17,550 were acknowledged by the board—$15,000 from the General Education Board for new medical and surgical equipment; of $2,000 from employees of the Freiberg Mahogany Company of New Orleans for modernization of sterilizing equipment in the operating room of the hospital; and of $550 from the legacy of Mrs. William B. Bloomfield of New Orleans for the hospital.

Members of the board present were: Miss Fannie C. Williams, the Right Reverend Robert E. Jones, and Messrs. Edgar B. Stern, Geo. E. Haynes, William B. Wisdom, E. J. LaBranche, Fred L. Brownlee, Phillips Bradley, Frank Jensen, Warren Kearney, and Monte M. Lemann.

Flint-Goodridge Hospital Chief Elected Dillard University Head

By LEON LEWIS

NEW ORLEANS. — During a several hour session of the board of directors of Dillard university, A. W. Dent, superintendent of Flint-Goodridge hospital, was elected president of the university.

Dillard has gone without a president since the resignation of Dr. William Stuart Nelson last year. Dr. Nelson is now dean of religion at Howard University in Washington, D. C. Since that time the school has been operated under the tentative leadership of Rudolph Moses, acting dean, who was elevated to the latter position upon the resignation of Dean J. Max Bond. Dean Bond's resignation was concurrent with that of Dr. Nelson. He, too, accepted another position.

For the past several months there has been much rumor and verbal speculation as to who would be president. Robert Weaver, federal housing attache was prominent among those mentioned for the post. It has been reported that he declined an offer.

Under the superintendency of Dent, Flint-Goodridge hospital has risen to an enviable height as an institution for the cure and prevention of disease among Negroes. Most outstanding in this respect is the sharp decline in infant deaths and midwife delivery.

One of the best community health units in the city operates out of and within Flint. Flint's penny-a-day hospitalization plan is heralded as the most feasible in the country.

Besides being an astute business executive, as has been evidenced by his management of Flint and being business manager of Dillard, Dent is a recognized authority on social service, both organizational and applied.

Dent is a graduate of Morehouse college in Atlanta and came to New Orleans about nine years ago to take charge of Flint-Goodridge. Three years later he was selected business manager of Dillard. He is an executive member of the New Orleans Council of Social Agencies, member of the American College of Hospital Administration, board of directors of Dryades Street Y.M.C.A., and member of the board of the Southern Commission on Interracial Cooperation.

Members of the board present at the meeting were Bishop Robert E. Jones, Edgar B. Stern, George E. Haynes, Mrs. Fannie C. Williams, William B. Wisdom, E. J. LaBranch, Fred L. Brownlee, Phillip Bradley, Frank Jensen, Warren Kearney and Monte Lemann.

The board adopted resolutions commending the services rendered to Dillard by Dr. Thomas F. Holgate, dean emeritus of Northwestern university, who after serving as a member of the board for 11 years retired. His total contributions to the university amount to more than $17,000.

Mississippi Educators Adopt Committee's Report

JUNIOR COLLEGE URGED

Institution Of Higher Learning In Delta For Race Also Recommended— Plan Legislative Action

By KENNETH TOLER
From The Commercial Appeal
Jackson, Mississippi, Bureau

JACKSON, Miss., March 13.—A more equitable expenditure of state funds for negro education and establishment of a junior college for negroes in the Delta "where is concentrated so large a proportion of the negro population in Mississippi," were recommended to the Mississippi Education Association in annual convention here Thursday by a special committee headed by R. L. Hunt, superintendent of schools at Louise.

The report urges the association to present the matter to the Legislature and to render its co-operation in seeking to carry out the proposals.

Must Assure Funds

Stating that "the only way to improve negro education in Misissippi is to assure a more equitable expenditure of the per capita funds distributed by the state," the committee charged that "not all the money given for negro children reaches the schools for negroes in some counties."

"The act of the Legislature, in accordance with the State Constitution, makes appropriations of the per capita for each child regardless of race," the report, which was adopted, pointed out. "We conceive it the responsibility of educational authorities to make full accounting for such funds."

Pointing out that "more than $9 is sepnt for each white child in Mississippi when each dollar is spent for a negro child," the committee stated that "it has happened more than once when budgetary difficulties arose, negro schools were asked to bear all reductions."

Proportionate Share

"If a reduction from the budget must be made, it seems to us fair that negro schools should bear no more than a proportionate reduction to meet the exigencies of any school year," the report stated.

"We respectfully petition the co-operation of the State Department and local educational authorities, to the end that the meager funds allotted to negro schools in the budgets accepted by the State Department of Education shall be spent in support of the schools for negroes.

"Negro schools are already under budget allotments which provide for negro school terms which are shorter, salaries for teachers which are smaller, buildings, equipment and supplies far below the levels for the white schools," the report said.

The committee, composed of Chairman Hunt, George Ditto of Biloxi, W. H. Braden of Natchez, L. L. Bryson and P. H. Easom of the State Department of Education, said a review of opportunities for higher education in Mississippi indicates that no such opportunty for negroes exists within the Delta.

Junior College Urged

"There is within this area a concentration of a large percentage of the negro population in Mississippi, and we count the establishment of some institution (junior college) for higher learning for negroes in this area as one goal for the improvement of negro education," the report continued.

Increased financial support for Alcorn Agricultural and Mechanical College for Negroes, the only institution of higher learning supported by the state in Southwest Mississippi, and continuance of a co-operation program with the Julius Rosenwald Fund for the recently opened Mississippi Negro Training School at Jackson, were urged.

In connection with Alcorn College, the committee stated that "its funds for maintenance have remained the same while its enrolment has been increasing . . . . and the school has some very definite building needs."

Wilberforce University Is Safe

Naturally when a President of a University like Wilberforce is changed, people will wonder and speculate as to the course and action of the Trustees in their deliberation whether it was for the best interest of the University. There have been times in the leading Universities of this Country and in Europe when changes have been made for the betterment of the Universities and they have been made before at Wilberforce and they did not impair the University neither lessens its high standard in training and scholarship. My knowledge, experience and observation of some of the work and responsibilities resting upon the shoulders of a President of a University having been a student of Princeton University in the School of Philosophy where I took my Master's Degree and in Mansfield College at the University of Oxford in England pursuing a course in Theology, German, Syriac, New Testament Greek and Arabia, in addition to these studies I studied in Oriel College Ancient and Modern Philosophy having some knowledge of these subjects I think I can say that Wilberforce University in its present status is safe in the hands of Bishops J. A. Gregg, R. R. Wright, Jr., and David H. Sims. Bishops Gregg and Wright both have been president of Wilberforce University and Bishop Sims, Allen University. With the training and experience of these loyal men for what Wilberforce has stood in its long history the training of men and women for the race equal to any similar University in the Country. I am confident and I am sure that the entire Church will agree with men in bearing to the world that the Trustees did the proper and the sensible thing in delegating for the time being their power and authority to Bishops Gregg, Wright and Sims to guard Wilberforce University and find a President with a personality and with a deep sense of the Christian Religion and its significance and philosophy in the human heart. In this connection also, to find a man with common sense genius and ability whose training will not be questioned by men of the large Universities of the Country. The conception of Wilberforce University from the beginning was to train men and women in the higher branches of thought and learning this the committee in whose hands the University has been placed will follow the tradition and history and aim and purpose of the founder of the University Bishop Daniel A. Payne. It is providential that the Church at this time has these able prelates Bishops Gregg, Wright, and Sims to guide and guard our oldest University in Ancient and Modern erudition for God and the Race.

Think Time Ripe For Negro To Head University

Dr. Wright Has Submitted His Resignation

NEW YORK—(A N P)—Lincoln university of Pennsylvania is seeking a new president of succeed Dr. Walter L. Wright, who last June submitted his resignation, after 48 years connection with the veteran educational institution.

Dr. Wright's resignation has not been accepted as yet, but Dr. E. P. Roberts, New York physician and chairman of the board of trustees of the university, a few days ago named a five-man committee whose duty it is to find the man who will succeed him.

Those on the committee are: Lewis M. Stevens, Philadelphia lawyer; Dr. William Halleck Johnson, Princeton, former president of Lincoln; J. Frederck Talcott, New York business man; Dr. Walter G. Alexander, physician of Orange, N. J.; George W. Goodman, Urban League executive secretary, Washington, D. C. The First three are white.

ASK NEGRO PREXY

The committee has not held its first meeting but free discussion among Lincoln alumni has been divided between those who believe the time is ripe for a Negro to be named president, and those who think Lincoln will prosper better with a white president. Both factions are in favor of more Negroes being named to the faculty of the institution.

Lincoln has never had a Negro president and its faculty is still largely white. Although an independent organization, it has strong affiliations with the Presbyterian church.

"No names have yet been submitted as candidates for the presidency," Dr. Roberts explained in reply to a question, "and the board of trustees has made no decision as to whether the new president should be white or colored. In fact, color is not a consideration, we are interested in getting the best man available for the post, regardless of his race or color."

DECIDE ON MAN

"I think the committee should meet and decide on the type of man they want; what his training should be, and so on. Then the committee should select that man who best fits their definition of what a Lincoln president himself should be".

If Dr. Roberts has his way, the next Lincoln president would be "a great educator who can meet other great educators on their own level, wherever they happen to be, whether at Yale or Harvard. I would not get a man because of his ability to raise money, as important as that is; if the educational leadership is of the highest calibre, we shall find it easier to raise money, and we can always employ people just for this function".

While the appointment of Dr. Robert's committee would appear that Dr. Wright's resignation will be accepted, there is some sentiment in the board of trustees that Dr. Wright be drafted to remain president until 1943 when he shall have completed 50 years in the service of Lincoln and Negro higher education. This sentiment is especially voiced by former president Johnson, it is said. In the meantime, Lincoln opened last week for the new school year, 400 students strong, and with Dr. Wright still filling the president's chair.

Dr. Roberts was graduated from Lincoln in 1891, earned a master's degree later and still later, was honored with a doctor of laws degree. He earned his medical degree from Flower-Fifth Avenue Medical college in 1894. He was one of the board of education in New York.

Fred L. Brounlee Is LeMoyne's President

MEMPHIS, Tenn.—At the meeting of the Board of Trustees of LeMoyne college held in New York on November 19 1940, Fred L. Brownlee was elected president of the college. Mr. Brownlee is serving this year as acting president, spending several days in Memphis at various intervals.

For twenty years Mr. Brownlee has been general secretary of the American Missionary association which founded LeMoyne, first as a normal school. This association also took the initial steps fourteen years ago in developing LeMoyne as a four-year college, having sent Frank Sweeney to Memphis for that purpose. The American Missionary association also assists in the support of Fisk university at Nashville, Tougaloo college near Jackson, Miss.; Dillard university in New Orleans, Tillotson college in Austin. Texas, and Talladega college at Talladega, Ala. It moreover supports nine secondary schools in the South for Negro children. It is a pioneer organization in this work, having been organized in 1846.

CCNY Dismissal of Yergan, Noted Educator, Brings Petition Demanding Clear-Cut Position on Appointment of Negroes

MAY 7 - 1941

The Board of Higher Education yesterday was petitioned to state its "policy and practice with regard to the appointment of qualified Negroes" to the teaching staff of the four colleges operated by the City of New York, this action being prompted by the failure of City College to re-appoint Dr. Max Yergan as special lecturer on Negro History and Culture.

The Greater New York Coordinating Committee for Employment, in conjunction with other progressive civic groups in Harlem, is leading in this new drive to enlarge vocational opportunities for Negroes.

Entitled "An Inquiry into the Appointment of Negroes to the Teaching Staffs of the Municipal Colleges of New York," the brief addressed to the Board of Higher Education questions "the factors which have so limited the appointment, conditions and opportunities of qualified Negroes." It is made clear in the brief that although Dr. Yergan had lectured at CCNY for four years, he had never been a member of the regular teaching staff "with the same tenure and rights as others."

BRIEF DEMANDS REPLY

The brief asks the following questions:

MAY 7 - 1941

"Is the 'young scholar, also a Negro,' who will be appointed as 'special lecturer' by the history department to give this course in Negro History and Culture also to be relegated to a tenuous and insecure position like Dr. Yergan's?" (The inner quotations are from the announcement made by Dr. Harry N. Wright, acting President of City College, of Dr. Yergan's dismissal. Reference is thought to be to Dr. Laurence D. Reddick, Curator of the Schomburg Collection in the 135th St. Branch of the New York Public Library.)

"Is it the policy of the Board of Higher Education, the College of the City of New York, or the Department of History of that college to employ a Negro only to teach a course in Negro history?

"In the history of the municipal colleges, how many Negroes, if any, have held regular positions on their teaching staffs?"

Positions Sought in 4 City Colleges

MAY 10 1941

NEW YORK—(ANP)—A drive to secure jobs for capable professional Negroes on the regular teaching staffs of the four colleges operated by the city was inaugurated Wednesday when the Greater New York Coordinating Committee for Employment, progressive civic group, petitioned the board of higher education to "state its policy and practice in regards to" such appointments.

While much thought had been previously given to this subject by the committee, it was said, the failure of City College to re-appoint Dr. Max Yergen as special lecturer on Negro history and culture is said to have prompted this action.

The brief, entitled "An Inquiry into the Appointment of Negroes to the Teaching Staff of the Municipal Colleges of New York," questions the factors which have so limited the appointment conditions and opportunities of qualified Negroes." Although Dr. Yergan has lectured at CCNY for four years, it was made clear that he has never been a member of the regular teaching staff "with the same tenure and rights as others."

The petition asks several questions namely;

MAY 10 1941

1. Is the "young scholar, also a Negro," who will be appointed as "special lecturer" by the history department to give this course in Negro history and culture also to be delegated to the same "tenuous insecure" position of Dr. Yergan? The quotations are from the announcement of Dr. Harry N. Wright, acting president of CCNY explaining the institution's position regarding Dr. Yergan. The reference is to Dr. Laurence D. Reddick, curator of the Schomburg collection, who will succeed the incumbent.

2. Is it the policy of the board of higher education, the College of the City of New York, or the department of history of that college to employ a Negro only to teach a course in Negro history?

3. In the history of the municipal colleges, how many Negroes, if any, have held regular positions on their teaching staffs.

Dr. A. Clayton Powell, pastor of Abyssinia Baptist church and chairman of the coordinating committee, emphasized that his committee is not seeking to champion the cause of any one individual. It is rather seeking openings for all Negroes.

The committee's brief points out that of the 1,462 regular teaching positions of a non-administrative nature covered by the current fiscal budget, not one is held by a Negro. It goes on to show the contrast in policy and practice between the board of education with jurisdiction over the primary and secondary schools of the city, and the board of higher education.

"We know that the 1941-42 fiscal budget contemplates appropriations for 1,481 regular teaching positions an increase of 19 over the current fiscal year, the brief continues. "We know, also, that there are Negroes who are qualified by training and experience to accept an appointment to many of these positions. We feel, therefore, that continued absense of Negroes from teaching positions in the municipal colleges must be recognized as due to racial discrimination and a deliberate exclusion which are undoubtedly incompatible with our democratic principals."

In releasing this information to the press, Rev. Powell made the following statement:

"New York is a metropolis in which all races and creeds work and reside in comparative harmony. In no small measure is our splendid educational system responsible for this state of things for tolerence has been shown in all public schools, from the primary grades through to the high schools, in the unbiased selection of the teaching personnel.

"It is regrettable, however, that this same expression of understanding of and appreciation for the instructional qualifications of Negroes has not yet been felt by those responsible for the selection of personnel for the city's colleges. Nevertheless, to the end that the board of higher education does realize this important fact and that it does take steps to rectify this inconsistency between these two city departments, the Greater New York Coordinating Committee for Employment intends to exert every effort to see that Negroes are placed as regular instructors with tenure in City college, Hunter college, Brooklyn college and Queens college."

Meanwhile, a sub-committee headed by Mac C. Davies, appointed to arrange for the prosecution of the campaign, is making preparations for a mass meeting in Harlem on Sunday afternoon May 18 at Abyssinia Baptist church. The annual meeting of the board of higher education is scheduled for May 19. At a meeting of the Pan-Hellenic conference, comprising the Negro Greek letter societies of New York City, complete support was pledged to the coordinating committee, according to Mr. Davies. A general meeting of other interested organizations will be held Saturday afternoon at Abyssinia church.

Union's New President

ADVOCATES of interracial co-operation everywhere in Virginia will be delighted that the trustees of Virginia Union University have chosen DR. J. MALCUS ELLISON, to succeed DR. WILLIAM J. CLARK, as the institution's first Negro president. DR. ELLISON has for a number of years taken a prominent part in the work of the Virginia Commission on Interracial Co-operation, and is at present chairman of its Research and Survey Committee. His extramural work with the commission has given DR. ELLYSON, who has been professor of philosophy and vice-president of Virginia Union, an especially broad view of the field in which the ambitious young Negro college graduate must work and live in Virginia.

The retiring president of Virginia Union, says DR. THEODORE F. ADAMS, president of the board, will devote a portion of his time to developing the theological department of our seminary." It perhaps is not generally known, but Virginia Union University has graduated some of the most successful Negro ministers in America. Speaking of the part that the private colleges have had in educating Negro preachers, DR. CHARLES S. JOHNSON of Fisk University, in his recent book on The Negro College Graduate, pointed out that "Virginia Union and Lincoln have, through their own stress of courses, developed the largest groups of conspicuously successful ministers." Our Richmond college for Negroes has distinguished itself also for its work in the social sciences.

Negro colleges, with more wisdom than has been shown by many white institutions of higher learning, have tended to specialize in certain fields and have avoided, to a considerable extent, needless and costly competition with each other. In Virginia, Hampton Institute has been distinguished for its library training courses, agricultural supervision, vocational teachers and choral music. Virginia State College might be called the liberal arts college, and there is St. Paul's, another excellent Negro school with strong emphasis on vocational training.

DR. ELLISON is almost as familiar with the general picture of facilities for the higher education of the Negro in Virginia, as he is with the curriculum of his own college. He is young, vigorous and capable, and skilled in the fine arts needed for co-operation with other Negro d white intellectual leaders. Not only -inia Union, but other Negro col- in Virginia, and State education as a whole, may profit from his presidential administration. Ahead lies the possibility of further consolidation of the specializing trends in Negro education, and perhaps more State support where it is needed.

Navy Asks Hampton Pilots To Sign Up---- Then Changes Mind

HAMPTON INSTITUTE, Va.—Student pilots in Hampton Institute's civilian pilot training program had a faint glimmer of hope recently that at last they would be able to put their flying talents to use in defending America with the U. S. Navy.

But the joy was short living and the students found that they were merely the victims of another Navy "boner."

It all started when the Hampton undergraduates in the Civilian Aeronautics Administration sponsored flying courses received letters from Lieutenant Clark Bucknam, USNR, of the Naval Aviation Cadet Selection Board at Anacostia, D. C., asking that they immediately seek appointment as aviation cadets. Searching through the enclosed application form and two pages of rules and regulations, the young men found no mention of racial discrimination and thought that at last they would be given an opportunity to fight for their country with the U. S. Navy.

NOV 15 1941

GLAD TO SERVE

Two of the student pilots, Richard W. Hall of Albany, Georgia and Edward A. Gibbs of New York City, immediately wrote to Lieutenant Bucknam to verify this assumption and told him that they were colored.

His point-blank answer, which stilled the hopes of Hampton students that the Navy had at last accepted democracy, stated that the Navy accepted "applications from Negroes in none but the messman branch."

Continuing, Lieutenant Bucknam said that "this policy was instituted in the interests of harmony aboard ship."

And while the Navy continues its urgent appeal for flyers, many hundreds of experienced Negro pilots all over the nation continue to train for the day that they may serve in the defense of America.

Dr. Ellison Inducted As Union President

First Negro Tech School To Be Opened In Virginia

RICHMOND — Virginia Union University conferred upon one of its former students the highest honor it can give. In an impressive ceremony Friday noon, Dr. John Malcus Ellison was inaugurated as the fourth president of his Alma Mater.

The inaugural ceremony took place in a temporary outdoor theater in front of historic Coburn Hall on the Virginia Union campus. The contrast between the stately elm trees and the improvised roadway which provided traction for the many trucks of concrete which rumbled by en route to the site of the new Belgian Building 100 yards from the scene of the inauguration, gave visible evidence of the progress of the Virginia Union of the future.

The scene was admirably staged with the maroon vested choir of the university as a backdrop; an elevated and elongated stand seating about 100 robed men, respresenting the cream of the educators of America; was back of the inaugural stand. Spread out in front of this stage, were rows upon rows of seats, which were crowded with more than a thousand visitors, including delegates to the annual convention of the Third District Teachers Association.

MADE COLORFUL SCENE

The colorful robes and togas of the bachelors, masters, and doctors flaunting purple, red, white and blue colors; mingled with the vari-colored costumes of the choir added a beauty to the scene, which was only matched by the solemnity of the occasion.

The academic march, in which all of the visiting educators participated, was led from the administration building to the inaugural scene under direction of the marshal, Prof. C. T. Russell, after which the University Choir rang forth with the opening song.

The venerable Dr. Joshua B. Simpson, representing the faculty, presided during the inaugural, and Dr. Wililam John Clark, retiring president of the university invoked the Divine blessing. The choir, under the skillful direction of Mrs. Aldena Wyndham Davis, sang throughout the services.

Dr. W. T. Johnson, representing the university's board of trustees, in presenting Dr. Theodore F. Adams, pastor of First Baptist Church (white) and also chairman of the board of trustees of the university, gave a running history of the institution and its former leaders.

Dr. Adams, preceding his presentation of the scroll of office to Dr. Ellison, gave a picture of the future trend of youth education, which he predicted would find Virginia Union University in the forefront under its new administration.

The Rev. B. E. Mayes. president of Morehouse College, Atlanta, Ga., delivered the inaugural and induction prayer.

DELIVERED SCHOLARLY ADDRESS

After receiving his scroll of office, Dr. Ellison began his inaugural address, which was both scholarly and profound in its interpretation of the responsibility of the university to the youth of today.

"The school must determine just what course it should pursue in training the youth for his social and civic responsibilities in the community in which he expects to live," he said. "It is in this field that Virginia Union will operate. We shall continue to develop a religious, moral and civic leadership for our people."

In his remarks, he said feelingly, "In the spirit of self-dedication, relying upon Divine aid and with faith in the goodness of man, I accept the responsibility and the challenge that this occasion offers."

The inaugural was closed with prayer by Dr. George Sims, pastor of Union Baptist Church, New York City.

Mayor Gordon B. Ambler of the City of Richmond, occupied a seat of honor on the inaugural stage throughout the entire ceremony. Other dignitaries seated upon the stage were as follows: Dr. Clayton Powell, pastor of Abyssinia Baptist Church, New York City; Dr. S. E. Hening of the Northen Baptist Convention, New York City; Dr. Nobell Y. Beale of the Southern Baptist Convention; Tennant Bryan of the Virginia Commission on Interracial Cooperation; Fred M. Alexander of the State Board of Education; the Rev. J. Alvin Russell, principal of St. Paul Normal and Industrial School; Dr. John M. Gandy, president of Virginia State College; Dr. Malcolm S. MacLean, president of Hampton Institute; Egbert G. Leigh, 3rd, of the board of trustees; Miss Tossie P. F. Whiting, Mrs. W. T. Johnson, Dr. J. H. Randolph and Dr. Joseph T. Hill, also members of the trustee board, and others.

This inaugural was followed by a series of related programs and events which were topped by the "at home" of President and Mrs. Ellison in the president's cottage.

Trustees Of St. Paul Vote To Make Change

LAWRENCEVILLE, Va.—(SNS)—Acting largely upon the recommendations of J. T. Thornton, executive vice principal, the Board of Trustees of The St. Paul Normal and Industrial School, in a special meeting Wednesday unanimously voted to raise the work of the school to a four-year undergraduate level, granting the bachelor of science degree. Authority was given to proceed at once with plans and preparations for the inauguration of the new program.

In adopting the advanced training the administration has also been asked to raise the work in the teacher-training division to the four year level by adding the Junior and Senior college years. Students completing this would be awarded the bachelor of science degree in education.

OFFERS 15 TRADES

The school at present offers training in 15 trades or industries. While all of these courses will gradually be placed on the college level the plan for the 1942-1943 school year is to advance the work to four years of technical training in the following skills: Carpentry; Automobile Mechanics; Masonry. Painting; Interior Decoration; Tailoring; Engineering, Plumbing, Steamfitting; Home Economics; Cosmotology. and Secretarial Science.

The Board of Trustees and the administration of St. Paul's School have recognize dfor some time the rapidly moving trend toward higher standards on the part of educational agencies generally. they have carefully studied and weighted the question of advancing the training of the work at St. Paul. Extensive investigation was begun in 1939, as the school was then faced with the problem of raising the teacher-training work to meet the present requirements of the State Board of Education or probably discontinuing such training.

The latter course was agreed upon, with the understanding that special provisions be made to improve the work of the industrial division, emphasizing training specifically designed to equip young men and women for employment as artisans in their chosen fields. In this connection Mr. Thornton, formerly director of industries at the school for 13 years, more recently vice principal of R. T Cole Junior Vocational High School, Kansas City, Missouri, was asked by the Board to return to the school in an executive capacity to revamp the work of the trade division.

FINDINGS PRESENTED

A study of the curriculum of other technical schools and a keep cognizance of the lack of technical training on the part of Negro Youth and the resultant lack of skilled employment prompted Mr. Thornton to present his findings to the Board and urge technical training on the college level.

The advancement program will necessitate physical expansion as well as curricular and staff expansion. Funds have been provided for a new dining hall and kitchen, and addition to the trade buildings. A model dairy barn will be erected immediately and will form the first unit of a future agriculture group.

The new objective in technical training prompted a change of name of this 53 year old institution, and The St. Paul Normal and Industrial School will hereafter be known as The St. Paul Polytechnic Institute.

Union's First Colored President

Defense news crowds our pages these days, but the selection of Dr. John M. Ellison, professor of philosophy, as president of Union University in Richmond is too important to overlook.

Union, following the lead of Howard, Shaw, Morgan, all the State and Methodist colleges, now has a colored head. Leading colleges with white presidents have dwindled to Lincoln, Fisk, Hampton and Meharry, private institutions which are largely endowed.

Since 1899, when Richmond Theological Seminary and Wayland Seminary united and became Union University, the institution has had four white presidents: Charles H. Corey, Malcolm MacVicar, George R. Hovey and William J. Clark, all of whom were exceptionally able men.

But today, when high taxes and depression have dried up philanthropy from individuals and the Northern Baptists, Dr. Ellison, an alumnus of Union, is called in to take over and keep Alma Mater alive.

His task is not easy. He must not only find new sources of income, but in this age of vocational and technical preoccupation he must adapt the institution to the needs of the times.

A new day has dawned for Union, and under Dr. Ellison we think it can rise to meet the challenge.

Dr. Ellison Given Okay by Students

MAY 3 1941

RICHMOND — In an oper statement released through the student senate, students of Virginia Union University this week condemned as "vicious and slanderous" an unsigned letter which is being circulated among approximately 3,000 alumni of the school branding Dr. J. M. Ellison as incapable of performing the duties placed upon him by his recent promotion to the post of executive vice-president of the university.

Dr. Ellison has been mentioned in the letter as a likely successor to Dr. W. J. Clarke, president of Union, who retires soon.

Taking their stand after consideration of all of the issues involved, the students made the following statements:

1. We feel that the said letter was intended to reflect upon the ability of the board of trustees which has so ably served Union down through the years.
2. We feel that is a reflection upon the alumni of Virginia Union University that one of its members should take such an underhand means (libel through U. S. mails) to defame the character of a person who has so nobly and capably served our school.

MAY 3 1941

3. In so far as the attitude and opinions of the students are brought in, we feel that the statement does not reflect the attitudes or opinions of the better thinking students of our institution.

The circular letter, called "scurrilous" by Dr. Ellison himself, cited dissatisfaction among both students and faculty of the university.

The students said:

"The person mentioned in the letter is a recognized authority in the field of rural sociology and economics, so recognized by the U. S. Government, the government of the State of Virginia, Virginia Polytechnic Institute, and by various national religious boards.

MAY 3 1941

"He has ably conducted courses in these fields. We feel that any free-lance instruction he has done in an effort to co-operate with the administration because such instruction is necessary in a small university which by reason of a limited budget must have a limited staff.

"We feel that Dr. Ellison has been a capable, efficient teacher while at Virginia Union and was irregular in meeting classes only when performing other duties assigned him by the university."

Recognizes Promotion

The conclusion of the statement issued by the students reads as follows:

MAY 3 1941

"We are glad to acknowledge and recognize the promotion of Dr. Ellison because we feel that his faithfulness, diligence, and efficiency in serving the institution warrants such recognition.

"We deplore the underhand tactics of the individual who wrote the letter because the attack is not a true picture of the situation or of Dr. Ellison's achievements. The cowardliness of printing such a record of epithets without signing one's name is inexcusable.

"We feel that the writer of such a letter is not imbued with the traditions of sincerity, truthfulness, and fair play which characterizes Union men and women."

The statement was signed by William F. Richardson, of Richmond, senior, and president of the Student Government Association.

Change of President at Union

It does not seem many years since the Richmond Theological Seminary became Virginia Union University, but the inflexible record of the years, yielding nothing to memory, insists that ground was broken on the present site forty-three years ago. Rev. CHARLES H. COREY was president then—an interesting and devoted figure. About him was much of the evangelist; in him was exemplified the fullest faith in the power of the gospel to elevate the life of the Negroes. After Dr. COREY came Dr. MALCOLM MACVICAR, and then Dr. GEORGE R. HOVEY, whose service to the school as professor, vice president, acting president and president covered nineteen years. When Dr. HOVEY resigned in 1919 to become secretary for education of the Baptist Home Mission Society, the choice of the trustees fell on Rev. WILLIAM J. CLARK, who had been Professor of Church History from 1913. Mr. CLARK had the difficult task of carrying the institution through the merger of Hartshorn and then through the years of critical readjustment of the school's finances. Prior to the depression years, Union was supported in large part by Northern Baptists who cherished much of the missionary zeal and educational hopes of 1865. The churches of the North had taken the lead in much of the training of the freedmen immediately after the abolition of slavery. So long as those lived who had any memory of the years of controversy, support of the Negro schools did not fail. As it happened, a change of emphasis in the work of Northern churches occurred about the time that the depression dried up many contributions to the missionary societies. Union University, along with many other schools, found revenues curtailed at a time when many students wished to enter the college, but felt the pinch of acutest poverty. How President CLARK battled with adverse conditions and found new friends in dark hours always will be a proud chapter in the history of the school. Worn with labor and covered with the honors of his devoted service, Dr. CLARK now resumes teaching duties, while hundreds of former students voice their thanks and their gratitude to him.

As new president of Union, the board has selected Dr. J. MALCOLM ELLISON, professor of Philosophy and executive vice president—the first Negro to head this important enterprise. Who can fail to be encouraged by the fact that a Negro educator of high ability is available for this work? May not Virginia see in this election a proof of progress through the years? Long has Virginia waited for the day when, with confidence, she could entrust administrative responsibility in the education of Negro youth to Negro leaders of proven worthiness. That time has arrived. Virginia takes heart and presses on.

RESIGNATION ACCEPTED

At the same meeting, the board of trustees agreed to accept the request of Dr. Clark, that his retirement from the presidency of Virginia Union be made effective June 15.

Dr. Clarke, who has been president of the university for 22 years, will devote a portion of his time to the development of the theological part of the university, it was announced by Dr. Theodore F. Adams, president of the board.

In voting to accept Dr. Clark's resignation, the trustees expressed their "real regret" and "deep appreciation" for Dr. Clark's services.

MAY 10 1941

BECAME PRESIDENT IN 1919

Dr. Clark became president of Union on January 1, 1919. Prior to that time, he had served as professor of church history and theological instruction since 1913.

A graduate of California College and Newton Theological Seminary, he had served as pastor and as a missionary to Burma, India, before taking up his duties at Virginia Union. In recognition of his services, in 1927, the Unverstiy honored him with the degree of doctor of divinity

The newly elected president, who is an alumnus of Union, has gained wide recognition for his sociological studies. He graduated from Union in 1925, received his master's degree from Oberlin College in 1927 and his doctor's degree from Drew University in 1933.

He joined the faculty of Virginia Union University as professor of philosophy, and before that time, had served as principal of two schools, as professor of sociology and philosophy at Virginia State College, and as an instructor in the school of religion at Howard University.

He has been effectively directing the campaign to bring the Belgian Building of the New York's World's Fair to the Virginia Union campus. Last March, he was elected to the position of executive vice-president of the university.

Members of the board of trustees expressed themselves as being "very happy" that Dr. Clark would continue his association with the University.

Dr. Clark himself stated that he has long desired to concentrate on theology instruction. Laying aside the burdens of the presidency would allow him time for this, he pointed out.

Dr. Ellison praised the work of the retiring president and stated: "The university has grown and continues to fill an ever enlarging place in the development of Negro leadership. As he (Dr. Clark) retires from this position of leadership in Negro education he holds a warm place in the affection of the large number of Negroes throughout the country who come under his influence."

The "experience and ability of Dr. Ellison" was lauded in a statement by Dr. Adams, who stated that the trustees "felt very fortunate in having him to carry on the work which Dr. Clark has to lay down."

Dr. Ellison Inaugurated V. U. U. Head

John Malcus Ellison, Ph. D., once a Northumberland County farm boy, became the first Negro president of Virginia Union University yesterday.

The 50-year-old educator was inaugurated under the elm trees of the college campus before a crowd of 1,000. Prominent white and Negro educators and civic leaders were on the platform and in the audience as Dr. Theodore F. Adams, pastor of Richmond's First Baptist Church and chairman of the university's board of trustees, inducted Dr. Ellison into the presidency.

"In the spirit of self-dedication, relying upon divine aid and with faith in the goodness of man, I accept the responsibility and the challenge that this occasion offers," Dr. Ellison said.

Elected Last April

He had been elected president of the university last April when Dr. William J. Clark, president for 20 years, had asked the trustees to accept his request for retirement. Dr. Clark pronounced the invocation yesterday, before the audience in special stands in front of Coburn Hall, built by the American Baptist Home Mission Society in 1889.

In the audience was Dr. Ellison's 80-year-old mother, Mrs. Maggie J. Conway of Burgess Store, hamlet where the educator was born.

The new president comes into office at a time when a $700,000 structure, the Belgian Building from the New York World's Fair, is being reassembled on the campus as a gift from the Belgian government.

Dr. Simpson Presides

Dr. Joshua B. Simpson presided at the ceremonies, and seated on the platform during Dr. Ellison's inaugural address, in addition to Dr. Clark, now president emeritus, and Dr. Adams, were Mayor Ambler, Tennant Bryan of the Virginia Committee on Interracial Co-operation; Dr. S. ENCOURAGING SIGN

The selection of Dr. J. M. Ellison for the presidency of the Virginia Union university at Richmond, Va., should be greeted with enthusiasm in our educational centers. For the first time since its founding, Union university has chosen a Negro educator to guide its destiny in a world where black leadership has been crowded out.

There is scarcely any need of training Negroes in educational administration when the opportunity to obtain substantial administrative appointments is limited to the point of being negligible. It is discouraging indeed for our educators who have spent years in preparing themselves for academic functions to find that they are invariably ignored by white trustees who are yet unconvinced of the ability of the Negro to administer a first rate educational institution.

In the election of Dr. J. M. Ellison, the trustees of the Virginia Union university have exercised good judgment. We believe the new president will usher in a new era of academic prestige for a school as old as Union, yet so little known.

$322,833 IN EXPANSION PROGRAM FOR COUNTY IS APPROVED BY PRESIDENT

Childersburg And Munford Projects Released By Roosevelt

CITY SCHOOL PLANNED FOR SYLACAUGA AREA

A Talladega County School System expansion program amounting to $322,833.33 has been made possible by the federal government, acting swiftly to meet the emergency caused by the concentration of thousands of defense workers in this area.

It also was announced Thursday morning that a federal grant of $67,500 has been made for a Sylacauga school project to cost a total of $85,500.

The response from Washington came a few days after E. A. McBride, county superintendent of education, had returned at the end of a series of conferences in which the urgency of the situation was outlined to federal officials.

A telegram from Senator Lister Hill Thursday morning informed The Daily Home that President Roosevelt Wednesday gave final approval to the following projects:

Childersburg school, Project Ala. 1-126, an outright grant of $135,000.

Munford school, Project Ala. 1-128, estimated total cost, $95,000, federal grant $65,000.

Outright federal grants on the two projects amount to $200,000, making possible the construction of school facilities costing a total of $230,000.

Earlier a Childersburg Negro school project amounting to $67,000 had been approved and the county had received $25,333.33 for operation and maintenance, bringing the grand total to $322,-333.33.

The operation and maintenance allotment, a check for which already has been received, represents one-third of a total grant, which is to be advanced as it is needed through the school year.

Early action in the release of the money and the actual beginning of the expansion program is expected.

The project at Childersburg, as originally outlined, includes the construction of a new high school building, containing 10 classrooms, a lunch room, a library and a laboratory.

In addition four new classrooms will be added to the existing elementary school facilities, Mr. McBride said.

A new building for Negro students at Childersburg will be erected, including 10 classrooms and a combination auditorium and gymnasium.

At Munford the project will include the addition of 16 new classrooms to the existing building as well as an assembly room for primary children.

Mr. McBride went to Washington armed with a brief which presented clearly and conclusively the facts on the emergency which confronted the county schools.

It simply was a case of sudden defense industrial developments overloading a system to a point that brought a crisis close to hand.

The brief on which the county's plea was based gave the picture school-by-school. It showed the actual increase in enrollment, listing specifically the number of children added to the rolls of each school because their families have come to this area for defense employment.

It showed the pupils per teacher throughout the system and the classroom facilities, which are far short of meeting the demand for the school year just beginning.

The entire brief consisted of concrete facts, not estimates, and it was of tremendous benefit in giving federal authorities a clear conception upon which to act.

Mr. McBride paid tribute to the assistance rendered in Washington by Representatives Sam Hobbs, Senator Lister Hill and members of the staff of Senator Bankhead, who was out of the city.

"They did everything they possibly could have done," he said. "We are deeply appreciative of their help.

The projects listed thus have gone a long way.

Prepared by county school authorities, they went first to the Alabama Educational Department office.

Approved there, they went to the regional PWA office at Jacksonville. The next step was to the PWA office in Washington, where the projects were checked from the engineering and legal standpoints.

They then went to the United States Department of Education for a checking as to the need for classroom facilities and of the type facilities required.

Returned from there to PWA headquarters, the projects finally made their way to the president's desk.

Dean Of Negro Schoolmasters Retires After Teaching 51 Years

APR 27 1941

By NELL FANNIN HUTCHINSON

ENTERPRISE, ALA., April 26.—One day recently an aging colored man, slightly stooped, slightly gray, with the precise grooming and manner that bespeak the "professor," cleared his desk, locked the school house door and ended 51 continuous years of service.

This year William M. Donald, 71, dean of negro schoolmasters in this section, perhaps in all the State, had reached an age when retirement is required.

Should the number of his students be computed by his average yearly enrollment, 10,800 children have passed under his hand and felt the impress of his deliberate and honest personality.

APR 27 1941

The son of a slave, Donald was born on a cattle farm along the banks of Pea River at Bellwood in Geneva County. His father, Nelson Donald, property of Thompson Donald, had no memory of the period from the time he was a happy savage in his native Africa until "when he come to himself and knew anything at all" he was on the Donald plantation.

"All people them days hunted river bottom lands" the old professor stated. There they tilled the verdant fields and let their cows and sheep graze the pine barrens of the surrounding country for a radius of 20 miles.

Donald remembers how, as a boy, he worked with the herdsmen and kept the droves of animals rounded up. The day of greatest excitement and activity was when, after many days of driving, the sheep were penned and sheared in the Spring of the year.

A combine of cattlemen, Donald, Wilkerson and Milligan, operated in the Bellwood area. Their cows and sheep by the hundreds roamed the unbroken pine forests where the towns of Enterprise, New Brockton and Samson now stand, according to the story.

Ambition Was To Get An Education

Even back in those early days the boy, William Donald, had one aim and ambition in life. That was to get an education. When he grew old enough to be a wages hand he started saving his money. He attended the brief schools provided for his race and later went to Troy, where educational opportunity was better.

By much hard labor at any and every task that came to hand he managed to reach Montgomery. He attended and was graduated from State Teachers College there when W B. Paterson, a white man, was principal, and all teachers in the higher grades were white people.

Around the age of 20 he started teaching at Shady Grove in Clayhatchie community, near where he was born. He spent 10 years in one-teacher schools in Coffee and Geneva Counties and two years at River Junction, Fla. He w s permitted to use the churches of his people as school houses. Equipment was a word unknown. Sometimes there were no benches and such a thing as desks were unheard of. Wooden shutters served for windows. When they were closed you couldn't see and when opened you froze. There was no heat. When the cold became unbearable the teacher built a fire in the yard and the children went out to warm and returned to their studies. Water came from a spring and was drunk from a gourd. Nobody ever heard of sanitation and thought that hookworm was "ground itch."

Thirty-six years ago Donald came to Enterprise to teach. There was nc town then, only a house or two and a crossroads store or so. The schoo had an enrollment of about 60 pupils. He taught in a one-room building. Last year there was an enrollment of 400, the house was a two-story frame building with modern equipment and he was assisted by a faculty of several teachers.

There are 432 of his graduates scattered all over the United States. He relates that as he walked along the streets of Chicago two years ago he heard someone exclaim, "There goes Prof. Donald." It was one of his ex-pupils. It was the same in Jacksonville, Fla.

Five Children Are Teachers

The majority of his boys and girls have developed into useful citizens There are a few doctors among them several pharmacists, scores of teachers, clerical workers and skilled artisans in addition to the general run of laborers.

Five of his own nine children are teachers, one holds a government position, one is a decorator, one a barber, one is in college and one is a domestic. All except two are high school graduates.

He never married but once and he boasts that he and his wife, Johnnie, never had a serious quarrel. A fight would be unmentionable.

During his Florida residence he took up photography as a side line as he couldn't support his growing family on a part-time teacher salary. The record of events and family trees of this section can be traced in the collection of his "studio." Once he was employed as a government photographer.

APR 27 1941

In addition to his neat, white cottage, he owns 15 small houses that he "rents out."

Having performed well his task he will be retired with the respect and good will of all citizens of the town, both white and colored.

NON-RESIDENTS IN SCHOOLS COST CITY

Non-resident pupils attending the Birmingham public schools cost city taxpayers more than twice the amount of tuition their parents were required to pay during the last school term. This information was contained in a letter from Dr. C. B. Glenn, school superintendent, to Commission President W. Cooper Green, made public Wednesday.

Dr. Glenn's figures show that last session 755 non-resident students were enrolled, 658 white and 97 Negro children. There were 487 of them attending high school and 268 elementary schools. The amount collected for their tuition was $23,354.84.

Average cost per pupil has been reduced from $106 to $84.15 for white high school pupils and to $64.45 for white elementary pupils, Dr. Glenn said in hi letter. Tuition charged white non-resident pupils is $5 a month for high school and $2.50 a month for elementary school, or $45 for a nine-month high school term and $22.50 for a full nine-month elementary school term.

In his letter, Dr. Glenn said the number of non-residents has been considerably reduced from its former level. It was said that all of the tuition due from non-residents for last term has not yet been col lected.

Increase in tuition rates to make up the difference between the charges for city school attendance and its cost may be considered, it was said. It was pointed out that the rates formerly were much higher but were reduced during the depression.

ALABAMA ASKED TO GIVE MORE FUNDS TO SCHOOLS

AUG 28 1941

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Aug. 27.—(AP)—The Alabama Citizens Advisory Educational Council adopted a legislative policy Wednesday calling for appropriation of more school funds, removal of the constitutional restriction on local taxes for education, and for appointment, rather than election, of the state and all county superintendents of education.

The organization, composed of laymen and educators, and which drew approximately 15 to Wednesday's meeting, also recommended that:

The State Board of Education establish as minimum standards for state, city, and county superintendents of education one year of graduate training in educational administration in a standard institution, and five years of successful teaching and school administration or supervisory experience, provided that such standards do not operate to disqualify incumbents.

The principles of equalization as embodied in the present minimum program act be retained:

Nine-Month Term Asked

The state be asked to furnish increased financial support needed to provide a minimum school term of nine months and improved school facilities for every child in Alabama;

AUG 28 1941

As a means of providing longer terms and better opportunities for education the next Legislature authorize a constitutional amendment to be voted on by the people which would remove the existing constitutional school tax limitation upon local administrative school units so that the citizens in such units may levy upon themselves the tax they may desire in order to improve educational opportunities in excess of the state minimum school program.

An amendment to the teacher retirement act to (1) eliminate the restriction under which the contributions of a teacher who withdraws from the system are not refunded unless and until such teacher has been a member of the system for at least three years, and (2) to restore the provisions of the retirement plan for teachers to approximate the original proposal—specifically to include all prior service and disability benefits and to finance the plan with appropriations that are direct and not conditional.

Officers Elected

The council reelected Robert E. Noble, Anniston, president; Dr. French Craddock, Sylacauga, vice president; Frank L. Grove, Montgomery, secretary-treasurer, and chose Senator Hayes Tucker, Tuscaloosa, and Frank Karle, Blackshear, as new members.

The council also voted to increase its membership from 32 to 40, to include 32 laymen and eight educators.

(EDITOR'S NOTE—Below is printed the third of a series of articles on problems incident to the Birmingham public school system, prepared by the Public Relations Committee of the Birmingham public schools. This article deals with how schools and business can cooperate. Subsequent articles will touch upon other problems.)

PUBLIC SCHOOLS ARE SUPPORTED BY TAXES, AND TAXES COME LARGELY FROM BUSINESS TRANSACTIONS; thus schools have a vital interest in business, and business has a just right to its stake in public education.

With regard to the nature of business and the educational system in the United States, it is at once evident that one is the reciprocal of the other. The needed financial support makes the schools directly dependent on business; and, without the cultivated tastes and desires of the American people, it is certain that there would be little sale for the things that go with our higher standard of living.

Schools, in the past quarter century especially, have concerned themselves with what they can do to aid the business man. There has been a great effort to study his methods of doing things and actually to advertise his advanced products. Furthermore, course after course has been added to the curriculum in order to train workers for the factory, office and sales department. In fact, the schools have gone so far in vocational training that there is developing now a fear that this change to the immediate, utilitarian aim of education is causing cultural training to be neglected in many schools.

What aid can business men render the school? They can help maintain the real purpose of the school, and assist it in retaining its ancient heritage for the spiritual and cultural sake of the workers. After all, the worker without vision, without taste, without seasoned ambition will soon become a deadweight in any democratic organization.

The business men can appreciate that an educated populace is the most fertile ground for sales promotion work. The simple have few wants, and the uneducated are poorer risks for legitimate business.

The business man knows that mass education in a democracy is a "big business" and must be managed as such. There must be trained administrators and highly skilled teachers. There is no place for political favor in the selection of personnel; neither should the cost of a good teacher prohibit what is best for the children. A cheap, careless office worker is usually very expensive. This is doubly true in a classroom where children must be directed; an irreplacable human life is at stake instead of a few dollars.

Democracy expects that there be no antagonism between business and education. One cannot live at the expense of the other. Both prosper together. There is great need for the closest cooperation. Business men should visit the school and let the teachers know what kind of industrial citizens they want. And surely the business men's genius for organization and management can be of vital aid in the far-reaching and long-distance planning of school administration.

FIRE DESTROYS WILMER SCHOOL

Origin of Blaze Is Undetermined; New Facilities Are Being Sought

The one-room frame schoolhouse for colored children at Wilmer yesterday morning was destroyed by fire of undetermined origin, it was announced yesterday afternoon by C. F. Vigor, assistant superintendent in charge of rural schools.

Vigor quoted Ophelia Broadnax, teacher, as saying no one in the Wilmer vicinity seemed to have any idea how the blaze started. The fire was discovered shortly before dawn.

Twenty-nine children were left temporarily without school facilities, and today Vigor was attempting to make arrangements for housing them in some vacant building in or near Wilmer.

The fire was one of a series that has plagued the county school commission in the past year. First an unused school in the northern part of the county burned; next a building at Whistler was destroyed after two earlier blazes had been discovered there before they got well under way; then a large building in the Baker School plant on Government Road was razed, and now the small Wilmer building is gone. All fires were at night, and authorities branded some of them as definitely of incendiary origin.

At a meeting of the school commission yesterday afternoon, Commissioner James J. Alvarez, chairman of the rural schools committee, instructed W. P. Davidson, schools business manager, to start making plans for early replacement of the burned structures. The School Board is now studying ways and means to secure the most they can in new buildings with the fire insurance money they have.

Elementary Schools Of City System Give Diplomas To 1,788

Promotion Exercises Are Held By White And Negro Classes Here

Elementary school promotion exercises, which are sending a total of 1,788 white and Negro children to high schools this week, range from miniature commencements, complete with adult speakers, to the newer type of program planned and presented by the children themselves.

South Highland School exercises, held Thursday, featured a talk by Kennecht Powers. Former South Highland School pupil, Kenneth is now president of the Ramsay High School student body.

South Highland promoted 36 children to high school, and the seniors ended their eight years together with a luncheon Thursday at the Elizabeth Aust Tea Room.

Barrett School seniors presented a play and program at their promotion exercises with talks by the class officers. Mary Jo Forstman, president; Billie Street, vice president, and Ann Acker, secretary. Palmer Turner was stage manager for the play presented by Paul Ray, Dorothy Ward, Barbara Colley, John Palmer, Christine Cooper, Billy Herring, Marilyn Walker and Maud Ellen Jordan. Nestar Farraux read the script.

Lakeview School's mid-term graduation, which took place Wednesday, featured a talk by the historian, Earl Shugerman, and welcome of guests by the class president. Representatives from a high school spoke, and the Lakeview School orchestra played several selections.

Promotion day exercises were held this week for the senior class of Glen Iris School. Arthur Fox presided, and Joe Grant, class president, gave the welcoming address. A skit, "These New-Fangled Doings," was presented. Music and exercises were under direction of Mrs. Winifred Hysong. C. P. Underwood presented the diplomas at the conclusion of the class prophecy. A tea in honor of the class followed.

An evening of dramatics was given recently by the graduation class of Hemphill School. Four one-act plays filled the program, which was directed by Maude Hardy Arnold. Pianists were Lois Boyles and Jack Howard; Mary Stuart sang and Frances Dorn danced.

Gate City School held its graduation exercises in the school auditorium recently. The graduating class was entertained at a tea at the home of Mrs. G. C. Bradley, and then taken to the theater by Principal Ralph Martin.

A total of 1,805 white children are receiving diplomas this week from grammar schools in comparison to 1,055 who were graduated at mid-term in 1940. Of the total, 520 are boys and 485 are girls.

From Negro elementary schools, 783 children are being promoted into high school, 325 boys and 458 girls. The total for last year was 746, showing an increase over last year of 37.

The number of white elementary school mid-term seniors is decreased 4.7 per cent, of Negro elementary school seniors is increased 5 per cent, and the average shows a decrease for the entire city system of .7 per cent.

Negro School Bldg. Completed Last Week

Work was completed last week on the $12,000 Negro School Building, on East Jackson Street, which was under the supervision of W. R. Lipscomb. The building adjoins the old school building which in the past has had to take care of all of the Negro students. This week pupils of the high school department moved into the new building, which has six large classrooms and will accomodate 300 students.

Negro youths between the ages of 18 and 25, under the National Youth Administration, were used by Mr. Lipscomb. None of these thirty boys had any experience and were allowed to work only 68 hours a month. The project was started in May, 1939.

The building is of brick veneer with an asbestos roof. It is 151 ft. by 72 feet. It is one of the best of its kind in the state and people of Demopolis are justly proud of it. They are also proud of the work accomplished by Mr. Lipscomb.

Colored School Destroyed By Fire

Wednesday night about 7:00 o'clock a fire was discovered in the main building of the Bibb County Training School located near Centreville, and before the blaze could be extinguished it quickly spread to the entire building, completely destroying it within a few minutes. Only a few books, desks and a clock were saved.

Henry Davidson, who was responsible for the organization of this school many years ago, and who has worked hard for many years building this school up, stated that he was unable to determine how the fire originated.

This school was built mostly from contributions solicited by Henry Davidson from the white and colored people of Bibb County, and his friends and friends of the school in other states, and it is sincerely hoped that arrangements can be made with the County, State and Federal Government to replace this building.

Supt. Francis Pratt stated Wednesday night that the building was covered with $3,375 insurance and the contents $750. The value of the building and contents was estimated at $6,500.

13,967 Whites Listed Co.-City Has Grand Total Of 15,552

The February issue of the official "Alabama School Journal" reveals some startling figures as regarding the number of white school children in Cullman County, compared to the other counties of the state. In the statistical tables, under the caption, "Facts about Alabama Schools," the following information has been learned:

Cullman County schools now have 13,967 white school census children between the ages of 6 and 20. Only Jefferson and Walker counties have a greater number. Negro children in this county total only 147, giving our county school system a grand total of 14,114 school census children.

SCHOOL OVERFLOW CROWDS BUILDINGS

BESSEMER, Ala., Oct. 31—An increase of about 460 Negro pupils in the Bessemer schools over the enrollment of last year is causing considerable congestion, J. C. Orr, superintendent, said. The increase is believed to be due to the employment in defense industries, he said.

Three Negro churches in the vicinity of the Dunbar School are being used to house the overflow pupils, and 10 double sessions have been necessary to accommodate the increased enrollment, while new buildings are being constructed. A seven-room building of concrete blocks is being constructed at the Dunbar School as a NYA project, which will relieve some of the congestion. A three-room frame building at Carver School is nearing completion and will soon be in use, he said.

Negro Youths Erect a $6,000 Building at Cost of $900

Erecting a four-class room school building which would have cost $6,000 on a contract basis, for approximately $900 was the achievement of negro youths of the National Youth Administration.

The structure at Moulton Heights was recently completed to replace the old negro elementary school building there which was destroyed by fire last February 7. Since that time the students have been attending classes in a church and private homes. The new building has four class rooms, office and commodious hall, and two of the rooms are so constructed they can be converted into an auditorium with a seating capacity of 250.

Material from two abandoned schools, Massey and Summit, was salvaged and went into the new structure. All the materials bought was rafters, roofing, hardware, five doors and outside panelling which is imitation brick and gives the appearance of real brick walls. Some desks were taken from other schools, with a surplus, repaired and installed in the new building.

There are 88 students in the Moulton Heights school in grades one to eight and three teachers. They are Prof. Leon Sheffield, the principal; Carrie Rogers and Carrie Harris. The latter is the oldest teacher in point of service in the county school system, having been an instructor for 51 years.

ONE-TEACHER SCHOOLS IN COUNTY SHOW DECREASE AND INCREASE

The April issue of "The Alabama School Journal," under the caption "Facts About Alabama Schools," places Cullman County in the peculiar position of having both and increase and a decrease in one-teacher schools. One-teacher schools for white children were reduced from 26 to 3 in seven years. During the same period schools for Negroes in this county increased from none to one.

Only four counties in the state had no white one-teacher schools and only one county had no Negro one-teacher schools, the report showed.

8 MONTHS' SCHOOL TERM CONSIDERED

County Board Will Study Proposal Closely

A tentative budget making possible an eight-month term for unaccredited schools in Calhoun County was considered last night in the oard of Education meeting.

Estimated expenditures for the budget amount to $407,737.20. while receipts are $399,384, meaning an overdraft of $8,353.20.

In order to cut down the overdraft as much as possible, the board appointed C. J. Allen, superintendent of schools, and M. H. Watson, chairman of the board, to confer on the matter before the proposed budget is submitted to headquarters in Montgomery.

"It is our sincere hope that we can provide an eight-month school term for the county," Allen said.

At the meeting a motion was also passed to offer a teaching position to Miss Ailene Lecroy, present attendance officer for the county.

Sybil Moses presented to the board the proposed plan for the beginning of an extensive National Youth Administration for Negroes at Margaret Barber Seminary. The board gave the plan its official endorsement.

Childersburg School So Crowded Buses Are Used For Class Rooms

For lack of classroom space, children at Childersburg are being taught in school buses, County Superintendent of Education E. A. McBride announced Friday.

At the same time it was revealed that the president has approved the Childersburg Negro school project.

County officials, of course, were appreciative of the action on the Negro school, which has had an increase of about 30 students.

But they couldn't help wondering when action is coming on the grant for the white school, where enrollment is 500 greater than normal, due directly to defense concentration there.

"We are using two of our new buses," Mr. McBride said. "They each accomodate 40 children comfortably and at this season of the year they are serving our need very well.

"We have no way of heating them, however, and it will be impossible to use them when cold weather sets in."

JEANES TEACHER'S REPORT

The County-wide Songfest held at the First Baptist church, Union Springs, Sunday. February 18th, was quite a success. Due to the type of organization that we have among the teachers of the county the program worked like a clock. This was a fine chance to show what cooperation does. We hope the lesson of cooperation which we tried to teach will be used to advantage by those who witnessed the occasion.

The program was carried out in the following manner. The Jeanes Teacher made a few remarks as a matter of getting over to the audience the type of organization that the teachers boast of having, and presented D. D. Bethune, who presided in the absence of the president of the County Teachers Association. Bethune explained to the audience the purpose of the occasion and proceeded with a short program on the achievements of the Negro. Develma Toussel beautifully led the congregation with the National Negro Anthem after which we were led in prayer by one of the Community's minister's, Rev. Thrash. Leo M. Jackson gave the history of Negro Music in the form of a beautiful story which could be understood by all. Bethune then presented Marietta Hill, the chairman of the intermediate study group who sponsored the whole affair, it was her duty to introduce the judges and announce the choruses. After the choruses had finished the chairmen again turned the program over to Bethune who presented the guest, after which the whole affair was turned over in the hands of the Jeanes Teacher who remarked and announced the winners.

The following procedure made the songfest. The songs that were used were chosen by a committee designated by the State Department of Education, headed by J. T. Brooks of the State Teachers College, Montgomery, and sent out to all county leaders by J. S. Lambert, Director of negro education for the State of Alabama. Each chorus could not exceed sixteen participants. Each chorus sang the two designated songs and one song of his own choosing. These songs were taken from the National Jubilee melodies and were to be sung without any rearrangement. The groups were judged according to Harmony. Rhythm, Interpretation, Attack. Release and Stage Appearance. The songs used for the elementary groups were "Daniel Saw the Stone," and "Show Me The Way," for the high school groups "Lord Have Mercy" and "Great Day." On receiving the information from the State Officials we were taught the songs by those teachers in the county who have experience in this work. The following schools participated and made the following points: Elemnetary: Jones Chapel, Carrie L. Fox, director, 127 points; Aberfoil, Alma Singleton, director, 143 points; Thompson. Julia M. Evans, director, 142 points; Shilo, Almeta Davie, director, 64 points; Great Hope, Sadie Gardner, director, 118 points; Pleasant Grove 2. Lucile Ivey, director, 114 points; Corner Stone, Mattie Tatum, director, 125 points; and Inverness, Louvenia Pugh, Director, 148 points. High School Groups: Aberfoil, Alma Singleton, director, 148 points; Lee, Lawrence C. Dacus, director, 144 points; Great Hope, Sadie Gardner, director, 122 points; Post Oak, W. C. Powell, director, 128 points; and Mt. Azure, Leo M. Jackson, director, 169 points.

The winners for the Elementary groups were Inverness, First Place; Aberfoil, second place; and Thompson, third place. For high school groups, Mt. Azure, First Place; Aberfoil, second; and Lee, third. The judges for the contest who were chosen by the committee of the groups were R. Mayberry, director of music, Booker Washington high school, Montgomery, and T. J. Mayberry, Jr., State Teachers College, Montgomery The out of county visitors were teachers from the Vanburen School Barbour County, Caldwell State Teachers College, Saffold Montgomery, Mary F. McDavid, State Jeanes Agent, and T. M. Campbell, head of the Extension Service. Tuskegee Institute .The last two visitors spoke for the visitors and highly praised the teachers, pupils and parents for the very fine spirit that was manifected throughout the whole program.

The county will be represented at the district contest to be held in Pike County by Inverness Elementary and Mt. Azure High School. Intermediate group committee, Marietta Hill, Annie Walker, Onie Ivory. Almeta Bibb, Selena Moore, Linda Logan, Rose Lewis, all served beautifully in their places.

After their luncheon at the Clement Hotel, club members visited the school in a body and turned over the tools, gifts of individual members, to Prof. W. E. Morton, principal. A. E. A. Draws Up 12 Major Objectives For Its Vital Legislative Program In Looking Forward To '42 Elections

Cocking an eye at next year's statewide election, delegates of the politically potent Alabama Education Association Thursday adopted 12 legislative goals toward which the A. E. A. will strive in days to come.

George W. Hulme, Fort Payne, A. E. A. president, spotlighted the approaching political activity when he reminded teachers: "Now is the time for us to agree on principles because 12 months hence will begin the gubernatorial and legislative campaign."

As adopted, the A. E. A.'s legislative program includes the following aims:

MAR 27 1941

1. Free textbooks for the first six grades. (Instead of the first three grades, as at present.)
2. Exemption of school boards from the payment of state and local taxes levied on gasoline and lubricants used by school buses.
3. Appointment of county superintendents of education. (In some counties the superintendent is elected.)
4. Appointment of the state superintendent of education by the State Board of Education, the board to be elected. (The state superintendent is now elected and members of the board are appointed by the governor.)
5. Increased financial support to provide a minimum school term of eight months, and, ultimately, a term of nine months. (The present minimum term is seven months.)

At the time delegates adopted their legislation goals, they also approved 11 social and economic goals and nine educational goals—all of them submitted by an A. E. A. special commission, which has been working on the formulation of A. E. A. aims for several months. The assembly of delegates met in Phillips auditorium.

Mr. Hulme feels the work of the commission, headed by Dr. M. L. Orr, of Montevallo, is the most outstanding accomplishment of the A. E. A. in 1940-41. Specific purpose of the commission was to re-state certain goals for education in Alabama.

"We have a task set before us in this report to gear Alabama schools to a 'forward Alabama' program" he said. "We have proposed objectives which will vitalize education, together with suggested legislation to be accomplished.

"Our success in the past few years has come from our understanding of the association's program, and from our methodical contacts with those aspiring to positions of leadership in the state government.

Proposed Legislation Goals

1. The protection of educational appropriations against discriminatory prorations.
2. The appointment of the state superintendent of education by the State Board of Education, this board to be composed of one member from each congressional district, such members to be elected by popular vote for terms to be determined on a staggered basis.

3. The appointment of the county superintendent of education by the County Board of Education for a four-year term.

4. Minimum standards for city and county superintendents of education of one year of graduate training in educational administration and of five years of successful teaching, school administration, or supervisory experience, provided that such improved standards shall not operate to disqualify present incumbents.

5. The removal of constitutional school tax limitations upon local administrative school units in order that citizens of such units may levy upon themselves the taxes they desire to pay in order to enjoy educational opportunities in excess of whatever minimum school program the state may provide.

6. The exemption of school boards from the payment of state and local taxes levied on gasoline and lubricants to be used in the transportation of school children.

7. The retention of the principles of equalization as embodied in the present minimum school program act together with increased financial support needed to provide as the next step a minimum school term of eight months and an ultimate goal of a term of nine months for every child in Alabama, and to provide satisfactory instructional services and supplies, library facilities, adequate school buildings and equipment, satisfactory maintenance and operation of school plants including janitorial services, and safe and sufficient school transportation.

8. The elimination of matriculation fees in the high school to the end that the public school of Alabama may be FREE to EVERY child.

9. Adequate financial support for public institutions of higher education in keeping with financial support available for public elementary and secondary schools and in keeping with the needs for better trained workers and leaders in the industrial, agricultural professional, home and civic life of the state.

10. Amendment of the teacher retirement act so as to (a), eliminate the restriction under which the contributions of a teacher who withdraws from the system are not refunded unless and until such teacher has been a member of the system for at least three years; and (b), to restore the provisions of the retirement plan for teachers to approximate the original proposal—specifically to include all prior service and disability benefits and to finance the plan with appropriations that are direct and not conditional.

11. Modification and revision of the present tenure law as may seem necessary in the light of experience arising from its administration.

12. Free textbooks for the first six grades to be selected on the basis of multiple adoptions.

Social And Economic Goals

MAR 27 1941

1. Character development, emphasizing moral and spiritual values and the growth of the individual in his ability to give responsible direction to his own life.

2. A development of the ability to cope with social changes calmly and courageously through active and intelligent participation of all citizens in the affairs of the community, the state, and the nation.

3. Promotion of health and physical safety in order to reduce materially our present high rate of disease, accident and death.

4. A literate public trained in the use of the fundamental "tool subjects" such as reading, speech, writing and numbers and educated in the appreciation of the arts.

5. The improvement of home, family and community life through an appreciation for and an understanding of thrift, investments, home ownership.

6. Institutional services adequate to the development of maximum economic opportunity, normal social progress, and the conservation of human and natural resources.

7. The development of industries, including those based on mineral and water resources, and the development of agriculture through a balance of money crops, food, fertility, crops, forestry, and livestock, to the end that there may be a balance in our economic structure.

8. The improvement of technical skill and professional preparation among our people through a sound program of guidance and training as a means of developing our natural and human resources.

9. The development of mutually helpful relationships between races and economic groups within the state.

10. The displacement of ugliness with beauty, particularly through community planning, the development of public parks and the beautification of highways.

11. An appreciation of the part leisure should play in the lives of Alabama youth today and definite provisions that will enable them to use their leisure so that it may help them in the art of living and so contributing to a wholesome society.

Educational Goals

1. Re-emphasize character development of boys and girls in Alabama's schools.

2. Achieve more democracy in public schools by exemplifying its principles in administering educational programs and in all the activities within the schools.

3. Build a curriculum for the schools which most nearly meets the vital needs and interests of children and of the communities in which they live.

Not less study but more meaningful study is needed in our schools.

4. Expand and extend programs of vocational training in order that such opportunities may be made available to all the youth of Alabama. Vocational training should be preceded and accompanied by well planned programs of vocational guidance.

5. Develop plans whereby certain types of school services may be continued throughout the 12 months of the year.

6. Develop a strong program for broadening the intelligent participation of our people in civic affairs.

7. Build a program of teacher education which will develop teachers able to meet the demands of education in modern society.

8. Develop an effective plan for improving the in-service training of teachers.

Every school system should maintain a program of continuous study of its needs as a means of improving instruction and assuring professional growth.

9. Provide a well articulated 12-year program which will meet the needs of all children at different age levels and will eliminate sharp breaks between the eementary school and the junior high school an between the junior high school and the senior high school.

...y Teachers Change Jobs

FOR several weeks Dr. H. C. Pannell of the University faculty has been president of the Alabama Education Association. Already we see evidence that his administration in the A. E. A. is going to mean much to the teachers and to the schools of this state.

Well qualified by his studious years in education, his active interest in civic affairs of Tuscaloosa and Alabama, and his abundant knowledge of current affairs with which he is remarkably well informed, Dr. Pannell is admirably suited to impart new vigor and new direction to one of the most powerful agencies for good that exists in this state today.

One of the definite functions of the A. E. A., is to interpret to both the teachers and the public the various trends which are continually taking place in education, and also to assist both the teachers and the public in striving to correct unfavorable trends.

There are many salients to progressive development of public education in Alabama. Great progress has been made on virtually all of these fronts. More advances are yet to be achieved in practically all phases before our state has reached a satisfactory level.

One of the factors closely affecting our schools, our teachers and our school children is "teacher tenure on the same job." This is a part of the broader problem of "teacher tenure in education."

Just issued by the A. E. A., as "educational release No. 1" under the administration of Dr. Pannell, is a factual study of the question, "Why do Alabama teachers change jobs?" Professor William F. St. Clair of the University made this study on the basis of conditions in the school year 1937-38. He found that reasons differ for the various school divisions.

Among white high-school teachers a leading reason was "to accept a better school position." For the white elementary-school teachers, the prime reason was "to marry." Among negro teachers, the biggest factor was "I was not re-elected."

There were many other reasons also listed. Among them were "maternity," to "work outside the profession," to "teach nearer home" and "conditions at home."

Previously the A. E. A. had reported that 13 per cent of the white teachers of the state changed jobs in 1937-38, with the rate of change among negro teachers being slightly less. It varied greatly among the counties, being 2 per cent as a minimum and 38 per cent for a maximum among the 61 counties available for study. Turnover was highest among rural high-school teachers, being 57 per cent, and was lowest among city high-school principals. The high school teachers in general have a higher turnover than elementary-school teachers.

ARKANSAS' UNEQUAL EDUCATION RAPPED

18e-Ark.

CONWAY, Ark., Feb. 27—Speaking at the Arkansas Conference on Education and Race Relations, held Tuesday at Arkansas Teachers College, Edward McCuistion, State Supervisor of Negro Education, warned that inequalities in Arkansas public education, between the white and Negro races, particularly in the Eastern Arkansas areas where the Negro population is large—might well become the target of "pressure groups" if industrialization is advanced rapidly in the South by national defense manufacturing activities.

Stating that solution of the problem rests largely with the counties and school districts which control disbursements of public education funds, he said that this control accounts for the wide variation among counties of educational effort. In one county, he cited, $87 per white child was expanded in 1940, and $5 per Negro child; while in another the expenditure was $25 per white child and $21 per Negro child. For the year the average for the State was 36 white pupils per teacher and 47 Negro pupils per teacher.

Though wide variations are in evidence, the speaker said, there, is, on the whole, an increasing awareness of the need of providing better public schools for Negroes, and considerable progress has been made. At the same time, he stated, the educational effort on behalf of the State's Negro population, is still only one-third of that for the white population.

PRES. FLORIDA NORMAL AND INDUSTRIAL INSTITUTE, ST. AUGUSTINE, FLA., ENDS BRILLIANT CAREER

Funeral for Former Educator was Held Tuesday Buried on Institute Campus.

FEB 28 1941

Augusta, Ga.—(Special) — Nathan W. Collier, A. M., LL. D., passed away here in this city after a prolonged illness of many, many weeks. The end was not unexpected, due to the fact that he had been in failing health for several years, and came here to his home town where he was brought up, where he spent his boyhood days, for medical treatment, rest, and as his friends thought, complete recovery; but in spite of the attention given by the most eminent physicians, best trained nurses and specialists, he continued to lose ground, growing weaker and finally passed.

Prof. Collier was president of the Florida Normal and Industrial Institute at St. Augustine, Fla., an institution that he had served for more han forty years. He was its president when the the school was located in Jacksonville, Fla. It was through his farsightedness, his executive ability, coupled with his personal contacts with leading philanthropists of the nation, that enabled them to secure the school site in St. Augustine, where the school was finally moved and where it was located amid surroundings conducive to the best interests of education.

His passing came at a time when he was almost in sight of the goal that they were striving to reach for their endowment fund. He was a member of the Baptist church of this city, and was known throughout the nation as a stalwart leader. He was respected by Baptists of every walk of life. He knew no association, state or national convention bounds or limitations.

The funeral over the remains was held here Tuesday, February 25th, and then services were conducted at St. Augustine, Fla., where interment was on the campus of the institute. Messages, telegrams and resolutions began pouing in the next day after his death was announced. The presidents of several state conventions and a large number of national leaders were expected to attend the funeral.

Negro Teacher Holds Class While Building Is Moved

How a negro school teacher kept her pupils in class and continued lessons, even though the one-room school building was being moved to a new location a mile away, was told yesterday to the school board by Frank D. Miles, assistant director of instruction in charge of negro schools.

"Joe Novak, of Plant City, bought the tract where the Trapnell negro school was located, so the building had to be moved," Miles said. "I went out Wednesday afternoon, found the building already was gone, so I decided to check up and see how things were getting along.

"On the way over to the new location, I found the school house about a quarter-mile away from its old site, being dragged along on timbers, pulled by a winch with a mule tramping around and around. It was a slow process, with the building jolting and squeaking.

"I looked inside and, by golly, there sat the teacher, Carrie Brazil, delivering a lesson assignment to her 16 or 18 pupils, while the building rattled and shook.

"I asked her what in the world she was holding class for, while the school was in motion.

"She told me she was afraid that if she didn't continue to teach there while the building was being moved, the children would go to some other school, and she would be out of a job.

"I told her not to worry about her job, the pupils would be back, and so school was dismissed for the day."

NO FUNDS AVAILABLE FOR NEW NEGRO SCHOOL

DeSoto county commissioners have no funds available at the present time to aid in construction of a new negro school, it was reported at a meeting of the Arcadia Chamber of Commerce Monday night.

A chamber of commerce committee met recently with the commissioners to discuss the needs for a negro school, and it was pointed out that the county need furnish only about $1,000 as its share of the project, but even this was not available until after the tax assessor had completed her report and determined exactly how much the commission would have to spend during the coming year.

Arcadia will be given special prominence during Florida week at Atlantic City. The noted rodeo film, depicting the championship Arcadia rodeo, as well as the stock market, will be displayed during Florida week.

The winter rodeo will be held from December 31 through January 4, it was announced.

Great satisfaction was expressed by members at progress made in the livestock show.

The Dorr Field highway has been completed and is ready for public use, according to a report from the state highway department.

NEGROES NEED A NEW SCHOOL HOUSE

Ever since the editor of the Arcadian can remember, the Arcadia Negroes have needed a new school house. Fifteen years ago there was talk about taking down the old concrete block school house and moving it to the colored quarters, but it was not done. The reason assigned was that the blocks were too soft to permit being moved, and that was probably corfect. However, nothing has been done toward providing a new school house and the quarters that have been used are utterly inadequate and a disgrace to the community.

There have been several sporadic agitations about this matter. During the early days of the NRA and through several phases of the WPA the need of a Negro school was raised and some talk occasioned, but never any real action. Now there is a new agitation of the matter and in the opinion of the Arcadian it should be publicized and agitated until action is :aken and the goal realized..

Obviously the leadership in such a movement nust come from the county school board. Thus far 10 public declaration has been forthcoming from :hat source but it is time there was. Providing a new school house is never an easy matter, but they do :ome when the determination of the people reaches :he point to demand it.

It has been said that the school facilities of Ar:adia's colored quarters are the worst of any town of its size in the state. We are not in a position to :now, as to comparative conditions, but we do know from personal observation that if those of any other :ommunity are worse they would have to be unbelievably bad. Such a situation is no credit to any of us, and should be corrected.

NEED FOR NEW NEGRO SCHOOL RAISED AGAIN

Mass Meeting Held to Consider Proposition

Equipment Now Being Used Wholly Inadequate and a New House is Imperative

The need of a new school building for the colored people of Arcadia's Negro section, which has arisen numerous times during the past dozen or fifteen years and has not yet been satisfied, is up again and it appears to be here in militant and aggressive form until something is really done about it.

A few weeks ago the Chamber of Commerce spent some time in discussing this problem and ended up with the appointment of a committee to see what could be done. A conference with the county school board about convinced the members of the committee that not much could be done without considerable effort, as there were numerous handicaps and the worst of all was a conviction on the part of some members of the board that the thing was impossible. The committee felt sure that anything so desperately needed as a fit place to send children to school could be provided if there was a genuine desire on the part of those whose task it was to do it, and so the members set about to sell the community on the idea that a new school house should be built.

Mass Meeting Held

Prominent Negro citizens stepped up, as they had done numerous times before, and reiterated their willingness to help in any possible way in securing better school quarters, and in order to acquaint all of their people with the new hope of action the Negro Ministerial Association called a mass meeting Monday evening of this week at the St. Johns Baptist church in the quarters. [illegible] o the meeting, beside all t[illegible]ed citizens, were the member[illegible]he county school board and local board of trustees; President W. L. Woods and Secretary Hazel Williams of the Chamber of Commerce; Harry Sloat, second member with Mr. Wood on the Chamber of Commerce committee appointed to investigate the possibilities of getting a new building for the colored pupils; Co. Supt. D. G. Barnett, and Editor Nate E. Reece, sr., of the Arcadian .

All of the above white folks attended but the members of the two school boards, which was a serious handicap to progress of the meeting but despite the absence of the officials the meeting proved to be a quite helpful one. The church was well filled with interested colored people.

One Obstacle Removed

One thing that has proven a handicap to progress in getting a new school house for the quarters for several years has been the fact that a considerable sum of money—about $800 — was raised several years ago by the colored citizens to go into a new building, but it was dissipated and lost. Dr. Barnett explained at the meeting Monday night that this money had apparently gotten away through poor business judgment, but that it had never been delivered to the school authorities.

It appeared that while the money was awaiting addition of other funds to start a building an effort was made to enhance its value by having it used to make up construction material, bricks or concrete blocks, and that in this process the concern using it failed and the money was lost. Isaac Brooks, a colored citizen who helped to raise the money, said Monday night that there was no bad faith in the loss of this money, and while it was a sad blow to the hopes of the people there was nobody connected with the matter who could be charged with a deliberate attempt to misuse it. A sincere effort to get the greatest amount of good out of it by putting it into material just failed to work.

Nothing Gained by Grieving

It seemed to help the situation to have this matter cleared up in this fashion. Rev. J. H. Brown advised that money that had been lost would not help to build a new school house now, but the thing to do was take steps to get funds and labor and have the work started as soon as possible. He declared that adequate facilities for educating the children was more important to the people than the maintenance of a lot of churches. "We have twelve churches among us now," he said, "good, bad and indifferent. If it should become necessary in order to get a new school building to close down all but one of these churches we should be willing to do it." And he added that "it would not need to be Elizabeth church that stayed open," for that is the church of which he is the pastor.

It was obvious to all, and the fact was stressed by several speakers, that the county school board was the body which must take the initiative in the construction of a school building, for the building would be public property and would we under the direction and control of the properly constituted authorities. Therefore, all that others could do would be to follow along and help any way they could, and it was also obvious that the first job was to persuade the county board to do the necessary leading and take the necessary initiative.

Committee Appointed

To this end a motion prevailed that a committee of five Negro citizens, three men and two women, be appointed to join with the Chamber of Commerce committee in seeking a conference with the school board members to talk the situation over and see if something could not be done speedily—at least a start made. Accordingly the following were named: Mrs. W. L. McDaniel, Rev. J. H. Brown, Mrs. Hattie Allen, Isaac Brooks and Rev. O. Middleton. These members were chosen after careful consideration in an effort to get a thoroughly representative committee. The time of the conference with the school board was left to Co. Supt. Barnett to arrange .

President Woods of the Chamber of Commerce told the meeting that one obstacle which seemed to cause the school board to delay action on the matter of a new colored school was the fear that it would have to be constructed according to strict architectural rules, and that it would run into more money that it would be possible for the community to raise. Mr. Woods said this should not be the case. "If it is right and proper to use such facilities as are being used, the state authorities should not object to any kind of new building we might be able to put up within reason."

No Difficulty Expected

Supt. Barnett said he felt sure the State Board of Education would lend every possible cooperation toward such effort as might be made by the community to put up a building. Naturally there are certain rules as to safety and sanitation and comfort that must be met, but they are not unreasonable, he said.

The next move in the matter is the conference of the committees with the school board, and if those officials can be persuaded to lead the way it looks very much like there was the necessary sentiment and enthusiasm to carry on to a successful conclusion.

Negro Rural Schools Put On Good Exhibit

Forty-three negro rural schools put on a fine exhibit of industrial work taught in their schools last Friday.

The exhibits were housed in the Madison County Training School building and resembled a small couny fair. A miniature airplane, rugs, mops, fancy work, mattress, preservers, slippers made from rabbit's hair, and many other things were on display. Emphasis was placed on making useful articles out of things of little or no value around the house.

Jennyethel Merritt, Jeanes teacher, had charge of getting the exhibit up.

Gray Observes New Courses

Industrial and vocational courses approved by the State Department of Education may be added to the curricula in several white and negro schools in Gadsden County next year, Superintendent C. H. Gray announced today. Mr. Gray said he would discuss the possibility of providing the new courses with the Board of Public Instruction next month.

Mr. Gray spent last week on a tour of inspection of progressive southern schools in three states as a guest of D. E. Williams, state agent for negro schools. Two other county superintendents, F. A. Rhodes, of Leon, and T. E. Denmark, of Jackson, accompanied Mr. Williams.

The group visited schools in Atlanta, Ga., Chattanooga and Nashville, Tenn., and Florence, Ala., which have modern equipment and vocational courses which the Florida educators studied in operation.

While in Nashville the group also visited George Peabody College for Teachers, where Dr. John E. Brewton, principal of the Gadsden County High School from 1925 to 1935, is professor of education. Dr. Brewton, in conjunction with his teaching duties, is also making a study of rural schools in the south for the Rosenwald board, a foundation working for better schools in the southern states.

The group also inspected Fiske University, in Nashville, a college for negroes.

National Negro Health Week

National Negro Health Week, which is being observed from March 30th through April 6th, had its origin twenty-six years ago by the late Booker T. Washington, founder and president of Muskeegee Institute, Tuskeegee, Alabama. It was Dr. Washington's philosophy that "A person cannot serve well in any position unless he is well." The theme for the week is: "Personal Hygiene and First Aid Preparedness."

In connection with this special Health movement, a tin can shower is being conducted throughout the community by the principal and faculty of the Fort Meade Colored Elementary School. The shower will be brought to a close Friday, April 4th. The pupil collecting the highest number of tin cans will be awarded a cash prize.

Since the slogan for this week is: "Clean Up, Fix Up, and Paint Up," the principal, D. T. Jones, is asking the entire community to give 100 per cent cooperation and participation in this clean up movement and make this a successful campaign.

ARCADIA KIWANIS CLUB

NEED OF BUILDING FOR NEGRO SCHOOLS PRESENTED

Dr. D. G. Barnett, county superintendent of schools, was in charge of the program of the Kiwanis club last Friday and told of the need of a new building for the colored schools of this city. He said that while Florida has more than five million dollars invested in Negro schools DeSoto county has no investment at all.

The colored people of Arcadia are using rented quarters which are not very well adapted to their needs and which are entirely inadequate, said Dr. Barnett, and some means should be found to correct this situation as soon as possible. He said that the county school authorities had been short of funds for several years past and had a struggle to keep all the schools operating, and had been without means to provide buildings.

The Chamber of Commerce recently took up the matter of a building for the colored schools, said Dr. Barnett, and he urged that anyone who could help in finding a solution to the problem, or in helping with any solution that might be worked out by others, do whatever they could along this line. The Chamber of Commerce has not announced a line of action, but whatever it is and whenever it is presented it is worthy of the hearty co-operation of the entire citizenship in order to give the colored citizens better school facilities, something they have had coming for a good many years.

Appreciation from Jack Kemp

The club had a letter from Jack Kemp, who was sponsored at Boys State by the Kiwanis club and was then in attendance at Tallahassee, in which he expressed his appreciation for the sponsorship and reporting that he had been made county superintendent of one of the Boys State counties and had also been appointed as assistant state superintendent of public instruction under the Boys State set-up of a state government.

Henry Lanier, for the membership committee, introduced three new members, all prominent executives at Riddle Aeronautical Institute: Captain Len J. Povey, general manager; Jack S. Hunt, chief instructor; and G. Willis Tyson, flight commander.

Club Asks Ban on Strikes

The club adopted a resolution offered by Ed F. Davis and directed to congress calling for remedial legislation to cure the strike evil in defense work and asking expulsion of people with communistic tendencies from official positions in the government. The resolution in full is given below:

WHEREAS, The President of the United States of America has proclaimed that a national emergency exists; and

WHEREAS, It is the belief of this club that such emergency exists because of conflicting theories of government wherein fascism, nazism and communism are aligned against the democracies; and

WHEREAS, The fascists, nazis and communists are each committed to the destruction of the American way of life, either by violence or subversive activities; and

WHEREAS, To combat such evil influences millions of young American men have been called from their normal pursuits under the Selective Service Act of our country to serve in its armed forces, at great sacrifice to themselves; and

WHEREAS, Work and sacrifice must eventually be the keynote to the preservation of all that we, as Americans, believe in; now, therefore, be it

RESOLVED, That we, as a Kiwanis club, cognizant of our small stature in this immense land but nevertheless determined to at least give voice to our beliefs, do solemnly urge:

1. That remedial legislation be immediately passed to put an end to labor strikes in defense industries

2. That labor, as well as capital, be required to share the burden borne by the armed forces of this country in seeing the existing emergency.

3. That the suspicion of communistic activities in higher offices of this government be thoroughly, and above all promptly, investigated, to the end that pussy-footing and dilly-dallying with labor strikes in defense industries will end.

4. That the resignation be demanded of all public officials with communistic leanings, whether outright red or slightly pink.

HOW THE RAILROADS KEEP SCHOOLS GOING

(Ind. News Review)

A short time ago, the secretary of a local Grange in a Southern state wrote an interesting letter. He said, "Perhaps it would interest you to know that when our legislature was debating on a bill to legalize an increase in size and tonnage of trucks on our highways, our Grange here refused to support the bill. We refused because the railroad track that runs through our school district makes it possible for our school to run nine months in the year. Without the taxes received from the railroad, it is doubtful that we could have a school at all, much less a four-teacher, nine-months school."

This Southern school district has plenty of company. Countless school districts depend on railroad taxes for much, and often nearly all of the money that pays for the education of local children. Tens of thousands of young people can thank the railroads for their education each year. In few localities are the tax payments of other transportation agencies to local government at all comparable to those made by the iron horse.

Schools aren't the only beneficiaries of the gigantic taxes the railroads pay. That money goes to maintain police and fire departments to pay for courts, to build roads and streets, to do a thousand and one jobs in the public interest. And the railroads pay big sums to the Federal government which uses the money, among other things, to help pay the gigantic cost of national defense.

The railroads, in short, are a vital industry for two highly important reasons. They provide an essential service that no other kind of carrier, operating on land or in the sea or air, can provide. And while doing that, they are a financial mainstay of government in all its multitude of branches. The welfare of the railroads and the welfare of the nation as a whole are virtually inseparable.

Survey Shows Decline In School Enrollment

ATLANTA, Oct. 9—(ANP)—A recent survey into grade mortality in Negro schools by Aaron Brown, member of the department of rural education of Fort Valley State college, reveals that the decrease in enrollment and attendance of Negroes in schools has increased over a period of two years. The foremost problem of Negro education on the elementary school level in Georgia is that of attendance and enrollment.

Upon examining the 1938 biennial report of the State department of education, it showed that out of a possible 293,743 Negro boys and girls, only 261,211 were enrolled in schools, leaving 32,532 children of school age outside of elementary institutions of learning. The 1940 report, which listed 252,094 children enrolled, revealed a decrease of some 9,000 children over the two-year period.

Cook County Training School, Colored

Looking forward to placing the Cook County Training School on the Accredited List of Negro High schools in Georgia, an effort has been made to place on this faculty teachers who will meet the requirements of the Accediting Board. Taking over the principalship of the school is Clarence R. Smith who is serving in his second year here as teacher. Smith is a graduate of Morris Brown College, Atlanta, Georgia, with the bachelor of arts degree. Although his major course was in Biology, he was one of the outstanding athletes of the college, and of the Southern Conference. Recognizing his record, the high schools of this district have called on him constantly to officiate in the major high school football and basketball games during the past two seasons. Smith is an efficient teacher, and, with the coperation of teachers and citizens, the school should make certain progress under his leadership.

Assisting Smith are the following teachers:

John T. Braxton, of Jacksonville, Fla., also a graduate of Morris Brown College, Atlanta, with a major in Social Science. Braxton is recognized as one of Morris Brown's outstanding athletes. Morris Brown this year is leading the celleges of the country in the field of sports;

Fannie Louise Allen, A. B., A. M., of Spelman College, Atlanta and Atlanta University, with summer work at Columbia University; major, History, and teaching experience in the Savannah Street High School, Newman, Ga., and Barber-Scotia Junior College, Concord, N. C.

Ann Amanda Thomas, A. B., A. M., of Spelman College, Atlanta, and Columbia University, New York City, majors, English and Student Personnel Administration;

Odessa Marie Roberts, A. B,. of Clark University, Atlanta; major, Home Economics; teaching experience in the Springfield Junior High school, Taliaferro county, and in Bairdstown, Greene County, Georgia; serving her second term on the Training School faculty.

Georgia Munnerlyn Oswell, A. B., Hampton Institute, Virginia, and Spelman College, Atlanta; major, Sociology and Physical Education.

Alice Lutherine Fambro, who has completed requirements for two years of college work at the Georgia Normal College, Albany, and who has taught for eighteen years in the Training School;

Ida Frances Johnson, Fort Valley State Teachers College, Fort Valley, Ga.; teaching experience in the public school of Toombsboro, Ga., an outstanding contralto soloist; doing excellent work with the Training School Glee Club.

No other school in the counties about us boasts of a stronger faculty. Next week we shall give to our interested group the other necessary requirements for placing our school on the accredited list. NEWS OF NEGRO SCHOOLS OF THE COUNTY

Program For Remainder of School Year Sketched.

In outlining our program of work among our teachers for the remainder of this school year, two factors have been kept in the forefront and emphasized.

First, all teachers are assuming definite plans to teach the traditional subjects prescribed in our course of study better and better by applying improved methods. Also, to bring into the classroom material from the outside which will enrich the course of study and curriculum.

Secondly, as a teacher strives and achieves certain professional improvement through self analysis and individual aid assisted by outside suggestions, still newer and more improved methods of instruction will gradually be introduced. The chief aim in introducing these newer and more tested methods is to attain greater educational results for our negro boys and girls in-school and their later out-of-school experiences.

Therefore, the work for the remainder of the school year will be chiefly concerned with individual and group learning of each child through improved teaching, accurate keeping of student records, careful checking up on and follow up of individual student attendance, home visitation of each child, having community projects, keeping an active health improvement program, holding of regular parent-teacher meetings, etc.

We, the colored teachers of Hart County, take pleasure in making public our plans of work for our school and communities, and do earnestly seek the closest cooperation of each patron. To succeed in any plans, each teacher urges regular daily attendance of each child in the county.

Study group leaders for our four study groups are:

Miss Barbara Stovall, principal New Light school; Mr. W. H. Hatton, principal Flatrock school; Mrs. Juanita Gibbs, primary teacher Hart County Training School; Mrs. Berta Robinson, intermediate grade teacher Flatrock school. Mr. Spencer Strange, principal St. John school, is research worker and reporter of Life-Related Enterprises for all study groups.

On Friday, January 10, at 4 o'clock p. m., Miss Pennington, supervisor of white cosolidated schools, will speak to the colored teachers informally in a round table discussion. We look forward to a helpful meeting. All study groups will meet on this same date.

NEWS OF COUNTY COLORED SCHOOLS

The teacher in the county colored schools take pleasure in announcing the oratorical contest to be held in conjunction with the annual school and community day. The rules of the contest have been definitely announced and agreed upon by all teachers of the county.

A second aspect of this interesting day, too, is the attractive and diversified display of burlap-sack articles and clay articles. In connection with our burlap sack display for school and community day, Miss Mertha Marina Glass, home economics instructor at the Flat Rock Junior High School, is presenting a suggestive assortment of burlap articles at our next teachers' meeting. Miss Glass, a graduate from Clark University, offers unusual skill and alertness in using articles of burlap sacks in the home. These will be displayed in our March teachers' meeting. All teachers of the county will have a full display of burlap sack and clay articles for public inspection on school community day. These articles will be made by children with assistance from teachers.

Report On School Attendance.

School attendance this month has reached its highest point of the year. Teachers are reporting much enthusiasm and gratitude over the steadiness with which children are attending their respective schools. Attendance is the major project of school principals in the colored schools this year, and they are reporting noticeable improvement.

Dr. Harry Teasley to Speak to Colored Teachers At March Meeting.

The negro teachers are to be honored with the presence of Dr. Harry Teasley, well known physician and surgeon of Hartwell. He is the son of Dr. B. C. Teasley, who is a member of the Hart County Board of Education. With health as a major problem among our school children and patrons, we look forward with zest to helpful suggestions from Dr. Teasley.

School Gardens Being Planted.

To aid in solving a health problem, the following schools have planted school gardens: Miss Sarlie Mae Craft, principal Mt. View School; Miss Fannie L. Strange, principal Shiloh School, and Miss Dorthula Brown, principal New Hope School. The school garden offers the most practical experience for school children in an effort to improve their noon-day luncheon, so the teachers have concluded. It is hoped that all schools will soon have early vegetable gardens planted.

COLORED SCHOOLS

WILLOW HILL CENTER

Instead of the usual unpainted, fly-ridden, draughty, rambling farm house so typical of the rural south, one can now find at the Willow Hill prospective demonstration center at least two or more homes that would appeal to all who enjoy cleanliness, comfort, and the rugged beauty of rural life.

As we ride to the school, let us stop just before we get there at the house by the side of the road. We find a house newly painted. Each window and door is screened, a spacious veranda with comfortable rockers, a screened back porch used in mild weather as a breakfast room with a color scheme of green and white in pleasing tints. As one eats in cool comfort on a warm day, he can be refreshed not only by food, but by the tall murmuring pines, and the broad open fields of waving corn.

On going into the kitchen we find it immaculate and well-arranged as to convenience and utensils. The pine floor harmonizes well with the cherry red and white tint of the kitchen walls, and the crisp red and white muslin curtains attractively arranged at the window. At the end of the back porch the sanitary water supply, consisting of a pump with a cemented well, tempts us to enjoy a cool drink of water. The dining room with its two windows curtained in red and white as the kitchen, gives a spacious effect to the house.

The four large bedrooms, two on each side of the wide hall, have two or more windows that remain open at night as well as day, because of the protection of the screens. The ceiling of the bedrooms are painted white. The walls of the bedrooms are painted an attractive blue.

The front yard is surrounded by a picket fence which prevents stock from destroying the flowers and shrubbery growing on each side of the walk that leads to the door.

The answer as to how this change from last year was wrought can be found in the work program of the Willow Hill teaching staff. Through the emphasis as demonstrated at the Willow Hill School this family determined to have a better standard of living. Although little money was available, the head of the family took advantage of the help as given by the government, and even though it meant a colossal undertaking, he grasped the opportunity of having the government supply the labor and material to improve his home. His efforts led another family to do the same, and even those who did not want this large responsibility were inspired and urged through the school-home clubs to make improvements.

So now as you drive through the Willow Hill prospective demonstration center you will see definite signs of improved living in the form of a new porch here, a sanitary toilet there, a painted house over the brow of the hill, and a leaky roof repaired on some other house.

The members of the Willow Hill staff, demonstrating their agreement with Clapp that one should not only survey the community to know its needs but should live in it, are boarding in the different homes of the community. Their influence is seen by the desire on the part of these families to improve in healthful living by a more balanced diet and by using the natural resources and native materials at hand to make the rooms more attractive as well as comfortable.

Hence it can be seen that with a radio to bring to one all that is worthwhile in news, music or entertainment, access to a nearby town, emphasizing and having a balanced diet, as outlined by the life-related enterprise: Proper foods for the farm famliy. Life-related teaching and improving community life assume real meaning and are as thrilling as the limited advantages of an urban center.

NEWS OF NEGRO SCHOOLS IN HART COUNTY

Friday, March 28, Is Date Set For Annual School and Community Day.

The patrons and teachers in the colored schools are interested in the announcement of date for school and community day to be held Friday, April 4, at the Hart County Training School, 9 m.

This day as usual promises to be full of various events, the unusual exhibit this time to consist of varied articles, useful in the home, made from burlap sacks. Attractive and equally as interesting is the modeling which will feature clay articles.

The athletics this year will consist of the relays, races, broad and high jump, and other activities.

Most itneresting will be the oratorical contest to be engaged in by all schools. One student from each school will take part, along with two or more from our larger schools. Contestants are to speak no longer than five minutes and must speak on some phase of the following three topics: The Value of Farming, The Place of Education in Our Community, and The Value of the School to Modern Youth. No definite subject is prescribed and each teacher is entirely responsible for his contestant's oration.

In connection with our school and community day, a call meeting of all teachers has been set for Friday, March 7th, at four o'clock.

More School Gardens in Negro Schools.

In addition to the schools listed last week other schools are also planting gardens. Miss Barbara Stovall, New Light principal, announces a large vegetable garden has been begun. Miss Berta Robinson, elementary grade teacher, Flat Rock, is planting a garden in connection with an experience unit on soils in the community. Mrs. Minnie Mae White, St. James school, is busily egaged on a very complete school garden. In the Bowersville school where Lamar Strange and Miss Lunnie Heard are teachers, the children are beginning to sow seeds in their gardens. At New Hope, Miss Dorthula Brown, principal, and Mrs. Katie Hatton are helping their children to make out a substantial garden.

First Meeting of All Negro Primary Teachers In County a Success.

Mrs. Juanita Gibbs, principal teacher at the Hart County Training School, was hostess to the primary teachers of the 17 negro school in the county. This was the first meeting and the lively discussion centered about "Teaching a Primary Reading Lesson." This discussion was led and illustrated by the county supervisor of negro schools and was actively engaged in by all teachers present. The group met in the home of Mrs. Gibbs, but subsequent meetings are to be held in the training school with the consent of the principal. Next meeting is tentatively scheduled for March 14th at 4 p. m. sharp, at which time a chairman and other officers are to be elected.

NEGRO SCHOOLS HAVE ACHIEVEMENT DAY

County wide School and Community Achievement Day was held at the Greensboro High School on Wednesday, April 23, with most of the schools participating. The devotional exercises were led by Rev. Chester, chairman of the county-wide Trustee Asociation. Music was furnished by the Greensboro High School under the direction of Clara Gay.

Mr. Hamp McGibony, the guest speaker for the day, gave a very interesting and inspiring talk in which he admonished the boys and girls to make the best use of their opportunities and natural gifts, reminding them of the work and sacrifices which some one is always shouldering behind any achievement.

Particular interest was shown in the dashes and high jumps. They were all packed with thrills and spills but the highlight of the day's activities was the 50 yard dash. Tom Coleman, of Greensboro High, was finally successful in winning from Jesse Thomas Reid, of Alexander Center School, after running a tie race at first. The spectators were thrilled at the flash shown.

Juanita Champion, of Siloam, was the outstanding girl in winning three first places in the day's activities, especially the 50 and 60 yard dashes. She was finally defeated in the 100 yard dash by Julia Ray, of Greensboro.

The boys of Greene county can really high jump. They started low but ended by jumping 5 feet 11 inches by Albert Jernigan, of Greensboro. Three boys from Alexander, Jones Central High and Woodville tied at 5 feet 11 inches.

All the schools represented showed lots of talent and with a little more training for the boys of Greene county, they will rank with some of our best schools in the South.

Commencement exercises were held last week at the 35 Negro schools in the county and 16 members of graduating classes at the three high schools, Lumpkin, Richland, and Omaha, received diplomas for completing the required courses of study.

In the county's 35 Negro schools there are 77 teachers instructing approximately 2000 students for a seven months period. Education of teachers range from simple county certificates to professional 4-year college training. Through the cooperation of the County Board of Education many of the teachers are enabled to improve their teacher's rating by attending summer schools.

Teacher And Builder

Any teacher who looks back on many years of teaching can take comfort in the contributions being made by his students; but when William M. Donald, "dean of negro schoolmasters," looks back over his fifty-one years of continuous service recently completed, he should be able to see a work that shines like a light out of darkness.

For in the span of one man's working years Teacher Donald can recall himself as son of a slave struggling to get an education, holding little schools for his people in local negro church buildings without school equipment, quietly and indefatigably teaching in one-room rural schools, until the other day in Enterprise, Alabama, he cleared his desk for the last time in a building containing modern equipment, staffed by a group of faculty assistants, and enrolling 400 pupils.

But the story between the lines is more than this. It is a story of the idealism and sincerity that must have gone into these years of service. It is written in the fact that five out of Teacher Donald's nine children are now teachers also, with the others holding equally responsible positions. It is told in the positions of trust held by many of the 10,000 children taught by him in these little negro schools of the rural south.

Professor Donald, as an experienced educator, of course, sees the great work still be accomplished, the high illiteracy rate still to be found among adult negroes of the deep south, the all too many poorly housed and ill-equipped schools in some rural regions; but it is hoped that he sees also the deeper interest in the negro felt by many educators and public men, and the better-informed and more practical desire on the part of increasing numbers of Americans to encourage this gifted minority race of fellow citizens in their sturdy progress.—Christian Science Monitor.

Dr. Walter D. Cocking Wins Post Despite Charges Of Gov. Talmadge

Dr. Walter D. Cocking, dean of the University of Georgia, was re-elected Monday despite charges brought against him by Governor Eugene Talmadge. Announcement of the re-election was made by Chairman Sandy Beavers of the Board of Regents.

Because of his liberal views regarding progressive education programs for all Georgians, Dean Cocking was questioned Monday at a private hearing held in the Governor's office. Attending the hearing were Governor Talmadge and members of the State Board of Regents.

More than 350 whites and two colored persons were denied the privilege of witnessing the trial. It had been previously announced that the hearing would be open to the public. A large number of the spectators took choice seats in the House of Representatives, thinking that the hearing would be conducted there.

TWO COLORED PERSONS PRESENT

Colored persons on hand for the hearing were Mrs. Julia Pate Borders, school teacher and wife of the Rev. William Holmes Borders, and an Atlanta Daily World reporter.

Charges against President Marvin Pittman of State Teachers' College were postponed, Chairman Beavers stated.

Newspapermen were asked to leave the Governor's office once the hearing got underway.

Among the questions said to have been asked witnesses called to testify was whether they ever heard of Dean Cocking advocating colored teachers for white children. None had ever heard of such a proposal, it was understood.

It was learned that the dean was criticized for addressing a body of colored and white teachers at the same time. The whites occupied one section of the building and the colored persons the other side, witnesses said.

JUN 17 1941

Spectators poured into the Capitol as early as 9 a. m. and remained in the waiting room to the Governor's office until mid-afternoon. The regents and Governor Talmadge remained in session until around 3 p. m. without stopping for lunch.

EDUCATORS PLEASED WITH VOTE

Among the educators called before the board were President J. R. McCain, of Agnes Scott College; President Harvey W. Cox, of Emory University, and Supt. Willis A. Sutton, of the Atlanta city schools. Following the 8-7 vote favoring retention of Dr. Cocking, all said they were delighted.

Witnesses were questioned chiefly about the attitude of Dean Cocking on the race question.

President Harmon W. Caldwell of the University of Georgia personally summoned the witnesses for Dean Cocking.

JUN 17 1941

Records from the regents' office were requisitioned during the afternoon and it was said that charges of extravagance or loose financial methods had grown out of the investigation.

OPPOSE INJECTING POLITICS

Several of the spectators present were said to be ready to oppose the principle of injecting politics into the selection of facilities for state colleges, in the fear that the University of Georgia might lose its accredited standing in the Association of Southern Colleges.

Governor Talmadge brought charges against the two educators at a meeting of the State Board of Regents in Athens two weeks ago. He insisted they be eliminated from the University System at once, but President Harmon Caldwell, of the University of Georgia, said he would resign unless Dr. Cocking was given a hearing, and the board voted for the hearing by a close margin.

Dr. Cocking was engaged in educational work in Texas, Florida and Tennessee before coming to Georgia five years ago. He was at one time state school commissioner in Tennessee, and a trustee of the University of Tennessee. Just before going to the University of Georgia he was a member of President Roosevelt's National Commission on Education.

Dr. Pittman, a native of Mississippi, has been president of Georgia State Teachers' College since 1934. He has a distinguished record as an educator and is author of several volumes on teaching and education.

EDUCATION
By L. M. Allison.

As Supt. of Schools of Dade County, I will say that while the county is small in area, and has, until recently, n a way, been isolated from the rest of the State, due to its geographical location and lack of paved roads, our School System and Educational Facilities compare favorably with other rural counties in the state.

We have thre consolidated approved Junior High Schools, employing eight teachers to the school, one consolidated accredited Senior High School, employing six teachers in high school and six teachers in the elementary department.

This year we had forty-six boys and girls graduate from high school. Of this number, a good percentage will enter colleges this fall.

In addition to these consolidated schools, we have five elementary schools, employing one and two teachers to the school, consolidations of which have not been practical up to the present time.

During the term just closed, we enrolled 1566. Of this number we transported 642, using fourteen buses, thereby making available schools for every child in the county of school age.

We have not neglected Negro education in this county. There being only one section of the county with any Negro population of school age, we are maintaining an elementary school, in which 59 were enrolled his year. They are being taught by a very efficient Negro teacher.

At the present time we are completing an addition to Davis Junior High School on Sand Mountain, which, when completed, will be the best school building in the county. And, by the way, they are not going to be satisfied with a Junior High School, in fact, they had three high school graduates this year.

Within the next few days we expect to start another school building on Lookout Mountain, which will be modern and ample for present needs.

With the continued cooperation of the State Educational Department, we will contribute our part to the eradication of illiteracy in Georgia. .I thank you.

The News notes from one of its exchanges in a city not far distant where school authorities have petitioned for and are expecting to receive PWA assistance in the erection of a new school building and adding to its present school plant, along with other public improvements. We don't know whether or not Blakely is eligible for PWA assistance in its proposed school building program, but it is certainly worth investigating, and if it is found such funds are available, then the school authorities might give serious consideration to the erection of a new building for the Negro school to replace the present make-shift structure which is thoroughly inadequate.

Public Schools Cannot Use Marriage Bar, Arnall Rules

Child of School Age Can Be Student Regardless of Marital Status, He Declares

Georgia girls and boys of school age cannot be barred from public schools merely on the grounds that they are married, Attorney General Ellis Arnall ruled Friday.

The ruling was in answer to an inquiry from the Milner School Board to State School Superintendent M. D. Collins, referred to the attorney general for a ruling.

The attorney general pointed out that the Georgia constitution guarantees educational opportunities to Georgia boys and girls of school age, the only condition being that separate schools must be maintained for white and Negro pupils.

The Georgia Supreme Court has never passed upon the question of barring married persons from the state schools, but the Supreme Court of Mississippi has ruled on the question, holding that "it is commendable in married persons of school age to desire to further their education and thereby become better fitted for the duties of life," the ruling pointed out.

"I am of the opinion that, although this Mississippi case is not controlling upon Georgia courts, nevertheless if the same question were raised before our courts this decision would be highly persuasive of the law, and it is most likely that the conclusion reached therein would be followed by our courts," Attorney General Arnall said.

"Any rule or regulation making marriage alone the ground for not permitting a child of school age to attend the public schools of his or her residence would be unreasonable and void."

Married students have been admitted to the state colleges in Georgia for a long time, but numerous local school systems have rules barring married teachers.

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH McGILL

COMMON SCHOOLS Georgia, along with the rest of the southern states, ironically spends more of what it collects in taxes on schools than any other section of the nation, yet spends less actual money on schools than any other section.

Lack of education, and its resulting ignorance, is a curse responsible for a majority of our embarrassing problems.

At Agnes Scott on Saturday there was held a forum. Agnes Scott has a program each year for its alumnae weekend and the forum this year was a sort of fact-facing one. A discussion, properly avoiding controversial issues, concerned the state educational problem. Statistics used were from the State Department of Education.

Does it shock you that our state records show that 50 per cent of our children never enter the fifth grade?

This does not mean that 50 per cent of them have four years of a common school education. Many drop out after one or two years. Fifty per cent get as many as four years.

Not all the remaining 50 per cent go as far as high school.

A large percentage never get to high school.

Of the relatively small number who finish high school, about 1 per cent enter college.

NOV 17 1941

Those who take such pride in defending the political system which has helped produce a situation where 50 per cent of the state's children never go farther than the fourth grade, are fond of saying that all statistics which reveal any painful facts are merely the attack of foundations and critics. When they defend themselves one may assume they defend the results.

These facts are from the state's own records.

It is entirely according to pattern that a vote-getting appeal should be made in behalf of "a college degree for every boy and girl," no matter whether they want it or can use it, in a state where 50 per cent of the children never enter the fifth grade. It is a typical political approach instead of a planned approach to the problem. There can never be a really strong system of higher education until the common schools are made strong.

GEORGIA PERCENTAGES It may be interesting to follow on through, with federal and state statistics.

If Georgia were to spend as much per child attending school as the nation spends as a whole, it would be necessary for Georgia to more than double her expenditures for elementary and secondary schools.

That is, she would have to raise more than $20,000,000 a year in addition to what she now raises in taxes.

Georgia can't do it. The money just isn't available.

Georgia has 2.84 per cent of the nation's children between the ages of 5 and 17, but has only 0.99 per cent of the nation's tax-paying ability.

There is still another measure.

NOV 17 1941

The total spendable income in Georgia amounts to $1,117 per child, 5 to 17 years old, as compared with $2,895 for the national average and $4,191 for the northeastern states. The farmers of Georgia, for instance, have only $415 per child. The non-farm people have about five times as much to spend per child, but even they are below the national average.

All this means, of course, that we will never be able to educate our children as we should unless federal aid is given us. Federal aid must be given in proportion to the need and the number of children to be educated.

It also means that the states themselves must ask whether they are willing to go on chanting of past glories and great patriots of the past and refuse to see what has been done to education and to the general economy of the state by the political leaders of the type we have and have had.

ESSENCE OF DEMOCRACY The essence of democracy is not equal reward, but equal opportunity.

If we are providing opportunity for only 50 per cent of our children to finish the fourth grade, what have we done to democracy?

If our white teachers are paid an average of about $12 per week for their first year or two of teaching, and if the average is but $13.85 after seven years and the attaining of a life certificate, what enthusiasm for our government are we creating in the minds of our teachers? (The colored average is, of course, considerably lower.)

Henry McIntosh, the very able publisher of the Albany Herald and a citizen who devotes much of his time and his ability to serving his state, pointed out that the post-war periods always are more dangerous and exacting than the war periods themselves.

We have been going along for more than half a century, building up illiteracy and creating a large population of persons who have had no more than four grades of common schooling. They have constituted that large group which has been, with but few exceptions, the low income group and the low standard of living group.

The war and national defense have given them higher incomes and a higher standard of living. If they were to be dropped down again there would be terrific discontent.

Ask yourself this one question—have you heard a single one of our political leaders even mention any post-war planning?

Shall we then concern ourselves with these things at all? Or shall we discuss the blue of our sky, the radiant color of our autumn leaves? Shall we console ourselves that Robert Toombs, Alexander Stephens, Crawford Long and Howell Cobb, to mention a few, are in the pages of our history and therefore the thing to do today is to think on pleasant things and ignore the unpleasant?

EDUCATION

How Education Promotes Business: From an Address to Atlanta Civitans

By DR. WILLIS A. SUTTON

Superintendent, Atlanta Public Schools

ONE DAY in a city about the size of Atlanta, I picked up a telephone book and looked at it. It was about a third larger than the telephone book in Atlanta. My pride was hurt. I said, "Why would these people have more telephones in this town than we have in Atlanta?" I even counted the pages and looked at my book that I had in my brief case and there we were in a city with the same population as mine—and a third more telephones.

I went into another city where there was a paper that was not half as good as any one of the papers in my town and where the country around was far more sparsely settled. Yet that paper had a circulation that was as great as the combined circulation of the daily papers in my city, and there were two other papers in that city. Why should they have a greater circulation of papers there?

It bothered me. I went home. I sat down and thought about it. I found that in the territory around Atlanta—and I am hopeful that it is a little better now—but at that time in a territory of 300 miles around my city there were 266,000 people above 10 years of age who could not read and write. What would they want with a newspaper? I wondered and then I commenced to think that if that were true of the newspaper, what might be the condition with reference to these telephones? What effect did the economic situation of my people have upon them and what relationship was there between that economic situation and their education?

Begins Investigation

So I studiously set to work and as best I could, by the standard that I could arrive at any with the assistance that I could get from a group of my teachers, I found that in the city to which I referred, and in the territory involved around it, the people had on the average at least two grades of education higher than the average of the masses of the people around my City of Atlanta. I commenced to calculate the pages in my telephone book, and there was good correlation.

That led me into thinking that possibly we might go deeper into that situation. I chose 30 of the occupations in Atlanta and assigned two teachers out of my system to study the relationship of education to the manufacture of jewelry, to the manufacture of textiles, to the life insurance business, to the question of retail groceries business, to the question of department store business, to 30 businesses in all that related to the City of Atlanta, and I think those were among the most interesting reports that I ever had my teachers present. I found in them a great deal of meat and much food for thought, and then, as I commenced to think of that whole situation, there came this question, What is really the relationship between education and business?

Education is the basis of real, genuine production of wealth. Here is a formula: The cultural level of the masses of the people is the basis of good business.

Never-Ending Cycle

Just as we found out that we needed educated people in order to have a newspaper with 500,000 circulation, just as we found out we needed intelligent people who could produce in order to have a telephone, just so we found out that the basis of what you call business is not so much advertising or high pressure salesmanship, not so much these things that we have thought and that are good adjuncts of business, but it is the culture level, the aspiration, the soul, the desire, the warmth; it is the thing in me, that upsurge toward those things that are good for us. And when we increase that we increase the wants, the wishes, the desires, the needs, and the aspirations of man and, thank God, we not only increase those wishes, wants, and desires, but we also increase the ability to satisfy those desires, and, those desires being satisfied, and that ability being increased, it gives more and more of desire, and more and more of ability. It is a never-ending cycle, a spiral that is always going up.

We have in this country 35,000,000 people who have an educational training of about the fifth grade or less. If you want to take the place of all the foreign trade that we are losing, just give those 35,000,000 people a chance to become ninth- or tenth-graders and you will do it.

In my own state of Georgia, we have 1,100,000 Negroes. Many of them have not had the opportunities they should have had. I think we are striving to better that as we can, but I have said many times and I repeat it this morning: If I had the power in this hand to wave a wand and to raise the culture level, the educational level, of those 1,100,000 Negroes from an average fourth grade to an average eighth grade, I would be willing to post a bond that I would double the business of Georgia.

Poverty does not make anybody any money; a low wage scale does not make anybody any money. It but increases the tragedies of government and increases taxes.

Telling Taxpayers

I was in a great section of this country that I will not name, not so long ago, and two schoolmen got me into a trap. They invited me to a dinner and when I got there that night I found I was in a taxpayers' league. The man who introduced me was vice president of a big insurance company and he got up and said, "We have with us tonight a great fellow," and he gave me a lot of taffy. He said, "In Atlanta, Georgia, they are able to run a good school system on $69 a child." That was all it was costing us then. We are doing a little better now. He continued, "But in our city we are spending $136 a child, and we have invited this great man to tell us how to run a good school system and run it cheap."

I told him I would like to thank him for my dinner but he got the wrong man, that the only reason I spent $69 a child was that I could not get any more; if I could get it, I would spend it. I also told him my children were worth just as much as the children in that city, and ought to have just as much money spent on them, but I said, "Since you think you are taxed to death, let's talk about this thing a little."

There were 42 people there, every one of them president of something. We sat there and talked around that table together. I talked, and what I said came out of these reports that my teachers had made. I said to the man who had introduced me, "You represent life insurance. That is one of the four top things in my city. It is a great life insurance centre, not so much for the companies organized there as for the offices representing other companies, but I want to ask you this one question, How much life insurance in blocks of five thousand (because the life insurance people had told me you had to get insurance up in about those blocks before you really made much on it) or more have you got on the lives of people who have a fifth-grade education or less?"

Selling Insurance

He said he did not know. I did; that is the reason I asked him. And I told him, "There is only one-tenth of 1 per cent."

When we made this research on life insurance in this country, that is, in blocks of $5,000 or more, on the lives of people who had fifth-grade education or less, we learned that. And I turned to that man and I said, "What does that mean to you?"

He said, "It means more education, more life insurance."

I said, "I wish my teachers were as quick to learn as that."

I will not have time to tell you about all those people, but I went down the line with them.

Business is willing to be taught. Here is a whole field of business finding fault with us about home economics, music, and art. America spends more for art than for anything else in the world, unless it is bread and meat. There is art in the tie, the suit of clothes, the shape of the automobile, art in bric-a-brac, on the lawn, in the grass, in the shrubbery and the landscape, art in jewelry, art in implements with which you eat, art in the things with which you set the table and the table cloth itself. Art is everywhere and yet business is coming along saying to us, "We can't afford to give children art and music and the things that make life rich." They are the basis of business.

NEGRO ACTIVITIES

The Willow Hill Tigers are gradually coming to the front in basketball. On Monday, February 17, the team crushed the New Sandridge basketeers in a swift game with a score of 35-3. The New Sandridge girls retaliated by taking the laurels from the Willow Hill girls with a score of 8-3. The coaches, W. J. Holloway and W. B. Shefton, deserve much praise for the emphasis they place on good sportmanship in all of its phases in the training of the Willow Hill teams.

WILLOW HILL

Group B conducted the assembly for this month, with a program centered around negro history. Ora Curry, a pupil of group B, was "Professor Quiz" in the question contest won by Delaware Hall. The program was very inspiring, for it stimulated a keen interest in negro history as directed by the sponsor, W. J. Holloway.

Vesper services were well attended February 16th. An interesting program prepared by J. W. Lawton concluded the celebration of negro history week. The guest speaker, J. Walker, manager of the Atlanta Life Insurance Co. of Savannah, took for his subject "The Negro In Business," and brought to the attention of the audience the names of many negroes who through hard work have been successful. With the guest speaker was his wife, his son, his daughter, and B. Elm, of Georgia State College. Other guests were O. Dixon, L. Price and E. Boykin, of the Brooklet school.

The song contest sponsored by the P.-T. A. was a great success. Of three groups that competed the boys and girls tied for honors. Judges were L. A. Price and H. Van Buren, of Statesboro.

REHOVAH SCHOOL

The swift basketball team of girls, trained by T. Cone, defeated the Summer Hill girls February 4th with a score of 26-4 in favor of Rehovah.

Rehovah school children, with their teacher, T. Cone, have evinced keen interest in developing their schoool grounds. A school garden has been planted and is thriving nicely. A unique pole fence encloses the garden and adds much to the rustic beauty of the grounds. All pupils of the school are active in planning and making things for the playground, and hope soon to have play equipment made from native material.

A ticket was presented also to W. T. Anderson, Macon Telegraph editor, who will be one of the speakers.

Mr. Owings declared he felt assured some city official would address the audience.

The cast is to consist of members of different churches, and several prominent white persons will appear on the program.

NEWS OF NEGRO SCHOOLS IN HART COUNTY

County-Wide School and Community Day Near At Hand; Date Set For Friday, April 4.

One of the most joyous days of all the year approaches soon. Both adults and children look with eager anticipation to the coming of School and Community Day. On this day we feature academic skills, wholesome recreation, farm interests, and physical development for both patrons and children in all of our negro schools. Much emphasis is being placed upon worthy use of leisure time along with improved academic skills and homemaking art. The date has been set for April 4.

Athletic Events.

The following events will be engaged in out-of-doors by all winning schools, according to a statement by Mr. Williamson: High jump, broad jump, fifty-yard dash, one hundred-yard dash, sack race, three-legged race, and potato race.

A feature number will be staged by Mrs. B. J. Jones also in the out-of-doors activities.

Pupils Urged to Be Present.

Daily attendance is being enthusiastically encouraged by the teachers in the negro schools. Especially are the children being encouraged to attend school every day in order that they not miss a single day of training. We urge that interest will continue to remain high and that our average daily attendance will be record-breaking for all schools these last few weeks of school. Patrons of negro schools are especially urged to cooperate with teachers in this respect.

With Colored School

The Cook County Parent-Teacher Association met at the County Training School, Adel, on Sunday afternoon, Vice-President Ola M. Roberts, presiding. The Scripture lesson for the meeting was taken from Proverbs 22:6, "Train up a child in the way he should go: and when he is old, he will not depart from it", and was read by Rev. Roberts. The theme of the meeting was taken from the Ten Commandments for Parents: "Thou shalt help thy child to see beauty, to practice kindness, to love truth, and to live in friendship", and was discussed by Principal C. R. Smith, and Jeanes Teacher, Thelma B. Brown.

Guest of the Association was Miles Hackney, Collaborator, working out of the State offices, who spoke interestingly to the group on Soil Improvement Practices. The address was full of information. The speaker gave figures which showed that Georgia's low farm income was due to the fact that too much land lay idle in Georgia, or else was depleted to such a state that the yield was very, very small. The talk was closed with the group repeating after the speaker six things that are needed:

We need—
A Smokehouse and a Cow
A Year-round crop and a Sow
Twenty-four hens and a rooster
And we won't go hungry
Like we used to.

Announcement was made of the State meeting of the Georgia Congress of Parent-Teachers, Augusta, Georgia, April 7 and 8. President Henrietta Williams, of the Lenox P.-T. A. was elected as delegate to the State meeting.

The Negro schools of Cook County observed their Third Annual School and Community Day on Friday, March 14, at the County Training School, C. R. Smith, Principal. A representative group representing the school communities in the county attended the exercises. The morning program was made up of presentations from the schools. Each number was well given, and showed that time and effort had been given to it. After this program, a Motion Picture was shown. The afternoon was spent with Field Events. These were the Leap Frog, Potato, Water Glass, Wheelbarrow, Three-Legged, and Sack Race; the 50 and 100 yard dashes, and the Balloon Contest; a Basketball game, Marshallville High School vs. Training School.

Coaches Smith and Braxton were ably assisted in handling these events by Coach E. P. Burt, Sparks-Adel High School, and Cecil Spearman, Cohen Jones, and Charles Wright, all members of the Varsity Basketball team, of Sparks-Adel High school.

Ribbons were awarded to first, second and third place winners of each event. The Gold Loving Cup was awarded to the County Line School, L. L. Lawrence, Principal, pupils from this school amassing a total of twenty-nine and one-half points; a Bronze Placque for the next highest number of points went to the Cook County Training School, C. R. Smith, principal; the Bronze Placque for the third highest number of points was awarded to the Lenox School, R. S. Spencer, Principal.

Teachers in the Negro schools wish to thank everyone who helped to make this Third School and Community Day a success. The Day is one to which our pupils look forward with anticipation, and every effort that is made to have them enjoy themselves and also to improve themselves is cause for gratitude.

Especially do we thank The Adel News for printing our notices and articles:

NEWS FROM NEGRO SCHOOLS IN GREENE

A group of teachers met with the Supervisor on the evening of February 26th, and outlined plans for a County-wide Comprehensive Exam to be conducted for pupils completing the seventh grade. This is one of the many efforts we are sponsoring to raise the literary standards in the county schools. The questions for these examinations will be selected from a list submitted by the four study groups, covering a minimum amount of required material for the seventh grade pupils.

The Athens District Association of Teachers, including Clarke, Oglethorpe, Barrow, Oconee, Walton, Banks, Jackson, Morgan and Greene counties met at Athens High and Industrial School Friday, February 14th. The general theme of the meeting was "The Function of the School in the Community."

A department discussion, "Developing Skills and Appreciations Through Discussions" was led by the Greene county Supervisor, L. Stone Welch. Greene county received many compliments from the State Director of Education, Mr. Cousins and other counties for the progress made this year. In view of the progressive type of program being launched in Greene county this year, it was decided that the district meeting should be held in Greensboro next year.

Three open forums have been conducted by NYA officials from Atlanta for youth and adults. Various phases of the Defense Program were discussed along with other problems.

A visit to any of the county schools will reveal much of what has been, and is being, done in the line of progressive teaching and community work. Special emphasis is being placed on health, reading and civics as it relates to good citizenship. The teachers are becoming more conscious of "Life-Related Teaching," and many are working on functional enterprises. Grouping and correlation of subject matter, individual aid, and adjustment, more efficient use of time and space is being observed with especial success in the one and two-teacher schools.

Programs have been mapped out by each teacher, with the aid of the supervising teacher for the individual school and community needs; also a long-range program, what has been successfully accomplished is listed.

Hot lunch programs have been started in twenty schools; the others receive cold lunch commodities. Five schools are working on wells and sanitary water supply as enterprises. One school has cemented a spring for greater sanitation. One school has been completed and plans are under way for the construction of several small schools to replace the old dilapidated churches and halls being used for schools which detract so much from the progressive movements of the county. Most broken panes and wooden shutters have been replaced, adding to the light and comfort necessary for improved classroom work.

Among other activities we would like to call your attention to are the folowing:

The youth and adults who have been added to our lunch programs, besides receiving aid where greatly needed add more than two hundred dollars to the economic circulation of Greene county each month, not mentioning the work shops and other projects which are training the boys.

Ten Rosenwald libraries, or two complete sets have been added to two larger schools, (we hope to add more library books). Literature is constantly added from all available sources for supplementary reading and improved units.

Charts have been added for the improvement of reading, spelling, sanitation and health, grammar and routine housekeeping of the school. Chart racks of paper and wood for use with flash cards and friezes, rustic easels for painting, miniature picture shows, printing sets, hand saws, hammers and other tools, for workshops are being encouraged for activity periods; art and hand work for the girls; library corners and tables, vanity tables and mirrors for each school, sanitary water containers, individual drinking glassess.

Curtains, shades, shrubbery, growing plants and cut flowers in the class room; tables and chairs have been supplied from the work shops, cabinets, files, desks, wood boxes, waste paper baskets, blackboards, mats made from pop tops and shucks; book ends, painting (from expensive materials), floors oiled, gardens, wiring, some type of musical instruments, cameras and pictures of activities, individual records, games and a variety of seatwork, are some of the things we would like for to observe.

Among the workshop activities in the three shops, woodwork, auto mechanics for the boys and home economics for the girls, is put into practice in the homes with tangible results; furniture is being remodeled, rooms renovated, kitchens improved, painting and other repair jobs have been included, pure bred chickens and swine are often seen on the yards.

Four study groups for teachers in the various levels are held each month, in which progressive aids are introduced and demonstrated in an effort to present successful work by one of the group. This encourages others of the group to try.

A county publication has been started, and we hope other editions will follow.

The teachers organization has made contributions to the Henry Hunt Memorial, Red Cross, Junior Red Cross, District and State Teachers Associations.

A dramatic club meets twice per month, with rehearsals several times each week. A three act drama will soon be ready for presentation. A pageant reviewing the life and works of Booker T. Washington will be presented at New Bethel church on April 16th, and then throughout the county at the smaller schools and churches. No admission will be asked.

One county-wide project is now being sponsored by the Trustees and Teachers Association. A community workshop and recreational center. A rally and oratorical contest March 23rd at 3 o'clock will be held at the Greensboro Baptist church for this effort.

Dinner One Cent At Negro School

A hot plate lunch for one penny! Two hundred Negro pupils are being fed at the Jeffersonville Negro school daily, and one penny is the amount they are asked to pay.

The meals are cooked in the domestic science department of the school, and supervised by the teacher, Carrie Howard.

"I use the girls to do the work and that is one way I teach them to cook," explained the teacher.

The cooking is done on a four-cap wood stove and supplemented by the use of a small coal heating stove. They hope to be able to get a range sometime in the future. The meals are served on four tables, two of which were made by the vocational boys. Each child furnishes his own plate, fork and spoon.

Once a month the surplus commodity warehouse of Twiggs county gives foods to this school project, and by charging each child a penny, such necessities as soda, baking powder, sugar, and pepper are bought at the stores.

When the child is unable to bring a penny, in exchange for his lunch, he brings an egg, butter, or potatoes, or something that can be used in the school kitchen. However, occasionally a few are neither able to supply any food, nor to bring the penny. "They get their lunch just the same," said the teacher.

The day the reporter visited the lunch room, the menu consisted of rice, collard greens, corn muffins, and raisin bread for dessert. Six bunches of collards were bought for 60 cents and a few of the children brought greens from home.

"I had 10 cents left today to apply on tomorrow's lunch," said Carrie.

"Have you noticed any physical improvement since beginning the hot lunches?

"They have improved immensely; their faces are fatter and more are here on rainy days than on sunshine days," explained the principal, E. H. Houseworth.

"Anything I cook, they readily eat," stated the teacher. The empty plates left after the primary department marched out bore out the teacher's statement.

Three other groups were served—intermediate, junior high and high school—one following the other.

Among other foods furnished by the surplus commodity warehouse are grits, dried and fresh fruits, meal, ham, smoked and salt meats, flour, grapefruit juice, and canned milk.

Since opening the lunch room last October, it is estimated that 24,000 hot lunches have been served to the Negro children in Jeffersonville.

NEWS OF NEGRO SCHOOLS OF HART COUNTY

Athletic Competition Keen Among Negro Schools On School and Community Day.

This year, as last, Flat Rock led in out-of-door athletics on our School and Community Day program. St. John came in with second place. The high jumping, broad jumping, 50-yard dash, and hundred-yard dash were fairly streamlined, highly wind resistant, and smooth-going. Seventy-five percent of the entire out-of-door activities were taken by Flat Rock students, the highest percent in the recent history of the school.

Oratorical Contest Was High Point of Interest.

The greatest interest was manifested in the oratorical contest in which each school entered. Subjects on education, farming, and the school were delivered with poise and interest by the various speakers. According to our most honorable judges, Mrs. Mae Lilly McCurry, Mr. Pete Herndon and Mrs. Ruth Page, the following oratorical contestants won first, second and third prizes on the primary, elementary and high school levels, respectively:

1. Primary Contestants — First prize, Lois Martin, St. James School; second prize, Sally Turner, Shiloh School.
2. Elementary Contestants—First prize, Robert Joe Rucker, St. John School; second prize, Emma Julia Durrette, Sardis School; third prize, W. G. Scott, New Light School.
3. High School Contestants — First prize, Lucy Hortense Gaines, Flat Rock School; second prize, Helen Brown, Mt. View School.

It was no easy matter for the judges, so efficiently did each entrant deliver his speech. The prizes awarded were substantial ones and were presented by Miss Glass, home economics teacher, Flat Rock School

COLORED SCHOOLS

WILLOW HILL

All departments of the school have taken on new impetus since the completion of the vocational building. The home economics department, directed by Mattie Davis, is doing effective community work with adult home clubs. They meet once a week to study and to serve balanced meals.

The vocational department, directed by John W. Lawton, was successful in getting the Willow Hill School approved as one of the defense educational centers. Boys from the ages of 17-24 years are eligible to learn a trade at the expense of the government. Registrations are now being received.

Group A in an excellent assembly program January 24 presented as their theme, "An Hour With Race Artists." This was in accordance with the persistent problem, "Aesthetic and Spiritual Impulses." Under the direction of their sponsor, Beatrice L. Dominis, the pupils represented famous artists of the race in song and readings, with the setting in a broadcasting station as is given over the radio. Noted groups, as "Wings Over Jordan," "Deep River Boys" and "Moon River Moods," were dramatized. Corliss Hall as leader of "Deep River Boys," showed talent as a singer. Harvey Davis, as Roland Hayes, stirred the audience in his rendering of "Water Boy," supported by the boys' group. Delaware Hall, fittingly called the 'Song Bird of Willow Hill," made a true picture of Marion Anderson, the great contralto, in her vocal solo, "Who Knows." In the sketch, "Moon River Moods," humorous reading from Dunbar and other negro poets added much to the program. Elizabeth Rountree, in her rendition of "Doctor I'm Sick," called forth much applause and laughter from the parents and friends present.

This program was also a part of the P.-T. A. meeting at which it was gratifying to see present many men and trustees of the school. Maenelle Dixon, Jeans supervisor, was a guest, and expressed praise and encouragement to the group for their inspiring program. Among others who expressed themselves as pleased with the progress and results the principal and staff were obtaining at Willow Hill, were Man Hall, chairman of the local trustee board of the school; Mrs. Agnes Cone, one of the officials of the P.-T. A., and Emma Parrish, who recently returned from an extensive trip to Cincinnati, O.

A singing contest will be given at the school February 20. Three groups will compete, consisting of a boys' group, a girls' group and an adult group composed of P.-T. A. women and friends. Practice has already begun among the groups. A collation will be served and prizes awarded. The object of the entertainment is to complete funds to buy wire fencing for the school grounds.

Equipment for playground has been made by the vocational boys, taught by John Lawton. Swings, see-saws and merry-go-rounds afford the little people great pleasure.

The co-operative school garden is now showing fine results in the way of excellent produce and some dividends. The language arts group, after sampling the radishes, wrote some very striking descriptions on the taste of radishes and value of vegetables in the diet. The swine project is a source of interest to the community as well as to the agricultural classes. The purebred Duroc Jersey pair of hogs are thriving through the care as given by John Lawton and his vocational boys.

Recent visitors to the school the past month are as follows: L. A. Lester, associate director of negro education for the state of Georgia; Vivian Smith, counseling teacher of home economics, and F. M. Staley, itinerant teacher trainer, Georgia State College.

The teachers and friends of the principal, Beatrice L. Dominis, have expressed their deep sympathy for her in the recent loss of her father.

COUNTY SCHOOL BOARD AIDS COLORED BOYS

The County School Board yesterday issued a check for $50.00, payable to the colored County Agent to be used in the purchase of carpenter tools and supplies to be used by the Colored 4_H boys.

The boys, who have been building brooders and other equipment in an effort to carry out a program outlined by their leader, County Agent Bradley, have encountered trouble in securing tools with which to work. This liberal gift by the County Board is very timely and is certainly appreciated by these boys and the Colored Agent.

Consolidation And Transportation

Savannah Journal - Savannah, Ga.

MAR 29 1941

The Journal is pleased to note that Doctor A. H. Gordon, in tentatively outlining his program for the Georgia Teachers and Educational Association, has called attention to the fact that Georgia Negroes should contend for transportation for Negro children on the same basis as it is furnished for the white children as well as equal pay for equal work for the teachers. It is obvious that even ranker discrimination is practiced against Negro children in this matter of transportation than is practiced against their teachers in the matter of salaries. A large proportion of Negro children live in rural districts than one twentieth the amount is spent on the transportation of Negro children as is spent on white children, all this in the face of the American principle, or idea, or equal educational opportunities for all children.

Transportation of Negro school children in the rural areas involves consolidation of Negro schools.. It seems to be a far-fetched theory of the State Department of Education that isolated, ineffficient one-teacher schools are better for Negro children for some mysterious reason than consolidated schools would be. This argument strikes us as merely an "alibi" and a poor one at that. It is so obvious as to hardly need mentioning that consolidated schools offer better equipment, instructional personnel of superior training, and better housing for schools.

Let us struggle for these three: Equalization of Teachers' Salaries, Consolidation of Rural Schools, and Transportation of Our Children.

NEGRO SCHOOLS SHOULD HAVE CONSIDERATION

The disclosure that a movement is on foot for the inauguration of a nine-months term for the negro school children of the county created keen interest and it is certain that the project will gain the support of many of our citizens.

A petition has been presented to the county authorities asking for a term of the same length that is provided in the white schools. The county commissioners expressed sympathy with the proposal, but pointed to a five-mill school tax limit and suggested that the matter be taken before the county school board.

The spokesman for those advocating the extension of the term for the negro schools replied that the board had been approached but that he had been advised that no money is available for the purpose mentioned.

A perusal of the petition containing the plea for a nine-months term indicates that there is high merit in the proposal. The petition points out that the negro schools have a term two months shorter than that of the white schools, the document declaring that the state provides for a seven months school for the children of this county "and the county augments these seven months with two months for other children, making a nine months term."

The effect of the petition is to ask that the county authorities take the same action with reference to the schools attended by the children of the negro citizens of Muscogee. Among the reasons assigned for making the request is the fact that a large number of negroes have been forced to move to various sections of the county because of congested housing conditions in the city. Also, it is stated that in eight years the negro students will be nearly two terms behind in their studies as the result of the short semesters now.

The petition asserts that negroes of Muscogee county enlist in the army and that with "larger educational opportunities" they would be more useful to the army and to their country. The document lists a number of counties, some of them with populations smaller than Muscogee, which have nine months of school each year for the negro children.

The petition pleads for a longer term in this county "in the name of fairness and justice and in the interest of better citizenship of all our citizens" and ends with the declaration that "education is an emergency of our defense program."

There is no question about the fact that a longer term for the negro children of the county should be provided, if it is possible to do so. The negroes of Columbus go to school nine months a year, and it is hoped that a way can be found to provide a similar term for those living in the county outside the city.

The Enquirer hopes that the county school board members will give careful consideration to the petition presented by the negro citizens of the county.

Negroes Ask Lengthened School Terms In County

Commissioners Sympathetic But Say Legal Limitations Prevent Action

Petitioned to provide an eight or nine-month school term for the negro county school children, the county commissioners, at the weekly meeting yesterday, expressed themselves as being in sympathy with such a move, but declared that a constitutional limitation prevented any immediate action by the board.

The request was presented by Dr. T. H. Brewer, local negro physician, who stated that he represented the parents of many of such children.

In the petition, it was pointed out that the state furnished seven months of schooling, but the county provides no money for any additional schooling for the negro children, although it does provide for two months more of such teaching for the white children.

The board members expressed themselves as being highly sympathetic with his request, but stated there was a constitutional limitation upon them, limiting them to a 5-mill appropriation for maintenance of county schools, and that they already had appropriated the limit allowed and that a constitutional amendment would be required to enable an added appropriation to be made.

They suggested that he contact the county school board, to which he replied that he had, but that he was informed that no money was available for such added schooling.

The petition was as follows:

"A defense petition in an emergency.

"To the Muscogee county commissioners; the Muscogee county board of education, and to all fair-minded, justice loving citizens of Muscogee county, Ga.; Greetings:

"Whereas the state of Georgia provides (7) seven months schools for children of this county, and the county augments these seven months with (2) two months for other children, making a (9) nine month term.

"Whereas, the term for negro children is only (7) seven months, we pray and petition those in control of this situation for relief to the end of making a nine month school term available for negro children also. We set forth our petition for the following reasons, and upon the following facts:

"Whereas, as a number of nego children who formerly lived in the city of Columbus, where the school is nine months, were compelled to move out into Muscogee county, where the term is only seven months, on account of a lack of houses produced by housing projects.

"Whereas, all negro children living in Muscogee county, because of the seven months school term are continually deprived of two months a year to which they are entitled. In (8) eight years they will be nearly two terms behind in their studies, thereby impairing their usefulness as good citizens, and retarding their fitness should they desire to enter our city high school.

"Whereas, Fort Benning being situated in Muscogee county and whereas numbers of our boys from the county enlist as soldiers, they would be more useful to the army, and their country with larger educational opportunities in the county.

"Whereas, many smaller populated counties give their negro children nine months of school, viz.: Chattahoochee, Clarke, Peach, Wilkes, and others. Also many of the larger counties like Fulton, Richmond, Chatham, and others, give their negro children nine months school; For these reasons and more, we therefore pray, petition and beseech those in authority, in the name of fairness, and justice and in the interest of better citizenship of all of our citizens that the school term for negro children in Muscogee county be made nine months instead of seven, as now is.

"We invoke your prayerful attention and favorable consideration. Education is an emergency of our defense program."

School Exhibits a Huge Success.

Friday, April 4, was a glamorous date in the history of the negro schools in Hart County. On that date all the schools in the county displayed artistic, useful, inexpensive articles which were done in exquisite taste and design. So lovely were the displays by the various schools, the judges admitted much difficulty in deciding just which school presented the most outstanding exhibit.

According to the judges, who were Miss Pennington, supervisor of white consolidated schools in Hart County; Miss Maude Brown, supervisor of relief food for schools in Hart and Elbert Counties, and Miss Ruby Nell Robertson, supervisor of recreation and handicraft, white consolidated schools, the following schools received awards:

Flat Rock school, first prize.
New Hope school, second prize.
Sardis school, third prize.

Honorable mention was awarded Union Bush and Bowersville schools. All schools were highly commended.

The entire room was transformed into an art gallery, with colorful, fantastic appeal and the whole event was a thing of grandeur, gaiety and genuine beauty.

Many outstanding visitors reviewed the colorful array. Among several others the following are noted: Mr. W. A. Moss, County Supt. of Schools; Mr. R. C. David, Superintendent City Schools; Mrs. Ophelia Norris, chairman Hart County Board of Relief; and the most honorable judges, Miss Pennington, Miss Brown and Miss Robertson.

Guided by a waving American flag, a happy throng filled the room where they openly expressed enthusiastic admiration and delight throughout the day.

TEACHERS FOUND GUILTY WILL BE GIVEN "PAPERS"

JAN 1 8 1941

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 16—The Orleans Parish School Board, in its regular monthly meeting held in the office of the board last Friday night, adopted resolutions declaring that those found practicing un-American practices would be immediately dismissed from the services of the board. It was said that no cases had been found but that this act was done to prevent anything subversive from occuring among their employees. Previously at the beginning of the year the department of superintendence had addressed the white and Negro principals and had advised programs on Americanism being conducted daily in all classes.

While Negro public school teachers have not been accused of subversism, there has been complaint about seemingly tainted activities on the part of some of the teachers in the universities. Objection was raised when a group from Dillard university entertained the candidate for vice-presidency of the U.S.A. on the Communist ticket on the occasion of his visit to the city.

RULE ADOPTED BY BOARD

The rule as adopted in the form of a constitutional amendment is a modified version of the one offered by the Coalition of Patriotic societies. As phrased by Theo O. Hotard, school board member, it follows:

"All teachers, employes, agents and representatives of the Orleans parish school board, or in any manner connected with or employed in the public schools of the city of New Orleans, are prohibited from:

"1. Holding membership in, or participating in, the activities of any group or organization, and joining with any individual, whose aim or purpose is the overthrow of the government of the United States of America by force or violence, or the supplanting of any system which is guided or controlled by or owes allegiance to any foreign government, party, political organization or individual; or which teaches or promotes class or religious hatred or strife; or which advocates the general abolition of the right to private property; or which advocates and conspires to defeat or destroy the purposes or intent of the laws governing conscription and national defense;

2. Advising, urging, persuading or inducing any pupil in the public schools of New Orleans to join any group or organization that promises, fosters or upholds attempts to overthrow the government of the United States by force or violence, or the supplanting of it with any system (as in paragraph 1).

"It will be the duty of the superintendent to call the guilty party and first warn him of the violation of these rules and if he persists in this violation that he will be charged under the tenure act and given a trial before the board with recourse to the courts for final decision before dismissal."

Board Asks Funds for 3 Negro Schools

FEB 20 1941

The need of deficiency appropriations for new school buildings was coupled with a blast at the deterioration of old buildings because of inadequate repair funds at a meeting of the Board of Education yesterday afternoon.

The board voted to request deficiency appropriations of $710,000 for three colored schools, an undisclosed amount for three sites, and $22,080 for 30 colored teachers to relieve overcrowded classes.

Criticism of the inadequate repair program was precipitated when Dr. James A. Gannon, board member, reported on the potential danger and dilapidation which he said he had discovered at Western High School, Thirty-fifth and R Streets Northwest. On a recent inspection of the school, he said, he was told that the roof had leaked for 15 years. The dampness of the plaster and cement constituted a hazard, he declared.

The board adopted his resolution to ask "the proper authorities of the District" whether the building is safe for occupancy and to ask when the building would be put in good condition.

J. J. Crane, first assistant superintendent in charge of business affairs, said he would stake his professional reputation on the fact that there was no danger at the school. He said the leak was not in the roof proper, but in the side walls.

Situation "Grows Worse"

Crane indicated that the board should be in a position to "demand," rather than merely to request action from the District repair shop.

Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent, said that "the amount of appropriations for taking care of buildings is inadequate. The old buildings are being allowed to become dilapidated. And the situation is growing worse and worse each year."

In the request for deficiency appropriations for colored schools, the largest items was $300,000 for beginning construction on a new junior high school in the Northeast to relieve overcrowding at Browne Junior High and to keep pace with new housing developments in that vicinity. The request also embodied additionsl funds for purchase of land in the vicinity of Forty-ninth Street and Washington Place Northeast for construction of this school.

Other items in the deficiency requests were $230,000 for construction of an eight-room addition to Van Ness Elementary School and additional funds for purchase of a site on adjoining grounds; $180,000 for an eight-room extensible elementary school building in the vicinity of Forty-ninth and Hayes Streets Northeast, with additional funds for the site. Both of these locations are near new housing projects which would overtax existing facilities, according to the report from Dr. Ballou.

Fewer School Accidents

Contending that the oversized classes in colored junior and senior high schools make a serious situation, Dr. Ballou recommended the request for deficiency appropriation for 30 additional teachers at a cost of $22,080, which the board supported.

FEB 20 1941

The accident report for the past year showed 267 in elementary schools, 200 in junior high and vocational schools, and 124 in senior high schools. The board received the report from Boise L. Bristor, statistician, covering a range from bruises and cuts to serious injuries.

The totals represented an increase of 12 in elementary schools compared with the previous year, a decrease of 119 in junior high and vocational schools, and a decrease of 20 in senior high schools. Most of the accidents occurred on the school grounds; many when "large groups of children played unsupervised."

There were 17 traffic injuries without a single death, Bristor pointed out. "This is a decrease of four traffic accidents since last year."

Miss E. A. Lyons, who has been an administrative principal for ten years, was named supervising principal in Division 13.

Mississippi Moves To Improve Race Education

JACKSON, Miss. (ANP) —Among the changes recommended by a committee of teachers at the conference of the Mississippi Education association, white, are a demand for more equitable distribution of education funds between Negro and white children, the establishment of a colored junior college in the Delta, and an increase in the appropriation for Alcorn A. and M. college.

MAR 2 2 1941

The MEA Committee on Improvement of Negro Education asked that its report be accepted as the recommendation of the full association to the Legislative committee to Study and Investigate Negro Education named at the last legislative session. It was pointed out that "over $9 is spent for each white child in Mississippi when each dollar is spent for the Negro child."

It was also revealed that the funds appropriated for Alcorn college have remained stationary in the face of an increasing enrollment and definite building needs. The committee suggested that the Rosenwald fund offer to match dollar for dollar appropriations for maintenance of the now Mississippi Negro Training school up to $30,000 be taken advantage of.

No mention of a salary raise for Negro teachers was made.

SCHOOLS SAID NEAR LIMIT OF STATE GRANTS

Acknowledging that "we have almost reached the point where we can not justifiably call upon the state for very much more increased appropriations for our educational program," J. M. Bryant, assistant state superintendent of education, told about 75 school administrators Tuesday morning that the only other source from which can be obtained funds to raise the per capita expenditure on each school child to "anything like the national average" is the federal government.

In the second of a series of small state conferences which rang few changes on the Mississippi Education Association convention, Mr. Bryant introduced the United States Supreme Court ruling that white school teachers and negro school teachers must be paid on the same basis and asserted that "negro schools should not be built up at the expense of white schools."

"We should give the negroes the type of educational program that will best fit them for the social and economic order in which they will live." The problem of equalization of white and negro teacher salaries, created by the Supreme Court ruling in a West Virginia case, is not unduly disturbing in Mississippi, pointed out J. A. Travis, state supervisor of colored elementary schools, speaking from the floor, "since only about 600 people in the negro group are college graduates." Salaries based equally upon training would still be much lower in the negro schools.

Mr. Bryant said that whereas the national expenditure average per school child was around $80, the state average was not ever more than $60, almost the lowest in the nation. But a comparison of effort to support a school program with ability ranks Mississippi now lower than seventh in the nation.

"We must admit that it is practically impossible for the people of Mississippi to support an educational program on the same basis as the other states are able to do. We do believe that the state is able to do a lot more than it is now doing," the assistant superintendent said.

Tightening another screw in the MEA program for obtaining that maximum effort from the state, W. N. Taylor, executive secretary, distributed cards on which legislative committees are to be suggested to the MEA president, C. J. Darby. Mr. Taylor recommended that a livewire, trustee, a school-minded Legionnaire, an active PTA member, and two or four teachers be placed on the committee by county superintendents of education.

George W. Ditto, Boloxi superintendent, told of the American Legion's program of Americanism, which for twenty years has been seeking to make the school child familiar with the democratic philosophy, "so that he will be thoroughly sold on it." The national oratorical contest, the annual Boys' State at Millsaps, and, new this year in Mississippi, Citizenship day on May 18, are methods by which the Legion is teaching the "how" of democracy. Boys and girls who this year became 21, about 6,000 of them, will be given recognition on Citizenship Day, instructed in their responsibility and given certificates of their entrance upon citizens' estate.

Difficulties being encountered by superintendents in the administration of free textbooks were given help by C. E. Hudspeth, executive secretary of that board. He stated that books could be stored over the summer in local school houses or in the county depository, with the state responsible in case of fire, as it is during the school year, "if all precautions are taken."

Reports of other programs of the state department of education were to be given by Dorector H. E. Mauldin, Jr., Defense Program; W. G. Eckles, School Building Activities; J. B. Wheeler, Rehabilitation and Crippled Children's Program; R. L. Anderson, Adult Education; G. J. Cain, Administration; Captain Henry Lee, Safety in Our Schools; J. A. Travis, Negro Education.

D. R. Patterson gave the closing inspirational talk. Poindexter elementary school pupils gave the devotional and T. H. Naylor, Hinds county superintendent of education, welcomed delegates.

Summary of Quitman County Negro School Term, 1940-41.

By C. L. Roseborough

One week prior to the opening of school, the five days' short course was held at the Lambert Junior High School, Nov. 11th to 15th, 1940, conducted by Ollie Murray Pennington, Jeanes supervisor. Mrs. Jones, county superintendent, outlined the school program for the scholastic year and gave full explanation on free textbooks.

Other speakers were Prof. Bobo, principal of Lambert High School; Dr. A. C. Covington, county health officer; Mrs. McVey, supervisor of birth statistics; Mamie Higgins, teacher trainer of Clarksdale Agricultural High School; Ernestine Powell, Jeanes supervisor of Coahoma county.

It was inspiring to see so many trustees attend that meeting to learn more about their duties, and help out along educational lines.

The first month's work was somewhat perplexing to some of the new teachers, as they felt as if the free textbook system was a graveyard problem. Now they move on with much ease. All teachers enjoyed the Xmas holidays shopping and visiting relatives and friends.

The second month most of the teachers were doing real work. Children were happy over free books, and learning fast. Most schoolrooms were crowded. The third and fourth months some of the teachers were very busily engaged with children, and selling candy to buy articles for their school.

The negro teachers gave the devotion at the Marks Senior High School for the white Teachers Association of Quitman County. Prof. E. C. Morgan, principal of the Sledge school, rendered a spicy program with some of his best students.

Carrie Washington, primary teacher of the Lambert Junior High School, took her second grade class to visi the printing office in Marks, the county superintendent's office, the dairy farm...

The fifth month was spent getting ready for Field Day, coaching the eighth grade, making an educable roll, planning for picnics, closing day activities, checking in free textbooks, some attending the State Teachers Association meeting in Jackson; others taking their children to the zoo in Memphis.

Featuring the events was that Mrs. Daniel Hughes (white) gave the primary children of the Belen school over 100 pencils. She also assisted in booklets and chart-making.

The county-wide graduation stimulated a spirit of better and faster work among the lower grades. The stage was decorated in purple and gold crepe paper in rainbow style. Lending beauty to the scene were the 50 eighth grade graduates attired in maroon caps and gowns, wearing white carnations as class flower. They marched to the platform while the Clarksdale Agricultural High School band played for the occasion. Honored guests were Prof. Bobo, principal of Lambert High School; Rev. J. H. Palmer (col.), pastor of the A. M. E. Zion church, Marks. The commencement address was delivered by the county Superintendent of education, Mrs. Jones. It was indeed a masterpiece. She proved her oratorical ability and skill in speaking. She pictured noted negroes to the graduates, such as Mary Anderson, noted singer; Paul Lawrence Dunbar, writer of negro dialect as well as refined English; James Weldon Johnson, the writer of the negro national anthem; Booker T. Washington, founder of Tuskegee Institute, and others. She further said a contented person never gets very far. But work for what you get, because it is honest to work. Issuing of diplomas followed. She made a deep impression upon her hearers.

Prof. Carson and Cornelia Richards are putting forth conscientious efforts to help the older people as well as the youth with the 4-H club project. Watch the result.

Ollie Murray Pennington is working hard for better school houses and equipment, better prepared teachers, and a longer school term.

I have noted with much satisfaction the added appreciation among the negro teachers for the firm leadership and helpful suggestions coming from our own good white folks. Thank you again, and with other staunch agencies at work, Quitman county educational flag will not trail in the dust.

MISSOURI SPENDS MORE FOR NEGRO PUPILS THAN WHITE

MAR 29 1941

NEW YORK CITY—(ANP)—Statement that an average of $137.04 per year for each pupil is spent by the city in educating its 1,000,000 Negro and white children was contained in the annual report of the board of education, made public last week. Estimates were computed on an 190-school day year.

MAR 29 1941

The average is based upon the three divisions of the public school system whose individual per capita costs for the fiscal year ending June, 1940, were found to be $124.73 for day elementary schools; $124.40 for junior high schools, and $162.01 for day high schools. These figures represent a rise over the five-year period since 1935 of $20.98 from the average figure of $116.06. This rise, the report says, has occured in face of a fall-off in pupil attendance.

(Editor's note): In 1939 a survey conducted for the United States office of education by Dr. Doxey A. Wilkerson revealed that for the school year 1935-36, ten Southern states showed a per capita average of $37.87 for white children and $13.09 for Negro children. The best record was in Missouri where $49.75 was spent for each white child while $56.75 was spent on each Negro child. The lowest expenditures were in Mississippi where the per capita costs were $34.06 and $6.75 for whites and Negroes respectively.

Board Hears Group

DEC 5 - 1941

A virtual "no" to the plea of a committee of five representatives of Parent-teacher groups from four elementary schools was given by Dr. Homer W. Anderson, superintendent, at a meeting of the Instruction Committee of the Board of Education on Tuesday night.

The superintendent promised, however, "after-defense-improvements" of these over-crowded conditions, insisting that long range study of the problem was needed.

Board members appeared cold toward the committee's suggestion of converting the Cote Brilliante school at 2616 Cora, now a white junior high school, into an elementary school for Negroes. This school is almost surrounded by Negroes and more are moving into the area. Members favored the idea of "hunting up a couple of portables" to be moved on the school grounds. More than 40 additional rooms would be needed to alleviate the crowded conditions.

Conditions Dreadful

The committee of protest led by Mrs. Dovie W. Dickerson, a member of the Children's Board of Guardians, was told by Dr. Anderson that there is "no chance of adding to the school plan until the school year 1942-43." Pressed for further explanation, however, Dr. Anderson admitted, as did other Board members, that the dreadful condition existing at Simmons school, 4300 St. Louis avenue, should be reported to the building committee.

According to facts, Mrs. Ishmahael Thames, representative for the Simmons school P.T.A., and which facts Board Members did not deny, all rooms except three at Simmons have from 47 to 54 children; some of these children sit in the aisles.

A more serious condition was revealed when Mrs. Thames decried the fact that there are 45 children in a dank, glaringly lighted basement room which opens almost in the door a lavatory causing an objectionable odor in the room at all times.

It was further revealed that frosted windows could not be opened for ventilation. Moreover, the floor is warped due to dampness, no doubt. The room had once served as a play room.

59 In Some Rooms

Proving that he and the Board of Education were acquainted with the existing conditions in at least one school, Dr. Anderson said that an average of 49.9 children were in each room at the Riddick school, though in white schools where rooms have been crowded because of the influx of defense workers the average is 43 children in each room.

DEC 5 1941

Mrs. George L. Vaughn made the report for the Cole school, 3957 Enright. She stated that three upper grades at Cole have 59 children in classrooms while six have more than 50 in the classrooms. There are 22 classrooms at Cole school, one shower having been converted into a class room. On rainy days the children are compelled to remain in their class rooms during the entire school period because there is no other place for them to go, the play rooms having long since been converted into class rooms.

Suggest Half-Day Sessions

Although the Cole school was built to take care of the children attending the West Belle Portables, in less than three years after Cole school's construction in 1930 these portables were reopened and have continued ever since. In the portables, too, there are no play facilities for the children.

Half-day sessions are required to handle the student-load of 1,300 at John Marshall school, 4342 Aldine, Dr. W. S. Gibson, representative, told the Board members, who suggested that perhaps half-day sessions could solve the over-crowding problem at Simmons, Cole and Riddick. Again the condition of a lavatory close to a basement classroom was reported.

Parent representatives do not favor the half-day "solution" because parents are away from home most of the day and children would wander the streets.

A militant note was struck at the meeting when N. A. Sweets, editor, asked Dr. Anderson to appoint, a Negro on his survey committee for "after-defense" building. Dr. Anderson said that two Negro junior high schools would be planned for.

Others attending the meeting were L. Ford, an executive member of the Public Education association, an inter-racial group Mrs. E. Tinley, Riddick representative; and Atty. D. T. Lawson of the Citizens Protective league.

The Association was formed "to keep the public informed on the activities of American Negro colleges and universities . . . and to create a greater understanding of the aims, problems and aspirations of Negro higher education."

New Teacher Is Promised

"Hot-Bed" of Racial Enmity Is Locale Of Recent Walkout

(Star-News Exclusive).

ROCKVILLE CENTRE, L. I.—This little Nassau County village, often referred to as Long Island's hot-bed of racial enmity, was outwardly calm Wednesday as 56 striking students of Clinton School went back to their classes following a protest made by parents when school opened here a week ago.

A decision for the striking school kids, ranging in age from six to twelve, to return to the much criticized school was made late Tuesday afternoon after a session in Lynbrook District Court before Judge Norman F. Lent.

Acting on behalf of the Nassau County branch of the N. A. A. C. P., Attorney Florence Lucas, of Jamaica, mapped plans for a "fight to the finish" when Judge Lent advised Rockville Centre's colored parents to petition the Board of Education to remedy the "evils" complained about.

When the strike was called last week, parents of the striking students demanded (1) at least one teacher for each class, 2) removal of the school's principal, Mrs. Evelyn Wallace, white, (3) a separate room for each class and (4) classification of classes as "grades," instead of "groups," the current practice.

Clinton is regarded as one of the most poorly attended schools on Long Island. Of the 72 students, only eight are white.

Mrs. Charles Gillespie, long an active civic worker among the colored residents of the village, is credited with successfully leading what is believed to be this community's first school strike.

Already, the superintendent of schools, Floyd B. Watson, has agreed to put on another teacher. When parents of the children called the strike, only 15 remained in their classrooms.

Authorities became so perturbed, a court order was issued by police officials in which all the parents were summoned to the hearing held by Judge Lent on Tuesday.

NEGRO SCHOOL WILL OBSERVE PARENTS DAY

On Friday, March 21, the parents of Johnston County Training school community will assemble at the Johnston County Training Schoo to devote the day designated as Parents Day, to the study of the items of a survey made during the first semester of the 1940-41 school year.

The Johnston County Training School faculty, finding its school facilities, like many other schools, failing to meet the needs of its school community, decided to make a survey of the community needs in an attempt to find out how it could do its job better.

The survey discloses a more accurate picture of the social elements and factors with which the school must deal. The content of this survey was compiled and rewritten into a textbook supplement, which is to be studied by the students of the school, the faculty having decided the school can best serve its purpose when the students understand what it is to do for them in their immediate environment.

Not satisfied with studying the problems with the students alone, the faculty has invited the parents of the entire student body to spend one whole school day in the discussion of different items of the survey. To assure the attendance of the majority of the parents on this day, the principal of the school, W. R. Collins, received permission from the superintendent of schools, H. B. Marrow, to use the school buses for the transportation of parents to and from school on that day.

The subject for discussion on Parents Day include: Public health as it affects Johnston County Training School students and community; the responsibilities of active citizenship; the school as a changing, adjustable, social institution designed to serve the needs of the community in which it is placed; the school as a reforming force in society; and the school as a philosophy of life.

Ross Addresses Negro Teachers

(By John A. Campbell)

The most interesting and inspiring part of the program of the teachers meeting which was held recently at the Shawtown School was an address by Assistant County Superintendent C. Reid Ross.

The address by Mr. Ross was very similar to the Round Table Talk given to the teachers by the state supervisor, Miss Marie McIver, at the meeting in Dunn. The only noted difference was that Miss McIver confined her talk largely to class room problems, while Mr. Ross lectured on the general school program as that program effects or maybe effected by each school community. By the very pointed remarks of the assistant superintendent one could readily see that he recognizes that the technique of teaching and administration learned while in college is fundamental to the success of any teacher. He, on the other hand, informed the teachers that much learning is to be acquired after one has begun teaching. There is a type of learning teachers must acquire that is peculiar to each community if he or she is to be truly successful in carrying on a good school program. One of those essentials a successful teacher learns is how to create and maintain a good community relationship. It was emphasized that many school programs fail and many teachers are not successful because the link between the principal,teachers, pupils, parents and civic and religious organizations in the community is too slack.

Mr. Ross said, "A public relations program is similar to a good school program." He seems to believe, and all progressive school teachers and administrators will agree, that where there is no good public relations program there is no good school program.

It is gratifying to note the interest the assistant superintendent is showing toward the colored school program throughout Harnett County. It seems that he is aware also that a good county-wide school program must include all races and classees. It is only by the inclusion of all that we may hope eventually to raise the general citizenship status and create a more wholesome environment in which all classes are forced to live.

NEGRO SCHOOL SEES VALUE IN PARENTS DAY

The widespread interest shown in the Parents Day Observance conducted at the Johnston County Training School last month has led to a proposal by Training School officials that Parents Day events be held every year.

A resolutions committee met last month and outlined a plan to organize a report covering the happenings during this year's Parents Day, this report to be distributed in the community as a means of preserving interest of parents in the observance and to help in the growth and development of the school.

The committee discussed briefly the events of Parents Day and emphasized the fact that parents appeared to be unanimous in their contention that pleasure and profitable experience had been derived from the observance. Following the discussion the committee organized a series of resolutions—14 in all—covering different phases of student welfare, parent-teacher relationships, duties of parents and teachers, and the general organization and development of the Negro high school.

Among the resolutions was a proposal that the Parent-Teachers Association sponsor canning projects for free lunches to be served to undernourished stude n t s. The school has attempted this year to provide free lunches for the most deserving cases and it is hoped that the program can be continued and enlarged.

The committee recommended that the Parent-Teachers Association be requested to conduct two or more Parents Day programs each year.

Negroes Lead; Enrollment Less Than Last Year

Attendance in the Salisbury schools for the eighth month of the current term ending May 7, averaged 96 per cent daily and equalled the mark set in the previous session, Supt. J. H. Knox announced today.

Total enrollment in all schools was 4,065 as compared with 4,156 a year ago while present membership was 3,704 in comparison with 3,843 a year ago.

The average daily attendance for the past month was 3,536. The Price High school for Negroes had an average of 99 per cent while the Monroe street elementary Negro school recorded 98 per cent. The Lincoln and Price elementary Negro schools had 96 per cent each. In the Negro division total membership was 1,126 and average daly attendance was 1,101 or 98 per cent.

The Henderson school led the white division with an average daily attendance of 97 per cent. Boyden High was next with 95 per cent, the F. B. John and Wiley schools each scored 94 per cent while the Allen school had 93 per cent.

The white schools showed a membership of 2,578 and average daily attendance of 2,435 or 94 per cent.

The report further showed that tardies in the white division totaled 357, in the Negro division 200 for a total of 557 in the entire system.

Greenville Negro Boasts 65 Years as an Educator

83-Year-Old Principal and Alumnus of Shaw Remains Active in Profession

By JAMES WHITFIELD.

Greenville, June 2.—Prof. C. M. Eppes, Negro principal in Greenville, this year completed his 65th year of service in the public schools of North Carolina—38 of the years have been spent in Greenville.

Even though he has reached the age of 83, Professor Eppes still is active. Aside from his administrative duties with the local Negro schools, he is chairman of the high school section of the North Carolina Negro Teachers' Association, Executive Secretary of the North Carolina Negro High School Athletic Association, chairman of the advancement for Negro Scouts of the East Carolina Council, vice basileus of Nu Alpha chapter of Omega Psi Phi Fraternity, member of the Civic League and the Masons.

Professor Eppes' educational career began in Wilmington and New Hanover County, where he taught from 1875-1877. In 1880 he was commissioned to work in Wayne County, where he remained until 1885, during which time he was associated with a newspaper. From Wayne County he went to Edgecombe County, where he served for several years. After serving the State Normal School at Plymouth from 1899 until 1903, he came to Greenville.

When he assumed his duties here, the city maintained a three-room frame building. Today the facilities of the Negro schools of the city include 32 teachers and property valued at $170,000.

Besides being a charter member of the North Carolina Negro Teachers' Association, Professor Eppes was appointed by Governor Locke Craig to the Educational Congress, appointed to the Reemployment Commission of North Carolina by Governor O. Max Gardner, appointed by Governor Hoey to represent North Carolina at the DeSota, Mississippi Exposition, and also was appointed to the Inter-Racial Commission of North Carolina by Governors Gardner and Hoey.

JUN 14 1941

DURHAM, N. C.—A large delegation of citizens representing the executive committe of Negro Affairs in the city has appeared before the City council to petition the council to appoint a member of their group on the city school board.

Dr. C. C. Spaulding, introduced the subject and presented Dr. A. Heninburg, professor of Education at the North Carolina College for Negroes, who spoke in behalf of the petition.

Heninburg called for a democratic operation of the City schools by allowing Negro citizens to sit in on the planning and promotion of the city school system.

ONLY DEMOCRATIC WAY

Contending that "no white man can understand the Negro problem," the speaker declared that he did not blame the city board of education. He further contended that the democratic way of life can only be realized by placing a Negro representative on the city board of education.

Asking for equality of opportunity Dr. Heninburg stated that the democratic way of living can only be found in the application where all people involved are represented.

JUN 14 1941

In urging that the petition be granted by appointing a Negro on the board, Dr. Heninburg stated that the city will make a mistake to ignore the request. He cited the fact that other boards in the city and state are functioning satisfactorily with both white and Negro persons composing them.

Local membership of the Durham County Draft Boards and the membership of the board of trustees of the North Carolina College for Negroes were mentioned as examples.

In conclusion the speaker stated that the Negro citizens of Durham have qualified persons who are in position to make a substantial contribution to the city school board, if and when appointed.

No action was taken by the City Council concerning the election of members to fill the two vacancies now existing on the school board. It was not indicated as to when this matter would be considered.

COUNTY TO GET SAME NUMBER OF TEACHERS

City Colored Elementary School Loses One Teacher.

Union county schools will have the same number of teachers under the allotment received recently by E. H. Broome from the State School Commission. The Monroe city system lost one elementary teacher in the colored school.

In allotments, as listed by Nathan H. Yelton, secretary to the commission the following changes in the schools were made in the white schools: Marshville, Union and Prospect each lost one elementary teacher while Jackson gained a high school teacher and Mineral Springs gained an elementary teacher. In the colored schools, Western Union gained one high school teacher.

The allotment gives Union county white schools 70 high school teachers and 142 elementary school teachers, and the colored schools eight high school teachers and 52 elementary teachers, making a total of 272 teachers. This figure does not include 13 vocational agriculture and four home economic teachers.

In the Monroe system, the white schools were allotted eight high school and 17 elementary teachers, while the colored schools will get five high school and 11 elementary teachers, for a total of 41 teachers. Average daily attendance was 846 in the white schools and 551 in the colored schools for a total of 1,397, according to W. R. Kirkman, superintendent.

Following is a table of the allotments in the various white schools of Union county:

A Teacher Shortage

DR. JAMES E. SHEPARD, President of the North Carolina College for Negroes at Durham, has made a wholly admirable appeal for further closing of the differential gap between the salaries of white and black teachers in the state's public schools. Meanwhile, as the state Government considers ways and means to improve the public school system as a whole, word comes from authoritative sources that the nation faces an acute shortage of teachers. And so, demand outrunning supply may present the most effective argument heard in many years in state legislatures on behalf of larger pay for all teachers.

Although decreased school enrollment in some few places has caused the dismissal of hundreds of teachers, a committee of the National Education Association finds that in the country as a whole the soaring defense industry is tempting many teachers to make some financial hay while the making is good.

The nation will rejoice with the teachers over this new emphasis placed on the teacher's calling. But the NEA committee issues a warning that should not be overlooked. Wherever the shortage of teachers appears, says the committee, there comes also the strong temptation to lower the teaching standards in order that class-rooms shall have their instructors.

If this already observed reduction of standards is not checked and overcome, educational advancement over many years past will be undone at the very time the nation rightly looks more and more to education for aid in preserving free, informed and alert democracy.

Colored School Recommended For Canton Area

GRAND JURY CONDEMNED CANTON JAIL AND MADE RECOMMENDATIONS FOR IMPROVEMENTS THROUGHOUT COUNTY

The Haywood County grand jury in making recommendations to the February term of Superior court, asked that a school be provided for the colored in Canton, and suggested many repairs to schools in various sections of the county.

The Canton jail was reported to be in a "deplorable condition", and the jury recommended that something be done at once. They also asked that the local authorities be notified of their report, since a similar report was made in the two previous years.

The need of a lunch room and sanitary drinking fountain was reported for the Morning Star school, a sanitary drinking fountain for Pennsylvania Avenue school, and some needed repairs at the Patton school were asked for.

There were found to be 28 justices of the peace in the county, and of this number 11 have failed to file reports. A recommendation was made that the clerk of the court notify these justices to file reports at once and hereafter regularly before each term of court.

It was found that there are a number of Administrator accounts and Guardianships in the Clerk's office that have failed to make regular reports ,and some old ones that should be closed entirely. It was recommended that the clerk notify all the delinquents in these accounts, and have them brought up to date before the next term of court, and if possible final settlements made.

New Negro School At Winfall Asked

Board Says Nn Funds Are Available but Authorize Option on Site

Hertford, Mar. 4.—A new school for Negro children at Winfall, has been proposed to replace the old wooden buildings which burned last week, though date for construction to begin is still far off, as the county commissioners, in their March meeting, said there were no funds available at present.

It might even be necessary to hold an election on whether a bond issue might be made, since the commissioners report to the board of education, when a request for funds for a new school was made, was that the county had no money for such a purpose and had borrowed as much as it legally could.

The only definite step taken by the commissioners was to authorize the board of education to get an option for a sight for the building.

Negro patrons of the school appeared before the board of education earlier in the day, saying that they had raised $400 already toward the purchase of a new site for a school, and could raise more, to reduce to $1,000 the amount required for the county to put up.

Other business at the March meeting was a motion passed to increase the salary of the county treasurer $100 a year. This increase is being made because of added duties imposed on the treasurer due to society security and old age pensions.

G. C. Buck and A. A. Nobles were again appointed as rabies inspectors for the county. Mr. Buck's territory was designated as the portion of the county south of the river, and Mr. Nobles north of the river.

The commissioners voted to instruct the rabies inspectors to use a standard brand of serum.

Prior to their meeting, the county commissioners attended a special meeting at the agricultural building, where the 1941 farm program was discussed by leaders of the work in Perquimans.

Schools and Boards

Down at Wilson the Negro school bus situation is said to be acute. Much crowding and congestion prevail on the buses in service. The existing conditions are attributed to the failure of the county commissioners to give the county board of education four buses needed for a new Negro consolidated school.

But when the situation recently became acute and the Negro patrons brought a "petition in boots" to the authorities, one member of the board of county commissioners is quoted as saying that "when the novelty of going to the new school wears off the attendance will decrease, and the bus situation will be better." Apparently that was his contribution to the solution of a serious problem in education and social welfare.

Crowding on buses aggravates the danger of traffic accident and the contraction of contagious disease. In time it leads to a decrease in school attendance, too, because parents come to feel that if the physical health of their children can be preserved they can go to school another day, or get through life somehow without an education.

The trouble seemingly lies in the construction of the present school law, which probably will be amended during the current session of the legislature, and the failure of some boards of education and the county boards of commissioners to work together in school affairs. In Burke county the two boards have been at loggerheads over the location of a new school, the board of education being determined to build a new edifice in one community while the commissioners seem just as determined to allot the money for an addition to an existing school.

Possibly if the proposed enabling act passes, and the state school administrative system is reorganized along the lines proposed by Governor Broughton, difficulties of this sort may be terminated. Undoubtedly, friction between local boards at the expense of the school children should be eliminated in some manner.

COMPULSORY A. ENDANCE.

A Wilson county commissioner whose attention is called to the fact that the busses serving the new Elm City negro school are terribly overcrowded, necessitating two there-and-back trips a day and getting the boys and girls to school and home God knows when, is quoted as saying that the negroes are "going to school in large numbers because of the novelty of a new school, but this will wear off in a month or two and when it does the attendance will decrease."

The which, since we do not go or send to the school in question, could hardly be termed a personal concern of ours; but we have for some time been wondering what rural schools and those of small towns would do about the proposed lifting of the compulsory age limit to 16 years. We do not believe that the attendance officers are any too busy at the present writing with the 14-year-olds.

Indeed, when it comes to the negro school children the only bearing down that has ever been brought to our attention was the occasional raiding by the attendance officer of country clubs convenient to cities. This accomplished little, if anything. True, an overstuffed golfer or so may have toted his own clubs—but generally he stuck around the clubhouse, had a couple of extra drinks and did not get either the exercise or bath he had come for.

The caddy lost four- to six-bits, did not get back to school.

The attendance officer secured an item or so for his report.

Education is in pretty much the same condition as before.

At this writing, no official word has come from the school authorities regarding the situation created by the fire in the Tower Hill Negro school Friday night. Estimates are that the ancient structure was damaged to an extent of about 40 percent. We are inclined to the notion that it would be in order for the school authorities to consider the erection of a new building more in keeping with the needs of the present day and not spend very much money in repairing the old frame structure. In the meantime, of course, temporary provision must be made for taking care of the Negro school children who have been going to classes in the Tower Hill building.

POLITICIANS REWRITE HISTORY FOR SCHOOLS OF NORTH CAROLINA

MAR 27 1941

Book That Told Truth About Depression Years Rejected; 200 Errors Found In Book Accepted

RALEIGH, N. C.—(FP)—The official textbook inspector for the National Association of Manufacturers, Dr. Ralph West Robey, needn't bother about North Carolina. This state's own politicians have done a pretty good job by and for themselves.

MAR 27 1941

The whole story of sordid politics behind the recent selection of a public school textbook on North Carolina history has not been fully told. But some of the facts are being revealed.

A special textbook commission recommended adoption of a North Carolina history written by Prof. Hugh Lefler and Prof. A. R. Newsome of the University of North Carolina, both recognized historians. This recommendation was rejected by the State Board of Education, composed chiefly of certain elective state officials.

Instead, the board adopted a book by Jule B. Warren, secretary of the North Carolina Education Association (often described as a company union), and an appointed member of the State School Commission. It was Warren's first effort as an historian.

TOO ACCURATE

The Newsome-Lefler text, it later developed, was too accurate for comfort—of some. The Warren text was comfortably inaccurate.

Sample sore spot in rejected text: "The liberal group grew stronger after the hard times of 1929. The farmers suffered more after 1920 than any other class of people; and many of them, as in the 1890's, charged the Conservative Democratic leaders were too friendly to business and industry and too little interested in the common people of North Carolina. In 1932 and again in 1936 the Democratic party contest for Governor was bitter and close; but the Conservatives won with J. C. B. Ehringhaus in 1932 and Clyde R. Hoey in 1936. There was so much evidence of corrupt activity by party workers at the voting places, though, that many citizens demanded laws to make clean and honest elections more certain."

MAR 27 1941

BRING PRESSURE

Even before this text was rejected, pressure had brought the authors to agree to change the above paragraph to read virtually the same down to "bitter and close." This was made to read "close and exciting."

The last sentence was to be dropped entirely and in its place, this: "Better times and the popularity of Governor Hoey did much to do away with discontent and to unite the party. The division in the Democratic party was not so sharp in 1940 when J. M. Broughton won the primary contest for Governor."

Miss Nell Battle Lewis, whose coverage of Gastonia strike killings in 1929 brought nationwide attention, took the trouble to examine Warren's officially approved book. She found "more than 200 errors of fact, aside from mistakes in spelling, grammar and punctuation. Yet 105,000 copies of this book have been bought by the state . . . (for) more than $46,000."

Sample errors: "Changes in the Constitution have been made from time to time; but the present state government is based on the plans made by our forefathers in Halifax over 165 years ago." Fact is: The present constitution is based on the Reconstruction constitution of 1868, less than 75 years ago. Many equally serious errors of omission were also noted.

SOUTH CAROLINA

NO PLACE FOR ILLITERATES OR FOR SEMI-LITERATES.

Do the people of South Carolina wish to give automatic exemption from military service to a large majority of Negro men?

If not, the people of South Carolina must do much more than is now being done to educate Negroes.

Read this extract from selective service regulations, as amended to become effective May 15:

"No registrant in continental United States will be inducted into the military service who does not have the capacity of reading and writing the English language as commonly prescribed for the fourth grade in grammar school. All registrants who have not completed the fourth grade in grammar school will be examined at induction stations prior to induction by means of tests to be prescribed by the war department.

"It will materially assist the processing of selectees at induction stations and reduce the number of rejects thereat, if selectees lacking the above qualifications can be eliminated by local boards....

"In general it is unnecessary to test any registrant who is known to have finished successfully the sixth grade of elementary school. Indeed, successful completion of the fifth grade in a good school system ordinarily insures the necessary proficiency in reading and writing. If there is any doubt, a minimum literacy test should be given...." And so.

Now consider a few figures. In 1936 the number of white boys enrolled in the first grade of the state's public school system was 21,584. Between 1936 and the beginning of the 1940 school year, about one-third of these white boys disappeared from school rolls. This is indicated by the enrolment of 13,923 white boys in the fifth grade in 1940.

In the stretch from the first to the fifth grade, something happened to 7,661 white boys. Some died, perhaps. Some moved away—but others moved in. The only reasonable explanation of the fall in enrolment from first to fifth grades is that most of these white boys stopped going to school. If selective service continues to be the training policy for defense, and if current regulations continue in force, these boys who stopped school will be rejected, except the relatively small number who have continued education outside the public school system.

The figures for Negro boys:

In the year 1936 the records show 40,054 Negro boys enrolled in the first grade in the public school system. But in 1940 the fifth grade records of Negro boys show only 9,626 enrolled. This is a decline of 30,428—about three-fourths of the 1936 total.

These figures indicate that South Carolina is educating approximately two-thirds of the white boys up to the minimum military requirements, but is educating only about one-fourth of the Negro boys sufficiently to enable them to qualify as selectees.

Think about this situation as it will affect the training of South Carolinians for the armed services. The Negro quota will be sought, necessarily, from a small group of Negroes who continue in school. And think about the situation broadly, as it will affect life in South Carolina. The armed forces do not want illiterates or semi-literates. They do not know enough to be trusted as soldiers or sailors or marines. Does industry want them? Can they do the kind of farming now necessary for agreeable survival on the farm?

In modern life, civil and military, the illiterate and the semi-literate are misfits; and misfits must be taken care of, somehow, by those who are able to do it.

Value of County School System

Columbia, May 17—(WP)—The Dorchester county school system is valued at $453,350 in buildings, grounds, furniture and fixtures, according to the annual report for the last school year of James H. Hope, state superintendent of education.

The 13 white schools were valued at $402,930 and the 21 Negro schools at $50,420.

Valuation of the white elementary schools was placed at $134,530, of which the buildings were worth $115,900, the grounds $8,800 and the furniture and fixtures $9,830.

The white high schools were valued at $192,100, including $170,100 at which the buildings were evaluated, $7,500 at which the worth of the grounds was placed and $14,500 representing the worth of furniture and fixtures.

Plants in which both high schools and elementary schools were being operated were valued at $76,300, with $67,000 representing the buildings, $2,100 the grounds and $7,200 the furniture and fixtures.

The report also disclosed the value of the white schools from another angle as follows:

Three one-teacher schools, $3,100; five two-teacher schools, $15,230; five schools staffed by more than four teachers, $384,600.

Negro elementary schools were valued at $27,420, including $24,150 in buildings, $2,025 in grounds and $1,245 in furniture and fixtures. The report indicated that Dorchester county did not maintain any buildings for Negro high schools only.

However, plants were both elementary and high schools for Negroes were operated under the same roof were valued at $23,000, of which the buildings represented $18,000, the grounds $2,400 and the furniture and fixtures $2,700.

Value of the Negro schools, by types:

Sevent one-teacher schools, $5,570; six two-teacher schools, $6,930; six three-teacher schools, $13,820; two schools staffed by more than four teachers, $50,420.

SUMMER SESSIONS BEGUN BY SCHOOLS

Six Schools Already Open With Others to Start Terms on Monday

Five Spartanburg county white schools and one colored school have opened for new terms and others are scheduled to open July 21, James F. Brooks, county superintendent of education, said yesterday.

White schools open are Maple Hill, Abner Creek, Woodlawn, Henson and Ballenger. The Midwood colored school has opened and the Corner colored school will reopen July 21.

White schools opening July 21 are Piedmont, Mount Oliveview, North Pacolet and Brooklyn. Peru school will open July 28.

No Textbook Change

In connection with opening of schools, Mr. Brooks has sent the following letter to chairmen of boards of trustees:

"I have a letter from J. D. Robinson, director, state school book commission, in which he states:

"'At its meeting May 5, 1941, the state board of education passed the following resolution in connection with the multiple listings of textbooks available for 1941-42:

"'That each of the several school districts of the state shall be required to use continuously for a period of not less than three years any textbook selected from the multiple listings now or hereafter included in the prescribed course of study; provided, however, that any county electing to do so may comply with the provisions of this resolution as a county unit.'

"It is the wish of the county board of education that no change be made in textbooks for the coming year, but that the same books be used and in the meantime we will study through committees the changes necessary for next year and make such changes county-wide rather than for individual districts

Please pass this information on to your principals and teachers."

Thomas, Sole Survivor, Fights For Public Schools

Among the 124 Who Voted for Public Schools in 1883; Has Seen Attendance Grow From 930 to 13,763 and Expenditures From $2,245 to $640,000; Has Served City and State in Many Capacities

BY FITZ HUGH MC MASTER

How many of the 13,763 pupils enrolled in the past year in Columbia's public schools know the one man now living in Columbia who made a hard fight, with others, now gone, for the establishment of these schools?

His name is John Peyre Thomas, Jr. December 9, this year he will be 84 years old.

When he was 24 years old he was engaged with Col. F. W. McMaster, W. J. Duffie, Nathaniel D. Barnwell, J. S. Muller, John P. Arthur, Dr. E. S. Joynes and others in establishing the public schools in Columbia. Not many men of his age, and not a great many older, had the vision he had or struggled so hard for public education.

It may seem strange now that there should have been opposition to public schools. But there was. Many white people believed only in private schools—that parents should educate their own children and some of the leading Negroes believed this, too.

During 1881 there were very small appropriations from the state treasury for the public schools in Columbia, and twice during 1881 and once in 1882 public meetings of citizens refused to vote a levy on property in Columbia school district to aid the public schools.

Quotation is made from "A History of the Administration of the City Public Schools, of Columbia, S. C.," by B. L. Parkinson (after a public meeting February 12, 1882): "Thus for the third time the citizens of Columbia failed to support the public schools by voting a special levy of two mills for the maintenance, and the schools closed on March 7, after a four months session caused by lack of funds."

Between this date and the May meeting Mr. Thomas became a member of the City Board of School Commissioners, and here he continued until 1895, the last five years he was chairman of the board.

TOTAL EXPENDITURE $2,245.41

October 11, 1882, the school board met and resolved "on account of the small amount coming to the school district from taxes, one assistant teacher be dispensed with from each school."

The preceding term there had been two white schools, one with two teachers, and one with four teachers, and one colored school with a principal and nine assistants. The expenditures were for the Reynolds school (white), $227,50; the Park school (white) $535.00, and for the Howard school (Negro) $1,071.25, total $1,833.75. The administration and operating expenses were $411.66, making the grand total for school expenses for the City of Columbia for 1881-82, $2,245.41.

The next public meeting was called for January 31, 1883.

The school board meanwhile was attempting to stir public opinion in favor of the schools, and in January, 1883, Mr. Thomas published an appeal in the Columbia morning paper, The Columbia Register, in which he said, in part: "Local taxation for schools prevails in almost every state in the union. In some states it is the sole method of supporting the schools, and in a great many of them it furnished the great bulk of the money which is thus expended. * * * The truth is that wherever it has been given a fair trial, local taxation has been a popular measure. Why? Because it has so supplemented the school fund that good free schools have been a reality.

"The constitutional tax produces about $10,000 (in Richland county) of which the city in round numbers pays about $7,000, the county, $3,000. Now the average school attendance in the city schools during 1881-1882 was so small in proportion to attendance in the county that the city received as its pro rata share but $2,000 out of the $7,000 which it contributed to the general fund of the county. Therefore when, by means of the local tax, the city schools receive the much needed assistance, and the city commissioners are then enabled to carry out their plans, then the school attendance be doubtless be doubled. So in the same proportion will the city's share in the constitutional tax be increased. And in lieu of receiving $2,000 from that source the city will receive $4,000.

"The movement is surely in accord with our time. The light of the old and time honored South Carolina college is beginning once again to radiate its benign influences, and here in Columbia, within the shadow of its walls, it is all the more incumbent upon our citizens to build up a common school system that will be worthy of a city which was once prominent as an educational centre."

ONE MILL TAX ORDERED

As called the public meeting was held January 31, 1883. The following is an extract from the report of that meeting:

"Col. F. W. McMaster submitted in writing the following resolution, "Resolved that a tax of one mill be levied upon all the real and personal property within the limits of the City of Columbia for this year for the maintenance and support of the free public schools in the school district of the City of Columbia. Seconded by David Jones.

"Colonel (William) Wallace moved to lay the motion on the table. Seconded by R. Hanan.

"John P. Thomas, Jr., moved to indefinitely postpone the motion of Colonel Wallace. On motion of Mr. Thomas the aye and noes were demanded, and resulted—ayes 124, noes 62.

"The motion of Colonel McMaster was then put to the meeting, and upon a call for the ayes and noes passed by the following vote—ayes 125, noes 45."

That year to fill the vacancy in the board caused by the death of N. D. Barnwell, Mr. Thomas nominated Dr. E. S. Joynes, who was unanimously elected, and who proved a very valuable member during the number of years he was a member.

Due, it is thought, to the influence of Doctor Joynes with the Peabody board, Doctor Curry of that board offered $1,000 towards the salary of the superintendent of school, and on motion of Mr. Thomas the city board added $500 to that and Prof. D. B. Johnson (afterwards president of Winthrop) of Tennessee, but then teaching in New Bern, N. C., was elected superintendent.

The struggle to establish the public schools, amusing to look back upon but distressing at the time, are very interesting. On the authority of the school board, Mr. Thomas was authorized to employ a janitor, and an assistant. But he employed a janitress at $10 a month, and found no assistant was needed. Unusual expenses occurring preliminary to the opening of the schools, Superintendent Johnson was requested to solicit funds from friends during a trip North. Upon his return he reported that he had collected $440. For this Superintendent Johnson was thanked and his expenses on his trip were paid.

FUNDS SHORT SECOND TIME

Mr. Thomas was the chairman of the finance committee, and each year he submitted a carefully prepared budget, but quoting from the reports, "There were a number of reasons, however, why the board ran behind financially." However, Superintendent Johnson reported a $50 donation from a friend in the North, and $152 from an art entertainment, and in June 1884, Mr. Thomas reported that available funds lacked $77.05 to meet the pay roll, but he had advanced this personally.

Then the salaries paid were from $180 to $360 for nine months for first year teachers, $225 to $405 for second year teachers, and $270 to $450 for third year teachers, the men teachers getting each year $10 a month more than the women.

Quoting from a report, "On Friday, the 28th of September (1883) the day of the opening, the city bell struck 13 strokes at 8:30 a. m., as a warning and in obedience to the summons children began to flock to the several school buildings, . . . and 930 children, 550 white, and 380 Negro, presented themselves on the first day and were accommodated without delay, confusion, or inconvenience."

Mr. Thomas after having done incomparable service as a member of the city board, and as chairman of the committee on education in the state legislature, has lived to see the day when 13,763 children were enrolled in the city schools, and when the teachers' salaries range from $675 to $1,800, and when the superintendent gets several times the pay received by Superintendent Johnson. Instead of the taxpayers of this school district reluctantly paying four mills for school purposes they now pay, with more or less gladness 26.5 mills —17.5 special school tax, three mills constitutional, and six mills for payment of school bonds.

The teaching force has grown from about 20 to 430, and the three buildings have grown to be 23. Columbia school district has about $3,490,000 invested in school buildings, land and equipment, and spends more than $640,000 annually on her schools, and bonded debt. Under skillful management the latter will soon be discharged.

At the recent meeting of the alumni of the University of South Carolina in this city, Mr. Thomas was the oldest member present, he having graduated in 1873. He has the distinguished honor of having had both his paternal and maternal grandfathers graduate at the same institution, and, also, his son, J. Waties Thomas.

Mr. Thomas became professor of law at the University of South Carolina in 1906, was made dean in 1910, and so continued until his resignation in 1920. He has been president of the Richland County Tuberculosis association since 1917.

He is a man of large and varied interests, and because of his vigor, one hesitates to call him "grand old man" but he is all that and more.

The Prey of Propagandists

When the association of negro schoolteachers says that "the lack of transportation for negro children to the schools contributes to the high rate of our illiteracy" it may speak truly, however The News and Courier doubts that gasoline engines are necessary to teach children to read and write. The walking classes are not necessarily illiterate. When the association says that "illiteracy provides a fertile field for propaganda unfavorable to our country", it is talking nonsense. The propaganda that is "unfavorable to our country" springs in the main from the "intellectuals". They are the Socialists, Communists, the "fellow travelers". An illiterate person is in much the same case that a person with weak eyes is without spectacles The argument for spectacles and primary schooling is about the same. There is no danger that illiterate persons, in particular, white or black, will be fooled by propaganda. The literates and the learned are, if anything, in greater danger from it. Your half-baked minds "educated beyond their capacity" are the especial prey of the propagandists.

U.S. MAY AID CITY SCHOOL SYSTEM

Federal Appropriations for Building Extensions Hoped for Here

The overcrowded conditions in Charleston city schools may be relieved by an appropriation of approximately $200,000, if a pending bill for school aid passes congress, George C. Rogers, acting superintendent of city schools said yesterday.

Mr. Rogers, just returned from Washington, remarked that this figure was obtained as result of a survey of the county made several months ago for the United States office of education. The survey showed that an appropriation of $150,000,000 is necessary for the nation.

Should the appropriation be granted, additions probably would be made to Murray vocational school, a white elementary school a white high school and two negro schools. New schools would be constructed in the county with federal funds.

It is possible that several schools will be built in the North Charleston district, where new defense projects have materially increased the population. Schools also may be built at Mount Pleasant, St. Andrew's and in other sections.

Mr. Rogers explained that elementary schools in the city are operating almost at capacity now. The enrolment, he said, is increasing steadily. Not all of the rooms are being used, especially those on the fourth floors, but those may have to be used if an outlet is not provided. The top rooms have been left vacant as a fire precaution.

Seventy-six negro classes are being operated on a half-time basis because of over-crowded conditions. Classes are held from 8:50 o'clock until noon and from 12:30 o'clock until 5 o'clock. A different class reports in the afternoon than in the morning and a different teacher is used. If the bill passes, this condition would be eliminted, officials hope.

If the bill passes, agents will be sent to Charleston county by the government to check needs. The school board has been asked to prepare plans for extension. The board will meet Wednesday to discuss plans.

Mr. Rogers mentioned that the bill should pass congress within two weeks if no opposition arises. About two weeks after that, action, should begin in Charleston county.

Provisions of the bill, which will come up Tuesday, allow for temporary construction wherever temporary defense housing occurs. Permanent construction will be placed where permanent housing is located.

It is believed that teachers would be obtained for county schools with salaries paid by the federal government.

Heavy Fire Loss At Negro School

Harrison Agricultural Institute Suffers To $50,000

COLUMBIA, Mar. 18.—(AP)—Dr. J. G Porter, superintendent of the Harbison agricultural and mechanical institute, said tonight that a fire which destroyed the main building of the negro institution, caused an estimated loss of between $47,000 and $50,000.

The fire, believed to have been caused by defective wiring, started in top floor of the three-story building which housed women's and teachers' dormitories, seven classrooms, library, school offices and an auditorium.

The school, located at Irmo, 13 miles northwest of here, is operated by the Northern Presbyterian church and has an enrollment of about 375 students.

Columbia Fire Chief A. McC. Marsh said his department was unable to save the building because of inadequate water supply.

Makes Report On Education

Columbia, April 15. (AP)—Increased pay for "qualified" negro school teachers and longer terms for negro schools was recommended to the general assembly today by a special committee appointed recently to study the state's education laws.

Other recommendations:

Less power for school district trustees and more authority for the state board of education; sharp reduction of the state's 1,738 school districts; popular election of county boards of education and selection of county superintendents of education by the boards; discontinuance of state aid for pupil transportation.

The recommendation for the longer negro school term specifically proposed an increase from an average of 147 days to 175 days a year, the average for white schools. The negro teacher salary increase would cost the state "not more than $152,720" more a year.

More general recommendations:

Creation of a teachers' certificate division of the state department of education "to immediately work out a satisfactory plan of teacher certification;" continuation by the state board of "the study of the problems which have been mentioned in this report"; a $25,000 annual appropriation for support of the proposed teachers' certificate division and another $25,000 for a "comprehensive" study of public education by the state board.

The committee was composed of D. W. Robinson, Columbia attorney, State Superintendent of Education James H. Hope, Chairman W. B. Harvey of the senate education committee and Chairman John H. Porter of the house education committee.

OPPORTUNITY.

The report of the special committee set up to inquire into South Carolina statutes relating to schools and teachers' certification and salaries does not pretend to be exhaustive.

The committee of two legislators, two schoolmen and one layman was allowed neither the means nor the time to make an exhaustive study.

But the report is nonetheless important for the honest and courageous facing of the facts that distinguishes it, for the straight-forward logic that impels the committee's conclusions. It offers the basis of sound legislative policy, the adoption of which would save the state many future headaches.

The report, despite limitations imposed upon the committee, covers pretty generally the field of necessary constitutional, statutory and regulatory changes required to meet a growing crisis in the state's educational system.

The committee proposes, for example, the repeal of obsolete laws relating to the schools; the soundness of this suggestion seems self-evident. It proposes that the state board of education should be designated as the one agency directly charged with operating the public school system and recommends therefore that the board be vested with the necessary authority to accomplish this purpose. No one can dispute the logic of this proposal.

Recognizing the fact that the present multi-unit school system—there are 1,738 separate school districts in the state—has been outmoded by the changes in transportation and living and made incongruous by the shift of financial responsibility more and more to the state, the committee proposes that larger administrative units should be established, to allow for the more efficient operation of the schools. Anything less than this would seem to be unfair both to the school children, whom the schools are designed to serve, and to the taxpayers.

The committee finds much to complain of in what passes for the present state system of teacher certification and the even less defensible practice of automatically extending certificates from year to year by legislative action. It recommends therefore that the state board of education should be directed to adopt new rules and regulations for the certification of teachers, revoking outstanding certificates and issuing new ones to those who comply with the new requirements, the change to be made only after proper study and administered with due regard for the rights of teachers now certified. The basis of certification should be broader than under the present system and the basis of renewal, the committee suggests, should be evidence of fitness to teach and of professional development. The number of types and grades of certificates, it is proposed, should be increased in order that the certificate may more accurately reflect the teachers' educational qualifications and specific training. Existing certificates, the committee points out, give little real evidence of a teacher's value and worth. And all this is patent and the need for reform acute.

On the matter of the distribution of school funds as between white and Negro schools, one of the specific purposes of the study, the committee concludes, as must have been anticipated, that there are demonstrable inequalities in the expenditure of public funds for education in the state. The comparison of per pupil expenditures—$46 for whites and only $11 for Negroes—is itself conclusive. The fact that 19 counties of the state maintain no high schools for Negroes at all, the fact that 1,644 school buses are operated for whites, transporting 80,187 pupils at a cost of $1,111,709 a year, as against only eight buses for Negroes transporting 417 pupils at a cost of $4,361, the unequal salary scales for whites and Negroes, the difference in average school terms—all these constitute supplementary evidence of the state's neglect of educational opportunities for Negroes—a neglect that has penalized the whole state and all its citizens, white and Negro. For, as the committee correctly points out, since relief, unemployment, lack of education and unskilled labor go hand in hand, the state has been doing itself a great economic injustice in not providing adequate education for all races, the cost of which would be repaid to the state in higher per capita incomes for all citizens, increased business and rising tax revenues.

Common sense and the state's own self interest as well as simple justice should impel the state to undertake the elimination of these inequalities and this the committee suggests. The state, of course, has no choice in this. The federal constitution requires that equal facilities be provided for all races and recent decisions of the supreme court of the United States have made clear that racial discrimination in education will no longer be tolerated. The state's only choice is whether it shall undertake to cure these injustices on its own initiative and in an orderly fashion within its means or whether it will adopt a head-in-the-sand policy and sit down to wait until a South Carolina case is taken to the United States supreme court for the inevitable decision that will deny it even that choice.

Here in the committee's report and in the problems with which it deals is an opportunity for genuine statesmanship. The general assembly can, as it should, supply this statesmanship—to the state's profit. Or it can fail—at the risk of the destruction of the existing state-aid system.

Miss Marguerite Tolbert Has Outstanding Career

By Erin Kohn and Mary Dunklin Gray

MARGUERITE TOLBERT

"I'd rather listen to Miss Tolbert talk than go to the movies!" said a .ive ten-year-old boy who was privileged to be numbered among her pupils. Little wonder then that her pupils, along with all her other myriad friends, always feel a lift when she comes into a room. Marguerite is what Robert Louis Stevenson called a "radiating focus of good will." She is this because her conversation sparkles; her "choice bits," as she calls them, are either instructive or amusing; her sense of humor is bubbling; her wit is ready but never biting; her sympathy is always on tap for those who need to drink from her continuous fountain of good sense and generosity; her love of Nature is unbounded; her knowledge and possession of the beautiful is always ready to be shared; and her tolerance of other's views, whims, and foibles worthy of emulation. In short, her head and aspirations may be among the stars, but her feet and heart are planted firmly on the earth and she continues "to go about doing good!"

Marguerite's experiences have run a gamut as interesting as any radio serial. She says that she has to do everything from acting as Dean of the first Opportunity School for men which began at Erskine College in 1923 to serving as steward in the Methodist Church, from rearing an orphaned nephew to editing a College Journal.

However, since the age of six Marguerite has practically lived in the schoolroom. She graduated at the Laurens high school as salutatorian. To those who knew that her home duties included the care of an invalid mother as well as a big house, this was no mean accomplishment. In 1914 she was graduated, cum laude, from Winthrop College. Later she studied at Peabody and Columbia University. Recently she was awarded a fellowship in adult education at Furman University where she kept up her reputation for "A" grades and received her Master of Arts degree this past June.

While a senior at Winthrop she was offered a position in North Carolina. Since she had been the recipient of a four-year scholarship, she refused because she felt she owed her first allegiance to her own state. She is remembered with esteem and affection by numerous children and friends in the following towns and cities: Denmark, Chester, Laurens, Darlington, Greenville, Columbia, Rock Hill, and Seneca. Sometimes she was a classroom teacher, and sometimes she was supervisor, but always she was a guide and friend.

Aside from the public schools of the state she was honored by being called to serve in the Winthrop Training School as Supervisor at two different times. Not satisfied to stay out of the schoolroom in the summer, she has taught at the Winthrop, Clemson, and Newberry College Summer Schools. Everywhere her classroom has been a busy workshop and laboratory where worthwhile activities flourished, where learning and living were one. Though she may not be in the schoolroom in person these days, she is there just the same, for she became a part of all the teachers she taught.

Marguerite was also one of the pioneers in adult elementary education back in the day when people wondered what the lay-by schools for adults were. Her experiences in the mountains of Pickens County over twenty years ago were happy memories. She still tells about the old mountaineer she taught to read. When his notebook was proudly shown his wife, who was chewing a twist of tobacco as she brought two great buckets of water from the spring, she coldly remarked: "Waal, I wish you had larned him not to set around all day long." She has taught adults all along the road of learning from illiterates to college graduates, and with equal success.

This past summer Marguerite was Dean of the Clemson Opportunity School. She has been connected, in some capacity, with the Opportunity School ever since its inception. Nor has she confined her energies to one group. Her work with the Negro teachers in the up-country was so fruitful, she chose to write her thesis on the Negro Schools of Oconee County. Nothing pleases her more than to encourage the timid, the underprivileged, and the handicapped to find themselves and become useful citizens. Not once, but many times she gives the credit for her achievements to the Winthrop Daughters who have been such tireless Aarons and Hurs.

Marguerite has served the church in many capacities and the community in many ways. When Oconee County was forty-first in the counties of the state Red Cross membership, she called the Winthrop Daughters to her aid and under her leadership the county soon rose to fifth place and was cited by President Roosevelt for meritorious service. Through the Winthrop Daughters also she sponsored the drive to take care of the physical needs of the underprivileged children of Seneca and many received their sight and had defective tonsils and adenoids removed. Though busy, she finds time to lend a hand here, there, and everywhere, in social, civic, and patriotic organizations and clubs. One citizen of Seneca said this of Marguerite, "She took up work with the young people of the church and Epworth League. In the list of her many contributions to this community, the intimate, spiritual value of her contact with those she trained in this work will perhaps be one of the most lasting."

What is her philosophy of life? She may not consciously have one. However, it is a reflection of all the things this sketch has tried to say she is and enjoys doing. That "radiating focus of good will!" Two of the main words called to mind when her name is mentioned are OTHERS and SERVICE.

At present Marguerite is living in Columbia at 1707 Hollywood Drive. Her office is on the campus of the University. She is Chief of the Public Activities Programs Section of Works Projects Administration, a very responsible position. This includes general statewide supervision of the WPA libraries, recreation, education and writers' projects. Though leaving the school room was a distinct loss to progressive education, let us hope that through her present work she may do even more for her state.

A LAYMAN LOOKS AT THE SCHOOL.

It appears from the last annual report of the state superintendent of education that 384,996 pupils, Negro and white, attended South Carolina's elementary and high schools last year, and that at a cost of $38.71 per pupil. The same report has it that the value of school property is $52,900,545.

These financial figures are startling to those who are accustomed to think in small terms. But while some may be startled many are also pleased that our people are willing to give no much for the advancement of their children.

One may ask: Why should the public be called on to educate everybody's child? There is an answer: Because the opinion is abroad that our educational system is making good citizens out of our rising generation. Another question follows: What is a good citizen? Usually people think good citizenship means keeping informed about government and supporting the best political measures and the best candidates for office. That is good as far as it goes, but our daily lives with their necessary vocations, social contacts, and springs of inner happiness must be added.

It takes 11 years to pass from the first grade through a high school. It looks as if one would learn much in that time, and among the things learned surely some social knowledge of our state and an inkling of an occupation should be had. Schoolmen are keenly aware of this, but they are hampered by three things—lack of money, the popular notion that education is cultural only and the entrance requirements of college.

B. R. Turner, state supervisor of Trade and Industrial Education, says: "The general survey of trade and industrial education within the state would reveal that much interest is being manifested in this type of training. There are many factors contributing to this interest. In the textile industry the wage and hour law has made it difficult for the employers to break in new workers. Hence, they are turning to the schools for some type of training in textiles. Several new textile shops have been built and equipped during the year, and existing facilities have been used over long periods of time such as the summer school for textile workers at Parker high school, Greenville. A greater demand is also being made for trade extension classes in textile plants. Probably the most serious shortage in this industry is found in the weaving department. Loomfixers are needed and many classes for the training of these prospective fixers are conducted. In the building construction field, a shortage of skilled workmen is noted. Plans have been formulated for organization of training classes of apprentices in trowel trades at Greenville, Columbia and Charleston. These classes will be conducted for both white and Negro apprentices. During the year there has been an extensive building program under way both among private and public agencies. This calls for more carpenters, painters, plumbers, as well as trowel tradesmen. As fast as funds can be made available, it is expected that these increased demands will be met."

Also Verd Peterson, supervisor of agricultural educations, reports: "Especially in the areas adjacent to the cities of the state, there s an increased interest in a group of diversified agricultural occupations that bear upon the training of boys in somewhat specialized fields of agriculture. Some of these are dairying, poultry, truck farming, nursery, greenhouse and other specific agricultural occupations. More attention has been given to helping high school boys in agriculture find part-time work where they can get experiences in carrying on some of these different diversified agricultural occupations.

"In order to safeguard the future interests of the farm boys of South Carolina, an effort is being made to help them understand how they may select farming or some other occupation that will give them an opportunity to render a service to society, establish a home and make a decent living."

Mr. Turner's and Mr. Peterson's reports are heartening, but there is still the obstacle of public opinion that education consists in mastering books. "He is well educated, but he does not know how to make a living," is often heard. Despite our great talk about democracy there still lurks in our hearts a hankering after aristocratic ideals.

Every school—elementary and high—should be complete in itself, but each has been shaped for the school above it. So the elementary keeps a weather eye toward the high school, and the high school is always aware of required credits for college entrance. To prepare one for life requires a different technique from that of preparing one for college. Of course, it would be a tragedy for the different units of our educational system to fight over this. However, an enlightened public and wise schoolmen might work this out. They would work it out if they had as their only objective the making of a better social order.

Valuation of white elementary schools was placed at $420,765, of which the buildings were worth $363,675, the grounds $19,440 and the fixtures and furnitures in the schools $37,650.

The white high schools were valued at $129,325, including $107,500 at which the building were evaluated, $5,285 at which the worth of the grounds was placed, and $16,000 representing the worth of the furniture and fixtures in the schools.

Plants in which both high schools and elementary schools were being operated were valued at $220,498, with $173,700 representing the buildings, $15,283 the grounds and $31,515 the furniture and fixtures.

The report also disclosed the value of the white schools from another angle as follows:

Fourteen one-teacher schools, $9,700; thirty two-teacher schools, $80,380; ten three-teacher schools, $64,450; five four-teacer schools, $43,300; twelve schools staffed by more than four teachers, $572,748.

Negro elementary schools were valued at $21,630, including $17,950 in buildings, $1,530 in grounds and $2,100 in furniture and fixtures. The report indicated that Oconee county did not maintain any buildings for Negro high schools only.

However, plants where both elementary and high schools for Negroes were operated under the same roof were valued at $31,000, of which the buildings represented $28,000, the grounds $400 and the furniture and fixtures $2,600.

Value of the Negro schools, by types:

Sixteen one-teacher schools, $12,005; four two-teacher schools, $6,575; one three-teacher school, $3,050; three schools staffed by more than four teachers, $31,000.

Education Group Studies Problems

At the conclusion yesterday of a lengthy meeting of the South Carolina state board of education, Governor Burnet R. Maybank, chairman ex-officio, announced that another meeting would be held soon to "continue the study of educational problems in the state."

"We will get the best legal advice obtainable as to educational problems," the governor said. "We are all striving to the best of our ability to do what is best for the people of South Carolina; best for the teachers, best for the taxpayers, best for the pupils. All are being given consideration."

What he termed the "legal phases" of the bill passed at the recent session of the legislature, increasing salaries of teachers by $10 per month for eight-month periods, "require a lot of study."

'We are going into this matter thoroughly, and we are not going into any precipitate action," the governor said. "We want to do what is best for all concerned, and we will be guided by the best minds in South Carolina."

He declared he "had no idea" of signing the teacher pay bill until it was clearly understood what would be the result of that action.

The report of the special committee, which delved into the school problem last spring, was being gone over carefully by the board.

Representatives of Negro school teachers appeared before the board, the representatives being J. P. Burgess of the Palmetto Education (Negro) association, and M. F. Whittaker, president of the state Negro college at Orangeburg. The governor said Burgess and Whittaker said that they hoped to reach an understanding in South Carolina "without outside help."

A chief problem before the board was the recent opinion of the federal courts that there could be no differential in state-paid salaries as between teachers of different races.

The special committee, in its report, recommended a new system of certification for teachers in this state under which teachers would be paid according to their grade, or merit as teachers. This report was later converted into a bill and was introduced in the legislature but was never passed. Later the bill increasing salaries $10 per month was passed and is now before the governor.

Meeting with the board were two members of the committee which made the study—Senator W. Brantley Harvey of Beaufort, chairman of the education committee, and D. W. Robinson, Jr., attorney of Columbia.

The governor did not indicate when the education board would again be called together to discuss the school problem.

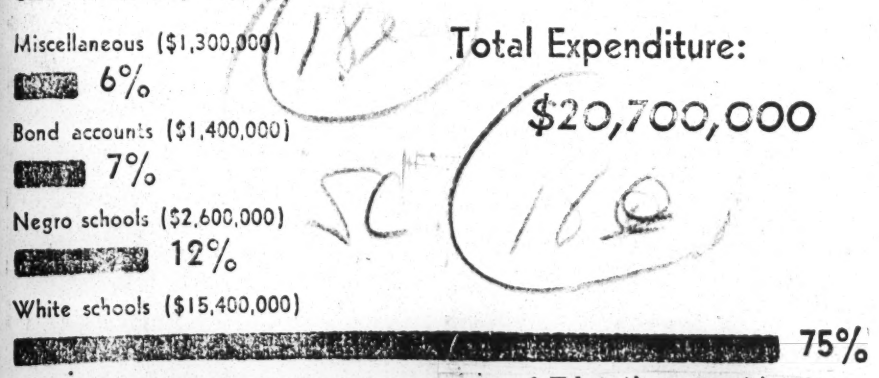
OUR SOUTH CAROLINA Schools

Expenditures

SOUTH CAROLINA spends slightly more than 20 million dollars a year on her schools, of which 75 per cent is expended by the state's white schools. Negro school expenditure accounts for 12 per cent of the total, with bond retirements, county board expenditure, attendance and other miscellaneous expenditures accounting for the remainder. The totals are shown in the chart:



A broad analysis of white school expenditures other than the teachers' salaries, is shown in the chart:

White School Expenditures

(Figures in thousands)

- Instruction supplies ($294)
- Fixed charges, Ins. ($404)
- Administrative expense ($758)
- Operation and main. ($1,051)
- Transportation ($1,111)
- Capital outlay ($2,940)

In both white and negro schools, the largest single item is classroom teacher salaries. In the white schools, this accounts for almost $9,000,000 of their total, while negro teacher salaries aggregate $2,191,000—a much higher percentage of their total expenditure.

Next item on the white school list is capital outlay, debt service and deficit at almost three million.

The miscellaneous expenditure in the total state bill for education includes items chargeable to both white and negro school systems. These items are not large: The state department spends $53,920 in administering the school system; attendance work accounts for $76,800; and the balance is made up of numerous smaller expenditures.

DIRECTOR . . . A director or supervisor is to be employed for the survey which is to be made before the drafting of a certification program.

The name of the director will probably be announced this week.

He is being employed with money provided by the state, the white and Negro teacher associations and the general education board of New York City. It should be said that the Negro teachers have co-operated heartily in efforts to find a satisfactory solution to the problem . . . one that will be fair and just to teachers; fair to the taxpayers and, above all, fair to the child for whom the school exists.

SCHOOL LUNCH UNITS TO BE INCREASED IN NEAR FUTURE

Total Of About 1,500 Pupils In County Are Now Getting Lunches

Several additional school lunch units will be opened in the county in the near future, Mrs. Mattie Jordan, supervisor of the WPA school lunch projects, said today.

Anderson County now has a total of twenty-four units in operation for white and Negro schools, serving approximately 1,500 children.

The placing of NYA workers in the schools has aided the progress of the school lunch program, Mrs. Jordan commented.

The opening of Negro units, according to requirements, means a broader program. Colored women have charge of these programs.

Plans are now under way for the establishment of additional units, Mrs. Jordan said.

Mrs. Nell Y. Graham, area supervisor of the school lunch program, was here from Greenville today for a conference with the local official.

BUSES . . . The question of buses too was brought up by the Negro teachers when they asked for "transportation where needed."

The state appropriates $300,000 for operation of the school buses, and the school districts raise approximately $700,000 in addition.

For white school children, there are operated 1,644 school buses.

There are some six or eight buses operated for the transportation of Negro school pupils.

Length of the school terms too further complicates the situation, so that altogether, the matter is one that will demand close study and careful thought to work out.

Feeding Multitude

To The News and Courier:

You gave publicity in an editorial in Sunday's issue of The News and Courier, February 23, to a statement purported to be the words of a negro school teacher in Clarendon county, which statement you quote: "Boss, we don't have any trouble getting them to school since the government started giving them free lunches". And your deduction with a vein of levity running through it is, that "the way to a negro child's head is through his stomach". While we, by no means, agree in our economic and political sciences, I subscribe unequivocally to your prescription to a negro child's head or to a negro man's head. But why a negro's head?

Man's feeble efforts at best in this beautiful world are put forth for many frills and flounces to make life beautiful, attractive, and easy; but when reduced to last analysis, they become—often pathetic—efforts for something to eat, something to wear, and somewhere to stay; and if the one in quest of these essentials to human existence cannot get somewhere to stay, which marks human progress, one will very likely wander and finally return to the century-deserted cave; if one cannot get something to wear, one will, no doubt, do the best one can; and if one cannot get something to eat, one gives up the ghost. That is the only alternative; and few are so heavenly home sick that they are striving to divorce themselves from the ghost.

Mr. Editor, I am wondering how it came to be conceived in your strong intellect, sensibility, and will that your prescription gets a negro child's response only. Just a minute's reflection will teach the high brow and even the short-forehead group that your true prescription is like light; it travels in a straight line and touches all in the line be it a bread line or a line of the wealthy and self-centered; and bread lines are not monopolized by negroes only, while many of them would not scorn them by any means.

Remember that Jesus Christ taught—he never preached—the people; but his pupils were, as a rule, small groups or one man on the highway as a classroom; the publican up the tree; the unfortunate woman at the well; the ten lepers on the scrap heap of scorn; a few fishermen casting and mending their nets; the blind man on the Jericho national highway; and others, perhaps, like the ruler and rabbi who came by night. But when the people saw that Christ's new deal included—beside giving sight to the blind; healing the sick of the incurables; raising the dead—feeding thousands with five loaves and two fishes, the multitude followed him and pressed him from the foot of the mountain to a good way to the top for standing room to teach. They were drawn by the loaves and fishes. But, was this hungry, head-by-the-way-of-the-stomach multitude negroes? I trow not. It is not strange according to your prescription, that when our white brethern paint a picture of Christ feeding the multitude or handing out something to the poor, the recipients or beneficiaries are always white?

I feel qutie certain that were the New Deal, which is finding its way to the heads of thousands by the way of the stomach, at once discontinued, a revolution would follow quite early in its wake. And this revolution would not, by any means, be initiated by hungry, out-of-a-job negroes. This assertion is only emphasizing what you know to be a fact.

It seems to me that if those who feel so sure of their position and attitude relative to the path to a negro child's head should subtract self complacency and see themselves as they are and ought to be, they would soon visualize that we all are folks seeing hunger as a daily visitor; and when it knocks at the door of a man's stomach be he Greek or Jew, circumcised or uncircumsise, Barbarian, Scythian, bond or free, or a negro child, the petition pathetically goes up: "Give us this day our daily bread". Hunger knows no color line. It comes to every man when he cannot get his daily bread, unless his appetite is abnormal. Esau sold his birthright because he was hungry—and he wasn't a negro. Mr. Roosevelt won the election and became the president of the United States the third time because he made and is making it possible for the underman to get a piece of bread.

Human nature is the same in every race; and it doesn't change.

Manning Training School Burns to Ground

Fire completely destroyed the Manning Training School for Negroes in Manning late Tuesday afternoon. When the fire was discovered the entire east wing was in flames, it had broken out inside the rooms. The origin is unknown.

The frame building had 12 rooms and an auditorium, and was valued at $20,000. The fire burned so rapidly that the houses nearby were saved only by strenuous work of the local fire department.

Fifteen years ago the Negro school building and furnishings on that same lot were completely destroyed by fire.

Equal Opportunity Stressed In Patriotic and Beautification Exercises As Bird Sanctuary Is Dedicated.

With bared heads, 2300 negro pupils of Manassas High School stood at attention for more than an hour yesterday in the Spring sunshine on the campus in mass tribute to the American Way of Life, which guarantees equal opportunity to every child regardless of race, color, or creed.

While offiicals of the city government, Board of Education, City Beautiful Commission and other civic organizations participated with leaders and students of the negro race in the program of patriotism, beautification and conservation, not one of the students of the 12-grade school shifted his or her position

50 Trees Planted

Stepping quietly to the spot designated for each class beside the wire fence encircling the school grounds, groups of two to three class representatives crumbled the first spade full of dirt about 50 crape myrtle trees while Thomas Hawkins, 10th grade student, sang the immortal "Trees."

While Alcada Bradley, 12th grade read the poem, "planting a Tree," another group of students erected the miniature homes in the northwest corner of the grounds dedicated to a bird sanctuary.

Prof. J. A. Hayes, principal of the school, presided.

Boy Scouts Herbert Lee, Alfred Lee, James Londe and Eddie Bartlett of Manassas Troop No. 108 led the audience in the pledge of allegiance to the United States flag.

Leaders Pay Tribute

Ernest C. Ball, superintendent of Memphis City Schools, praised the spirit of the faculty and pupils of the school in reclaiming the land about the school and their efforts to beautify and improve their surroundings.

"Symbolic of the American Way," Frank R. Ahlgren, editor of The Commercial Appeal, said in calling attention to the program. He declared that everyone appreciates the work being done by those connected with the school and urged the students to be grateful for the America in which they live.

Mrs. W. B. Fowler, chairman, City Beautiful Commission, said:

"Manassas Street School is a true example of what can be done when people are willing to create beauty in their surroundings."

She introduced others assisting with the dedicatory exercises, who, with Mrs. Walter Chandler, wife of the Mayor, were guests of the school at luncheon following the program.

Those Participating

The participants on the program included W. J. "Dear Mr. Pitts:

"The State Board of Education at its quarterly meeting on August 8 dropped the Franklin Training School from the Tennessee approved list of high schools.

"The State Board took this action because of inadequate building facilities and because of meager science equipment.

"The Franklin Training School will never be approved again unless steps are promptly taken in Williamson County to build a new high school building for negroes at Franklin. This loss of State Board approval will mean quite a financial loss to Williamson County inasmuch as the average daily attendance henceforth maintained in this school can not be counted in the distribution of the state high school per capita fund.

"Your general science and biology equipment is inadequate. According to your High School Principal's Annual Report, you have $40 worth of general science equipment and $70 worth of biology equipment. Acceptable minimum equipment standards for these 2 sciences call for an expenditure of $100 for general science equipment and an expenditure of $200 for biology equipment. Thus it is easy to see that your general science and biology equipment is $190 below standard.

Training School Dropped From State Roster

Lack of Proper Building Facilities Results in Disapproval

—:—

The Franklin Training School, for negroes, has been dropped from the Tennessee list of approved high schools by the State Board of Education, according to notice received this week by Prof. E. E. Pitts, principal.

The state board took its action last Friday, because of the local school's inadequate building facilities and meager science equipment. Efforts have been made locally for several years to provide a new building for negro students, but these have proved unsuccessful.

One immediate result will be the loss to the county of the state high school per capita fund which is distributed on the basis of $88 per year for each pupil, average attendance. Last year the average high school attendance at Franklin Training School was 69, and the state distribution was $552.

News of the state's action was received by Prof. Pitts in the following letter under date of August 11 from R. R. Vance, supervisor of the state division of high schools:

"The State Board of Education at its quarterly meeting on August 8 dropped the Franklin Training School from the Tennessee approved list of high schools.

Group at Work In Behalf of Colored School

Restoration of the Franklin Training School, for negroes, to the Tennessee list of approved high schools is possible providing the State Department of Education is presented with some definite plan for adequate building facilities at the school following the October term of the Williamson County Court, The News learned Tuesday.

A committee of interested citizens from the County School Board, Board of Mayor and Aldermen, Ninth District School Board, County Court and a group of colored business and professional men visited State Commissioner of Education B. O. Duggan and R. R. Vance, State High School Supervisor, in Nashville Tuesday and were informed of possibilities for restoring the school to the State's approved list. The committee was not definitely assured that the local school would be restored, but the state authorities indicated that if a definite and acceptable plan was presented them, they would probably approve Franklin Training School, h[illegible]g possible the securing this year [illegible]he state high school per capita fund which otherwise will not be available. The fund is distributed to approved state high schools on the basis of $8 per year for each pupil average attendance, and amounted to $552 last year at Franklin Training School.

The committee visiting the State authorities included: County Judge D. B. Graham; County Superintendent of Schools W. P. Scales; Prof. Daly Thompson, City Superintendent of Schools; Newt Cannon, of the Board of Mayor and Aldermen; C. B. Wilson and Marion Oden, of the County School Board; Prof. E. E. Pitts, principal of Franklin Training School; Dr. J. W. Hudson, Henry Ewing and Bob Rucker.

Committees have been appointed by both the Williamson County Court and Board of Mayor and Aldermen to investigate the situation at Franklin Training School.

The county committee is composed of Magistrates J. W. Moran, S. J. Wilson and Joe Covington, and Walter Petway and State Rep. Walter Anderson.

Aldermen Percy Jennette, Robert Moore and Rainey Lunn are members of the committee for the Town.

Gears and cogs of Houston's huge educational machinery will begin to grind Monday for 16,000 negro school children who will return to 28 schools and 421 negro teachers for another nine months of learning.

Principals of the schools met Friday with their faculties at the various schools to plan Monday's work, which will be devoted to the enrolling of [illegible] distribution of books.

W. E. Miller, supervisor of negro schools here, revealed that a successor to Mrs. Mabel Wesley, late principal of Crawford elementary school, has not yet been chosen. Miller said he would organize the school for the term and give it special attention along with his other duties until a principal is named. Several applicants are being considered for the position, he stated.

College Ready to Start

Houston College for Negroes, which will begin its fifteenth year of operation Monday, is reported to have all indications of an unusually successful season, with a large number of out-of-town applications. J. D. Bowles is dean.

In addition to the college, Houston has three negro senior high schools, each of which also carries junior grades. There are two other junior high schools.

School officials stated that starting Monday there will be daily reports on the attendance at the schools.

Negroes Ask Equal School Bus Facilities

Suit Against Greensville Filed in District Court

The County-wide League of Greensville County and several attorneys on the legal staff of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People today filed suit in United States District Court in Richmond asking for an injunction "to forever restrain" the School Board, of Greensville County and the superintendent of schools from refusing to furnish bus transportation for Negro school children "because of their race or color."

In the complaint filed in the name of Ollie May Branch, a first year high school girl in the Greensville County Training School, the fourteenth amendment of the United States Constitution and the Constitution and laws of the State of Virginia are declared to have been violated by the school authorities.

Upon filing the complaint lawyers in the case respectfully called upon the court to give their cause a speedy hearing and that upon such hearing the court shall rule as follows:

"That this court enter a judgment or decree declaring that the policy, custom or usage and practice of the defendants or establishing and maintaining adequate free transportation to and from school for white children while failing and refusing to provide or maintain free transportation to and from school to Negro children solely because of their race or color is a denial of the equal protection of the laws guaranteed by the fourteenth amendment to the United States Constitution and is therefore unconstitutional and void."

Howard Law Dean Among Attorneys

It also was asked, "that this court issue a permanent injunction for ever restraining and enjoining the defendants and each of them from making a distinction solely on account of race or color in providing, establishing or maintaining adequate, free bus transportation for white school children while failing or refusing to provide adequate free transportation for Negro school children."

Attorneys listed in the complaint as representing John B. Branch, the Negro school girl's father, who signed the complaint, include William H. Hastie, of Washington, dean of the Law School at Howard University; W. Robert Ming, Jr., also of Washington; Thurgood Marshall, New York City; Martin A. Martin, of Danville, and Oliver W. Hill, of Richmond, who frequently appear in cases prosecuted by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Girl Travels Ten Miles Each Way to School

Declaring that racial discrimination has been practiced in Greensville County the papers in the suit further charge that the county school board and Superintendent Webb have consistently refused to furnish bus transportation for Negro children even though the school bus routes pass close to the homes of the Negro children.

Citing the Virginia Constitution, which declares public education to be a State function, the complaint says that the Virginia State Code which sets up separate schools for whites and Negroes provides that the schools "are to be maintained under the same general regulations as to management, usefulness and efficiency for white and Negro pupils."

It further quotes the law as charging the school authorities with furnishing transportation "whenever such procedure will contribute to the efficiency of the school system and the transportation is to be free."

The Negro schoolgirl in whose name the suit was filed has traveled ten miles each way from her home of the training school for several years, according to another charge in the complaint. It is further alleged that her home is near the highway traversed by buses carrying white children, and that the money which is furnished the school board for the white children's buses is partly raised by taxation on the Negroes.

SUIT CHARGES SCHOOL BUSSES BAR NEGROES

High School Girl Sues County

Charging racial discrimination in violation of the Fourteenth Amendment of the Constitution and of Virginia State laws, Ollie May Branch, first-year Negro high school girl in the Greensville County Trainig School, Tuesday filed suit in United States District Court here against the county school board and H. L. Webb, superintendent of Greensville schools.

The suit specifically asked an injunction to prohibit the board and superintendent from refusing to provide bus transportation for Negro school children "because of their race or color."

School bus transportation for Negro pupils equal to that provided for whites was also asked in the suit, which related that the Branch girl had traveled 20 miles a day to and from school for several years, but was denied use of the busses for white pupils which pass along a highway near her home.

Counsel provided by the County-wide League of Greensville and the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People charged that present practices violated both the Federal and State Constitutions. It was argued that racial discrimination was practiced in the county and that bus transportation for Negro pupils was not provided even though school bus routes were near the homes of Negroes.

The case was styles "Ollie May Branch, an infant, by John Branch, her next friend, and John B. Branch, plaintiffs, vs. School Board of Greensville County and H. L. Webb, superintendent of schools of Greensville County."

Overdue School Relief

No new school to serve the Negro population has been built in Norfolk since the construction of the Booker T. Washington High School more than fifteen years ago. Since that time at least four new schools have been added to the plant serving the white population—Willard, Larchmont, Ocean View and Granby. The Meadowbrook school enlargement and the Gatewood school addition were major improvements in the same classification.

Since even before this period, the colored school plant was in a more advanced state of obsolescence and carried the higher pupil load per room, it is obvious that the disparity in school accommodations for the two races is far more glaring today than it was a decade and a half ago when it was already had enough.

It is this aggravated disparity in school accommodations that will be partly, but far from entirely, redressed by the new 32-room grammar school which the School Board and Council are planning to erect on a 12-acre tract on Lead Street near the present Douglas Park school, and near the area which is under consideration as a site for a Federally-aided low-cost housing project. When the new school is completed, the city will raze the J. C. Price School at Eighteenth and Church, and the small Douglas Park School on Marshal avenue—two structures that have long combined incurable obsolescence, and irremediable ugliness with all the virtues of firetraps in an advanced state of combustibility.

While the new school is still in its early planning stage, the Council's acquisition of nearly eight acres of land to complete a 12-acre site for it, is concrete evidence of the intention of the authorities to complete the improvement without delay. They are particularly to be commended for their concern that the new school shall have space in which to breathe, expand and play.

With a short-sightedness that seems today amazing, the School Boards and Councils that ordered more than half of the existing school plant, erected school building on plots which left the completed schools with yards just large enough to swing a cat. Partial modernization of the white school plant has rubbed out some of those early mistakes, but the Negro school plant will share for the first time in this overdue redemption from spatial cramping in the new grammar school that is now planned.

Not Aware Of Marriage Ban On Colored

Both Colored and White Go When They Marry Now

PORTSMOUTH—Extra! White eachers of Portsmouth have laimed that the school board disriminated against them in favor f colored teachers!

From time to time, Superintenent H. A. Hunt told the Guide, here have come complaints that olored teachers are allowed to narry and continue teaching hile white teachers must resign hen they marry.

These complaints came, however, because the white teachers ere not aware of the fact that marriage deadline was placed on he colored teachers about three ears ago, Mr. Hunt pointed out.

Since the marriage deadline, no olored teachers have been alowed to marry and continue eaching. Those who were married prior to the deadline were allowed to hold their positions in fairness to the teachers, the superintendent stated.

FINALLY SETTLED

Prior to the deadline, Mr. Hunt said, colored female teachers were allowed to marry and continue on with the system because there was a shortage of good teachers. When teachers became more plentiful the marriage ban was clamped on. Now only single female teachers are elected to the Portsmouth system. Married teachers who were in before the marriage deadline are not affected.

Last week a white citizen entered a com[illegible] of discrimination in favor of colored teachers and Mr. Hunt issued a statement explaining the policy of the Portsmouth School Board. Now the citizens generally, including white teachers, understand that there is also a marriage ban on colored teachers and the matter appears to be definitely settled.

"This is probably the first time n the South that there have been claims of discrimination against white teachers in favor of colored teachers," Mr. Hunt chuckled.

Item Sites Refusal Of Negro Students

NORFOLK, (AP)—Norfolk County school officials had little to say yesterday regarding an item appearing in "The Southern Frontier," publication of the Commission on Interracial Co-operation, concerning efforts made by two Negro students to obtain admission to the white high school at Churchland. The Negroes were said to have sought enrollment in classes "offering essential subjects" discontinued in Negro schools in which three principals were discharged. James Hurst, Norfolk County school superin- Negro students sought and were tendent, said it was true that some refused admittance to the school, but that the subjects in question were new ones that had been started in the Churchland school.

The three Norfolk school principals were discharged "supposedly for activities in a campaign for equal pay for teachers," the item in the Southern Frontier stated, but Hurst said he did not care to comment on the matter.

BUSES FOR OUR CHILDREN

One of the most vicious forms of discrimination against Negroes has been the failure to provide school buses for Negro children, 70 per cent of whom live in rural areas.

This not only inconveniences Negro children and often imposes hardships upon them, but it impresses upon them at an early age their pariah status in our democracy.

It is, therefore, gratifying to learn that the Greenville County (Va.) N. A. A. C P. branch is suing the county school board to compel it to supply buses for colored school children as well as white.

There are hundreds of counties in the South that have no school buses for Negroes.

Why not sue all of them.

Remodeled Negro Unit Now Has More Space

The now creditably spacious and comfortable nine teacher school which we are now enjoying was in 1929 a four room, three teacher school with nine grades and equipment more inadequate than now. Three of the rooms were seated with torn down desks while the fourth served as the assembly room and was seated with old benches. There were two, three, and four grades occupying one room. There was the problem of getting adequate heat for the building as the furnace was in such a bad condition that it had to be repaired before we were able to have heat in more than one room. On rainy days we were forced to continue the dipping of water out of the bottom of the furnace to keep heat in the building. The situation remained practically the same for two or three years, after which we were able, through the aid of the P. T. A. to purchase a new furnace.

The first aid for the crowded situation came with the addition of another teacher in 1934, which increased the number to four and made it possible to use the four rooms as class rooms. We worked under these conditions until 1935 when our present Superintendent, Mr. Ray, found ways in which we were given two more teachers, using one portion of the hall as a class room and the double use of one room. Later on, through the aid of the Superintendent, we were given four more class rooms plus two more tecahers. The last addition to the building was given in 1940, adding two more rooms, which made the total number of rooms ten, with an enrollment of three hundred students and nine teachers.

The department Friday announced it had awarded contracts to three distributors—Foremost Dairy, Southern Dairies and Barber Pure Milk Company—who will supply milk to the schools.

Distributors will receive 1 cent per half pint from the school authorities and subsidy payments ranging from 1.3 to 1.5 cents from the Agriculture Department.

Dr. L. Frazer Banks, assistant superintendent of city schools, said the plan will be tried in 10 Birmingham schools for the remainder of this school term which closes May 24. If proved successful, it will be continued next year.

Dr. J. E. Bryan, county superintendent, disclosed the low-cost milk will be distributed to 14 county schools until the end of the term, May 22.

Only children certified as needful by the Department of Public Welfare are eligible to participate in the plan.

City schools selected as experiment grounds include five Negro insitutions and five white. They are Cunningham, Gate City, [illegible]ley, Moore and Martin, [illegible]ite, and Hudson, Lewis, Lincoln, Thomas and Tuggle, Negro.

BARKER SCHOOL TO BE REBUILT

Eight-Room Unit Will Be Constructed By Education Board

An eight-room unit to replace the fire-destroyed Barker School will be constructed by the Board of Education at the Seventeenth Avenue School, 1730 North Twenty-Fifth Street, at an approximate cost of $70,000, members of the board announced.

Insurance amounting to about $77,000 on the destroyed building and equipment was collected by the board. A bid of $1,800 for salvage was also accepted by the board.

The new unit to be constructed by Warren, Knight & Davis, architects, will be used in conjunction with the Seventh Avenue School until such time as the board has sufficient funds to discard the present building and erect a new building to include a library and auditorium, it was announced.

F. D. McArthur, president of the board, read to members at a meeting a letter from City Commissioner Eugene Connor who quoted legal opinion that the board's five-year contract with Dr. Glenn was "invalid." The board has no legal authority to make such a contract for a determinant time, the commissioner said.

This point was acknowledged by Mr. McArthur, who said that as far as he was concerned Dr. Glenn has a five-year contract. Dr. Glenn had recently been reemployed by the board for five years at an annual salary of $8.000.

Pending the outcome of the trial of William J. Moore, principal of Lincoln School, charged with buying stolen goods, board members decided to hold the question of principalship in abeyance. Lincoln is the largest Negro elementary school in the city. Moore's first trial resulted in a mistrial and the second is set for September.

Procedure of plans for construction of a Negro school in a thickly populated section of East Birmingham was announced by Dr. Glenn, who said the site was donated by Birmingham-Southern College and Stockham Pipe Fittings Company. Dr. Glenn said a NYA project for the construction of the building is being sought, also that NYA labor is being asked for the construction of additions to Woodrow Wilson and Eureka Schools.

The automobile accident deaths of Miss Alice Nolan, seventh grade teacher at Lee School, and Miss LeMerle Askew, seventh grade teacher at Hemphill, were deplored by Dr. Glenn, who said they were two "of our very best teachers. Their records were uniformly excellent."

Appointed to investigate nonresident tuition were Dr. Glenn and William J. Christian.

WORK ON NEGRO SCHOOL WILL BE STARTED SOON

18f

Officials Hope To Have It Built for Next Term

7-1-41

Work on the new $97,500 Middleton negro high school probably will be started in January, school officials said yesterday. The WPA project has been delayed because of a shortage of skilled workers.

The one-story building of brick construction will be built near the site of the old building at Chelsea avenue and Twenty-fourth street, which burned last March.

The Tampa school district will provide $35,000 on materials, and the WPA has promised $62,500 for labor. The building will accommodate about 600 pupils compared to the former two-story building, which was crowded with 350 pupils.

Officials hoped the new building would be completed in time for the opening of the 1941-42 term. The former Macfarlane elementary school, now being used as Middleton negro high school, will be converted into a negro junior high school when the new building is completed.

Plans drawn for the building by Leslie N. Iredell, architect, call for brick construction, with much of the brick salvaged from the old building. The roof will be of galvanized iron construction, and a boiler room will be fireproof. Eight classrooms, an auditorium, home economics room, offices and lavatories are provided.

48 Schools Get Aid for Lunch Programs

With the addition of two schools approved this month, all but one of Gadsden County's 49 schools will be participating next month in a state-wide school lunch program sponsored by the State Welfare Board in co-operation with the Surplus Commodities Corporation. The single exception is Gadsden County High School, which operates its own lunch program.

The program for the other schools, carried out with surplus commodities prepared under WPA supervision, furnishes free noon meals to needy children and meals at cost to other pupils. In Gadsden County 4,463 children receive this service in nine white schools and 39 negro schools, the State Welfare Board announced.

LONGER TERMS FOR NEGRO SCHOOLS

The Muscogee county school board deserves hearty commendation for its action in extending the length of the term of the Negro schools of the county. The board voted yesterday to add one month to the present semester, thus allowing the schools t to remain open until May 2.

A petition recently was presented to county authorities asking that a nine-months term be provided for the Negro schools. It was understood that the board at that time did not have money available for the purpose, but yesterday morning it was explained that the county had received state money due on past alloactions. The receipt of this money it was said, enabled the board to pay virtually all money borrow from banks against unpaid taxes and possible appropriations. It was agreed in view of the receipt of this money to add another month to the term of t the Negro schools.

The action of the school board provides for a session of eight months for the Negro schools of the county. Though a nine-months plan was requested, it is certain that the Negro citizens of the county will appreciate the action of the board as indicative of its desire to give Negro children all educational advantages possible.

The Enquirer, having urged the school board a few days ago to give the longer term proposal its serious consideration, desires to commend the members of the board and the superintendent of the county schools for the adoption of the eight-months t term plan. It is earnestly hoped that arrangements may be made before the opening of schools next fall for a full term of nine months for the Negro children of Muscogee county.

NEGRO SCHOOL TO HAVE NEW BUILDING

Construction was begun this week by the National Youth Administration on a three-room frame building at the A. & I. school here, it was announced today by Mrs. Florence T. Thornton, N. Y. A. area director in Milledgeville.

The new addition wil serve as a vocational shop buildings. This project is being sponsored by the Hancock County Board of Education, represented by President C. W. Moran.

The board of education will furnish the equipment and materials in the amount of $2200, while the N. Y. A. will supply the youth labor and supervision, aggregating $3505.

In its program of progress for the city schools, the Canton Board of Education has added the Home Economics department to the colored school. A special well-equipped room has been completed and a teacher has been added for the department.

J. A. Burge, principal of the colored school, issued the following statement this week:

"As this city is an industrial center and as much of the domestic work is done by the boys and girls of our race, we feel that the Board has made a wise step in offering this course. These boys and girls are taught how to render more efficient service wherever they may be employed.

"The school wishes to thank its white friends who have made this improvement possible."

The Canton P.-T. A., other civic organizations and private citizens assisted in equipping the kitchen and pantry.

Construction Of New Building Will Begin Within Near Future

Local Contractor Howard Piper Awarded Bid.

BOARD OF EDUCATION WORKS OUT PLANS ON ERECTION OF BUILDING

Progress of Schools in City Noted During Past Several Years.

Announcement was made by the Covington School Board this week that the bid for the new Colored School Building had been let to Howard Piper, Contractor in this city.

Construction of the new building will begin immediately and is expected to be completed before the September term of school begins. The colored school building burned last fall several months after school started and plans had to be made by the board for the erection of an entirely new building as very little was saved from distruction by the fire.

The new building is to be erected in a new location to get it off the highway and thereby lessen the danger of children being injured or killed from auto accident. The school will be erected on a tract of land where Butter Benton now lives. Numerous improvements will be made in the new structure and much more efficient work is expected to be made possible through the more modern conveniences. This colored school system will have an economic and manual training unit which already has proven so beneficial to the colored children in this community.

A news story was carried in the News last week outlining the many improvements to the school system in Covington under the efficient management of the city Board of Education. Changes and improvements have been made at frequent intervals until now the Covington System is on par with the best in Georgia. The Gymnasium for the white children recently erected made it possible for officials to eliminate crowded conditions and assure greater efficiency and safety to children and teachers. The large library in the city school is well equipped under the direction of Mrs. C. E. Hawkins and her efforts has meant much to the school.

Progress Is Made At Colored School

(By G. E. Archibald)

In its own humble way, Monroe Colored School is never weary in finding solutions to the problems of the community affecting the lives of colored people.

In harmony with this fact, for a period of nearly three years, the school has conducted classes for maids, cooks, and housewives who are desirous of becoming more efficient in the services they render, whether to employers or at their own homes.

Much has been accomplished along these lines, yet the challenge that these classes offer indicates that there is much more to be done in this direction.

Efficient service has now become the determining factor in getting and keeping jobs in Monroe; and a school whose mission is to make better a community cannot afford to neglect such a task.

Monday and Tuesday nights of each week are devoted to night school. From eight to ten o'clock men and boys are gathered at the school to improve themselves.

Here we teach not only reading and writing, but how to actually hold a job by being polite, clean, punctual, reliable, honest, true, cheerful and industrious.

These classes are having untold effects; and the Monroe Colored School is very respectfully asking all individuals and agencies to cooperate with us in making Colored Monroe more efficient.

Board of Education Holds Regular Session

The Board of Education of Camden County met in regular session March 4, 1941, with the following members present: Dr. A. K. Swift, Samuel Bealey, and L. W. Readdick.

The meeting was called to order by Dr. Swift, who was elected president pro-tem in the absence of the president.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and adopted.

Lottie Harris, Colored Home Demonstration Agent, reported that everything was in order for the coming of a Negro N. Y. A., Vocational School to the county. It was agreed that the Board of Education sponsor the project provided it does not involve any financial obligation.

It was moved and carried that the funds recently received from the State for back indebtedness of teachers' salaries for 1938-39, be applied to the indebtedness of the Board of Education. Resolutions were passed to reduce each loan to one-half the amount and discount the interest in full, provided it was agreeable with each creditor. Upon her request, it was moved and carried that the note with Mrs. Beulah R. Hill for $1,000.00 be paid in full. Complying with these resolutions, each note was to be reduced in the following manner:

Vocational Building For Negroes

One hundred dollars was turned over to the Board of Education Tuesday by the PTA of the Jeffersonville Negro school. This is the first amount raised to help erect a vocational building, which was promised the Negroes if they raised this amount. The Board of Education hopes to have the building completed for the opening of next term of school.

E. H. Houseworth, principal, and C. A. Pressley, vocational teacher, gave tentative plans for the building. There is expected to be a class room, work shop, and cannery.

A make-shift building houses the vocational shop on the school grounds now. A complete set of tools has been secured through the national defense program. A number of pupils' desks and seven teachers' desks are among the articles made by the high school boys and members of the national defense group.

"I believe that the time will come when we will be able to operate in Augusta one of the finest negro high schools in the South. We need it and we are going to have it." Thus spoke Mayor James Wooddall to the opening session of the Negro-Teacher and Education Association at Charles T. Walker School Thursday night.

At present Augusta does ont have a negro public high school. The nearest approach to one is the Augusta R. Johnson High School, which has only two years of high school.

The mayor then recalled a recent visit to the city stockade and then said, "I believe if the negroes had an education, crime will decrease. What we need to do is to give it to them. God knows they need it."

Dinner One Cent At Negro School

A hot plate lunch for one penny! Two hundred Negro pupils are being fed at the Jeffersonville Negro school daily, and one penny is the amount they are asked to pay.

The meals are cooked in the domestic science department of the school, and supervised by the teacher, Carrie Howard.

"I use the girls to do the work and that is one way I teach them to cook," explained the teacher.

The cooking is done on a four-cap wood stove and supplemented by the use of a small coal heating stove. They hope to be able to get a range sometime in the future. The meals are served on four tables, two of which were made by the vocational boys. Each child furnishes his own plate, fork and spoon.

Once a month the surplus commodity warehouse of Twiggs county gives foods to this school project, and by charging each child a penny, such necessities as soda, baking powder, sugar, and pepper are bought at the stores.

When the child is unable to bring a penny, in exchange for his lunch, he brings an egg, butter, or potatoes, or something that can be used in the school kitchen. However, occasionally a few are neither able to supply any food, nor to bring the penny. "They get their lunch just the same," said the teacher.

The day the reporter visited the lunch room, the menu consisted of rice, collard greens, corn muffins, and raisin bread for dessert. Six bunches of collards were bought for 60 cents and a few of the children brought greens from home.

"I had 10 cents left today to apply on tomorrow's lunch," said Carrie.

"Have you noticed any physical improvement since beginning the hot lunches?

"They have improved immensely; their faces are fatter and more are here on rainy days than on sunshine days," explained the principal, E. H. Houseworth.

"Anything I cook, they readily eat," stated the teacher. The empty plates left after the primary department marched out bore out the teacher's statement.

Three other groups were served—intermediate, junior high and high school—one following the other.

Among other foods furnished by the surplus commodity warehouse are grits, dried and fresh fruits, meal, ham, smoked and salt meats, flour, grapefruit juice. and canned milk.

Since opening the lunch room last October, it is estimated that 24,000 hot lunches have been served to the Negro children in Jeffersonville.

Hamilton Col. School Seeks Enlargement

Dear White Friends:

We have been most reluctant to approach you asking you for help in our school program. But now we have reached the point that we cannot go farther without the aid of our white friends.

You probably have noticed the improvements made on the school building this year, and if you have been fortunate enough to visit the school you have seen the improvements made on the interior of the building. These improvements were made through the efforts of the colored patrons; and we are justly proud of our accomplishments, but we need to go further if our school is to be the institution it should be.

Now we are engaged in an earnest drive to raise money to build two rooms to our school building. How badly we need this addition cannot be described here. But suffice it to say that the future growth and improvement of Negro education in this community depends upon the success of this drive. The Chipley area has already contributed enough to its colored school to build an addition to its building. The Hamilton people must do as much if the school here is to keep pace. And the Lord knows that this school really needs to push forward, too.

The State Department of Education is taking increasing interest in the condition of Negro Education in the State of Georgia. But this interest will avail little if the people of the State do not show a willingness to help and co-operate effectively in this program for the improvement of schools and instruction in their respective communities.

Therefore, we humbly urge you to donate generously to this worthy cause. You will be handsomely repaid in better negro citizens of tomorrow. For as Dr.Herbert Phillips, noted southern educator, has said, "It is the duty of the south to train the descendants of the former slaves to become intelligent, industrious, productive units of the commonwealth."

Respectfully yours,

To Dedicate Colored Vocational School

The dedication of a vocational building at Maple Springs colored junior high school will be an interesting occasion for the colored people of the community Friday, May 9th. This will be the second colored vocational building dedicated in Elbert county this year, the other one being at Heardmont.

The building at Maple Springs was constructed through NYA aid, with the county and the community furnishing the material. N. H. Blackwell, colored, is recognized as being of great help in creating a cohesive sentiment that resulted in the construction of the building.

At the dedication ceremonies Friday appropriate recognition will be given the 21 colored youth of the school who have completed a course in carpentry work in the national defense program under the instruction of F. W. Cauble, colored, co-ag. teacher, who came to the county from Social Circle. Cauble is a graduate of Hampton Institute, Va., an institution which he says is the mother of Tuskeegee Institute.

The Rev. W. T. Swilling, colored, began teaching at Maple Grove 53 years ago, and will retire at the end of the present year as teacher of the school because of failing strength due to his advanced age. He is expected to be present, strength permitting, at the exercises Friday.

Speakers on the program include Mrs. Laura S. Parks, Athens, NYA director; Hunter Bell, Athents, in charge of vocational building in this section; Frank Mitchell, assistant director of vocational agricultural education in Georgia; Judge Clark Edwards, Jr.; Commissioner Guy Bell, and others.

COLORED SCHOOLS OF THIS SECTION VERY MODERN

In northern Cordele, the colored student begins his education at a new elementary school located on Second avenue. The school contains six grades, taught by six skilled teachers in special subjects. The building was recently built and is a pine frame building, painted inside and out. A water main runs to the school, but it does not have the advantage of a sewage, a sewage line, however, is being constructed to this section of town and the school will be on the main line.

A large grammar and high school is located in the southwestern part of the city. It also is a large, pine frame building and is well supplied with teachers and equipment.

The pride of the city is the Gillespie Institute, located near the western city limit. Gillespie proper was established about thirty years ago at its present site, but with the aid of the Northern Presbyterian Church it has been expanded until it includes a school, a hospital dean's home and dormitory, all of which are made of brick. The hospital contains all the equipment a modern hospital could want. The domitory is a large three story, brick structure, that is modern in every respect. It is completely fire proof. The dean's home is a two-story building, built in the typical present style of homes.

Holsey Institute was built a number of years ago, but until recently it had been almost extinct, its enrollment dwindling to less than fifteen. But recently under a new faculty, the school has begun to operate on a larger basis. The enrollment now numbers around a hundred and even more pupils are expected to attend during the next term. With the aid of a colored church association, the school has paid a five thousand dollar mortgage and spent around three thousand dollars for repairs on the building. This school is by far the most outstanding colored school in the city for the subjects taught and the progress it has made in the last two years. Handcraft is one of the principal subjects and the handcraft classes have turned out many notable specimens made from such native materials as cotton, corn shucks and pine needles. Officials of the school state that some of these products may be put on the market in the near future. A concrete block machine has been purchased by the school to make the money and building material for a girl's dormitory. As soon as the dormitory, concrete blocks will continue to be made and will be placed on the market for public sale. The Institute boasts of a well trained glee club that has been established since the '41 term began and a football team that has also been trained since the beginning of school. Holsey puts on several broadcasts a week over the local radio station that are heartily enjoyed by many listeners. The Institute also has a new station wagon to transport singers and the football team. The school is not yet on the school accredited list, but officials of Holsey will agree that they will probably reach the required specifications before the term is over.

Elkton Negro School to Honor McReynolds

ELKTON, Ky., Jan. 18—(Spl)—As a mark of appreciation of the interest he has shown in the school and his liberal donations to it from time to time, the local Negro public school, of which J. W. Waddell is principal, will observe "McReynolds Day" February 3, with a special program in honor of Associate Justice James Clark McReynolds of the United States Supreme Court.

Justice McReynolds, on his annual visits to the town of his nativity, has always shown in a substantial manner his interest in efforts of local Negroes along educational lines and toward the achievement of good citizenship. He offered a cash prize to the student submitting the best essay on "What I Can Do Toward Becoming a Good Citizen." He purchased land adjoining the school at $250 for a playground, and later gave $100 toward the building of a new work room.

Waddell said that the program had not as yet been completed, but announced today that a number of prominent white citizens had consented to take part in it.

February 3 was selected as the date for the exercises, as it marks the 79th birth anniversary of Justice McReynolds.

New Colored School for Port Barrow

Work was begun Wednesday on the demolistion of the old two-story frame building in Port Barrow, which formerly housed the Lowery Training school for colored children, and on its site there will be erected a modern six-room one-story frame building with auditorium, to furnish additional and improved quarters for the school. The building will be equipped with all modern comforts and conveniences, including steam heating and will have a brick boiler room for the steam heating machinery.

This is a WPA project, and the work is under the direction of John Toby, Ascension parish engineer. Mr. Toby estimates that the cost of the work, covering the demolition of the old and construction of the new buildings, the construction of the athletic field, including the price of the ground, will be approximately $30,000. He expects to have the job completed in about five months.

Negro School Facilities Will Be Expanded

Steps to improve negro school facilities in the parish were taken by the Caddo school board Wednesday afternoon.

One act was the authorization of purchase of eight acres on the Greenwood road for establishment of a negro farm demonstration school. The purchase price is $40 an acre.

The site will be purchased from the interest on the Herndon fund, a legacy left to the school board for negro educational work by a wealthy Caddo parish negro who died several years ago. Federal aid will be obtained in operating the school, E. W. Jones, superintendent, reported.

The board also authorized the purchase of a house and lot adjacent to the Central colored high school for establishment of a cafeteria for the school.

Other action was to pass a resolution to correct the title on a one-acre site of a negro school near Blanchard.
